REASONS FOR PARDONS GRANTED BY THE GOVERNOR FROM JANUARY 1, 1911, TO JANUARY 1, 1913.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Executive Chamber.

Harrisburg, January 7, 1913.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Gentlemen:—In conformity with law, I have the honor herewith to transmit the reasons for pardons granted by the Executive from January 1, 1911, to January 1, 1913.

Very respectfully,

JOHN K. TENER.

No. 1-2—1911.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, February 15, 1911.

To His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the County of Washington, to Nos. 216 and 218, August Sessions, 1905, Benjamin Hodgson, Jr., was convicted on two indictments charging him with the crimes of sodomy and buggery, and with felonious rape, respectively and was, on the 24th day of November, 1905, sentenced in the aggregate to pay a fine of $75.00 and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for the term of ten years.

In the same Court and at the same Term, to wit, to Nos. 217 and 219, August Sessions, 1905, William Hodgson was convicted on two indictments charging him with the crimes of fornication and of sodomy and buggery, respectively, and upon November 24, 1905, was sentenced in the aggregate to pay a fine of $75.00 and to undergo an imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for the term of eight years.

On October 10, 1908, applications were filed for the pardon of each of these defendants which applications were then refused. On November 16, 1910, on application made, a rehearing was allowed, which was argued December 21, 1910; but the case was not then disposed of, and another argument was heard at our meeting this day.

Upon due consideration of the applications, we now recommend that pardons be granted these applicants, Benjamin Hodgson, Jr., and William Hodgson.

The allegations on which the charges in the indictments were founded were such as permitted the hearing and consideration at the same time or both of the cases against each defendant, altogether there were separate records in the Court. The details of the case were of course of a revolting character, and it is not deemed necessary to narrate them here. The convictions were brought about mainly in the testimony of the prosecutrix, the victim of the assaults, which testimony, if true, justified the severity of the sentences imposed. It was shown to us, however, that this prosecutrix, (who, about the time of the trial, removed from the locality, and who since has married and is the mother of a family), has confessed that her testimony given at the trial was not true. The affidavits of the mother and sister of these defendants, have been on file with our record for several months. These affidavits are to the effect of admissions and confessions recently made by the prosecutrix to the affiants of the falsity and untruthfulness of her testimony given at the trial. These admissions and confessions were made to the affiants who sought out the prosecuting witness, the victim of the alleged assaults, and importuned her to tell the truth with regard to the case. It was contended before us that inasmuch as these affidavits had not been challenged, or even questioned, by the Commonwealth, their verity must be admitted. On their presentation to Judge Reppert, who tried the cases, (especially presiding in Washington County for this purpose), they appealed to him with sufficient force to induce him to write to the Board as follows:

"October 13, 1910.

To the Honorable the Board of Pardons, Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear Sirs:—I have carefully examined the depositions to be submitted October 19, 1910, with the application for pardon of Benjamin and William Hodgson. I believe, in view of these depositions, that this application merits your favorable consideration for the following reasons:

1. In the trial of these cases the Commonwealth's evidence disclosed conditions so horrible as to be almost incredible, and it seems more incredible that such conditions could have existed for so long a period without the discovery of more corroborative testimony in support of Mary Jones.

2. There was manifested at the trial a bitter feeling of resentment towards these Defendants and their father growing out of labor troubles and religious differences. This feeling undoubtedly tended to color the Commonwealth's testimony.

3. If the depositions to be submitted are true, and I have no reason to doubt their truth, they discredit the testimony of Mary Jones at the trial without which the convictions could not have been had.

4. With these depositions before me I would undoubtedly have granted an application for a new trial had such an application been made.

5. The physical appearance of the Defendants when tried was prepossessing, clean and wholesome, and gave no indication whatever of dissipated life.

6. The Defendants have already been severely punished. If their conviction was a miscarriage of justice, as these depositions tend to show, their situation is and has been most deplorable. The depositions raise a reasonable doubt in my mind which I gladly cast in the scales in behalf of the Defendants, believing it to be better to err, if error there be, on that side than on the other.

Yours very respectfully,

E. H. REPPERT."

Under the commutation law the imprisonment of William Hodgson will expire in March, 1911, and that of Benjamin Hodgson will expire in April, 1912.

After reviewing the applications in the light of the record before us, aided by the presentation by counsel of the facts and circumstances attendant upon the whole unfortunate affair, and attaching importance to the views of the Trial Judge, we recommend that pardons be now granted to these applicants, Benjamin Hodgson, Jr., and William Hodgson.

Respectfully submitted,

JNO. M. REYNOLDS,
Lieutenant Governor.

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, February 15, 1911.

To His Excellency, Honorable John K. Tener, Governor:

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Berks, to No. 52, December Sessions, 1909, Samuel Swatkins was convicted on an indictment charging him with larceny, and upon December 27, 1909, was sentenced to pay a fine of $50, and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for one year and six months.

An application for pardon was duly filed January 4, 1911, which was heard and considered at our meeting held this day. We recommend that the prayer of the petition be granted, and that a pardon be accorded the applicant, Samuel Swatkins.

The offence charged was the stealing of ten turkeys.

The arrest and imprisonment of this Defendant, it has been represented to us, has resulted in the breaking up of the turkey stealing business in that community, and has brought about the reformation of the offender. Both the District Attorney who prosecuted the case, and the Judge who tried the case, have advised the Board to this effect. Moreover, the prisoner would, under the commutation law, be entitled to be discharged on the 12th of March next, a little more than three weeks from this date, so that his release would not shorten the term of imprisonment sufficiently to prejudice the claims of justice.

The letter of the District Attorney is as follows:

Reading Pa., Dec. 30, 1910.

To the Board of Pardons, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Gentlemen:—I was the District Attorney of Berks County at the time Samuel Swatkins, who is now applying for a pardon, was convicted of larceny of some turkeys in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Samuel Swatkins, No. 52, December Sessions, 1909, and I am familiar with the facts of his case.

I feel that he has been sufficiently punished and I therefore believe that he should be pardoned. I also recommend a pardon so that he will have time to look around for another farm to live on after the first of April, 1911, his lease of the Benneville Hoch farm expiring at that time, or if he cannot get another farm so that he can make sale of his stock during the month of February, the customary time in this community for sales of farm stock. A sale at any other time could not be made to good advantage, Swatkins' term of imprisonment would with commutation expire on the 12th of March, 1911.

Very respectfully,
HARRY D. SCHAEFFER,
District Attorney."

The following is a copy of the letter of the Trial Judge:

"Reading, Pa., January 14, 1911.

To the Honorable the Members of the Board of Pardons of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Gentlemen:—I have been informed that the term of Samuel Swatkins, who was convicted before me and sentenced to a term in the Berks County Prison for larceny will expire on the 12th of March.

The District Attorney states that the sentence imposed on him has been effective in breaking up a gang of chicken thieves who operated in this County. It is also represented that the defendant has reformed, and that it will be greatly to the benefit of his family if he could join them in a new home on a farm which they have secured in this County.

In view of the short time which will elapse between this and the end of his term, I recommend that he be given the benefit of the doubt and the chance to show that his reformation is sincere.

Very truly yours,
WILLIAM KERPER STEVENS."

Under these conditions we are persuaded that we can with propriety favor this application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Samuel Swatkins.

Respectfully submitted,

JNO. M. REYNOLDS,
Lieutenant Governor.
ROBERT McAFEE,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.
JOHN C. BELL,
Attorney General.
HENRY HOUCK,
Secretary of Internal Affairs.

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, February 15, 1911.

To His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor:

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 205, September Sessions, 1910, Mrs. Rose Hudson entered a plea of guilty to an indictment charging her with the crime of larceny, and on September 7, 1910, she was sentenced to pay a fine of six and one-fourth cents and undergo imprisonment in the Allegheny County Work House for the period of one year.

On February 1, 1910, an application for pardon was duly filed. This application was heard at our hearing held this day. Upon careful consideration of the case, we recommend the allowance of the application.

The applicant is a married woman, who, by stress of unfortunate circumstances, was constrained to seek employment in a Pittsburgh store as saleswoman. While engaged there, and impelled possibly by her feelings of need and the desire to possess some of the articles of attire which she saw around her in such abundance, she yielded to temptation and appropriated to her own use and carried away from the store, certain pieces of merchandise, namely, a number of dresses. She was detected in her wrongdoing, was charged with theft and placed under arrest She at once confessed to her stealing, and restored everything that she had taken. Upon being called for trial in Court she entered a plea of guilty, and received the sentence as above stated.

This was the first offence with which this applicant has been charged. The proprietor of the store, Mr. K. Solomon, under date of October 29, 1910, wrote to the Judge who imposed the sentence as follows:

"To Honorable J. A. Evans:
On September 7th 1910, one Rose Hudson was sentenced to pay a fine of six and one quarter cents, the costs of the prosecution, and undergo an imprisonment in the Allegheny County Work House for a period of one year, the charge against her being larceny of goods from our store where she was employed.
A great many people have been to see me and they inform me that this was her first offence, If this be true, I have no objection to your Honor modifying said sentence.
I remain,
Respectfully yours,
K. SOLOMON."

Judge Evans, who imposed the sentence, writes to the Board under date of December 29, 1910:

"To the Pardon Board, Harrisburg, Pa.
Gentlemen:—I enclose your letter to me from K. Solomon, the prosecutor in the case of Com. vs. Rose Hudson. At the time of sentence the prosecution, represented by private counsel, intimated very strongly that this was not the defendant's first offense. If the statements of this letter had been made at that time by the prosecution, I would probably have given a lighter sentence.
Yours truly,
J. A. EVANS."

L. S. Levin, Esq., writes the Board as follows:

"December 8, 1910.
To the Honorable Board of Pardons, Harrisburg, Penna.
Sirs:—I acted as private counsel for the prosecutor in the case of Commonwealth vs. Rose Hudson who was sentenced to the Allegheny County Work House for a period of twelve months, pleading guilty to the charge of larceny. From the facts learned since sentence was imposed I believe that the woman committed her error during a weak moment and by reason of her financial condition. I believe that she has been sufficiently punished, and if your Honorable Board can see their way clear to grant her a pardon, it will be a means of giving the woman an opportunity to start life anew under more advantageous conditions than if she had to serve the full term, I am,
Very truly,
L. S. LEVIN."

The District Attorney, under date of December 7, 1910, writes:

"Board of Pardons, Harrisburg, Pa.
Dear Sirs: My attention has been called to the application made in behalf of Rose Hudson, who was committed Wednesday, September 7, 1910, by Judge Evans, of this County to the Allegheny County Work House, for a period of twelves months, for the crime of larceny for which offence she was on that day convicted. After consultation with Judge Evans, Trial Judge, together with the Assistant District Attorney and officers in charge of the trial of the case, I conclude that while the conviction was just and proper yet under the circumstances which have especially been brought to light since her sentence, the extent of the imprisonment was too great. I therefore strongly recommend that a pardon be granted in this case by your Honorable Board at its present session.
Very respectfully yours,
W. A. BLAKELY,
District Attorney."

There are other letters of a similar import on file. The woman has been in prison more than five months. This punishment apparently has satisfied the demands of justice in her case, and it has been made clear to us that no further good would result from her prolonged imprisonment. Therefore we look upon the application as worthy of favorable consideration, and we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Rose Hudson.

Respectfully submitted,
JNO. M. REYNOLDS,
Lieutenant Governor.
ROBERT McAFEE,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.
JOHN C. BELL,
Attorney General.
HENRY HOUCK,
Secretary of Internal Affairs.

No. 5—1911.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Harrisburg, February 15, 1911.

To His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor:

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 478, February Sessions, 1910, William Allen was indicted on a charge of riot, and upon February 25, 1910, on being arraigned, entered a plea of not guilty, which he afterwards on the same day withdrew, and entered a plea of guilty, and thereupon on that day was sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of two years and six months, and pay the costs of prosecution. On March 4, 1910, the Court reconsidered the sentence, and reduced the term of imprisonment in the County Prison to two years from February 25, 1910.

Application for pardon was duly filed December 16, 1910. This application could not be heard until our meeting held to-day. After due hearing and consideration, we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, William Allen.

The arrest, conviction and sentence in this case grew out of the street railway strike which prevailed in the City of Philadelphia early in last year. The commission of the offence is laid on the 22nd of February, and the case was called for trial on the 25th of that month, three days later. The applicant is a young man of about 24 years of age, and had never before been accused of any crime; but on the contrary bore a good reputation. Subsequent investigation on the part of the police authorities of the City seems to have convinced that Department that the imprisonment of now almost a year's duration is sufficient punishment for whatever violation of law can be charged against this Defendant during this time of great excitement. Therefore, the Superintendent of Police, in accepting service of notice of this application, wrote to counsel as follows, under date of January 21, 1911:

"Dear Sir:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of notice of application of John D. Allen, residing at 2845, Germantown Avenue, for the pardon of his son, William D. Allen, who was convicted in February, 1910, of riot and assault, and sentenced to two years and six months in the Philadelphia County Prison. In reply thereto I beg to say that I am creditably informed that William D. Allen, a young man of 24 years of age, bears the best reputation, and up to the time of his arrest had never been arrested or charged with any offence to my knowledge, and that he is a decent and law-abiding citizen.

The circumstances attending the arrest of William D. Allen are, I am informed, those which have been narrated in the petition for his pardon. * * * * The young man has served almost a year in prison. He has been severely punished therefore for any act which he may have been guilty of and the necessity for making an example of him I feel has ceased to exist by reason of the adjustment of the labor troubles.
In view of the young man's previous good character, of his comparative youth, and in view of the further fact the necessity for severe punishment has been removed and that he has already served almost a year of his sentence, I feel that there can be no objection on the part of this Bureau to the exercise by the Board of Pardons of such clemency as in their wise judgment they may see proper to exert.
Very truly yours,
JOHN B. TAYLOR.
Superintendent.

The Trial Judge is also now of the opinion that the ends of justice have been subserved, and he writes the Board, under date of January 30, 1911, as follows:

"Gentlemen:—In the matter of the application for pardon of William D. Allen. I have read the petition and letters attached thereto in the above application. Since the trial and sentence of the defendant, facts have been brought to my attention that lead me to believe that this young man is of good character, and that the offence with which he was charged and to which he pleaded guilty was probably the result of the influence and excitement of the moment rather than of any intention to violate the law. I am satisfied that the ends of justice have been attained and that the defendant has been sufficiently punished for his offence.
Very respectfully,
HOWARD A. DAVIS,
Judge, Court of Quarter Sessions, February Term, 1910."

A number of other letters endorsing the application, and also a numerously signed petition asking for clemency, are on file with our record.

Upon duly considering the facts and circumstances of this case, and with the application fortified by the endorsements referred to, we regard this as a proper case for the exercise of executive clemency, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, William Allen.

Respectfully submitted,

JNO. M. REYNOLDS,
Lieutenant Governor.
ROBERT McAFEE,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

No. 6—1911

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Harrisburg, March 2, 1911.

To His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the County of Allegheny to No. 256, February Sessions, 1910, Harry E. Muehlbronner entered a plea of guilty to an indictment charging him with the crime of embezzlement, and, on March 18, 1910, was sentenced by the Court to pay a fine of one hundred dollars, costs, and undergo an imprisonment in the Allegheny County Work House for the term of two years.

An application for pardon was duly filed February 1, 1911. The application was heard at our regular February meeting, and the case then held under advisement. The matter has been given careful consideration since that meeting, and at a special meeting of the Board held this day, it was decided that the circumstances of the case warranted a favorable recommendation of the application. We, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted to the applicant, Harry E. Muehlbronner.

The applicant is a young man about 31 years of age. In the year 1909 he was one of the tellers of the Workingmen's Savings Bank and Trust Company, a banking corporation of the City of Pittsburgh, having entered the employ of said bank at an early age as a messenger boy and worked his way up to the position of teller. Upon the discovery of his defalcation, he made a full confession to the bank officers, and also to the District Attorney. The money that he misappropriated went into a business concern in which he was interested. He did not personally profit by his embezzlement. Another employee of the bank was concerned in his guilty actions, but it is not necessary to enter into the details of their association. About the time of his arrest, and while his case was under investigation, the City of Pittsburgh was in the midst of the turmoil and excitement incident to the Councilmanic bribery cases. The authorities, for some reason, were of the belief that this applicant was in some way implicated in these unsavory transactions, or at least had knowledge and information of criminal acts on the part of others connected with his bank in connection with such transactions, which information he refused to disclose. This belief, it is now admitted, was erroneous. The effect of the belief, however, which influenced the imposition of sentence, still remains. Both the Trial Judge and the District Attorney have written to the Board that since the correction of this belief on their part, it is now apparent to them that the sentence of two years' imprisonment was too severe under all circumstances of the case. The District Attorney, in writing to the Board, under date of February 10, 1911, closes his letter with the following expressions:

"It may be, under the circumstances of this case, that Mr. Muehlbronner's sentence was more severe than it would have been had not District Attorney and the Court been influenced by collateral matters with respect to the implication of certain officers of the Bank, which made the conduct of both Veverka and Muehlbronner appear more serious and aggravated than after developments disclosed.

There is no dispute as to the facts concerning the embezzlements charged, but my opinion is that your Board would be warranted in reducing the imprisonment from the period of two years to a shorter term."

Judge Swearingen, who imposed the sentence, writes as follows:

"February 13, 1911.

To the Board of Pardons,

Gentlemen:—It became my painful duty to pass sentence upon Harry E. Muehlbronner. I do not hesitate to say that I was influenced in passing sentence by the fact that Muehlbronner was believed to be concealing information with respect to transactions which had theretofore taken place in the bank where he was employed. From what I have lately learned I now think the suspicion of him was not well founded. Had I not believed he was concealing something, his sentence would not have been so severe as it was.

Very respectfully,

JOSEPH M. SWEARINGEN, P. J."

Hon. Elliott Rodgers, who represented the Bank in the prosecution, also writes the Board as follows:

"Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 9, 1911.

To the Honorable Board of Pardons, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Sirs:—I have been requested to communicate with you regarding the pending application for pardon of Harry E. Muehlbronner, and owing to my connection with the Workingmen's Saving Bank and Trust Company at the time the offence was committed, I believe I am thoroughly familiar with the facts.

Muehlbronner was a defaulter and plead guilty, and was sentenced to the Allegheny County Work House for a term of two years. Upon the discovery of his offence he assumed responsibility for the entire defalcation, but it subsequently developed that another employee of the bank, who also plead guilty and was sentenced, was decidedly the culpable party, and to my mind was the one really responsible, at least in a very large measure, for Muehlbronner's conduct. Mr. Muehlbronner aided us in every way to arrive at the facts in the matter, and to adjust all the troubles arising out of this unfortunate matter.

I have known him since he was a boy, and believe that this is the only trouble he has ever had. We have not now, nor have we at any time, had any disposition to punish him, in so far at least as I was concerned, and the matter was entirely in my hands, representing the bank. I believe that he has been sufficiently punished and earnestly recommend Executive clemency in his case.

Very truly,

ELLIOTT RODGERS."

A large number of citizens of Allegheny County, neighbors of the applicant, more than 1200, have sent to us their petitions asking that clemency be shown the applicant. They say that they believe that the applicant has been sufficiently punished for the offence which he committed and ask that we grant to him the leniency which he now requests, believing that he is a proper person to have this extended to him.

Allowing to the prisoner the benefit of the commutation law, his term of imprisonment of two years will expire next October; so that his release would now shorten his term about seven months. In view of the opinions expressed by the Trial Judge and the District Attorney, as well as that of the community, it would appear that there is merit in the request for clemency at this time. For these reasons, we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Harry E. Muehlbronner.

Harrisburg, March 15, 1911.

To His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor:

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Allegheny, to No. 18, December Term, 1890, Andrew Toth

(or Andy Todt) was, February 7, 1891, convicted on an indictment charging him with murder. Two other defendants, George Rusnock and Michael Sabol, were indicted with him, and were likewise convicted. On April 8, 1891, they were sentenced to be hanged. On February 25, 1892, the sentence of death was in the case of each defendant, commuted to that of imprisonment for life. In March 1895, Sabol was pardoned; and in December, 1895, Rusnock was pardoned. The efforts to secure a pardon for Toth have been heretofore unsuccessful.

On February 1, 1911, an application for a rehearing in the Toth case was filed, and, upon reasonable ground being shown, a rehearing was granted. The case was presented to us at our meeting held this day, and, after duly considering the application for pardon in the light of an explanation of the facts and circumstances connected with the case which had not hitherto been advanced or suggested on any of the prior hearings of any of the cases, we are persuaded that a pardon should now be granted this applicant. We, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted Andrew Toth, or Andy Todt, as he is sometimes called.

The homicide for which the defendants above named were tried, took place on New Year's Day, 1891, at the Edgar Thompson Steel Works, in the Borough of Braddock, Allegheny County. The victim was Michael Quinn. There was a riot at the Steel Works that day which had been started by an element among the foreign workmen, many of whom were Hungarians, to which nationality this applicant belongs. These defendants were drawn into the riotous demonstration. Toth's supposed connection with the murder seems to have been proved by the testimony of but a single witness, who alleged that he saw Toth deliver the fatal blo won the person of Quinn in a scuffle that took place at a point on the premises of the Works designated as "No. 4 C Stove." Other witnesses testified that the striking of the fatal blow, from the effect of which Quinn died, took place at a point on the premises known as "Furnace A." These two points, it was shown to us, are by actual measurement, five hundred and seven feet apart. Moreover the witness who saw the blow struck at the last mentioned point, testified that Quinn was coming from the direction of the first mentioned point, and that when he came to Furnace A, he was uninjured and gave no evidence of having been assaulted, and further, that there were but two assailants at this last mentioned place, Furnace A, neither of whom was Toth. It appears, therefore, that the witness who testified to seeing Toth strike the blow at No. 4 C Stove, may have been mistaken, and it is on this theory mainly that this application for Toth's pardon is based. An analysis of the testimony given at the trial, compared with the testimony produced on depositions taken in support of this application, tends to sustain this theory. The trial occurred within about six weeks after the riot, and at a time the public mind was under the influence of the excitement naturally arising from the tumultuous events of the day, which facts furnishes an explanation of the failure to advance this theory in defense of the applicant on his trial in Court. Judge Stowe, who presided at the trial of these Defendants, writes to the board, under date of March 7, 1911, as follows:

"To the Honorable the Board of Pardons.

Sirs:—I was the Trial Judge when Andy Toth, Michael Sabol and George Rusnock were convicted of murder of the first degree at No. 18, December Sessions, 1890, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Allegheny County, Pa.

After reading the depositions and affidavits shown me by E. B. Goehring, attorney for Andy Toth, I heartily recommend that your Honorable Board grant him a pardon.

EDWIN H. STOWE.
Trial Judge of the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Allegheny County, Pa.

It appearing, therefore, that there is doubt as to the guilty participation of this applicant in the murderous assault upon Quinn on that day, and the two defendants who were jointly charged with this applicant for the crime, having been pardoned heretofore, we are of the opinion that the application for Executive Clemency now made for this applicant, can be properly favored. We accordingly recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Andrew Toth, or Andy Todt, as he is sometimes called.

Respectfully submitted,

To His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor:

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Northampton, to No. 24, February Sessions, 1909, J. E. Delehanty was indicted on a charge of larceny from the person, was convicted and on February 11, 1909, was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and undergo an imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of five years.

On February 1, 1911, an application for pardon was duly filed. This application was heard and considered at our regular meeting held this day. On due consideration, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant.

The alleged offence for which this imprisonment has been imposed, took place in the City of Easton. The man assaulted was a transient dealer in some sort of merchandise, named Cohen, with whom the applicant had taken a position as salesman. Some disagreement arising between the two, Delehanty demanded what was coming to him in the way of wages. Cohen alleges that Delehanty, while the two were alone in the storeroom, assaulted him, and took a certain amount of money from his person. Delehanty's story is that he demanded what was coming to him, and that Cohen became enraged and himself made the attack upon Delehanty. At all events the applicant was convicted and sentenced as above stated. Both these parties were strangers in Easton. Delehanty had been there only five days when this trouble arose. It is represented that considerable newspaper notoriety was made out of this quarrel between these two men, and that the circumstances were very much exaggerated, so that the public mind was considerably inflamed at the time of the trial. The amount alleged to have been stolen from Cohen was only about $12, and the whole affair did not justify the importance that was attached to it. Upon looking at the facts in this case as they are presented to us now, it seems that the two years imprisonment in the Penitentiary which this defendant has served, is sufficient punishment for whatever violation of the law can be properly charged against him. He evidently has been punished sufficiently, and no public interest will suffer if he is now released. We therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, James E. Delehanty.

Harrisburg, March 15, 1911.

To His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor:

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Lehigh, to No. 38, September Sessions, 1910, Hildebrando Schifilacqua was indicted on a charge of selling liquor without license and selling liquor on Sunday.

At the same time and in the same Court, to No. 39, September Sessions, 1910, Filippo Schifilacqua was indicted on exactly the same charge.

Both the defendants, when called for trial, entered pleas of guilty, and each was sentenced, September 12, 1910, to pay a fine of $1,000, and undergo an imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of nine months.

On December 6, 1910, an application for pardon of each was filed, which was heard on December 21, 1910, and being resisted by the District Attorney, was then refused. An application for rehearing was duly granted February 15, 1911, and the case came before the Board again to-day at our regular meeting. We now recommend that a pardon be granted each of these applicants.

The applicants are Italians. The charges against them grew out of the same state of facts precisely, and although there were two separate Court records, the two cases were heard together before our Board, and the same reasons for clemency are applicable to each case.

It seems that a certain firm of contractors had a large number of Italian workmen engaged in a railroad construction operation near Allentown in the Summer of 1910, and these two applicants, being both physically incapable of hard manual labor, were engaged by this firm to conduct the commissary for these laborers. In the course of running this commissary, these applicants did, what is represented to be the usual thing under such circumstances, namely, furnished beer to the workmen for pay. It is admitted that this sale of beer was illegal. Complaint was made, and the Court proceedings resulted in the sentences above mentioned.

One of these applicants, Hildebrando, had previously lost a leg while in the employ of a railroad company. The other is afflicted with rheumatism and is in a bad physical condition. The maximum sentence of imprisonment on a charge of this kind is twelve months. These applicants have served more than six months of their nine months term. It is their intention, if released, to depart at once for their native country. The elder of the two, Filippo, is entitled to receive, and has been receiving, a pension from the Italian Government for some services rendered. His continuing to receive this pension is conditioned upon his reporting to the authorities in Italy within a certain time in the near future. A satisfactory arrangement has been made with the Commissioners of Lehigh County for the payment of a portion of the fines imposed. The District Attorney and the County Solicitor, under the conditions mentioned, now unite in the recommendation of the pardon. The Trial Judge, while declining to be a party to such an arrangement, writes that he will make no opposition to the pardon being now granted on the terms named. The interests of the community will thus be protected, and the law will have been vindicated, if the men are released, and no further good can result in their prolonged confinement.

For these reasons, therefore, we recommend that pardons be now granted to each of these applicants, one to Hildebrando Schifilacqua, and one to Filippo Schifilacqua.

Harrisburg, March 15, 1911.

To His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Clarion, to Nos. 7 and 8, December Sessions, 1906, C. O. Thomas was indicted on the charge of statutory burglary and of horsestealing, respectively, and upon December 7, 1906, was sentenced, in the horsestealing case, to pay a fine of $200 and undergo an imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for four years, and in the burglary case, to pay a fine of $200 and undergo an imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for three years, to be computed from the expiration of the sentence in the horsestealing case. The aggregate imprisonment imposed is, therefore, seven years.

On February 28, 1911, an application for pardon was duly filed, and the same was heard and considered at our meeting held this day. We recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant.

Two reasons have been advanced for favorable consideration of this application, first, that the law has been fully vindicated by the more than four years imprisonment already undergone, and second, that the applicant is afflicted with tubercular disease of the hip, which makes him practically helpless, and from the effects of which he is likely to die if kept in confinement, or at least have his life much shortened. The first of these reasons seems to have sufficient merit alone to warrant our favorable recommendation. The two together seem to have influenced Judge Wilson, who imposed the sentences, to join in the application for pardon. The District Attorney likewise recommends our favorable consideration of the application. Judge Wilson writes as follows:

"Clarion, Pa., February 14, 1911.

The Board of Pardons, Harrisburg, Pa.

Gentlemen:—Following a conviction on two indictments for felony Mr. C. O. Thomas was sentenced by the Court of Quarter Sessions of Clarion County on December 7, 1906, to the Western Penitentiary of Pennsylvania for the term of seven years.

I am informed by Warden John Francies, and Reverend C. M. Miller, that hi srecord while in prison has been perfect and that there are no marks against him. I am also informed by Robert Anderson, Resident Physician, that Mr. Thomas is now suffering with a tubercular hip which has been operated upon on several occasions.

On account of his sickness, and since he has served over four years of his sentence, and, inasmuch as I am informed that on his release from prison he expects to go to live with some of his relatives who have taken an interest in him, I now join in his petition and recommend that clemency be extended and a pardon be granted to him.

Very truly yours,
H. R. WILSON."

Therefore, feeling that the ends of justice have been served, and that the interests of humanity favor the exercise of clemency in this particular case, we recommend that a pardon be now granted this applicant, C. O. Thomas.

Respectfully submitted,

Harrisburg, March 15, 1911.

To His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Lackawanna, to No. 115, April Sessions, 1908, Lewis H. Orcutt was indicted and convicted on a charge of perjury, and upon February 6, 1909, was sentenced to pay a fine of one hundred dollars, costs, and undergo an imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of four years.

An application for pardon as filed April 11, 1910, and the application then refused. On February 15, 1911, on application duly made, a rehearing was granted. The case was again heard at the meeting of the Board held this day. After due consideration we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Lewis H. Orcutt.

The accusation of perjury, on which the indictment was founded, grew out of the forged Crawford will litigation, which was quite a well known contest in Lackawanna County about three years ago, and which absorbed public attention in that section of the State to a remarkable degree. The technical charge was made out, and the defendant was properly convicted; the jury, however, recommended the defendant to the extreme mercy of the Court.

The maximum penalty for the crime of perjury is seven years. The defendant was sentenced to four years. After the lapse of more than two years, and since the excitement and agitation of the public mind incident to the trial has somewhat subsided, this application for pardon appears to be viewed in the light of the recommendation of the jury, and we have not been advised of any serious opposition to its approval. On the contrary we have on file with the application many letters from prominent people of the vicinity requesting our favorable action. These people know the defendant, and are well acquainted with all the circumstances of the case. When the application was before the Board eleven months ago the reasons for clemency then urged did not appeal to the Court and to the prosecuting officer. These reasons were: "That the ends of justice will not suffer by his being released at this time;" "that he has been sufficiently punished, considering the grade of his offense;" "that the jury that convicted him recommended him to the extreme mercy of the Court." The passing of time, and the additional year's confinement in the penitentiary, have lent strength to these reasons, and the opposition to the application has waned to a considerable extent. Judge Edwards, who imposed the sentence, in replying to our inquiry as to his views with reference to the present application, writes to the Board under date of March 13, 1911, as follows:

"A strong appeal was made for Orcutt a year ago to the prosecutor, the District Attorney and the Trial Judge. We discouraged the attempt to apply for a pardon at that time, and advised waiting another year. We think that the purpose of the law in the infliction of punishment on Orcutt has been sufficiently fulfilled, and that there is no objection to his being pardoned.

I have consulted the prosecutor and the District Attorney."

This being the thought in the minds of the Judge, the District Attorney and the prosecutor, the best qualified persons in the Commonwealth to pass upon the subject, and seeing that under the commutation law the term of imprisonment will expire in about nine months and a half, we are of the opinion that our favorable consideration of the application would be proper under all the circumstances as laid before us. We therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Lewis H. Orcutt.

To His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Montgomery, to No. 132, October Sessions, 1910, W. Gordon Dyer was indicted on a charge of Aggravated Assault and Battery. He was tried and convicted October 15, 1910, and upon October 26,1910, he was sentenced by the Court to pay a fine of $250, costs, and to undergo an imprisonment at labor in the County Prison for the term of nine months. He was forthwith committed to the charge of the Warden of the Prison, and has been in custody since that day.

On November 5, 1910, an application for pardon was duly filed, which, after hearing, was on November 16th refused. On February 15, 1911, an application for rehearing was granted, and the case was heard again at our meeting on March 15, and then held under advisement. After carefully considering the application, and reviewing all that appears by our record and that was presented to us by both sides on the argument of the case, we now recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, W. Gordon Dyer.

This applicant is a young man of about twenty-two years of age; a resident of Norristown, and of good family connection. The assault complained of was an automobile collision which took place on the public highway in the village of Jeffersonville, near Norristown, on the evening of September 10, 1910. Dyer was driving his automobile, and ran into a team, a horse and buggy, driven by Mr. Walter Smith, with whom was his wife, Mrs. Mary Smith. In this collision the horse was struck by the automobile, and was injured to such an extent that he had to be killed; the buggy was demolished, and the occupants, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, were thrown out with considerable violence and more or less hurt. An information was laid against Dyer. He was arrested, tried and convicted, and then sentenced as stated.

It was contended at the trial on the part of the Commonwealth that Dyer was driving his machine recklessly, at an excessive rate of speed, and altogether without regard to the rights of the public, and that the collision was the result of criminal negligence on his part. Also, that he was intoxicated. The defendant denied all these allegations, and sought to show in explanation of the collision that just before its occurrence the steering apparatus of his automobile became disarranged, whereby the car failed to respond to his guiding hand; that a tire burst; and that the machine by reason of these unforseen difficulties swerved from side to side of the road, and thus came into contact with the Smith team after it got beyond his control. The fact of the collision was not disputed, nor the injury to the horse, nor the demolition of the buggy, nor the violent precipitation into the road, and consequent physical injury, of the occupants of the buggy. The jury found against the defendant, and rendered a verdict of "Guilty as indicted," the Court overruled a motion in arrest of judgment and imposed sentence. The defendant has been in confinement under this sentence since October 26th last.

On the original application the reasons assigned for clemency were: (1) That under all the circumstances of the case, the sentence imposed by the Court was unnecessarily severe. (2) That there was no evidence in the case either of malice or willful wrongdoing by the petitioner. On the rehearing the reasons assigned are: (1) That he has undergone an imprisonment of three months since the rejection of his former application (2) That the sentence of the Court imposed upon him was an excessive punishment for the offense committed by him. (3) That the imprisonment of nearly four months already suffered by him is an adequate punishment for the offense for which he was convicted.

Certain matters have been brought to our attention which we think warrant us in taking favorable action on this application. An imprisonment of over five months has been undergone by the applicant. The ignominy and disgrace attached to a jail sentence, be it ever so short, is a severe punishment to a man of good or of ordinary social standing. An impressive lesson has been taught this young man. More than seven hundred of his neighbors, residents of Norristown and vicinity, have signed petitions to the Board testifying their endorsement of the grounds for relief laid in the application. There are many individual letters to the same effect. Ten members of the jury who heard the case and delivered the verdict of guilty have written to the Board asking that clemency be shown the applicant on the ground that he has undergone sufficient punishment. Mr. Smith and his wife, whose team was run into, write to the Board that they have received full satisfaction for all damage done them through this collision, and that they believe he has made full atonement and has suffered adequately, and they therefore ask that a pardon be granted him. The full amount of the fine and all the costs have been paid. More than half the term of imprisonment has been served. His conviction has not been without its penalty and sting. The record of the conviction and sentence will remain as a deterrent which will be as effective if he is released from prison now as it would be if he were held in confinement for the remainder of his term.

Under these circumstances we think that the Executive may properly exercise his prerogative of extending clemency, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted this applicant, W. Gordon Dyer.

Respectfully submitted,

Lieutenant Governor.

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, March 29, 1911.

To His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Warren, to No. 1, December Term, 1907, Martin Nelson and Harry Shaw were, December 3, 1907, convicted on an indictment charging them jointly with robbery and aggravated assault and battery. Upon January 27, 1908, they were sentenced each to pay a fine of $1,000, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for the term of six years and six months.

Application for pardon was filed on behalf of these Defendants February 28, 1911. Argument of the case was heard at our meeting of March 15th, and the case then held under advisement. At a special meeting held this day, after duly considering the application, it was decided that favorable action be taken, and we, therefore, recommend that pardons be now granted to those applicants, Martin Nelson and Harry Shaw.

Shaw is a young man of about 23 years of age; Nelson is a man about 30 years old. The prosecutor was a man by the name of Oscar Olson. The defendants lived at Warren. Olson, it seems, was a resident of the State of New York. While traveling around he stopped at Warren on the afternoon of November 19, 1907. Soon after his arrival in the town, he picked up an acquaintance with Nelson, and later on in the day, with Shaw. Previously he was unknown to both these defendants. Olson had been drinking some that day prior to reaching Warren During his first conversation with Nelson, they had some talk about "going some place where they could have some fun." Nelson was willing to aid him in this regard, and together they purchased a team and started off on a trip to some nearby place with which Nelson claimed to be familiar, and where they could secure the attentions they desired. On the way they met Shaw, and he was invited to go along. There was more or less drinking by the three while they were together. The result that followed was, what usually happens under such conditions, a quarrel, before they reached their destination. The testimony of the prosecutor and that of the defendants differ with regard to what happened after the trouble began. The prosecutor alleges that after they had gone into the country a short distance, the two defendants assaulted him and took his money from him. This was substantially the charge in the indictment, and it was on this charge and the testimony of the prosecutor, mainly, that the defendants were convicted.

The grounds on which clemency is asked are principally that the imprisonment already served is an adequate punishment for the offense committed. A general petition, signed by a large number of friends and acquaintances of the applicants, and letters from reputable persons familiar with the facts in the case, endorse the application. The judge who presided at the trial of the case, and the District Attorney who prosecuted, in writing to us, lean to the side of clemency. Judge Lindsey, who imposed the sentence, says, under date of February 23, 1911:

"To the Honorable the Board of Pardons for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Gentlemen:—Notice has been given to me of an application to be made for the pardon of Harry Shaw and Martin Nelson, who were convicted of robbery, aggravated assault, and assault and battery, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer for this County, and sentenced by me, President Judge of the Court at that time.

The sentence was somewhat severe but was, in the judgment of the Court, fully justified by the evidence and circumstances attending the case, and in view of the fact that it was not the first offense, at least as to one of them. However, they have served now three years and three months in the Western Pentitentiary, and if their behavior has been good during that period, and in view of the fact that they are both young men, I would not be adverse to the Board recommending their pardon to the Executive."

William S. Clark, Esq., who was District Attorney when the case was tried, writes as follows:

"Warren, Pa., February 18, 1911.

To the Honorable, the Members of the Board of Pardons of Pennsylvania, Harrisburg, Penna.

In re-application of Harry Shaw and Martin Nelson for pardon.

Gentlemen:—At the time of the conviction of Harry Shaw and Martin Nelson in Warren County in 1907, the writer was District Attorney of Warren County and had full charge of the prosecution of this case against them. These two young men were at the time in the employ of livery stables in Warren Borough. The prosecutor, a man of about their own age, came to Warren from Jamestown, New York, some twenty-five miles away, and on the day of his arrival in Warren chanced to meet the two prisoners at a restaurant. The stranger from Jamestown was drinking. He furnished the money with which more drink was purchased, and all three became somewhat intoxicated. After being together for a short time in the evening, the stranger proposed making a trip to some place where they could have further excitement and pleasure; accordingly a rig was obtained from one of the liveries and the three parties drove through the outskirts of the town and several miles into the country. They alighted from the rig in a timber slashing, or clump of woods, and the prosecutor claimed that they wandered about for some time, the defendants claiming to be in search of a place that they were familiar with, and that finally the defendants started a quarrel with him, and after making some display of force, took his money away from him. The only substantial corroboration of the prosecutor's story, as the writer recalls it, was the testimony of the farmer to whose house the prosecutor went after being assaulted. However, the defendants were, we fully believe, rightly convicted by the jury of the offense with which they were charged. It seemed to the writer at the time that there were some extenuating circumstances which might have been taken into consideration in passing sentence. The fact that the prosecutor was not entirely blameless in his conduct and that the parties were drinking together, seemed to have some bearing upon the subject.

The writer has taken some interest in the proceedings for a pardon, because he is convinced that these prisoners have been sufficiently punished, and that it will be for their benefit, and not to the detriment of society in general, to have them released at a considerably earlier date than that fixed by the sentence. The writer has had some correspondence with Martin Nelson. He has no near relatives in this vicinity, Nelson has treated this whole matter very fairly, and gives faithful assurance that he will, when liberated, go to work and conduct himself properly. He expresses himself as meaning to do this whether pardoned or not. The writer has been impressed with his expressions and believes them to be sincere. The writer understands that Shaw has expressed himself along the same lines. Nelson was at one time employed by the Hammond Iron Works of this place and gave faithful service as a workman for a considerable period of time. This was just prior to his employment at the work in which he was engaged when arrested. I believe that Nelson is capable of going to work and sticking to a job and conducting himself as a decent citizen. Nelson is a good natured young man and shows no evidence of being harsh or mean in his temperament or ideas. I do not believe that he would act in an offensive way under ordinary circumstances. I have not had the same opportunity to observe Shaw, but believe that, if given an opportunity to lead a more industrious life, he would make a good showing. He had scarcely arrived at an age where he could be expected to accomplish very much when he was arrested.

If the new law, relating to indeterminate sentences, could be applied to the case of these boys, it would doubtless result in their release from imprisonment. It would seem to be fair to apply the same principles to their case as would be applied under the new law. This the Board of Pardons alone has the power to do. In other words, there is a strong chance that, if lenience is extended to these young men at this stage in their career, they will pick up and develop into useful members of society. The writer strongly believes that, in this instance, the State should pardon and furnish an incentive for better conduct.

I have no interest in this matter, except the one arising from some acquaintance with the prisoners and with the circumstances relating to their case. I do not represent them in any way as an attorney-at-law.

Very respectfully yours,

WM. S. CLARK."

From the history of the case, and upon reviewing all the circumstances as brought to our attention through the above letters, petitions, etc., and the statements of counsel made on the argument, we are of the opinion that the reasons alleged are well-founded; and inasmuch as under the commutation law there now remains unserved but little more than a year of their sentence, we regard this a proper case for the exercise of clemency. We, therefore, recommend that pardons be now granted the applicants, Martin Nelson and Harry Shaw.

To His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Wayne, to No. 6, October Term, 1910, Paul Spudis, (or Shudis), was convicted on an indictment charging him with robbery from the person, larceny, etc., and was, on the 29th day of October, 1910, sentenced by the Court to pay a fine of ten dollars, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than fifteen months or more than five years.

On March 15, 1911, an application for pardon was filed, and then heard, but held under advisement until our meeting of this day. After careful consideration we now recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Paul Spudis.

The applicant is a foreigner who came to this country from Austria about six years ago. He made his home at Scranton, Lackawanna County, and was a laborer in the mines. On August 11, 1910, he, with a party of friends and acquaintances, went on an excursion or picnic to Lake Ledore, in Wayne County, some forty odd miles distant from Scranton. While at this resort some sort of a disturbance arose during the afternoon of the day; there was a fight, and some body was robbed of a watch. Spudis and several members of his party were charged with causing or taking part in this disturbance or riot, and were blamed for the robbery. They were then and there arrested, and aftewards tried in Wayne County, where they were entire strangers. Spudis was unable to speak English, and of course was very much handicapped on the trial. After his conviction a motion for new trial was made, but by this time the witnesses had become scattered, and it was thought advisable to make application for relief through this Board. In discharging the said Rule on January 3, 1911, the Court said: "It being represented to the Court that an application for a pardon will be made to the Board of Pardons of the said Paul Spudis, we place ourselves upon the record as favoring such application." As a further indication that the Court was not entirely satisfied with the result of the trial, the Judge, under date of March 13, 1911, writes to the Board as follows, the District Attorney also signing the letter:

"Honesdale, Pa., March 13, 1911.

Board of Pardons, Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear Sirs:—Paul Spudis was convicted in this Court in October last of the offence of larceny from the person. He was sentenced October 29, 1910, to the Eastern Pententiary for not less than fifteen months nor more than five years.

We have been informed that an application has been made to your Board for his pardon.

The question of his guilt was a close one. We have learned that Mr. Spudis always held a good reputation among his people. That was not proven at the trial of the case. Had his good character been shown the verdict might have been different.

From our knowledge of all the circumstances of this case, we believe that justice would be done if a pardon were extended to him, and not only do we make no opposition to such pardon, but so far as we are concerned would recommend that pardon be granted.

Very truly yours,
ALONZO T. SEARLE. P. J.
M. E. SIMONS, Dist. Atty."

From an examination of the record of this case, which shows that the applicant bore a good character and that he had always been an upright and industrious man, we have reached the conclusion that there is considerable doubt as to the guilt of the defendant; and in view of the letter above quoted we are of the opinion that the ends of justice have been reached in the six months' imprisonment already experienced, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Paul Spudis.

To His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 254 September Sessions 1910, Joe Joseph was indicted on a charge of Seduction under promise of marriage, and was, on December 14th, found guilty. On December 30, 1910, the defendant was sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of fifteen months.

On April 6, 1911, an application for pardon was duly filed, and the case was heard at our regular meeting to-day. Upon a careful consideration of the application, and in the light of the facts presented at the hearing, we are of the opinion that a pardon should now be granted the applicant.

This defendant is a young man of about twenty-three years of age. The age of the girl was not clearly shown at the trial. Intimate sexual relations existed between the two, but there is doubt whether these relations reached a higher plane than a commercial stage. Otherwise the applicant seems to have borne a good character. Testimonials to that effect are on file. It was also represented to us by counsel representing the prosecution, who appeared before the Board, that both the girl and her mother have expressed themselves in favor of this application, on the ground that the applicant has been sufficiently punished. It further appeared from statements made to us, which seem to be reliable, that all the elements of the serious charge of seduction were not clearly proven to be present in the prosecution.

In view therefore of all the circumstances attending this case which have been brought to our attention, we are of the opinion that this applicant has atoned for what he did, and we recommend that a pardon be now granted him.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 139, February Sessions, 1909, William W. Ramsey was convicted on an indictment charging him with bribery, and on May 5, 1909, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000, casts, and undergo an imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a period of one year and six months. An appeal from this judgment was taken to the Superior Court, where the judgment was affirmed. His actual imprisonment, under the sentence, began March 12, 1910. He has been in confinement since that time, a period of about fourteen months.

On September 3, 1910, an application for pardon was duly filed, which was heard at the September meeting of the Board. The case was held under advisement until December 21, 1910, when the application was refused. At our recent March meeting, on application duly filed, a rehearing was granted, and the case was heard again at our April meeting, 19th ultimo. It has been held under advisement by us since that hearing. At a special meeting held this day, and after duly considering all the facts and circumstances attaching to this case, we arrived at the conclusion that this application was entitled to our favorable action, and accordingly we now recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, William W. Ramsey

The offense with which this defendant was charged was one of a series of unlawful acts, committed by different persons, officials and others, in the City of Pittsburgh, that were brought to light in the year 1908. It was shown in certain investigations that were made shortly before that time that it had been a prevalent custom in the Councils of that city to exact money from banks and other depositories to secure the deposit of city funds therein.

Ramsey was President of the German National Bank, one of the leading financial institutions of the City of Pittsburgh. Though he personally did not pay any money to secure the city's deposit for his institution, yet he consented to such payment. Upon discovery of such illegal payment by the Bank, an indictment was found against this applicant on the charge of bribery, and he was convicted.

It happend that the case of Ramsey was among the first, if not the very first, of all these (as they were commonly called) "graft cases," and he was the first man sentenced following the aforesaid investigations. His trial took place and his sentence was imposed at a time when the public mind was greatly excited, and when public clamor was at its height. Subsequent events, however, have shown that the sentence was unduly severe as compared with those imposed upon other like offenders. It has been brought to our attention that many such other offenders, who were tied and sentenced a year of more after Ramsey's conviction, received sentences imposed by the several trial judges of comparatively short terms of imprisonment, and the President of one bank to a fine only, and no imprisonment. Inasmuch as the sentences of these last named offenders have in nearly every case expired, it seems to us that the deterrent effect of Ramsey's long sentence has been abrogated, and that the interests of society do not demand his further detention.

We have received many letters and petitions, signed by the very best citizens of Pittsburgh and Allegheny County, City and County officials, bank officers, newspaper editors, and persons in all walks of life, requesting our favorable consideration of this application for pardon.

Feeling assured that the ends of justice have been reached in this case, and with the cognizance that, under the commutation law, this applicant would be entitled to his release from prison within a few days, and bearing in mind his previous high character and spotless life, we recommend that a pardon be now granted to the applicant, William W. Ramsey, especially as he will thereby regain his citizenship.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Philadelphia, to No. 6, April Term, 1907, Alexander McDonaghy was convicted on the charge of rape, and on September 25, 1907, was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for a period of eight years.

On April 6, 1911, an application for pardon was duly filed. The application was heard at our April meeting, 19th ultimo, and then held under advisement. At a special meeting held to-day, having given the case full consideration, we decided in favor of the application, and accordingly we now recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Alexander McConaghy.

The applicant is a young man of about 26 years of age, a resident of Philadelphia, who, previous to the accusation in the City of Philadelphia, where they had carnal connec- time of his trial he was about 22 years of age. In company with several other young men, he was charged with having induced a young girl to accompany them to a vacant lot in the City of Philadelphia, where they had carnal connection with her, which, under the law, was statutory rape, inasmuch as she was alleged to have been under the age of 16. He has always denied his guilt in the matter. Several of the others escaped punishment because of her inability to identify them.

The applicant has already served more than three years and seven months of imprisonment, and, it is urged, has been thus sufficiently punished for whatever he may have done. Previous to his arrest he was the sole support of his aged mother, who is now in poverty and distress. There are on file with the papers a great many letters from his neighbors and acquaintances, testifying to their knowledge of his prior good character and habits of industry, and their belief that he has been sufficiently punished, and that it would be for his own and his mother's good, to have him released from prison.

From all that we can gather from the record and the statements made to us, we are of the opinion that no further good will result from keeping this applicant in confinement any longer, that the ends of justice have been reached, and that the prisoner can be restored to his liberty with entire safety to the community, and to the benefit of himself and of his dependent relatives. We therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Alexander McConaghy.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 505 December Sessions 1906, Charles S. Cameron was convicted on an indictment charging him with the crime of bribery, and on May 26, 1909, was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, casts, and undergo an imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for the term of two years. On appeal to the Superior Court, and afterwards to the Supreme Court, the judgment of the Quarter Sessions was affirmed, except as to the length of the term of imprisonment, which, it was held, could not under the Act of Assembly exceed the term of one year. The record was remitted to the Quarter Sessions, and on January 28, 1911, the defendant was re-sentenced by that Court to pay a fine of $500, casts, and undergo an imprisonment in the County Jail for the term of one year.

On April 8, 1911, an application for pardon was duly filed, which was heard at the April meeting of the Board, and then held under advisement. At our meeting held to-day it was decided, after due consideration, that the case is worthy of our favorable attention, and we therefore now recommend that a pardon be granted to this applicant, Charles S. Cameron.

This prosecution was one of the commonly termed "graft cases" that arose in the City of Pittsburgh several years ago. The cases followed certain investigations that were made with regard to a pernicious custom that was found to prevail in the Councils of the said City, namely, that of exacting money from persons asking for the passage of ordinances. Cameron was interested in securing the passage of an ordinance granting municipal franchises to a certain street railway company, which was an entirely proper and meritorious enterprise. He learned that it would not be possible to secure the enactment of this measure without the payment of a large sum of money to members of Council. Being confronted with the conditions that existed he undertook to accommodate himself to the practice that prevailed in this regard, and he entered into negotiations with a member of Councils accordingly. His purpose was detected and halted. Prosecutions were brought against the Councilman in question, and against himself and others. Trials and convictions fallowed, and Cameron was sentenced for his participation, as before stated.

The grounds on which clemency is asked are substantially, first, that the defendant was prosecuted with undue persistence under the belief that he possessed guilty knowledge affecting city officials which he refused to disclose. This belief is now admitted to have been without foundation. A second ground is that the petitioner has already suffered adequate punishment for his offending, and that the sentence imposed upon him is out of proportion in severity to those inflicted on others who afterwards were indicated and convicted of similar offenses.

From the examination we have made we are of the opinion that these reasons are substantial, and that they are entitled to our acceptance. The petitioner was a man of hitherto unblemished character. There are on file with us a great many letters from very prominent people of Pittsburgh endorsing the application and asking our favorable consideration. Among these there is one from Mr. John Marron, who was emplayed as private counsel to prosecute the various defendants in these graft cases, and who became very active in the breaking up of the notorious practices, and who was largely instrumental in securing the conviction in this present case. The District Attorney of the County does not interpose any objection to the application for pardon. The Trial Judge writes the Board as follows.

"April 25, 1911.

"To the Board of Pardons, Harrisburg, Pa.

"Gentlemen:—There is now pending before your Board an application for the pardon of Charles S. Cameron, convicted in the Courts of Allegheny County of attempted bribery. The case was tried before me, and, there practically was no defence made for Cameron at the trial, his counsel relying upon the sufficiency of their plea in bar, which, however, afterwards was determined against them. At the time of the trial and at the time sentence was imposed I considered the case a flagrant one and was of opinion that the defendant should suffer the extreme penalty of the law, as no mitigating circumstances were made to appear. Since the defendant has been in jail, however, certain matters have been brought to my attention of which I had no previous knowledge. I have seen a copy of the letter written to your Board by Mr. Marron, the private counsel for the Commonwealth, who tried the case, in which he states the matters surrounding the case in detail which were not brought out at the trial. With the sentences imposed on other defendants convicted of crimes of similar nature, to which Mr. Marron refers, I had nothing to do, the Cameron case being the only one tried before me. I am informed that the District Attorney is willing that this pardon shall be granted and that he has written a letter to your Board stating his position in the matter, but I do not know this to be a fact. The District Attorney has not spoken to me on the subject. You will know if such a letter from him is before you. I desire simply to state that if the private counsel for the Commonwealth and the District Attorney are willing that a pardon be granted this defendant the Court is willing. Possibly the defendant already has suffered quite enough. His wife is heartbroken over the affair, and I am informed that the business interests of the defendant are sadly in need of his attention. Whatever action your body may see fit to take in the matter will be satisfactory to the Court.

Yours very respectfully,

J. Q. VAN SWEARINGEN."

In view, therefore, of all the circumstances as brought to our attention, we are of the opinion that the imprisonment which the applicant has already undergone, together with the notoriety and disgrace forced upon him, and the business losses sustained, is a sufficient punishment for his offense, and that the public interest will not suffer by his relase from confinement at this time. We therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted to the applicant, Charles S. Cameron.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 50 June Sessions 1907, Charles R. Richardson was convicted on an indictment charging him with the crime of Conspiracy to Bribe. On June 23, 1910, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for the period of one year and three months. The judgment of the Court of Quarter Sessions was affirmed on appeal to the Superior Court, and then to the Supreme Court. The term of imprisonment began February 20, 1911.

On May 2, 1911, an application for pardon was filed in due form, and the matter was heard and considered at our meeting held this day. Having given the case careful attention and examination we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Charles R. Richardson.

Richardson was jointly indicted with A. B. McGrew, These two men were members of a firm engaged in the brokerage business in the City of Pittsburgh.

Several years ago it became publicly known that there had grown up in the City of Pittsburgh in connection with the transaction of the business of the City Councils a system or practice of exacting the payment of money from persons desiring the passage of City Ordinances, however, meritorious and useful the ordinances might be. It transpired that in the year 1906 a certain Street Railway Company sought to secure the enactment of the necessary municipal legislation to enable the Company to operate on the streets of the city. The Company found themselves a victim of the system mentioned. Richardson was not interested in the Company. The projectors of the Company, however, applied to his firm for the loan of a certain large sum of money. This money the railway people wanted to use in their negotiations with Councilmen with a view of influencing favorable action on their proposed ordinance. Richardson was ignorant of their real purpose. However, in the course of business as a broker he turned over the cash to the railway people in the presence of the member of Council with whom they were dealing in their unlawful course. In some manner during the progress of the negotiations the package containing the money which Richardson had delivered into the possession of the railway people was alleged by the railway people to be lost. Its disappearance under the peculiar circumstances caused Richardson to lay an information against the railway representative for larceny as bailee, and against him and the Councilman for conspiracy to defraud. The arrest of these parties caused the transaction to be made public, and light began to open on the prevailing practice. The Mayor of the City started an investigation which finally disclosed the system that had become entrenched in the Councils of the City. The railway people afterwards, in retaliation it is alleged, caused the arrest of Richardson on the charge of bribery and conspiracy to bribe, by reason of his connection with the transaction regarding the loan above alluded to. His trial followed soon afterwards, and his conviction and sentence followed.

There was explained to the Board at Considerable length and in detail the bearing which the action of Richardson in bringing the charge above mentioned had upon the series of prosecutions that afterwards followed along the same lines. The information which he first brought to the attention of officials led to the investigations that brought about so many exposures and ultimately broke up the nefarious practices. His trial and sentence, however, took place early in the proceedings and possibly before the full extent of the system was known. It was urged that in the light of subsequent events the applicant has been sufficiently punished, if, indeed, he should have been punished at all. It was also shown that public sentiment is favorable to the pardon of the applicant, as is evidenced by the fact that very many of the best citizens of Pittsburgh have transmitted to the Board their endorsement of the application. The District Attorney who had charge of the appeals to the higher Courts writes us that he considers that the defendant has been sufficiently punished. The District Attorney who tried the case is not now living, but Mr. John Marron, who was especially engaged to prosecute these "graft cases," as they were called, and who was instrumental in securing many convictions in the line of his duty in that regard, strongly urges the pardon of the applicant, in whose prosecution alone of all the cases that arose he had declined to take part, being of the opinion that this defendant was not deserving of prosecution.

Being convinced, therefore, from a careful consideration of the matter as gathered from an examination of the record and the presentation of counsel, that this is a case entitled to favorable action, we recommend that a pardon be now granted to the applicant, Charles R. Richardson.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Chester, to No. August Sessions 1910, Harry Anthony entered a plea of guilty to an indictment charging him with Statutory Burglary. On September 5, 1910, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $50, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiry for the indeterminate term of from two years, six months, to ten years.

May 2, 1911, an application for pardon was duly filed, and the matter was heard and considered at our regular meeting this day. After giving the case proper consideration we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Harry Anthony.

Anthony is an unmarried man of about twenty-six years of age. He was engaged as a farm hand on the farm of Mr. Charles L. Chandler, near Kennett Square. He is represented to be a good worker, and an industrious man, and was the main support of his mother. Unfortunately one night last August, in company with another workman on the farm, he became intoxicated, and while in this condition they returned to the house of their employer, where they were accustomed to lodge. Anthony went into one of the rooms of the house and took therefrom a watch and chain, and some other trinkets. It was for this offense that he was charged with burglary. He made no attempt to escape. The next morning the stolen goods were found on his person. At the trial he was not represented by counsel, and entered a plea of guilty—obviously with no understanding of the gravity of the charge. The facts in the case do not appear to warrant the serious charge, or the severity of the sentence imposed. It is reasonable to say that a mistake was made in returning the information on a charge of burglary. It is now admitted that the offense was not more than ordinary larceny, and should have been treated as such. Moreover, it has been represented to us that it is the belief of the prosecutor that Anthony was instigated to do what he did by his companion, a man by the name of Butcher. Mr. Chandler's affidavit has been filed with the papers, wherein he states among other things,

"I am satisfied that the larceny was planned by Butcher and not be Anthony, and that Anthony was only a tool in his hands. Anthony remained at my house all night, and the next morning the goods, consisting of a watch and chain, were found on his person. I feel that the punishment Anthony has received is ample, and that the law has been fully vindicated. I also believe that the information furnished by him will result in the conviction of the real offender. Prior to his conviction for this larceny he was an industrious farm hand, with a good reputation. He has a widowed mother whom he always helped, and I sincerely hope the Board of Pardons will pardon him."

This case properly appeals for executive clemency, inasmuch as this was a first offense, and as the term of imprisonment of more than eight months in the Penitentiary about meets the requirements of justice for the actual offense committed. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Harry Anthony.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 100, December Sessions, 1909, Samuel L. Hall was indicted on a charge of engaging in business of insurance broker without a license. He at first pleaded not guilty, but on February 11, 1910, he withdrew that plea, and entered a plea of guilty. On the same day he entered a plea of guilty to indictment No. 626, January Sessions, charging him with embezzlement by agent. He was thereupon on that day sentenced on the first charge to pay a fine of $300, and the costs; and on the second charge to pay a fine of $10, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for three years.

On May 2, 1911, an application for pardon was duly filed, and the case was brought to our attention at our May meeting. After duly considering all the facts in the matter we are of the opinion that the application deserves allowance, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Samuel L. Hall.

Hall is a man of about forty-six years of age. He was in the employ of a firm named Sherman & Marker, in Philadelphia, who were engaged in building houses of moderate size and selling them on installment payments, first placing insurance upon them and securing a certain advance payment on the sale. Their transactions apparently did not always square up to the mark of honesty, and it was alleged the members of the firm themselves have been under indictment for some of their dealings. The embezzlement charged against Hall grew out of the payment of two hundred dollars by a man named Brown which Hall claimed he turned over to his principals, but which they denied having received. Both the cases were heard by Judge Staples, specially presiding in the Philadelphia Quarter Sessions. Technically the defendant may have been guilty. He has been in prison considerably more than fifteen months under the sentence, in addition to about three months while awaiting trial. He was never before charged with any violation of law. Restitution has been made to Mr. Brown of the entire amount he claims to have lost. The defendant has suffered pretty severely, and it is not likely that he will offend against the law in the future. From all that we can learn regarding the case it is apparent that no further good will be accomplished by the continued confinement of this applicant; but that on the contrary his release may be of great benefit to him and of no probable harm to society. Judge Staples, in acknowledging receipt of the notice of this application, writes to counsel for claimant as follows:

I herewith enclose the notice of the application for the pardon of Samuel L. Hall.

I, as presiding judge in the trial of the case, will not oppose the pardon, but upon the other hand think it would be in line with the general movement to alleviate the condition of the criminal, and especially of deal leniently with those in whom there seems to be a grain of goodness out of which there may be enough to reform him. As far as the punishment is concerned, I think that the defendant has suffered enough, and that by pardoning him it may result in some good to himself and to the community generally."

Very truly yours,

CHARLES B. STAPLES."

We also have before us on acknowledgment in writing by Mr. Brown of receipt of the two hundred dollars which was the subject of the embezzlement, and his statement that he believes the imprisonment which the applicant has undergone has been sufficient punishment, and his request that the pardon be granted.

In view, therefore, of all the foregoing we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Samuel L. Hall.

Ellis were indicted on a charge of selling eggs unfit for food, contrary to the provisions of the Act approved March 11, 1909. They were duly convicted October 25, 1910, and on November 3, 1910, Thomas T. Ellis was sentenced to pay a fine of $500 and costs, and George W. Ellis was sentenced to pay costs and to undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of three months. On appeal to the Superior Court the Judgment of the Quarter Sessions was affirmed. Thomas T. Ellis has paid the amount of the fine imposed, and George W. Ellis began his imprisonment on March 31, 1911.

On December 12, 1910, an application for the pardon of George W. Ellis was duly filed, but, by reason of the appeal then pending in the Superior Court, the Application was, on December 21, stricken from the list. The degree of the Superior Court in the case was filed March 2, 1911, and an March 15 a motion was made before the Board for re-instatement of the case on our list and for a rehearing. This motion was allowed, and the matter was fully heard at our April meeting; it has been held under advisement since that time. At a special meeting of the Board convened that day, after having given the case thorough consideration, we have reached the conclusion that the application for pardon should be allowed. Our recommendation is that a pardon be granted George W. Ellis, but that the same be limited to take enect on June first next, by which time the applicant will have served two months in prison.

This applicant, George W. Ellis, is a son of the other defendant mentioned, Thomas T. Ellis. They are both members of the firm of T. T. Ellis & Son, who have been wholesale dealers in poultry and eggs in the City of Philadelphia for more than thirty years. This firm has always enjoyed the highest business reputation, and the individual members are of good social standing. The firm's business is extensive. Their transactions in eggs are in car and crate lots. As there are usually some bad eggs in any given large quantity, and it is impossible for large dealers to know the number of bad eggs in the various lots they daily handle, it had become a long established custom among dealers to grade eggs according to the supposed number of good and bad in a lot sold and to fix the price accordingly. It was shown on the trial that in the latter part of the year 1909, in the ordinary course of business the said firm sold, under the above conditions, a number of crates of eggs, some of which were found to be bad. Investigations on the part of the Pure Food Department traced these sales to the firm, and the arrest of the two members of the firm was ordered. The Pure Food Department officials had been earnestly engaged in trying to break up the practice of selling impure articles of food of various kinds, and the cases against these two defendants were prosecuted by that Department. It was not denied that the sales in question had been made by the firm. The defendants did not have any personal recollection of making the sales themselves individually, but they assumed the responsibility and undertook to defend. There had been many violations of the various pure food acts, and many arrests and convictions had been brought about in the City of Philadelphia. It had been the practice, upon these convictions, to impose fines upon the offenders. The fines would be paid, but the illegal sales would go on. The object contemplated by these laws, namely, the protection of the public by preventing the sale of impure articles of food, was not being reached. It became apparent to the Courts and to the Commonwealth's officers that an effective enforcement of the law demanded something more than fines. In this particular case it was held by the Court that the object of the Act of 1909 was to stop the sale of rotten eggs. It had not stopped it up to that time, and therefore the Court felt that in order to uphold the dignity of the law, and to secure the protection of the public, which was its intent, it was necessary to attach to the sentence an imprisonment of the defendant. The Act prescribes a penalty of fine or imprisonment, either or both, in the discretion of the Court. The minimum imprisonment under the Act is three months and the maximum nine months. This being the first case in which imprisonment was made part of the sentence in these impure food prosecutions the Court imposed the minimum term upon the son, and placed a fine upon the father.

It was urged before us as one of the grounds of clemency that the defendants in these cases, believeing that under the custom of the trade they were not guilty of violation of law, resisted this prosecution for the purpose of making a test case, having the impression that if the question should be decided against them they would be mulcted only with a fine, as up to this time no persons adjusted guilty of infringing the pure food laws had been punished beyond that extent. The outcome shows that in this view they were wrong. It has been established and promulgated as the result of this case that violations of the pure food laws will be punished with imprisonment as well as with fines. It was further urged that the conviction itself is a severe penalty to persons of the business and social position of the applicant, and that the conviction and the publicity it has received have had their good effect upon the community, and the ends of justice have been thereby sufficiently accomplished.

There is considerable force in this line of reasoning. This applicant will have served two months in jail on the thirty-first of this month. To him the imprisonment of two months, or even of a much shorter term, is as great a punishment as the full term would be to many another person, and the deterrent effect is as strong. The applicant surely has been cured of any tendency to trifle and take risks with the pure food enactments. An impressive example has been furnished to others who might be disposed to take such risks. The majesty of the law has been upheld, and a warning has been given to all dealers in food supplies.

The Court having been convinced of the necessity of a sentence of imprisonment it was not within their power to impose a shorter sentence than three months however much they may hape felt that a shorter term in this particular case would have accomplished the desired result. It is within the power of the Executive to reduce the term of imprisonment by granting a pardon when it becomes apparent that the end sought to be accomplished has been attained. The learned judge, who imposed the sentence, when he refused an application to modify the sentence with respect to the imprisonment feature and substitute a fine only, says: "I am frank to say that if the legislature had given me discretion on the subject for the first offense, and realizing that it would be a deterrent to others by giving this man a very heavy fine, I might not have gone to the extent of giving him a sentence of imprisonment for three months, which is the minimum of imprisonment. But the legislature does not give me any discretion. In the matter of imprisonment it says not less than three months. I am entirely satisfied in my own mind that the only way to stop this dastardly business of selling rotten eggs is by imposing a sentence of imprisonment upon those who are guilty."

In further support of the application there have been filed with the Board a very gerat many letters and petitions asking for our favorable action. These letters and requests show that the applicant stands well in the community where he lives and where he is engaged in business, and that it is the belief of his friends and neighbors that he has been adequately punished for whatever transgression he may have committed; they show in addition that it is the universal belief that there was no intentional design on his part to violate the law, but that he was the victim of a practice that had prevailed in the trade for many years—which practice unfortunately for him did not harmonize with the Act of Assembly. It is also to be remarked that, by reason of the short time the Act of 1909 had been in force, its provisions may not have become known to the trade with sufficient clearness to induce the trade to accommodate itself to the requirements of the law.

In view of all the facts and circumstanes connected with this Application, we are of the opinion that the ends of justice have been served by the imprisonment of two months which the applicant has undergone under the sentence, and we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, George W. Ellis, to take effect on June first, 1911.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Lehigh to No. 13, April Sessions, 1909, John Hirschman, in connection with Frank Kurtz and Frank Kreitz was indicted on a charge of aggravated Assault and Battery. On June 7, 1909, a verdict of guilty was rendered against Hirschman and Kurtz. Kreitz had absconded prior to the trial. Hirschman was sentenced to pay a fine of $25. costs, and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison of four years. Kurtz was sentenced to pay a fine of $25, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for two years. Kreitz was afterwards apprehended, convicted, and sentenced to an imprisonment of five years.

On March 2, 1911, an application for the pardon of Hirschman was duly filed, which was heard at our March meeting, and then held under advisement. We now recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, to take effect on June 7, 1911.

From statements made by counsel for the applicant, which were confirmed by the District Attorney, it appears that Kreitz was the principal offender. It is now conceded that Hirschman's sentence should not have been greater than Kurtz'. Kurtz, through the operation of the commutation law, was discharged last January. Judge Trexler suggests that if a pardon is awarded Hirschman it should take effect June 7. The Judge writes the Board as follows:

"March 11, 1911.

Gentlemen:—In re-application of John Hirschman for a pardon, beg to state that the facts set forth in the application, a copy of which was served upon me, appear correst. I would state, however, that if your Board sees fit to grant this pardon that the same should not take effect until June 7, 1911, which date appears to be the expiration of the sentence imposed upon Frank Kurtz, who was a co-defendant.

Respectfully yours,
FRANK M. TREXLER,
President Judge of the Courts of Lehigh County."

The District Attorney also writes the Board regarding this application as follows:

"March 4, 1911.

Gentlemen:—John Hirschman, together with Frank Kreitz and one Frank Kurtz, on the 25th day of December entered the saloon of one Henry De Christopher, in the 6th Ward, City of Allentown, County of Lehigh, and State of Pennsylvania, about 11.30 o'clock P. M.; shortly after their entrance into the saloon Frank Kreitz assaulted Henry DeChristopher, whereby he inflicted several very serious stab wounds upon Mr. DeChristopher.

At the time that Hirschman was tried there was testimony produced which made it appear that Hirschman was the party who inflicted the wound upon DeChristopher. At a recent trial of Frank Kreitz, who had fled as a fugitive, but who was arrested and tried for his implication in the crime it developed that Kreitz, and not Hirschman, was the party who inflicted the stab wounds. It also developed that Hirschman did not conspire with Kreitz to make the assault, but was only present with Kreitz at the time when Kreitz and DeChristopher encountered in the struggle. I think that John Hirschman was not guilty of all the counts contained in the indictment, and that he has served sufficient time for the part he played in the crime. The principal felon is now serving a sentence of five years.

Respectfully submitted,
FRED B. GERNERD,
District Attorney, Lehigh Co."

Under the conditions as shown by the above letters we have no hesitation in recommending that a pardon be granted this applicant, John Hirschman, the same to take effect on June 7, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the peace in and for the County of Snyder, to No. 4, December Sessions, 1910, Jonathan D. Swinford and W. Frank Moyer were jointly indicted on a charge of larceny and receiving stolen goods, and on March 2, 1911, were convicted as indicted. On March 1, 1911, Swinford was sentenced to pay a fine of $5, costs, and undergo an imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary of not less than nine months and not more than three years. Moyer was sentenced to pay a fine of $5, costs, and undergo an imprisonment in the County Jail of nine months.

On May 3, 1911, an application for the pardon of Swinford was duly filed, and the same was heard at our regular May meeting. After fully considering the case, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Jonathan D. Swinford, to be effective on June 11 next.

Swinford is a man of about sixty years of age, a farmer, and a man who bore a good character previous to the charge in the present case. There had been, for some time prior to October of last year, a good deal of chicken stealing in the neighborhood where these people lived. Moyer was suspected to be one of the parties engaged in the thieving operations. On October 31st last Swinford was informed that a neighbor named Shaffer had accused him and Moyer, who was a son-in-law of Swinford, of stealing his chickens, and that a settlement would be demanded. Swinford sought out Moyer, and together they visited Shaffer who told them to go to a certain Justice of the Peace and make settlement. The Justice informed them that he was instructed to have them arrested unless they paid twenty-five dollars, the estimated value of the chickens. Moyer agreed to make the payment, and Swinford advanced him the money for that purpose The Justice gave them a receipt in full settlement of the matter. The next day Moyer repaid the twenty-five dollars to Swinford. Within a few days an information was laid against Swinford and Moyer for stealing chickens, based on the alleged theft of the Shaffer chickens. They were both held for Court. At the trial, it is alleged, the guilt was fastened on Moyer. Swinford denied all guilt, and, it is claimed, even established an alibi. However, there was a conviction of both, and sentences were imposed as stated.

From our examination of the record before us, in connection with a consideration of many of the details attending the conviction and sentence of Swinford, which were brought out at our hearing, we are of the opinion that the sentence imposed upon this applicant was too severe. If Moyer was the chief offender, which seems to have been the case, then there was such a disparity between the punishment meted out to him and that measured out to Swinford as to entitle the latter to relief. Moreover, we find among the papers on file petitions and letters from a large number of citizens of his neighborhood, as well as from certain officials and others, to the effect that it is their belief that the applicant has been sufficiently punished. The letter from the District Attorney, which has been submitted, voices the sentiment which prevails as gathered from the letters and petitions mentioned. He writes as follows:

"May 4, 1911.

"To the Board of Pardons of Pennsylvania.

"Gentlemen:—Having secured the conviction of Jonathan D. Swinford, I am now willing to join many other citizens of this county in asking for his pardon.

He is a man up in years, and not strong in health. His children, who are grown up, are among the best and most respectable people in the community.

The farm is now without anyone to attend to it. I believe Swinford has already been sufficiently punished, and that the ends of justice in this community will be conserved by his pardon at this time, and therefore ask it.

Yours truly,

WM. K. MILLER,
District Attorney."

Under all the circumstances we are inclined to the belief that a three months imprisonment will statisfy the claims of justice against this defendant, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Jonathan D. Swinford, to take effect on June 11 next, which will be the expiration of an imprisonment of three months.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Schuylkill, No. 769, September Term, 1902, John Meyers was indicted on a charge of murder, and upon being arrainged, November 10, 1902, entered a plea of "Guilty of Murder in the Second Degree," which plea was accepted by the Court and the District Attorney, and, upon November 15, 1902, the defendant was sentenced to pay the costs and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of fourteen years. An application for pardon was refused in 1909, but a rehearing was allowed at our last meeting, and the case came before us at our regular meeting held this day.

After carefully considering the case, in the light of the record before us, we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, John Meyers.

The homicide with which this applicant was charged, occurred on the night of the twenty first of August, 1902, in the Borough of Ashland. Meyers, then a boy of about seventeen years of age, was on his way home, walking on the sidewalk. It was during the time of the coal stirke when people in that section were all more or less nervous and excited, and on the lookout for danger. A man by the name of Llewellyn came down the street in the opposite direction, in the roadway, pushing a wheel-barrow. He called to Meyers, and then left his barrow and started up the pavement after Meyers. Meyers turned and faced him, but kept walking backwards towards his home. Llewellyn continued to approach Meyers, who did not know who he was. Feeling that he was pursued, and not understanding what Llewellyn was talking about, Meyers drew his pistol and shot at him, from the effects of which wounding Llewellyn died. Meyers at once gave himself up and his trial and conviction followed. This whole affair happened without any quarrel and there was no malice or ill will or motive on the part of Meyers, except that he was in fear and felt that his life was in danger or at least that he was in danger of bodily harm.

We have received reports from the officials at the Penitentiary giving Meyers a most excellent record as a prisoner. Under the commutation law his term will expire in August of this year. In view of the good reports we have received of him and considering the entire lack of motive, and all the other circumstances connected with the homicide, as well as the short time yet remaining for him to serve, we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, John Meyers.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 154 April Term 1903, Catherine Danz was, April 16, 1904, convicted on an indictment charging her with Murder, and on July 6, 1904, she was sentenced to be hanged. On appeal to the Supreme Court the judgment of the Court of Oyer and Terminer was affirmed. Subsequently an application was made to the Board of Pardons for recommendation of commutation of death sentence, which was allowed, and on October 15, 1905, commutation was granted. The applicant has been in the penitentiary ever since, having been in confinement for pardon for more than eight years. On June 10, 1907, application was duly filed, which, at a subsequent meeting of the Board, was refused. At our meeting last month an application for rehearing of the application for pardon was allowed, and the case came before us to-day and was presented at length.

After carefully considering the matter in all its phases we are of the opinion that the application for pardon is now worthy of allowance, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Catherine Danz.

The trial of this applicant some seven years ago attracted wide spread interest throughout the land. The case presented elements which were peculiar, and which have made the case one of the most memorable in the annals of criminal jurisprudence. Fortune telling and hoodoo doctoring were prominent features that entered into the case. The examination of the body of the supposed victim of homicide some twenty months after its burial for traces of arsenical poison, was another remarkable feature.

In recommending commutation of death sentence in 1905 the Board gave a comparatively full history of the case, and for our present purposes therefore, it is only necessary to state the important facts:

Cotherine Danz was the wife of William G. Danz. They were married in 1879. Danz was a man addicted to drinking to excess, and not only neglected his family, but at times absolutely abused them. His habits or drinking becoming worse and worse, his wife, in desperation, sought means to cure him. She administered powders which made him sick for a time, but which were not specially harmful, These she obtained at nearby drug stores. This course not proving effective, she consulted a fortune teller, who recommended her to seek the assistance of one, Dr. Hossey, an herb doctor, sometimes known as a "hoodoo doctor," who, it was claimed, could, by the use of spells and charms cure her husband of his drinking habits. She used certain powders, etc., which she procured from Hoosey. This was in the spring of 1901. The husband about this time was suffering from rheumatism and was undergoing treatment by regular physicians for that ailment. He died suddenly in June, 1901, and the attending physician certified that the cause of death was "rheumatic paralysis of the heart." The body was embalmed in the customary way, and, so far as we know, or are advised, there was then no suspicion of foul play. However, some fifteen months after Danz's death and burial the sudden death of several children in a certain section of Philadelphia was investigated, and it was ascertained that powders had been gotten by their parents from Hoosey and had been administered to the children, which powders were supposed to have caused their death from poisoning. It then became known that Mrs. Danz had also secured powders from Hoosey which she had administered to her husband during his lifetime The authorities took up the matter, and in March 1903, the body of Danz was exumed and tests were made for the discovery of arsenical poison. The tests revealed the presence of arsenic in the remains in a very small quantity, but sufficient, in the opinion of the authorities, to justify a charge of murder against Mrs. Danz. After a prolonged trial her conviction resulted.

The reasons now laid in support of this application are, substantially, the following:

That no murder was in fact committed; that conviction was secured upon circumstantial evidence; that the applicant, now an aged woman, has recently undergone a severe surgical operation, the effects of which, aggravated by prolonged imprisonment, are likely to prove fatal; that her two children, who are now grown and living in a distant city under assumed names, are willing and anxious to provide for and take care of their mother if she is released; that her previous character had been good and that her deportment in prison has been exemplary; and that no public benefit can result from a continuance of her imprisonment, all of which are supplemented by a plea for mercy as a matter of grace and humane consideration. These reasons, appealing to the Board with much force, and under the belief that they exhibit good grounds for the exercsie of Executive clemency, we respectfully recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Catherine Danz.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the peace in and for the County of Washington, to No. 142 May Sessions, 1910, E. G. Dudley and O. A. Yolton were indicted for conspiracy, selling liquar without license, furnishing liquor on Sunday and selling liquor as a druggist without prescription. A verdict of guilty on the first and second charges was returned August thirty-first, 1910. No sentence was passed on the charge of conspiracy, but on the charge of selling liquor without license, Dudley was sentenced to pay a fine of one thonsand dollars, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the county jail for the period of five months. An appeal was taken to the Superior Court and the judgment of the Court of Quarter Sessions was affirmed. The defendant has been in prison under his sentence since April 24, 1911.

On May 2, 1911, an application for pardon of Dudley was duly filed, and the same was heard at our May meeting; the case has been held under advisement until to-day. After carefully considering the matter we now recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant E. G. Dudley.

The grounds on which clemency is asked are mainly that the sentence was excessive and that the defendant has been sufficiently punished by reason of the financial reverses that have overtaken him as a result of this prosecution. The record shows that these grounds are endorsed by many citizens of Washington County. Dudley was a regular druggist, and the sales of liquor complained of were made upon written prescriptions of a regularly registered physician. However, the Court held that the prescription was not a full protection to the druggist, and this, it is claimed, is a new interpretation of the law, and for this reason the applicant is entitled to the favorable consideration of the pardoning power.

In view of all the facts and circumstances of the case, as shown by the record, and brought out at the argument, we deem this applicant a proper subject for Executive clemency, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, E. G. Dudley.

Harrisburg, June 27, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the peace in and for the County of Mercer, to No. 30, April 7, 1909, William Goldberg, Benjamin Goldberg, E. T. Sullivan and Michael Eagan were indicted on the charge of Conspiracy to Defraud and Larceny. Upon the trial of the case after the testimony of the Commonwealth had been received, William Goldberg changed his plea of Not Guilty to that of "Nole Contendere" and the other defendants did likewise. Sentence was suspended upon all the defendants except William Goldberg, who was sentenced, June 7, 1909, to pay a fine of four hundred dollars, costs, make restitution etc., and undergo an imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a period of six years.

William Goldberg, the applicant for pardon, is a man upwards of sixty-three years of age. He was engaged in the junk business at Sharon, Mercer County. His son, Benjamin, one of the other defendants, worked for him. Sullivan was a railroad freight conductor and Eagan was yardmaster for the American Steel Foundries. An arrangement was entered into between these four men by which cars of scrap iron etc., consigned to the steel company, would be shipped from the yard of the steel company to the yards of William Goldberg after having been regularly receipted for by Eagan, the yardmaster of the steel company, and accounted for by Sullivan the conductor of the freight train. After reaching the yards of Goldberg the contents of the cars would be sold and the proceeds be divided among the four.

Although William Goldberg has borne the brunt of the charge, it has developed that Benjamin Goldberg was the instigator of the scheme. It has also been shown that the applicant, William Goldberg, has paid the fine imposed, and that he has made restitution to the steal company of the full value of all the property that was fraudulently taken from them, although the other conspirators received their share of the plunder. His health is rapidly failing in his confinement, and his property has been dissipated. It is now the opinion of the prison officials and those concerned in the trial that he has been punished sufficiently and that his pardon would be proper at this time. The trial judge writes to the Board at length upon the subject and closes his letter with the following statement:

"These considerations have lead me to feel that the reasons stated in the letters of numerous prominent and influential men, with whom I have long been acquainted, present a strong case for the pardon of Mr. Goldberg, and have lead me to the conclusion that it is my duty, or at least that there can be no impropriety in my adding my endorsement to that of many others; and I request that you give the case of Mr. Goldberg careful, and, if possible favorable consideration."

Numerous other letters from persons well acquainted with all the facts of the case, including the officials of the steel company and public officials in various positions, recommend our favorable action, and attest that it is their belief that the ends of justice have already been satisfied by the punishment undergone by the applicant and that such is the sentiment of the residents of Sharon and of Mercer and the surrounding counties.

In view of our examination of the merits of this case we are of the opinion that this application should be favorably considered, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, William Goldberg.

Harrisburg, June 27, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Dauphin, to No. 138 June Term, 1889, Sidney Ware was, on September 28, 1889, convicted on an indictment charging him with murder; and upon March 20, 1890, was sentenced to be hanged. On June 7, 1891, on application duly made to the Board of Pardons, and upon their recommendation, commutation of death sentence was granted. On April, 1902, an application for pardon was filed, and was then refused. At a recent meeting of the Board a petition for rehearing of the application for pardon was allowed, and at our meeting this day the application for pardon was fully heard and considered.

After due examination into the circumstances of the case the Board is now of the opinion that the application for pardon should be granted, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now issued to the applicant, Sidney Ware.

Ware is a man now of about the age of forty-four years. At the time of the commission of the offence charged he was about twenty-two yeads of age. The homicide for which he was indicted took place at Lykens, Dauphin County, on the evening of May 4, 1889. On that evening Ware, a comparative stranger in that section, with a companion, entered a bar room where there were a number of men congregated. In some way, and without any fault on the part of Ware, a quarrel arose, into which Ware was drawn. A very full and detailed account of this whole affair is set out in the recommendation of the Board on which the commutation was granted, and it is not necessary to repeat the history of the case here. It is sufficient to say that Ware, finding himself mixed up in this brawl, and being overcome and believing himself in danger of losing in life, fired several shots from his revolver, striking two of the men in the crowd, Miller and Kindler, both of whom afterwards died from the effects of the shooting.

After reviewing the case at very great length, the Board of Pardons in 1891, in recommending the commutation of the death sentence said:

"There is an entire absence of any testimony which could show any possible motive on the part of Ware to take the lives of the two men who were killed. It was established beyond doubt that he did not know either of them personally, and that therefore there was no actual malice in his heart. As hereinbefore stated, he was not the aggressor at any time in the brawl, and the entire difficulty was begun between Johns and Schultz, and Ware had no part in that except to act in the capacity of a peacemaker. It would seem from all the evidence as if Ware, without any guilty contribution to the circumstances, was dragged into the general brawl and that while so engaged and while being roughly handled and to such an extent as to create fears for his own personal safety—whether well grounded or not—fired the two shots resulting in the death of Miller and Kindler."

And in closing their recommendation the Board further says:

"From the facts hereinbefore fully and carefully recited, the Board have arrived at the conclusion that the verdict of murder in the first degree was not warranted by the evidence in this case, and that the ends of justice would have been fully subserved by a verdict of murder in the second degree."

The grounds for the present application for pardon are in substance that the evidence was not sufficient to establish a case of murder in the first degree; that there was entire lack of motive; that the shots were fired in the heat of passion, and at a time when the defendant believed his life was in danger, and without premeditation and deliberation; that the Board had formerly reached the conclusion that the cirme was not more than murder in the second degree; that at the time of the commission of the offence the penalty for second degree murder was twelve years maximum, although it has since been changed to twenty years; that the prisoner has been in jail and in the penitentiary since May 22, 1889, a period of twenty-two years.

From all that we can learn we are disposed to concur in the finding of the Board in 1891 that the ends of justice in this case would have been subserved by a verdict of murder in the second degree, and this being the case we are of the opinion that the imprisonment already undergone is a sufficient punishment for the crime of which the applicant was convicted, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Sidney Ware.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 382, March Sessions, 1911, Frederick Schmid was indicted on a charge of burglary entering with intent to commit a felony, receiving stolen goods, etc. A peal of guilty was entered, and upon April 27, 1911, the defendant was sentenced to the Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory at Huntingdon.

On June 6, 1911, an application for pardon was filed. The case was stated to us fully at our meeting held this day. After reviewing all the facts and circumstances connected with the affair, as disclosed to us, we are of the opinion that the application should be favored, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Frederick Schmid.

Schmid is a young man of eighteen years of age. He lived with his father in Germantown, for whom he worked in the baking business. He happened to become intimate with a party of older boys of bad character, and soon fell into their ways. These young lawbreakers entered various houses during evening and carried off whatever they found that suited them. Their identity became known, and some of them were arrested among them young Schmid. He entered a plea of guilty to burglary, etc., and was sentenced as above stated. His arrest and imprisonment were a severe blow to his father, who is represented to be a man of the highest integrity. After the sentence of his son the father personally paid to those persons whose houses had been entered by this gang the full amount of losses sustained, regardless of whether or not his son was guilty of the identical robbery. Previous to his taking up with the party of boys mentioned young Schmid had enjoyed a good reputation, and had not been in trouble before. He has been taught a severe lesson by this experience. There are many letters on file recommending our favorable consideration of the case. It seems to be the belief of all who are acquainted with the facts in this matter that the ends of justice have been met, and that no further good will be accomplished from longer detention of the applicant.

From all the information we can glean through a careful inspection of the record before us, and after attentively hearing the statement of counsel, we are of the opinion that it would be for the best interests of this boy that a pardon be now granted to him, and we are satisfied that the interests of the community will not thereby by imperiled. We therefore recommend that a pardon be directed to issue for Frederick Schmid.

Harrisburg, September 20, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Philadelphia, to No. 100, August Term, 1898, Henry Blumberg, was, November 3, 1898, convicted of murder of the first degree, and upon November 18, 1898, was sentenced to be hanged.

On January 11, 1899, upon application duly filed, the Board of Pardons recommended that the sentence of death be commuted to that of imprisonment for life, and the executive warrant to that effect was accordingly issued.

On November 1, 1910, an application for pardon was filed, but the application was then refused. Recently, to wit, at the June, 1911, meeting of the Board, an application for rehearing was filed, and a rehearing was allowed, and at the meeting of the Board this day, the application for pardon was again heard.

The application has been carefully viewed, both in the light of the previous action of the Board and of the presentation of the case at this time, and the Board has reached the conclusion that it is now proper to allow the relief prayed for. We, therefore, recommend that an absolute pardon be now granted the applicant, Henry Blumberg.

Blumberg, at the time he committed the homicide for which he was convicted, was a young man of about 21 years of age, so that he is now about 34 years old. The victim of his crime was a young mulatto woman, with whom he had become infatuated and with whom he had been on terms of intimacy. Apart from this mesalliance, he had hitherto been of good character. He belongs to a highly respected Jewish family of Philadelphia, and had no criminal tendencies.

In the reasons submitted by the Board in their recommendation for commutation in 1899, the history of the case is fully set forth. The conclusions reached by the Board then, amounted substantially to the finding, for the reasons then assigned, that the degree of guilt of the defendant was not greater than murder in the second degree. The District Attorney who prosecuted the case to conviction, now substantiates this view, and concludes his letter, written to the Board for our guidance on this present application for pardon, as fallows:

"I am of the opinion that if the full story of the fateful day and night had been truthfully related to the jury, a verdict of murder in the second degree would most likely have been rendered—a verdict which would have satisfied the Commonwealth's officers and the ends of justice."

This statement is made after reviewing the facts of the case in the letter from which the above is taken.

It is now contended that if a verdict of second degree murder had been returned, and the prisoner been then sentenced to the maximum limit, he would now, under the commutation law, be entitled to his discharge. It has been represented to us that the conduct of this prisoner during his confinement in the Penitentiary, has been exemplary in every particular, thus showing him to have earned the full measure of commutation that could properly be bestowed, and also that he has established for himself a character for industry and trustworthiness that will enable him to become a worthy and law-abiding citizen if he is now released from confinement.

In view, therefore, of this situation of the case, we recommend that an absolute pardon be now granted the applicant, Henry Blumberg.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the peace in and for the County of Lancaster, to No. 15, April Sessions, 1911, John Coffee entered a plea of guilty to an indictment charging him with larceny. On March 4, 1911, he was thereupon sentenced to the Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory at Huntingdon.

On September 6, 1911, an application for his pardon was duly filed. After hearing and considering the application at our meeting held this day, we are persuaded that it is proper to grant the prayer of the petition, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be given the applicant, John Coffee.

Coffee is a young man of about 17 years of age. In the early part of the present year he became employed as a stenographer, typewriter and bookkeeper in an insurance office in the City of Lancaster, where he himself was a stranger. He was left alone in the office by his employer for a period of some weeks, without money or means to pay his board, and while in this predicament, he took several articles of jewelry belonging to his employer, which he sold or pawned to raise money to supply the necessities of living. After entering the plea of guilty, his case was held under consideration by the Court with the expectation of learning something of the boy's family connection, etc. However, it seems that the letter which the defendant wrote to his father, who lived in Philadelphia, was delayed in delivery for about thirteen days, by which time the Court, despairing of aid being tendered by the boy's father, imposed the sentence above mentioned. When the lad's father learned of his sad plight, it was too late for the Court to modify or suspend sentence by reason of the expiration of the term.

It has been shown to us that this young man is not a criminal, that he is of a good family, and that his father will be able to place him in a situation if he is given his liberty. It is the opinion of the District Attorney of Lancaster County, and he so writes to the Board, that if the letter from the son had reached the father in proper time, and the letter which the father afterwards wrote to the District Attorney, had been brought to the attention of the Court in time, the Court would not have hesitated in suspending sentence, and further, that it is the belief of the District Attorney that this Board would not make a mistake in now showing clemency to this prisoner.

In view, therefore, of the foregoing, we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, John Coffee.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 469, February Sessions, 1910, Joseph Fox was convicted on an indictment charging him with assault and battery with intent to rob, and the defendant was, on June 3, 1910, sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for two years and six months.

On August 31, 1911, an application for pardon was duly filed, and the same was heard at our meeting to-day. We recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Joseph Fox.

The alleged assault in this case took place in the City of Philadelphia at a time when there was great public excitement growing out of the street car strike. Although this affair had nothing at all to do with the strike, yet, owing to the state of the public mind, the offense seems to have been exaggerated. The Defendant claimed that he was entirely innocent; the jury, however, convicted him. The Defendant has been in prison for more than eighteen months, and it is clear to us that he has been sufficiently punished, under the circumstances, even if guilty.

The Judge who tried the case, Hon. Howard A. Davis, writes to the Board, under date of September 19, as follows:

"It appears from the record that the defendant was sentenced by me on the 2nd day of June, 1910, for a term of three years and six months, which sentence was subsequently reconsidered, and the term reduced to two years and six months from June 2, 1910. I am now informed, and it so appears from the record, that defendant had been in prison from Marsh 2," 1910, prior to his trial and sentence. The defendant has served a term of imprisonment beginning March 2, 1910. It is quite probable that this term of imprisonment has had the desired effect as punishment. If your Honorable Board are of the same opinion, I know of no other objection to the Board exercising their right to grant the defendant a pardon."

Believing, therefore, that the ends of justice in this case have been served, and that no public interests will suffer by relieving this defendant of further imprisonment, we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Joseph Fox.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the peace in and for the County of Schuylkill, to No. 743, June Sessions, 1909, George H. Hanes was convicted on an indictment charging him with larceny, to wit, horse stealing. On September 20, 1909, he was sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of nine years.

An application for pardon was filed September 12, 1911, and the case was given a hearing at our meeting held this day. We are of the opinion that the application is well grounded, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, George H. Hanes.

Hanes is represented to be a man "of no particular habitation." In the Spring of 1909 he happened in Pottsville, and on May 3 following, he hired a horse and buggy at a livery stable for the purpose of driving to Saint Claire, about five miles distant. He did not return to Pottsville, and in a few days was heard of at Birdsboro, some thirty miles distant. He was arrested and placed in jail, and at the September Term of court was convicted and sentenced as stated.

It is alleged that the applicant was drunk when he hired the team, and was drunk when he was arrested. No attempt was shown to have been made by him to dispose of the team, and his offense does not appear to have been in reality a felonious transaction. The application for pardon has been made at the instigation of the State Board of Charities, to whose attention the case has been called. The reason for clemency laid in the application is that the sentence was too severe. The prisoner has been confined about two years and five months. It seems to us that in consideration of the circumstances of the case, this applicant has been sufficiently punished for what he did. We, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, George H, Hanes.

Harrisburg, October 3, 1911

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the peace in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 533, March Sessions, 1909, H. M. Bolger was convicted on an indictment in which he was charged with bribery, and on May 5, 1909, was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for two years. By reason of an appeal to the Higher Court, where the judgment of the Quarter Sessions was affirmed, the imprisonment did not begin until January 16, 1911, so that the Defendant has been in prison for more than eight months.

On June 5, 1911, an application for pardon was duly filed, and was heard at our June meeting, since which time it has been held under advisement. We have carefully examined into the merits of this application, and are of the opinion that a pardon should now be granted the applicant, H. M. Bolger.

This case grew out of the graft investigations in the City of Pittsburgh, which attracted considerable notice throughout the Commonwealth several years ago, and as a result of which a large number of convictions of Councilmen and others were borught about. The Bolger case was among the first of these cases to be tried. From our examination of the records before us, we learn that Bolger himself did not profit pecuniarily from his connection with the unlawful transactions which were exposed. He acted the part of a "go-between;" that is, he introduced or brought together the bribe takers and the bribe givers. Owing very largely to the fact, we believe, that his case was among the earliest tried, he received a heavy sentence in comparison with sentences imposed later on in the proceedings upon others who were actually more guilty than this Defendant.

The formal reasons assigned in the application for clemency are:

(a) The sentence imposed upon your petitioner, considering the nature of the offense committed and the character of the evidence offered to sustain a conviction and the purpose of the prosecution, is unduly severe.

(b) Taken in connection and comparison with subsequent and other sentences imposed by the Courts of Allegheny County, all arising from the same investigation which resulted in the indictment in this case, and which related principally, if not solely, to corrupt practice in the selection during the Summer of 1908 of certain banks as city depositories, this sentence is disproportionate and excessive in the extreme.

(c) Under the evidence, viewing the same in its most adverse light as against the Defendant, your petitioner was simply a go-between and not an office holder, who violated no trust imposed in him, in view of which fact the sentence imposed upon him was certainly disproportionate and excessive and infinitely more severe than the punishment meted out to others charged with higher crimes, equally or more culpable, and who either have had sentence suspended or have been committed to the County jail for terms ranging from two to eight months, and in no instance for any longer term.

(d) From any point of view, considering the disgrace and degradation incident to his incarceration in the Western Pententiary, and considering the disproportionate sentence given him in comparison with the others above mentioned your petitioner believes that he has been sufficiently punished: that the ends of justice have been fully met and that the interests of society do not require that one who has heretofore been a law abiding citizen of the Commonwealth and in no sense a menace to the community should be so harshly dealt with.

(e) The petitioner's conduct as a prisoner in the Penitentiary since the day of his incarceration is entitled to consideration and should operate in favor of clemency.

(f) Public sentiment overwhelmingly justifies and supports this application, if the same may be judged from the letters and petitions for a pardon herewith presented and signed by many reputable citizens of the Commonwealth.

We are satisfied that these reasons are substantial, and that an examination into the merits of the case as shown by the record before us, warrants us in approving them. There are on file with us a very large number of letters and petitions in endorsement of the application for pardon, which show the drift of public sentiment toward this Defendant, and strengthen our belief in the force of the reasons as above set forth.

The District Attorney writes to the Board, under date of June 19, 1911, with regard to this case, as follows:

Bolger introduced Klein to Vilsack, who was cashier of the German National Bank. Several conferences were held, the result of which was the payment of $15,000 and $2,500 for the selection of the German Notional Bank as a City depository. Both sums went to Klein. Bolger was convicted of aiding and abetting Klein in receiving the money. All he did was to receive the money and turn the same over to Klein upon one of these occasions. The sentence, two years, in relation to the sentences of other Defendants in the graft cases, is undoubtedly harsh, and I do not believe that Judge Kennedy would have imposed the sentence he did had a plea been entered or conviction had in the year 1911.

Viewing the entire circumstances surrounding the graft cases, I am of the impression that Bolger has suffered sufficiently for his misdeed.

Under these conditions, therefore, and for the reasons above stated, we are of the opinion that a pardon should be granted to this applicant, H. M. Bolger, and we so recommend.

Respectfully submitted,

No. 38—1911.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Harrisburg, October 3, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the peace in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 6, January Sessions, 1909, John F. Klein was convicted on an indictment charging him with the crime of bribery, conspiracy and misdemeanor, and he was thereupon, May 5, 1909, sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000, and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a period of two years; and to No. 136, February Sessions, 1909, in the same Court, he was convicted on an indictment charging him with conspiracy, on which conviction he was sentenced on the same day to pay a fine of $500, and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a period of one year and six months. These two sentences were cumulative, and aggregate an imprisonment of three years and six months. Owing to appeals to the higher Courts, where the proceedings below were affirmed, the imprisonment did not begin until March 30, 1910. The Defendant has been in the Penitentiary eighteen months.

On June 7, 1911, an application for pardon was filed, which was heard at the June meeting of the Board. The matter has been held under advisement by us since that time. And now, having gone into a careful examination of all the circumstances attending the case as laid before us, we are of the opinion that it is consistent with the administration of justice, that Executive Clemency be shown this Defendant, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, John F. Klein.

These prosecutions against Klein grew out of the exposures of Councilmanic "graft" in the City of Pittsburgh which so startled the entire Commonwealth several years ago. Klein was among the first of the accused persons to be tried and sentenced. The aggregate sentence imposed upon him greater than that afterwards meted out to others who perhaps were equally guilty. After his conviction and sentence, he voluntarily made confession to the District Attorney and others interested in ferreting out the guilty parties; and voluntarily gave testimony which enabled the Commonwealth to convict a large number of guilty Councilmen and others. It appears as a matter of fact, which is perhaps somewhat hard for those unfamiliar with all the circumstances of these graft cases to understand, that none of the Defendants who were convicted later on in these investigations, received anything like the severity of sentence that Klein suffered, and most of them, if not all of them, have by this time reached the expiration of their sentences, while there remains unexpired of Klein's term, about two years from this time.

The formal reasons assigned in this application for pardon cover the ground so thoroughly that the Board feels justified in adopting them as the basis of its recommendation, in connection with their endorsement by the District Attorney and others prominent in effecting the conviction in all the graft cases.

These reasons are:

First. That John F. Klein since his convictions and sentences has confessed his entire participation in Councilmanic bribery, and has been of inestimable service to the Commonwealth in testifying as a witness before the Grand Jury and on trial of indictments against various members of Councils charged with bribery.

Second. The confession of John E. Klein enabled the Commonwealth to secure other confessions from leaders in Councilmanic corruption which would not have been made unless Klein had first made his confession.

Third. The confession of Klein further enabled the Commonwealth to secure other testimony corroborating the statements of Klein, which before that time had been inaccessible to it.

Fourth. By reason of the confession of said John F. Klein at least fifty members of said Councils voluntarily confessed the receipt of bribes by them in the passage of the ordinance vacating South Seventh Street and in the passage of what is known as the "bank depositories ordinances," and pleaded guilty to indictments charging them with the offense of bribery.

Fifth. As a result of Klein's confession and testimony before the Grand Jury, almost one hundred indictments were found against members of Councils, for bribery, in receiving from Klein and his co-conspirators in Councils bribes for their votes on the two last mentioned ordinances.

Sixth. That John F. Klein appeared as a witness before the Grand Jury during a period of practically thirty-eight days, and testified as a witness in the trial of indictments in the cases of the Commonwealth vs. Simon; Commonwealth vs. Swift; Commonwealth vs. Moran; Commonwealth vs. Coffee; Commonwealth vs. Blessing (two trials); Commonwealth vs. Franklin, and Commonwealth vs. Schad, and was subjected to a severe and grilling cross examination by counsel representing the said defendants in said cases, and in no case was his testimony shaken, nor did his testimony vary from that given in his confession to the District Attorney and in his statement before the Grand Jury.

Seventh. That on June 2nd, 1911, the District Attorney of Allegheny County requested the Court to enter an order of nolle pros in all the cases in which "petty" grafting was charged, excluding only the cases of the Commonwealth vs. Leslie and Commonwealth vs. Wm. Brand.

Eighth. That as a result of the confession, and the testimony of John F. Klein, the City of Pittsburgh was enabled to recover the sum of eighteen thousand dollars for the vacation of South Seventh Street, in the City or Pittsburgh, and the sum of twelve thousand dollars for the vacation of Home Street, in the City of Pittsburgh, which said streets had been previously vacated by ordinances, the passage of which was secured by bribery and corrupt solicitation.

The District Attorney of Allegheny County, under date of June 26, 1911, writes the Board as follows:

It has always been the policy of the law to give consideration to offenders who will, by their testimony and confessions, materally aid the State in discovering and proving crime. The graver the offense the more imperative the necessity of obtaining evidence. It is upon this ground that I feel that John F. Klein, now under sentence for participation in the graft cases, should be pardoned, and I purpose briefly to give you the facts as I view them in his case. It is not necessary to dwell on the history of the graft prosecutions in Pittsburgh. After the conspiracy to obtain money from the banks for their selection had been formed, Klein was the agent selected to obtain the price from one bank, and in addition was the general go-between in the distribution of the money obtained among members of Common Council. When Mr. Wilson came to Pittsburgh, Klein was the first to be approached in regard to the wood pavement plan, and readily agreed to enter into a gigantic scheme to enact legislation, with regard to wood pavements, for bribes. He was the only one in the first year of the graft prosecutions to be tried twice. He was convicted twice, and sentenced to the Penitentiary for three and one half years. This sentence compares with those of his associates as follows: Wasson, one and one-half years; Brand, one and one-half years, and Stewart and Ferguson, eight months. Prior to sentence I had some hope that he would confess and tell the history of the entire matter. Had he done so at that time, his sentence would have been nominal—I do not believe more than six months as the maximum, because it was absolutely necessary to obtain a confession in order to break up the practice of bribery which existed at that time in Pittsburgh.

In March, 1910, he voluntarily confessed his entire connection with the bribery in Councils. This resulted in the voluntary confession of forty-nine Councilmen, and the conviction of nine others, and the plea of guilty by seven who were not Councilmen. It was because of his testimony, and only because of his testimony, that the entire bank plot was unraveled. His testimony has been corroborated in practically every detail, and I do not believe he misled or misinformed me as to the slightest matter. Subsequently, whenever called upon by me, he went upon the stand and told the whole truth. On these occasions he was mercilessly grilled. He has been threatend; he has suffered the tortures of the damned by reason of the hatred he has aroused among his former associates and the generally contempt uniformly given to a self-confessed accomplice. He was before the Grand Jury thirty-eight days; the number of indictments secured through his confession was ninety-one, and the confessions secured through his disclosures were fifty-one. He was a witness and testified for the Commonwealth in the following cases: A. V. Simon, M. L. Swift, T. J. Moran, Maurice Coffee, F. C. Blessing (two trials), and P. H. Franklin. During the trial of these he was subjected to merciless grilling. Formerly to such, the law granted immunity. But Klein has been confined now for a longer period than any one of his associates—those who were equally guilty with him. Should he not, therefore, be at least treated as equitably as those in a similar position? Should he not, because of his material aid to the Commonwealth, now be granted his just due? It is from a stern sense of public necessity and my duty that I now, in the name of the County of Allegheny, and in the name of the future proper administration of public justice, ask you to pardon John F. Klein.

A. Leo Weil, Esq., President of the Voters League, which organization started the investigations that resulted in the breaking up of the scandalous practices prevalent in Pittsburgh, writes to the Board, under date of July 1, 1911, at considerable length, stating, among other things, as follows:

There can be no doubt but for the confession of Klein, the Commonwealth would not have been able to obtain the evidence on which to break up the infamous system of graft which had corrupted the Councils of this City. There can be no doubt that Klein has rendered to the Commonwealth, and to those who administer its laws, a service so valuable that it cannot be calculated, and the ultimate effect of which is beyond the power of estimation, because its influence upon the destinies of our city will be manifested generation after generation for perhaps many generations.

If Klein, who was not more guilty than Brand, Wasson, Ferguson and Stewart, had not already been sentenced for the longer period, the Court would undoubtedly taken his confession into consideration, and dismissed as to him, as it did to all the others, the indictments which had not then been tried. In making this statement as to the attitude of the Court I make it not only upon the inherent impartiality of justice, but also upon the authority of His Honor, Judge Frazer, who imposed the sentences.

I submit to this Honorable Board that Klein, whose confession was the moving cause that impelled confessions from the other ring leaders, and who was not more guilty than they, is at least entitled to as much consideration for that confession as were the others who afterwards confessed. The mere accident that Klein had already been tried and convicted on other charges, while his particeps criminis had not been so tried, is more than offset by his additional claim to consideration as the man who first made amends by confession, thereby forcing the others to likewise admit their guilt.

I submit further to this Honorable Board, if Klein should be detained in prison, while those equally guilty, by reason of their confessions, have been released or given immunity from trial, it would seem like a punishment for his confession, because he was the one man of them all whose confession brought about the other confessions, and while they have been rewarded for their confessions, he is given no consideration for his confession.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

I have been informed by His Honor, Judge Frazer, who has authorized me to so state to this Honorable Board, that he is in favor of the pardon of John F. Klein. No man is better advised (unless perhaps it be the District Attorney), as to all the facts and circumstances of the conviction, the sentence, and the reasons why the indictments against the other ring leaders were nolle prossed, and therefore their sentences limited to eighteen months, nor as to the value of the confession of Klein, and the uses thereof that were made by the Commonwealth, and he has said, and has authorized me to repeat to you his statement, that he would have done exactly the same thing for Klein that he did for for the others if he had not already been sentenced beyond the power of recall, and that he would be glad to give to the Pardon Board his opinion and his views if they should request or desire the same.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

On behalf of the Voters League, as President of the Voters League, as a citizen of the City of Pittsburgh, and a citizen of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, I most earnestly urge upon your favorable consideration the granting of the pardon prayed for by John F. Klein. Grant it as soon as possible, so that he may be released at once, he having already served a longer term than any of the other ring leaders convicted at the same time.

In view, therefore, of this situation of affairs as laid before us with regard to the position of this Defendant, the Board is of the opinion that it is now just and equitable that clemency be accorded this Defendant, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, John F. Klein.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Luzerne, to No. 219, Sept, Term, 1906, Joseph Beingo was, on the 22nd day of September, 1906, found guilty of murder in the second degree, and upon September 26, 1906, was sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of 18 years.

On May 9, 1908, an application for pardon was filed, which was, on October 21, 1908, refused. At our last meeting an application for rehearing was allowed, and the application for pardon was again heard at our meeting of this day. And now, by reason of the new light shed upon the case, we have reached the conclusion that it is proper to give a favorable consideration to the application, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant.

Beingo is a young Italian. The homicide with which he is charged took place in the Borough of West Hazleton, Luzerne County, on the night of the 28th of June, 1906. The victim was another Italian, Raphael Marsicano, the father-in-law of Beingo. It appears from the record that Beingo had married Marsicano's daughter, a young girl about 15 years of age, against the father's approval. The father showed such displeasure toward the daughter after her marriage that she was in fear of him and avoided his presence. On the night of the homicide, Marsicano had gone to the house of Beingo, but Mrs. Beingo, through fear of her father, refused to remain in the house while he was there. She went to a neighbor's house and spent some time there, but later on in the evening, was persuaded to go, in company with these neighbors, to her own house where her father was. After remaining some time together at the Beingo home, Marsicano and the other visitors left. This was about 10 o'clock in the evening. Beingo and his wife at once were making preparations to retire after the departure of their guests when they were attracted by a knocking at the front door. On opening the door they found there Marsicano unaccompanied by the other people, and he desired to speak to his daughter alone and out of the hearing of her husband. The woman declined to go with him at first, but afterwards did go out on the porch where her father was, the husband remaining in the doorway. The father took hold of the daughter with one hand, and with the other drew a pistol from his pocket and attempted to shoot her. The bullet struck the daughter on the cheek. The husband immediately rushed out and grappled with his father-in-law. He wrestled the pistol from him, but Marsicano, with an oath, exclaimed that he had another one, and made a motion of reaching for it. Beingo, under the belief that his own life, as well as that of his wife, was in danger, fired several shots with the pistol that he had taken from Marsicano, one of which killed the latter. The second revolver was found on the person of the deceased after the killing.

On the trial of the case the jury rendered a verdict of murder in the second degree with recommendation to the extreme mercy of the Court. Afterwards a sentence of 18 years was imposed.

The applicant has served more than five years of his imprisonment. The judge who tried the case, the District Attorney who prosecuted, and the other officials who took part in the prosecution, including the eight jurors who are now available, all unite in endorsing this application. On the previous application these officials appeared in opposition to the granting of the pardon. Recent investigations which have been made tend to show that Marsicano was an active member of the "Black Hand," and that through fear of that society, the applicant was prevented from offering a proper defense in Court. This notorious society has to a great measure been broken up in that locality, and many facts have recently been ascertained which relieve this applicant from the seriousness of the charge that was made against him, and have brought about a change in the views of the prosecuting officials. The Trial Judge, in writing to the Board, after detailing at considerable length, the information which has been brought to light through these investigations, concludes his letter with the following paragraph:

"I am expressing myself a little more strongly, I am aware, upon these points than I did in my former letter to your Board, by reason of the fact that since that letter was written I have gone over this matter with men who are apparently in a position to know the truth, some of whom indeed were opposed to Beingo at the time of his trial, and I am quite sure that many of the things which were rather hazy in my mand in October, 1908, and rather vague and somewhat incredible, are really and actually the truth. It hardly needs that I should say to you that I am in no way interested in this case beyond a desire to say that I feel satisfied that the ends of justice have been met, and that the punishment which has already been meted out to Beingo is really sufficient, in view of the real truth surrounding the killing. I think that he has suffered enough, under these circumstances, and that the law has been sufficiently vindicated, and I feel that it will be simply subserving the ends of justice if you can see your way clear, after a full investigation of this matter, to grant him a pardon."

The District Attorney who tried the case, writes:

"At the time of the trial of Joseph Beingo on a charge of murder in this County, I appeared for the Commonwealth throughout the entire case. When his application was before the Board of Pardons before I opposed it at the request of the people in his vicinity who knew most about the surrounding circumstances.

"When notice was given me of this application I consulted with the same people, and they have given me facts of which they or I had no knowledge at the time of the last hearing before the Board. I have carefully read the letter which Judge Wheaton has written you, and I have respectfully endorsed what he has therein said about this case.

After having given this matter thoughtful consideration in the light of what has developed since the last hearing before you, I very wilfully join with the others in recommending to your Honorable Board that clemency be extended to the petitioner."

And further, the present District Attorney writes as follows:

"I have carefully read the letters from Hon. F. W. Wheation, the Trial Judge, and Mr. Evan C. Jones, Prosecuting Attorney, recommending that a pardon be granted to Joseph Beingo.

"At the time of the trial of this case I happened to occupy the position of Minute Clerk, and heard the entire testimony. In view of the facts which I recall, and the letters from Judge Wheaton and Mr. Jones, I cheerfully recommend the granting of said pardon."

In view of the severity of the sentence under the circumstances of the application, we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Joseph Beingo.

Harrisburg, October 18, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the peace in and for the County of Chester, at October Sessions, 1907,

Granville Muldoon was convicted on an indictment charging him with statutory rape, and upon October 8, 1907, was sentenced to pay a fine of $5.00, costs and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a period of 12 years.

On June 8th last, an application for a pardon was duly filed, and at the June meeting of the Board, the application was refused. At our recent September meeting, on application duly made, a rehearing was allowed, and at our meeting of to-day, we gave the application another hearing.

After duly consideration the case in all its aspects, we have reached the conclusion that the case merits clemency, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Granville Muldoon.

Muldoon is a young man, who, previous to the charge for which he is now undergoing punishment, appears to have had a good reputation. On the trial of the case he admitted having had connection with the girl, but not under circumstances which made the crime of the serious nature charged in the indictment. From the letters and endorsements favoring the application, which have been placed on file with us, coming from people of the vicinity, we are led to believe that the ends of justice have been met by the four years imprisonment already undergone by Muldoon. The District Attorney who tried the case writes to the Board, under date of October 2nd, as follows:

"I was the District Attorney in the criminal courts of Chester County when Granville Muldoon was convicted of the crime for which he was sentenced twelve years in the Eastern Penitentiary.

"At the time of the trial the girl in question claimed that the crime was common law rape, and that force had been used. I could not coincide with her in this, however, and therefore tried him for statutory rape. There were some doubts as to the reputation of the girl for chastity, in view of the fact, and that Muldoon has served four years of his sentence, I am willing to concede that much in his favor in his application for a pardon. The sentence was an unusually long one."

In view of the severity of the sentence under the circumstances as they are now made to appear, and the imprisonment of four years in the Penitentiary under that sentence, we are inclined to believe that the Defendant is entitled to clemency, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Granville Muldoon.

Harrisburg, October 18, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the peace in and for the County of Fayette, to No. 87, September Sessions, 1909, Lew Strayer entered a plea of guilty to an indictment charging him with forgery, and, on November 16, 1909, was sentenced to pay a fine of six cents, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a period of five years.

On October 4, 1911, an application for pardon was duly filed, which was heard and considered at our meeting of this day. We recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Lew Strayer.

The applicant is a man of about 60 years of age, who, previous to the trouble in which he is now involved, enjoyer a good reputation, and was a man of considerable standing in his community. He has now served two years of his imprisonment. From the numerous letters which have been filed with our record, written by very prominent people in Fayette County and in other sections of the State, including those who were immediately affected by the forgery, it seems that the sentiment prevailing among those who know the man and who are acquainted with the circumstances of the case, is that all the good that could be accomplished by his prosecution and imprisonment, has already been brought about and that he has suffered sufficiently for the wrong he did, and that, therefore, his is a proper case for the exercise of clemency.

Among the many letters on file, we quote only the one from the District Attorney which bears the endorsement of the Trial Judge. This letter is as follows:

"Uniontown, October 9, 1911.

To the Honorable Board of Pardons, Harrisburg, Pa.

Sirs:—I am advised that one, Lew Strayer, now serving a sentence of five years in the Western Penitentiary at Allegheny on a charge of fraudulently making and uttering, and uttering and publishing a forged written instrument, is applying to your Board for a pardon. I have known Mr. Strayer for about four or five years, and was District Attorney for Fayette County at the time he was charged with this offense. I have met some members of his family, and from what I can learn of them his family connections are very good.

"Mr. Strayer's personal temperament is of a nervous disposition. I have been advised that since his confinement in the Penitentiary, his health has failed and his mind has been impaired to a considerable extent. I can easily understand how confinement would have this effect upon a person such as Mr. Strayer.

"In view of his family connections and the respect in which they are held by their neighbors and people who know them, and of the weakened physical and mental condition of Mr. Strayer, I believe his case to be one that merits Executive clemency.

Yours very truly,
DAVID W. HENDERSON,
District Attorney for Fayette County."

"I approve and endorse the foregoing and join in the recommendation of the District Attorney.

ROBERT E. UMBEL,

10-11—1911.

With this record before us as a guide, and under the belief that the ends of justice have been satisfied by the penalty already paid, we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Lew Strayer.

Harrisburg, November 15, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer for the County of Dauphin, to No. 139, June Term, 1889, Sidney Ware was indicted on a charge of murder. To No. 138 of the same Term, he was similarly indicted. In this second mentioned indictment he was cinvicted, and sentenced to be hanged. On June 7, 1891, on application duly filed and considered, a recommendation of commutation was made by the Board of Pardons, and the Executive thereupon commuted the sentence of death to that of imprisonment for life. At the June meeting of this Board, viz., June 27, 1911, the Board heard and considered an application for the absolute pardon of Ware, and we then recommended that a pardon be granted. The recommendation was followed, and Your Excellency was plased to issue the pardon.

Before the delivery of the charter of pardon to Ware, a detainer was lodged with the officials of the Penitentiary, and Ware was again arrested and brought to the Dauphin County jail to answer on the charge of murded laid in the indictment No. 139 of June Term, 1889, above mentioned. The case was called for trial on the 25th day of October, 1911, before Honorable W. Rush Gillan, specially presiding. Upon arraignment the prisoner entered a plea of guilty of murder in the second degree, which was accepted by the Commonwealth, and on October 26, 1911, the Court sentenced the said Ware to pay a fine of one cent, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for and during the term of not lesss than one year nor more than two years. Under this sentence the prisoner was again conveyed to the Eastern Penitentiary, where he is now confined.

On November 6, 1911, an application for pardon was duly filed, and the same has been heard and considered by the Board at this present November meeting, and in view of all the circumstances surrounding the case, with which the Board has become entirely familiar, the Board is now of the opinion that the application should be allowed.

The history of the case shows conclusively that while two men were killed in the brawl that occurred in 1889, there really was but one offence. It is the concensus of opinion that the applicant by his long imprisonment has attoned for his guilt, and that the reasons that were accepted as convincing on his application for pardon heretofore considered apply with equal force in the present case.

The letter received by the Board from Judge Gillan contains a similar review. We quote the Judge's letter in full:

Chambersburg, Pa., Nov. 10, 1911.

To the Honorable the Board of Pardons of Pennsylvania.

Gentlemen:—Specially presiding in the Court of Oyer and Terminer I imposed the sentence on Sidney Ware. If I would have had the power to suspend sentence I would have done it. I carefully studied the evidence given on the trial of Sidney Ware for the killing of Maurice Miller. I am thoroughly convinced that he has suffered ample punishment. I believe that no good purpose can be subserved by his longer imprisonment.

Yours truly,
W. RUSH GILLAN,
President Judge 39th Judicial District."

Under all the circumstances of this case as brought to our attention we unite in recommending that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Sidney Ware, who stands convicted on indictment No. 139, June Term, 1889, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Dauphin County.

Respectfully submitted,

Harrisburg, November 15, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 439, September Sessions, 1911, Charles Berthold was indicted on a charge of felonious assault and battery. When the case came for trial a plea of Not Guilty was entered, but during the progress of the trial this plea was withdrawn, and a plea of Guilty of Unlawful Wounding was entered. Thereupon the Court sentenced the defendant to pay a fine of 6 1-4 cents, costs, and to undergo an imprisonment in the County Jail for thirty days.

On November 9, 1911, an application for pardon was filed. We heard the case at our meeting to-day, and have considered all the facts in connection with it, and we are of the opinion that a pardon should be granted the applicant.

Barthold is a Police Officer in the Borough of Braddock, Allegheny County. On the Fourth of July of this year in pursuance of his duties he undertook to quell a riotuous gathering of colored people. In attempting to arrest one of the leaders of the mob by the name of Walker the latter ran away, and Barthold, calling upon him to halt, fired his pistol, but pointed it toward the ground. The bullet struck a stone, and glanced off hit the fleeing man on the back of the head, wounding him slightly. For this Act Barthold was arrested and tried on the charge of felonious assault.

The Commonwealth's theory of the case was that the officer was not justified in firing his revolver at all; while the defendant contended that his sole object was to scare the fleeing man into stopping, and that the result was an accident pure and simple.

From all that was shown to us we are of the opinion that there was no intention on the part of the officer to commit a crime or even to do bodily harm to the man he was trying to arrest. Whatever offence he can be charged with is only technical, and under the circumstances we think he has been sufficiently punished in the imprisonment he has undergone since November 4, the date of the sentence. He had been a constable or policeman for about fifteen or eighteen years, and enjoyed the reputation of being a highly efficient and careful officer. The District Attorney of the county, in writing to the Board in regard to the case, closes his letter in the following terms:

"Mr. Berthold has been an officer of the Borough of Braddock for some fifteen years, and his work as such officer has always been of the highest grade. From the experience which this office has had with Mr. Berthold I can say that we have always found him to be one of the most efficient officers in the county, and I believe his action on this day was largely due to the excitement which had been created in Braddock over the rioting I have above described. I believe he should be pardoned."

For these reasons therefore we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Charles Berthold.

Harrisburg, November 15, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Philadelphia, to No. 6, April Term, 1907, James Conley was indicted on a charge of assault and battery, aggravated assault and battery, assault and battery with intent to ravish, and rape. Alexander McConaghy was jointly indicted with him. Conviction followed, and upon September 25, 1907, each Defendant was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, casts, and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of eight years. McConaghy was granted a pardon last May.

On September 13, 1911, an application was duly made for the pardon of Conley, which application was heard and considered at our meeting to-day. We are of the opinion that the application is well-grounded, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, James Conley.

Conley is now about 27 years of age. Previous to the charge in the present case, he had borne a good reputation. Under all the circumstances of the case, as brought to our attention in this and in the McConaghy application, we believe that the sentence was severe. He has now served more than four years of his term, and it is not to be expected that any further good can result from his continued imprisonment, either in the way of a warning to others, or as a corrective measure. It is our opinion that the interests of the prisoner will be best served, and that the interests of society in general will not suffer, by restoring this applicant to his liberty and affording him an opportunity to become a useful citizen.

We, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted this applicant, James Conley.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Cumberland, to No. 49, May Term, 1905, Filbert Miller, alias Filbert Kitner, was indicted jointly with Harry Foltz and Wilson Miller, for (1) Burglary, (2) Felonious Assault and Battery, (3) aggravated Felonious Entry. And at the same time and in the same Court was charged on a second indictment, with the same co-defendants, with (1) Felonious Assault and Battery. (2) Aggravated Assault and Battery, (3) Assault and Battery. Pleas of guilty were entered to each indictment. On the Pleas of guilty were entered to each indictment. On the first mentioned indictment each Defendant was sentenced, May 8, 1905, to pay a fine of $100, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of ten years, which appears to be the maximum penalty; and in the second indictment each was sentenced to pay a fine of $50, costs, and undergo like imprisonment for a term of five years to begin upon the expiration of the previous sentence. The aggregate sentence for each was thus $150 fine, and imprisonment of fifteen years. More than six and a-half years of this sentence has been served.

An application for the pardon of Filbert Kinter was made and heard and considered at our meeting of this day. We are impressed with the validity and force of the reasons laid in this application, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Filbert Miller, alias Filbert Kitner.

The applicant is a young man now of about 25 years of age, and at the time of his commitment to the Penitentiary was about 18 years old. Wilson Miller, one of the co-defendants, is the grandfather of young Kitner, and is a man now more than 80 years of age. The other co-defendant, Foltz, is a man of middle age, being now upwards of 40 years old. The grandfather is represented to have a criminal record. The parents of this applicant died during the applicant's early childhood, and he was reared in the fomily of his grandfather, living in the mountainous districts of Perry County. He was denied the privilege of schooling, and grew up illiterate and untaught, but enured to hard and laborious work. He was not regarded as having criminal tendencies, and prior to the commission of the offense for which he was indicted, had not been charged with, or suspected of, crime.

One night in April, 1905, Miller, the grandfather, Foltz, and young Kitner, left their Perry County home, crossed over the mountains about five miles to Cumberland County, and went to the house of a man named Shenk. They knocked at the door, and, upon being admitted, demanded of the occupants the surrender of their valuables. Kitner got no further than the doorway. The occupants of the house resisted the intruders and drove them off. There was an interchange of pistol shots after they left the house, but we are not advised that any injury was done in this regard. No booty was secured by the would-be robbers, and they returned to their home across the mountains. They were arrested about a week after this occurrence. Kitner admitted to the officers and to the Court officials all the facts connected with the attempted robbery. It was thought that this admission would secure for him a mitigation of sentence, but it seems that such was not the case.

From a study of the history of this case, as gathered from the record and the statement of counsel, it would appear that this young man was not the real culprit. He evidently was led, or perhaps forced, into the compromising position. Moreover, it has been made plain to us that one of the objects of punishment has been in his case thoroughly accomplished, namely, the reformation of the offender. During his term of imprisonment he has applied himself assiduously to study, and has mastered the educational course provided by the institution, and his record is first class. He has the confidence of the officals, who speak well of him in every respect. His is a case where the exercise of Executive clemency will manifestly prove not only a benefit to the unfortunate prisoner, but will restore to society one who may become a useful citizen. We have before us the testimonials to this effect from persons who are competent and abundantly able to judge upon this subject.

The Trial Judge, the District Attorney who prosecuted, and the present District Attorney of the County, as well as other officials, have addressed the Board in writing recommending our favorable action upon the application. Judge Sadler, under date of November 10, 1911, writes as follows:

"Gentlemen:—The case of the Commonwealth vs. Miller, Foltz and Kitner, was a most aggravated one, and the punishment imposed upon the first two was, in my opinion, fully justified, and indeed demanded.

Kitner, however, was young—misled, or easily influenced, and inquiry made and information gathered since the trial, have led me to the conclusion that he has been sufficiently punished and that his pardon could be properly granted, and I would be glad if you so determine."

The prosecuting District Attorney closes his letter in the following words:

"Since he has been imprisoned, I am informed, that Kitner has made good use of his time and has succeeded in acquiring considerable education, and gives promise of becoming a good and useful citizen. If this information is correct, and I have no reason to think otherwise, then his six years in prison have brought good results, and, in my judgment, he could be safely entrusted with his liberty."

Other letters on file are in the same strain, and it is undoubtedly the opinion of those best qualified to speak upon the subject, that much more good will result from restoring to this young man his liberty at this time than could be hoped for by insisting upon the completion of his term of imprisonment.

Guided by these considerations, therefore, we recommend that a pardon be now granted this applicant, Filbert Miller, alias Filbert Kitner.

Respectfully submitted.

Nos. 46-47-48—1911.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
Board of Pardons.
Harrisburg, December 20, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 190, June Sessions, 1911, Edward Greenhalgh was indicted on a charge of "Aiding and Procuring an Illegal Vote at a General Election." The indictment was found June 9, 1911. In the same Court to No. 108, July Sessions, 1911, Thos. J. Conner was indicted on a charge of "Unlawfully Receiving an Illegal Vote at a General Election." This indictment was found July 11, 1911. In the same Court to No. 109, July Sessions, 1911, J. R. Stewart was indicted on a charge of "Unlawfully Receiving an Illegal Vote at a General Election." This indictment was found July 11, 1911.

On November 17, 1911, these three cases were tried, and a verdict of guilty was rendered in each case. On November 27th following Greenhalgh and Conner were each sentenced to pay costs and undergo an imprisonment in the County Prison for three months. Sentence at that time was suspended as to Stewart on account of illness, but upon December 11, 1911, he also was sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for three months. All the Denfendants are now in confinement under these sentences.

On December 1, 1911, application for pardon was duly filed on behalf of each Defendant. The application was joint, and the matter was fully heard at our meeting of this date. Upon giving the case careful consideration, we recommend that a pardon be granted each of the applicants, Edward Greenhalgh, Thomas J. Connor and J. R. Stewart.

The charges in the three indictments are based on identically the same transaction, which explains the circumstance of the cases being tried together in Court by the same jury and of the applications for pardon being jointly made and heard and considered. The facts in the affair are briefly in substance the following: The Defendants are all residents of the 42nd Division of the 19th Ward of the City of Philadelphia. Connor was the Judge of Election and Stewart the Inspector of Election in that Division; Greenhalgh was a watcher at the polls. At the general election held in that Division on the 8th day of November, 1910, a man by the name of Hogan, a resident of the Division voted illegally, it is alleged, the illegality consisting in his not being properly registered. Hogan was a resident of the Division and under the law was entitled to be registered, and as a matter of fact was registered from his then residence, No. 133 East Cumberland Street. After his registration, which, we understand, was strictly in compliance with law, but prior to the date of the election, he changed his residence to another address in the same Division, or, as was stated, "moved just around the corner." He did not have this change of address marked on the registry list after his change of residence. On the 24th of October, 1910, which was between the date of Hogan's original registration and the date of the election, an application was filed with the Board of Registration by another elector named Rogers to have Hogan's name stricken form the registry list by reason of his removal from the Cumberland Street, address. The next afternoon, without actual notice to Hogan, the Registration Commission struck his name from the list by drawing a blue pencil mark through his name on the record. Greenhalgh, it is alleged, was at the meeting of the Registration Commission when the list was thus changed, but did not understand that Hogan's name was so stricken off, he being under the impression that Hogan's name had been left on the list and the name of another elector stricken. In this he was mistaken, but, so far as we have been able to ascertain, his mistaken impression was altogether an honest one. On the afternoon of the day of election, Hogan, being in ignorance of the face of the registration list appearing against him, offered to vote. His right to vote was challenged by the Minority Inspector, a man by the name of Burns, who saw from an inspection of the list that his name had been stricken off. Greenhalgh being present stated that that was a mistake, and that it was intended that Hogan's name should remain on the list as he had not removed from the D.vision, and was then living in the Division. Burns then remarked that if Hogan would make an affidavit as to his residence in the Division and right to vote, he would withdraw his objection.

This affidavit was made by Hogan, and has was allowed to vote.

Nothing further was heard of the matter until during the month of March of this year, when Rogers, who, as stated, had petitioned to have Hogan's name stricken from the list, caused the arrest of the three Defendants, Greenhalgh, Stewart and Connor, on the charges set forth in the indictment hereinbefore mentioned. The trial, convistions and sentences followed. Hogan was also indicted for illegal voting, and convicted, but the Court held (another Judge presiding) that his guilt was only technical, and his sentence was suspended and he was discharged.

From our examination of the records before us, we are of the opinion that the mistake in premitting Hogan to vote was altogether a technical misunderstanding of the law. The fact of his not having moved from the Election Division in his change of residence would, to the average election officer and to the average citizen, preserve to him his right to vote, he having been fairly registered in the first place. He possessed all the Constitutional qualifications of a voter, but was minus certain requirements of the Registration Commission's regulations. Under these circumstances and in view of the further fact that all the defendants have hitherto enjoyed good reputations, as appears by favorable endorsements of their applications, we are of the belief that clemency can properly be shown the applicants, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted each of the Defendants, Edward Greenhalgh, Thomas J. Connor and J. R. Stewart.

Respectfully submitted,

No. 49—1911.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Harrisburg, December 20, 1911

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 498, March Sessions, 1910, Morris Einstein was indicted on a charge of Bribery, to which indictment, on April 5, 1910, he entered a plea of nolle contendere; whereupon he was, May 14, 1910, sentenced to pay a fine of twenty-five hundred dollars, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the County Jail for the term of six months.

He has served his term of imprisonment, has paid the fine imposed, and has paid the costs of prosecution, and thus fulfilled the sentence of the Court.

Subsequent to his full compliance with the substantive penalties imposed, to wit, October 7, 1911, an application for pardon was filed on behalf of Einstein. The only efficacy of a pardon, should one now be granted the applicant, will be to restore to him his civil reghts of which he was deprived by virtue of his conviction—and in reality such is admitted to be the purpose of the application.

The prosecution against the applicant grew out of the Councilmanic graft exposures in the City of Pittsburgh some three or four years ago. This defendant frankly admitted his offense, voluntarily entered his plea of nolle contendere, and gave the District Attorney full and valuable information which assisted the Commonwealth in other prosecutions. Prior to this graft trouble the applicant had led a blameless life, and even now enjoys the highest respect of his former employers and of his neighbors, as is shown by the numerous endorsements of this application for pardon.

From our examination of the facts of the case, and in view of the many requests for a favorable consideration of the application, and under the belief that the interests of justice and the welfare of the public will not be imperiled by giving the relief prayed for, we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Morris Einstein.

Respectfully submitted,

Harrisburg, December 20, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 180, April Sessions, 1911, Grace Burnam was convicted on an indictment charging her with keeping a bawdy house, and upon April 22, 1911, was sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of two years.

December 5, 1911, an application for pardon was duly filed. We gave the application a hearing at our meeting of this day, and upon carefully reviewing the case, we are of the opinion that a pardon should be granted the applicant, Grace Burnam.

The Defendant lived in the City of Wilkes-Barre. She had come there a stranger a few years before the finding of this indictment, and was engaged in the business of dressmaking. Although her offense does not appear to have been an aggravated one, she was given the maximum sentence under the law. She has been in prison for more than eight months, and it is the opinion of the District Attorney, the Mayor and Chief of Police of Wilkes-Barre, as well as a number of other reputable and influential citizens of that community, including the private counsel for the prosecution, that she has been sufficiently punished for her wayward course. The following is the communication from the office of the District Attorney, which was submitted to the Board:

"Wilkes-Barre, December 19, 1911.

To the Honorable the Board of Pardons, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Gentlemen:—I have been informed that Grace Burnam, who was convicted in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Luzerne County, upon April 6th, 1911, on the charge of keeping bawdy house has applied to your Honorable Body for a pardon.

At the trial of the said case I represented the Commonwealth and I am familiar with the facts proved at the trial of the case. I can say, therefore, that in my opinion she has been sufficiently punished by an imprisonment of eight months which she has undergone since the date of her conviction. For that reason I take the liberty to respectifully recommend her pardon.

I remain,
Yours truly,
WM. H. GILLESPIE,
Assistant District Attorney."

"I endorse the above.
W. ALFRED VALENTINE,
Dist. Atty."

The verdict of the jury was accompanied with a recommendation to the mercy of the Court, which however did not prevent the imposition of the severe sentence. Following their belief that a light sentence of the Defendant would satisfy the ends of justice, the jurors have filed with the Board an endorsement of the application for pardon, signed by the entire body.

Having the case so well fortified in its presentation to us, we feel that we can with propriety accede to the petition, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Grace Burnam.

Respectfully submitted,

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, December 20, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of Luzerne County, to No. 451, September Sessions, 1910, Thomas McCue was, on the 19th day of November, 1910, convicted on a charge of Perjury.

On January 18, 1911, the defendant was sentenced to pay to the Commonwealth a fine of $100.00, the costs of prosecution, and to imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than one year nor more than seven years.

On July 27, 1911, the sentence imposed, as above set forth, was amended and modified so as to read: "Court sentences the defendant, Thomas McCue, to pay the Commonwealth a fine of $100.00, pay the costs of prosecution, and undergo imprisonment in the Luzerne County Prison for a term and period of one year and two calendar months." etc.

On September 6, 1911, an application for pardon was duly filed, and upon hearing on October 18th was refused. At the November meeting of the Board a rehearing was granted; and we now recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Thomas McCue.

Thomas McCue is about twenty-seven years of age, and was at the time of his conviction a Justice of the Peace of Wilkes-Barre Township. He was married in July, 1910, and his wife is now under medical care, and has so been since the birth of her baby in May. The child died a few months ago.

The history of the case, briefly stated, is as follows: On June 4, 1910, at a primary election held in and for the South District of Wilkes-Barre Township, Luzerne County, Thomas McCue, the defendant, offered himself as a witness to vouch for one Thomas Miles, a non-registered voter in said district, and to make the necessary affidavit as to the residence of the said Thomas Miles. James Kerrigan, clerk to the minority inspector of said election board, filled the blank spaces of a printed affidavit from information furnished by Miles. The defendant then signed the affidavit, the judge of election then attached his signature, and Miles voted. James Nealon, the minority inspector, testified that his clerk, James Kerrigan, swore the defendant before the affidavit was signed. The judge of election did not administer the oath to the defendant, McCue, nor did either of the inspectors, nor did they authorize either clerk to do so. A branch of the defense was that there was no binding oath lawfully administered to the defendant and that he was not sworn as to the contents of the said paper. There was no affirmative proof of the form used, the words uttered, or the ceremonial attending the alleged swearing of the defendant.

The testimony of clerk Kerrigan, judge Brennan, and inspector Lyle was, substantially, that there was no oath administered by anyone.

The other branch of the defense was that the defendant said that his grounds for belief of the truth of the facts contained in the affidavit were that he met the said Thomas Miles on two occasions before this time, and that in May preceding the primaries Miles told him that he lived in the district at the home of Eli Jones, and acting upon that belief he vouched for him.

The Honorable Henry A. Fuller, the trial judge, writes the Board as follows:

"Wilkes-Barre, Pa., October 12, 1911.

"Hon. John C. Bell, Attorney-General, Harrisburg, Pa.

"My dear Mr. Bell:—The application of Thomas McCue for pardon presents certain strong claims upon clemency.

"Prior to the charge whereof he was convicted he had always borne a good character as an industrious, well-behaved young man. He is crippled by the loss of an arm. He has forfeited the office which brought a livelihood to himself and his young wife. Since conviction he has been bereaved by the death of his only child.

"I do not wish to go upon record as expressly recommending a pardon for a man properly convicted on a charge of this character; but I will say that the crime seems to have been rather the careless, easy-going, thoughtless act of one helping a friend than a deliberate, cold-blooded self-serving performance.

"The case excites my profound pity; and my judicial sensibilities would not be seriously disturbed if your Board should see fit to favor his application.

Very truly yours,
HENRY A. FULLER,
Trial Judge."

A petition numerously signed by business and professional men of Wilkes-Barre and its vicinity, praying that a pardon be recommended, and numerous letters endorsing the application, have been received by the Board, and are filed with the papers.

After a careful examination of the case, and in the light of all the information we have been able to gather,—giving especial weight to the letter of the Trial Judge,—we have concluded that this application for clemency should be approved. Therefore we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Thomas McCue.

Respectfully submitted,

Lieutenant Governor.

Harrisburg, December 20, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Lawrence, to No. 14, September Term, 1907, Frank Jarapola was, on September 13, 1907, convicted on a charge of Robbery, and was thereupon, September 14, 1907, sentenced to pay a fine of $5 and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for the term of five years from that date.

In the same Court, and at the same time, to No 16, September Term, 1907, he was convicted on another charge of Robbery, and likewise sentenced to pay a fine of $5 and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for the term of five years to be computed from the expiration of the term of sentence in No. 14; thus making in the aggregate a fine of $10 and an imprisonment of ten years.

On October 6, 1909, an application for pardon was duly filed, which upon hearing was refused. At the recent April session of the Board a rehearing was allowed and upon hearing the application at the May meeting the case was held under advisement and has been so pending since that time. We now recommend that the application for clemency be allowed, and that a pardon be granted the applicant, Frank Jarapola.

Jarapola is a young Italian, now about twenty-five years of age. He appears to have borne a good character prior to the charges brought against him for which he has been imprisoned. The charges in the two indictments are for entirely separate and disconnected acts in no way associated with one another. The one felony is alleged to have taken place on the 15th of June, 1907, and the other on the 15th of May, 1907. The cases were called up in Court at the same time, and were tried together and heard by the same jury. This circumstance certainly did not enure to the benefit of the defendant. At the time of the trial there was a great feeling in that locality against Italians by reason of the large number of crimes that had been perpetrated which were chargeable to the Black Hand. This feeling apparently worked against this defendant, although it is claimed on his behalf that no charge of his association with the Black Hand was proved. The defendant denied all connection with that organization.

The chief reason pressed for a favorable consideration of the application for pardon is the allegation of severity of sentence. From our examination of the records of the case it would seem that this reason is well taken. The defendant has been in confinement in the Penitentiary since September 1907, a period of more than four years. The District Attorney and the Assistant District Attorney who tried the defendant, as well as the present District Attorney, are of the opinion that the defendant has been sufficiently punished for whatever violation of law was proved against him, and they all join in the application for his relief. Many others who are conversant with the facts in the case endorse the application.

From the examination we have given this case, and from all the information we have been able to gather from various sources, we have concluded that the application for clemency can be approved with safety to all concerned. We therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted this applicant, Frank Jarapola.

Respectfully submitted,

Harrisburg, December 20, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Lackawanna County, to No. 17 and No. 18, December Term, 1907, Michael Edward Healey entered pleas of guilty to indictments charging him jointly with Frank Henry Olesnovich and Jacob Aloysius Theis, with the crime of robbery. Upon December 10, 1907, Healey was sentenced in each case to pay a fine of one dollar, costs, and undergo an imprisonment of ten years in the Eastern Penitentiary. The sentences were cumulative, so that the aggregate fine was two dollars, and the imprisonment twenty years.

December 6, 1911, an application for pardon of Healey was duly filed, and at our regular meeting to-day the case was presented to us in detail. After hearing a statement of the facts, and upon an examination of the record, we are of the opinion that a recommendation for pardon of the applicant should be made.

Healey is a young man now about 23 years of age. At the time of his offense, he was about 19. He had, previous to this charge, been regarded as of good character, and was not of the criminal class. The two robberies in which Healey took part with the other two Defendants took place on the same day and within a short time of each other. The other two Defendants were charged with eight separate highway robberies, but Healey did not participate except in the two. In one of these cases the man held up was robbed of a watch and chain valued at about $7.50, and in the other case the assailants did not secure any booty. Healey's confession aided in convicting the other two Defendants, each of whom received a longer sentence and is now in prison.

It was brought to our attention that at about the time of these depredations, there was a wave of crime passing over Lackawanna County, and the Courts and the prosecuting officers felt it their duty to have severe sentences imposed upon convicts as a warning to other wrongdoers. Healey thus felt the heavy hand of justice. Later on, however, it developed that his sentence of imprisonment was unduly severe, and it is with this thought that the application for pardon has been made. The District Attorney and the Trial Judge, as well as other officials, favor the application. The District Attorney writes to the Board as follows:

"The Defendant, Healey, was sentenced at a time when a number of serious crimes quite like the Defendants was committed in our County. As a matter of fact in the year 1907 there were sentences imposed in the criminal courts of this County that aggregated close to 900 years for all the Defendants. The judges had in mind that severe sentences would be imposed in order to check this wave or crime. The Defendant Healey therefore was more severely sentenced than if his case was standing alone.

I am informed from the police authorities of this City that Healey, prior to the commission of this crime, was a fairly good young man, and I understand that the Superintendent of Police of Scranton has written a letter suggesting his pardon. I am also inclined to think that the judge who sentenced him does not look with disfavor upon this application for pardon. On the whole, I am inclined to think that it is a case for clemency.

JOSEPH O'BRIEN,
Dist. Atty."

Judge Edwards writes under date of December 18, 1911:

"To the Board of Pardons, Harrisburg, Pa.

Gentlemen:—In the matter of the application of Michael Healey for pardon I submit for your consideration the following statement of my views:

1. He was sentenced on December 10, 1907, in two cases of highway robbery to ten years in each case. On a review of the circumstances I am now satisfied that I should at least have allowed the sentences to run concurrently. At the time Healey was sentenced we had an epidemic or robberies in this County; and it is likely that young Healey's case did not receive all the discriminating consideration it should have had at that time. He, nevertheless, deserved some substantial punishment.

2. Taking into consideration Healey's youth, his previous good character, the punishment he has already suffered, the aid he gave the police authorities to reach the principal and older offenders, I believe the ends of justice will be fairly met by his pardon.

Yours very truly.
H. W. EDWARDS,
Pres, Judge."

Such being the status of the case before us we deem it proper that we recommend the granting of a pardon to the applicant, Michael Edward Healey.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Venango, to No. 27, Aug. Term, 1909, Harry H. Baumgardner was, August 27, 1909, sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for not less than one year and not more than six years, on the charge of embezzlement.

On August 27, 1910, upon completion of the minimum term of imprisonment an order for his parole was granted by the Governor of the Commonwealth on the recommendation of the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary, endorsed by the Board of Pardons, according to the provisions of the Indeterminate Sentence Act.

On October 9, 1911, the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary recommended to the Governor that the said prisoner be granted his final discharge to date from November 1, 1911. They attach to their recommendation the following statement: "H. H. Baumgardner was paroled on August 27, 1910. His conduct has been excellent. His wife is now an inmate of a sanitarium in Lansing, Mich., in which city he owns real estate. He was convicted for appropriating farm produce belonging to Venango County to his own use while he was a County Commissioner."

It would appear from the recommendation of the Board of Inspectors of the Western Penitentiary that the objects of the Indeterminate Sentence Act have been accomplished in this case, viz., the reformation of the offender. All the formalities and requirements prescribed by the rules of the said Institution and of this Board have been observed. Due notice has been given to the Court and to the District Attorney of the proper County of the recommendation by the said inspectors; and so, there appearing no reason to the contrary, we approve the recommendation of the Board of Inspectors of the Western Penitentiary that a pardon be now granted Harry H. Baumgardner, as is provided in the Act of Assembly under which he was sentenced.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Philadelphia George W. Meistler was, December 1, 1909, sentenced on a conviction for forgery to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than one year and not more than five years.

After serving the minimum term he was on December 23, 1910, on the recommendation of the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary, endorsed by the Board of Pardons, released from confinement on parole, having complied with all the rules and regulations in such case made and provided. His maximum term will expire on December 1, 1914.

On December 9, 1911, the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary recommended to Your Excellency that an absolute pardon and order for final discharge be granted the said George W. Meistler, for the reason that "He has reported regularly for twelve months, and by straightforward conduct while on parole has given evidence that he can and will remain a good citizen."

All the formalities and requirements prescribed by the rules of the Penitentiary and of this Board have been observed. Due notice has been given to the Court and to the District Attorney of the proper County of the recommendation of the Board of Inspectors and as no reason has been shown to the contrary we endorse the recommendation of the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern Penitentiary that a pardon be now granted George W. Harrisburg, January 17, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Philadelphia, to No. 39, May Term, 1907, Angelo Tomasco was October 23, 1908, convicted of voluntary manslaughter on an indictment charging him with murder of Sabbatto Tomasco, and, upon January 21, 1909, was sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of five years.

On November 1, 1909, an application for pardon was filed, but it was then refused. At our December meeting we allowed a motion for a rehearing, and the application was heard to-day for the second time. After carefully considering the present aspects of the case, we are disposed to favor the application, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Angelo Tomasco.

The applicant is a young Italian, who lived with his wife in the City of Philadelphia. The victim of the homicide, although of the same name, was not a relative. On the evening of April 24, 1907, both these men, with a number of their countrymen, were in the saloon of Francesco Tomasco, who was a brother of the deceased, which saloon is located at the Corner of 12th and Annin Streets, Philadelphia. Some little dispute having arisen between Angelo and some other members of the party, Angelo said he did not want any trouble, and started to leave the place to go home, going out of the room by the Annin Street door. Others in the party at once got up and left the room by the 12th Street door. It was necessary for Angelo to pass around by the 12th Street door on his way home, and thus he met the others coming out of the 12th Street door. A fight ensued right then and there. Angelo and Sabbatto grappled, and some of the others mingled in the scuffle. In a few minutes there was a scream, and both Angelo and Sabbatto fell to the ground, Angelo with his head cut open on the top for about three inches, and Sabbatto with a cut in his temple, penetrating the brain some four inches. Both were taken to the hospital and Sabbatto died soon afterwards; Angelo was taken to jail and was charged with the homicide. About the time the men fell while fighting, something metallic was heard to fall on the pavement, and afterwards an oyster knife was found there, and it was with this knife that the wounds seem to have been inflicted. Who had the knife is a question of doubt. It belonged to the saloon out of which all the men came. The theory of the application is that the knife was in the grasp of, and the blows struck by, a third party, who, in his efforts to strike Angelo, also struck Sabbatto, and thus caused his death. The applicant has strenuously maintained at all times that he did not strike the fatal blow. Recently depositions of certain persons have been taken which tend to corroborate the position of the applicant.

The formal reasons on which the application for pardon is based, are the following:

First. The after discovered evidence of William Ryan, an eye witness of the fight, to the effect that the oyster knife with which the homicide was committed in the possession of Luigi Crescenzo, a third party, at the time of the fight, and that the latter was endeavoring to strike the defendant with the knife.

Second. That the interpreter who acted at the trial was incompetent, and his interpretations insufficient, to the prejudice of the prisoner, in that he did not interpret certain statements favorable to the prisoner made by the prisoner while on the stand.

Third. That the witnesses who testified at the trial to having seen Defendant strike decedent with a knife had testified to the exact contrary at the Coroner's inquest, thus rendering their testimony subject to grave doubt, and highly improbable and unbelievable in the light of the above after discovered evidence.

Fourth. The fact that, under all the evidence of the case, aven if the prosecution's witnesses are to be taken at full value, the Defendant was acting in self defense and that there is no element of voluntary manslaughter in the case.

Judge Martin, who tried the case, writes to the Board as follows; under date of December 18, 1911:

"To the Board of Pardons.

Gentlemen:—I presided in the Court of Oyer and Terminer in the County of Philadelphia at the trial of Angelo Tomasco who was convicted of voluntary manslaughter.

The testimony offered on behalf of the Defendant was directed to proving that he did not stab the deceased.

Recently there has been exhibited to me the depositions of persons who allege that there was a conflict between the Defendant and the deceased. Had this evidence been produced at the trial, I should have submitted it to the jury with instructions in reference to the law of self defense.

If this testimony is true it seems to me that Tomasco has not had a fair trial upon the merits of his case, and should your Honorable body be so impressed, I shall be glad to learn of your favorable action.

Very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
J. WILLIS MARTIN, Judge."

Moreover, the prisoner's term will, under the commutation law, expire during the coming April, so that he has now served his term with the exception of about three months. In view, therefore, of the doubt raised as to the actual guilt of the applicant, and the near approach of the end of his term, we are of the belief that it is proper to invoke the Executive prerogative of celmency in his behalf, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Angelo Tomasco.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions in and for the County of Philadelphia, at December Sessions, 1910, Thomas Gallagher was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of "fraudulently voting at General Election," and was on January 26, 1911, sentenced to pay a fine of $200.00, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Philadelphia County Prison for the term of eighteen months.

No charge is made by any one connected with the application that the conviction and the sentence were improper; and clemency is asked for on but one ground,—the extremely critical condition of the health of the applicant. He is in almost the last stages of consumption, as certified by the affidavits of doctors Lawrence F. Flick and Macy Brooks, who examined him, and who state it as their opinion that, if the applicant is kept in confinement, he will not live to serve out the term of his sentence, which expires in April next.

A letter from the "Committee of Seventy," which prosecuted the case, is as follows:

"Philadelphia, December 28, 1911.

"Board of Pardons, Harrisburg, Pa.

Gentlemen:—It has been called to our attention that Thomas Gallagher, who was arrested at the instance of the Committee of Seventy, charged with fraudulent registration and illegal voting, who was tried and convicted on January 26, 1911, and was sentenced to undergo an imprisonment of eighteen months, and who has been confined to the County Prison since that time, has contracted tuberculosis.

"An examination was recently made by Dr. Lawrence F. Flick, who advises that if the confinement is continued he will die in prison. Dr. Flick further advises that if he is released he has a possible chance, with proper treatment, of at least prolonging his life.

"We feel that the offense of which he was convicted was a serious one, and that the conviction and sentence were just, but under the circumstances we do not desire to oppose his application for a pardon.

Very truly yours,
EDWARD L. D. ROACH,
Secretary."

In view of the precarious condition of the health of the applicant, the Board recommends that a pardon be now granted to the applicant, Thomas Gallagher.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, No. 348, July Sessions, 1911, Earnest James was, November 22, 1911, convicted on an indictment charging him with unlawfully and knowingly assisting and encouraging a minor under probation to violate her parole, etc., and upon the same day was sentenced to pay the costs and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of six months.

An application for pardon was duly filed January 4, 1912, and the same was heard at to-day's meeting of the Board. We are of the opinion, from the circumstances of the case, that a pardon can probably be granted the applicant, and we, therefore, recommend that such be done.

James is a young colored boy about 17 years of age, who before this charge wah made against him, is said to have had a good reputation. He was steadily employed at work, and has been the support of his mother. The Act under which he was indicted is of recent enactment, and it was represented to us that all the elements of the offense were not present in the case. He has served nearly two months of his term, which, it is averred, is ample punishment for his violation of the law. Further, his former employer now stands ready to receive him back into his employ and give him steady work.

Under these circumstances it seems to us that it would be much to the interest of the Defendant, and would hardly be to the disadvantage of the community, to restore this boy to his liberty and give him a chance to earn his living. We, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Ernest James.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions in and for the County of Columbia, at September Sessions, 1909, Ward Ketchem was convicted of the crime of Larceny, and was, by the said court, on September 30, 1909, sentenced to pay a fine of $100.00, the costs of prosecution, and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of thirty years.

The applicant, Ward Ketchem, was a farm laborer, being employed by a farmer named Charles Dresch. On August 27, 1909, Dresch proceeded alone to the home of Levi Miller, and stole a load of wheat. Bringing it to his place he aroused his hired hand Ketchem, who was in a drunken slumber in the barn, and ordered him to take the grain to market and sell it. This was early in the morning, shortly after midnight. Ketchem did as he was ordered, and later both men were arrested. Before the Justice of the Peace, Ketchem admitted that he had sold the grain, and this was considered a plea of guilty of stealing it. At court, Dresch pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a period of not less than nine months nor more than three years. Ketchem's statement as to the facts lost weight because he previously had twice been convicted and sentenced to terms in the penitentiary. Dresch was not heard as a witness, but after the jury had rendered its verdict, acknowledged to the court that he alone was guilty of taking the wheat. The other two convictions of the applicant were said to have been minor depredations,—one was the taking of a row boat, and the other of entering a cellar and taking and drinking some wine.

After a careful consideration of the case, the Board has decided to recommend to Your Excellency that a pardon be granted to the applicant.

The District Attorney who prosecuted the case, writes as follows:

"To the Board of Pardons:

I hereby join in the request for the pardon of Ward Ketchem. I was the Prosecuting Attorney at the time of his conviction.

CHRISTIAN A. SMALL,
D. A."

The application is also endorsed by the Judge who presided at the trial. His letter follows:

"I hereby join in the request for the pardon of Ward Ketchem. The case was tried before me.

Harrisburg, January 17, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Cameron, to No. 2, October Term, 1907, William Coher was, October 15, 1907, convicted on an indictment charging him with statutory rape, and upon October 16, 1907, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $1.00, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for the term of 15 years.

On December 12, 1911, an application for the pardon of the said Defendant was duly made, and the case appeared upon the calendar of to-day's meeting. After due hearing and upon careful consideration of the facts in the case, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, William Coher.

The applicant is a man of about 40 years of age, married, and the father of four children. His wife and children are all living, and two of the latter are dependent upon him for support. Prior to the commission of the offense with which he is here charged, he had borne a good character in the community in which he lived. The case against him was not an aggravated one. Investigation seems to establish the fact that the crime did not rise to the high grade of rape. The testimony in the case shows that there was no force or undue coercion used. The main ground for clemency is the allegation of undue severity of sentence. This allegation is undoubtedly well founded, and to this extent there was a miscarriage of justice, which it is the province of the pardoning power to rectify.

Judge Hall, who tried and sentenced the Defendant, writes to the Board as follows:

"Gentlemen:—Notice has just been served on me that an application will be made to your Honorable Body on the 17th day of January next for the pardon of William Coher who was sentenced by me October 15, 1907, to serve a term of 15 years in the Penitentiary for statutory rape.

The reason filed for a pardon do not seem to set up any sufficient cause for such action, yet I think the prisoner should be pardoned. At the time I sentenced him I did so under the impression that the girl was of good character and reputation, as no attempt was made by the Defendant's counsel to prove otherwise, except by the testimony of two little girls who were daughters of the Defendant and whose testimony I did not believe. A subsequent investigation of the matter, however, convinces me that the girl who made the charge, nothwithstanding her youth, was a notoriously lewd character whose evil reputation could have been established by the testimony of practically all the citizens of the village in which she lived; consequently, if the prisoner had been properly defended, he could have been convicted of nothing except simple fornication, and I would undoubtedly confined the jury's deliberations to that phase of the case. That he has served four years is owing to the fact that he lacked funds to employ counsel to make this application earlier.

I did not believe the story he told on the stand in his own behalf at the time, but the information I received afterwards with regard to the character of the girl is such that I now believe his testimony to be at least probable, and in any event there can be no question that he has already suffered a much longer punishment than that to which he was entitled under the law. I therefore recommend that his pardon be granted.

Very respectfully,
HARRY ALVAN HALL."

The application for clemency is also supported by a recommendation signed by numerous residents of the County of Cameron.

In view then of the forgoing statements, and remembering that the applicant has been confined in the Penitentiary for more than four years and three months, we are of the opinion that he has been sufficient punished for his transgression, and that clemency may properly be shown him. We therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, William Coher.

Harrisburg, January 31, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Lackawanna, to No. 10, December Term, 1908, Louis Miller was, December 11, 1908, convicted on an indictment charging him with Statutory Rape, and upon December 12, 1908, he was sentenced by the Court to pay a fine of $500, costs, and undergo an imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of ten years.

December 6, 1911, and application for his pardon was duly filed, and the case was heard at our December meeting, but has been held under advisement since that time.

Hoving given the matter careful consideration and examination, and upon ascertaining the conditions at present existing with regard to the needy and destitute situation of the defendant's family, and in view of the time the defendant has been confined in the penitentiary, we are of the opinion that it is proper for us to favor the application for clemency, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Louis Miller.

The applicant is a man of about thirty-two years of age, and by occupation is a barber. He carried on his trade in the City of Scranton. He is a married man, and his family consists of a wife and two small children. The girl with whom the criminal relations were sustained was a sister of his wife, who had come to live with his family. There does not appear to be any question but that the conviction was just and proper under the facts and the law.

The harshness and severity of the sentence furnishes the ground on which the application for pardon is based. It has also developed that the wife and children of the prisoner are in destitute circumstances and are actually suffering for want of the necessaries of life. Prior to his conviction Miller had always provided well for his family. Since his imprisonment his wife has done her best to keep the family together, but has broken down under the strain. She has remained true to her husband, and is now the real petitioner for the pardon. It further appears that the girl has since married, and has removed from the neighborhood, and is doing well in life.

The defendant has been in prison for considerably more than three years. From our invesigations we are entirely satisfied that by the punishment he has undergone he has atoned for his offense. We cannot see that any further good will result from his protracted imprisonment, while his release at this time will be of substantial help to his suffering family. The interests of society will be better served by permitting this man to have the chance to take care of his wife and children than by keeping him in confinement and thus throwing his family upon the charge of the community in which they live.

The District Attorney of the County, Joseph O'Brien, Esq., in writing to the Board in regard to the merits of the application, says among other things:

"I have always been under the impression that the sentence was quite severe in this case. I believe that the defendant, prior to the charge made in this case, bore a good reputation in this City. There are also the additional facts that the applicant, as I understand it, is in ill health in the penitentiary, and that his wife and himself would be united if he were discharged. It also appears that the injured girl has since married, and so far as we can ascertain is now getting along pretty well in life. Under all the circumstances I am not at all opposed to a pardon in this case, and believe that the sentence already served by the defendant meets the ends of justice."

Taking into account all the circumstances of the case as brought to our attention, we unite in the recommendation that a pardon be now granted to the applicant, Louis Miller.

Harrisburg, February 21, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—At a Court of Oyer and Terminer held at Washington, in and for the County of Washington, February Sessions, 1910, John Young was convicted of the crime of Voluntary Manslaughter, and was by the said court, on February 21, 1910, sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for an indeterminate term of not more than twelve years nor less than three years.

On the 26th day of September, 1909, John Young, one of the qualified constables of Union Township, Washington County, was informed by two foreigners that great disorder prevailed at the house of Andy Gashes, a Lithuanian, who resided in a section of Union Township known as Houstons Run. After attending to some other matters, Young repaired to the house of the said Gashes with the two foreigners, and entered the place, when immediately the inmates of the house, becoming incensed at the presence of the constable, demanded to know by what right he was there. Upon being told that he had information that they were creating disorder and he had come to quell the disturbance, the inmates became indignant and threw the two foreigners out of the front door, and immediately set upon Young, who, believing his life was in danger and that he had a right upon the premises, carrying out, as he supposed, what were his duties as constable, and being, as he claimed, hard pressed against the closed door while the deceased was attacking him, shot Gashes, from the effects of which wound he died within the next twenty-four hours. Young immediately caused a physician to be notified of the shooting and proceeded to Monongahela City where he delivered himself into the hands of the officers of the law. He was indicated for the crime of Murder and convicted of Voluntary Manslaughter.

Believing in the good faith of the petitioner, who thought he was justified in preserving good order in the community, although without a proper warrant for entering a private dwelling that the homicide was committed while in fear of his life; that he thought he was acting for the best interests of the public, and that when he entered the house where the trouble occurred he had no other intention than to quell the disturbance; that the imprisonment already served by the applicant is a sufficient punishment for his error,—the Board is of the opinion that a pardon should now be granted to the said John Young.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 689, September Sessions, 1910,, and No. 690, Sept. Sessions, 1910, Joseph Burkett was indicted on a charge of Robbery, and of Assault and Battery with intent to Rob, respectively. September 26, 1910, on arraignment the defendant pleaded guilty, and was thereupon sentenced in the aggregate to pay the cost of prosecution, and undergo imprisonment in the Philadelphia County Prison for the term of three years.

On February 7, 1912, an application for pardon was duly filed. We heard the case at our meeting to-day, and for the reasons laid in the application we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Joseph Burkett.

Burkett is a man 42 years of age, Although he is reported to come from a good family he has led somewhat of a wayward life. Drink seems to have caused his downfall. He was under the influence of liquor when he committed the act for which he was arrested and imprisoned; his statement is that he has no clear recollection of the occurrence or of the motive that led him to act.

He has served some seventeen months imprisonment in jail; he is reported by the prison authorities to be in an advanced stage of consumption, and not likely to live very much longer. His mother is anxious to have him released that he may receive her care and attention in his fatal sickness, and at least die at home.

Judge Wiltbank, who presided at the trial, writes to the Board as follows, under date of February 3, 1912:

"Gentlemen:—I have received notice that an application for a pardon will be, or has been, made to your Honorable Body in behalf of one, Joseph Burkett, now a convict serving a sentence in the County Prison at Holmesburg. The said Joseph Burkett was heretofore sentenced by me for a term of three years, and he has served, as I am informed, about a year and a half. Upon careful investigation I have ascertained that his conduct has been exemplary, and that he is now far gone in, if not in the last stages of consumption. I am apprised of the nature of the documents which in his behalf his counsel will lay before you. I am of the opinion that the ends of justice have been attained by his commitment to this date. I therefore recommend the favorable consideration of his case."

Under the circumstances of the case as brought to our attention, we are of the opinion that the law has been sufficiently vindicated by the imprisonment already endured, and that the public interests will not be prejudiced by the release of this man at this time, especially in view of his uncertain tenure of life; we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted to the applicant, Joseph Burkett.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 316, August Sessions, 1911, Joseph Perna was convicted on a charge of Assault and Battery, and upon January 31, 1912, was sentenced to pay the costs, and undergo an imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of six months.

An application for pardon was duly filed March 6, 1912, and the case was presented to our attention and fully argued at our meeting of to-day. Upon consideration of all the circumstances surrounding the matter we are of the opinion that it would be for the best interests of the applicant and of the public to grant the prayer of the petitioner, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Joseph Perna.

Perna is a man of about forty years of age, married and the father of a large family. His character, apart from the charge now hanging over him, has been of the best. He is engaged in the contracting business in the City of Philadelphia, which business he has built up to a considerable size and value; he has at this time important contracts awaiting his attention.

The application is supported by letters from a large number of very prominent business firms of his city with whom he has had dealings, all attesting to his good character as a citizen and to his business integrity. His confinement is very seriously crippling his business. His financial loss by reason of the two months imprisonment already served will be very large. The assault complained of grew out of a dispute with regard to the removal or dismantling of a merry-go-round at an amusement park in which he was interested, and was one of those causal occurrences that sometimes happen on the spur of the moment and in which no serious harm is intended.

From all the details of the case as brought to our attention at the hearing it is our opinion that he has been sufficiently punished for his violation of the law, and that his discharge from prison at this time will be not only an act of mercy, but will be the means of saving the property and business of a man who has always been a useful citizen.

We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted this applicant, Joseph Perna.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Columbia, to Nos. 2 and 3 of September Sessions 1911, Wally Yonkoski and Sigmond Yonkoski were jointly indicted on the charge of Assault and Battery and aggravated Assault. On December 5, 1911, they were convicted on one bill and acquitted on the other, and on December 6th were sentenced each to pay a fine of one hundred dollars, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the County Jail for one year.

On March 5, 1912, an application for pardon was duly filed. At our hearing of the application to-day we were convinced that the reasons laid were well founded, and we therefore recommend that pardons be granted the applicants, Wally Yonkoski and Sigmond Yonkoski.

These defendants are foreigners, Poles, working in the mines of Columbia County. On the Fourth of July last year there was a kind of a free fight between a party of about half dozen Polish miners, on the one side, and some twelve or fifteen Slavish miners, on the other. About fifteen arrests were made on account of this disturbance, but all the cases were settled except those against these two above named defendants. On the trial of the cases against these applicants all the testimony except that of one witness was given through interpreters. The only English speaking witness was a woman by the name of Tillie Matis, and it has since been ascertained that the testimony she gave and upon which the convcition was mainly based was not correct.

From what has been shown to us there appears to have been a miscarriage of justice in this conviction.

Judge Evans, who tried the case, writes the Board under date of February 28, 1912, as follows:

"I trust that you can see your way clear to pardon Wally and Sigmond Yonkoski. They probably would not have been convicted had it not been for the testimony of Tillie Matis. They did not impress me upon the trial as being bad men.

In view of the fact that there is some considerable doubt as to the truthfulness of the testimony of the Matis woman, and, that they have already served approximately three months, I most heartily join in their application for a pardon."

Mr. Small, the District Attorney who prosecuted the case also expresses similar views in the following letter addressed to the Board:

"In the matter of the application to pardon Wally and Sigmond Yonkoski. From what I have learned of the case since trial and conviction I am of the opinion that the interpreter had at the trial did not fully understand the witnesses, otherwise there would have been no conviction.

The case has some merit, and I believe the ends of justice would be subserved if the application would be granted."

There are also on file with the peapers letters and petitions from a goodly number of persons who know the men and who are familiar with the facts, asking our favorable consideration of the application.

Believing, therefore, that these letters, etc., convey a true understanding of the case, and relying upon the views therein expressed, we recommend that pardons be granted to Wally Yonkoski and Sigmond Yonkoski.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Lawrence, to No 23 December Sessions 1911, Dominica Tutino, otherwise called Dominick Tutino, was convicted on an indictment charging him with the sale of intoxicating liquor without a license, and on December 19, 1911, was sentenced to pay a fine of five hundred dollars, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Allegheny County Work House for eight months.

On March 4, 1912, an application for pardon was duly filed. This application was argued before us at our meeting held this day, and after giving the case careful attention and examination we have reached the conclusion that the relief asked should be allowed. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Dominick Tutino.

Tutino is an Italian, aged about forty-four years. He has been a naturalized citizen for some eighteen years, and has lived for about twenty years in the City of New Castle. He kept a sort of restaurant or lunch room in that place, and in the course of his business sold cider and soft drinks of various kinds. The allegation is that on the date laid in the indictment he sold cider, which, on being analyzed, tested a certain percentage of alcohol that made it intoxicating. This was the only infraction of the law charged against him. The defendant denied on the trial that the cider he sold was "hard." However, his conviction resulted from the sale made, and the sentence above mentioned was imposed.

It is urged in support of the application for pardon that the sentence was excessive under the circumstances of the case, and it is on this ground that the request for relief is made. We are favorably impressed with this view of the case, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted to Dominick Tutino, who is named in the indictment as Dominica Tutino.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Schuylkill, to No. 582, May Sessions, 1910, Jimmie Coura was jointly indicted with Antonio Mollinaro for the alleged commission of the crime of Robbery. On May 6, 1910, Coura was convicted, and on May 9th following was sentenced to pay the costs, a fine of one hundred dollars, and to undergo an imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of six years.

On December 11, 1911, an application for pardon on behalf of the defendant was duly filed, which, by reason of continuances, was not heard until our meeting of to-day. Upon a consideration of the merits of the application as brought out at our hearing we think it would be proper to favor the petition, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Jimmie Coura.

Coura is a man of about twenty-six years of age. So far as known, he has no criminal record. On the evening of November 19, 1909, Richard J. Dowling, of Port Carbon, was assaulted on the streets of the borough of Palo Alto, in said county, by three men, who knocked him down and robbed him of his watch and what money was on his person. The assailants were not identified and no arrests were made at the time. However, some months later Mr. Dowling learned that his watch was in the possession of Coura and Mollinaro at Atlantic City. These men were brought to Schuylkill County on requisition, and indicted and tried for the robbery. It happened that the watch was found in the possession of Coura. There apparently being no evidence to associate Mollinaro with the robbery, he was acquitted on the trial; but on the strength of the proven fact that Coura had the watch in his paossession he was convicted of the robbery.

Coura has been in jail under this sentence for about twenty-three months. In view of this nearly two years imprisonment, and the fact that the evidence against the defendant was altogether circumstantial, it appears to us that the prisoner has paid an adequate penalty, that the law has been vindicated, and that public interests will not be imperilled by the liberation of this applicant from prison.

We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted Jimmie Coura.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Lawrence, to No. 35 March Sessions 1909, John Hogue, alias Baldwin, was jointly indicted with Henry Lewis Gunsley for entering a building with intent to commit a felony, larceny and receiving, etc. Defendants waived the finding of bill by the Grand Jury, and entered pleas of guilty, and thereupon were sentenced, February 9, 1909, to pay a fine of fifty dollars, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for the term of six years.

On February 10, 1912, an application for the pardon of Hogue was duly filed. We gave the case a hearing to-day, and after careful consideration have reached the conclusion that the application should be allowed, and we accordingly recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, John Hogue, alias Baldwin.

The applicant is a young man of about twenty-five years of age. The charge to which he pleaded guilty is that of chicken stealing. He has been in prison something more than three years. The reason advanced in support of the application for pardon is that he has already suffered sufficiently for the offense committed. It may be proper to remark that we recommend a pardon for Gunsley several months ago, and he has been liberated from confinement.

We are in receipt of letters from the Trial Judge and from the District Attorney who heard and tried the case, which explain the case fully, and we quote these letters in support of our recommendation.

Judge William E. Porter writes under date of February 5, 1912:

"Relative to the application of John Hogue, alias Baldwin, for pardon, would say that I believe that Mr. Hogue has been sufficiently punished for the crimes he committed.

You will no doubt regard the sentence imposed in this case, viz, six years, as very severe, and it was. He entered pleas of guilty on two indictments, and when called for sentence admitted breaking and entering 12 or 13 other chicken coops and removing chickens therefrom.

At the time this sentence was imposed, and for some time prior thereto, this sort of petty thievery was carried on to a considerable extent in this county, and it was my intention when imposing sentence in this case to impose such a one as would deter others from engaging in this business, and it was also my intention at the time of imposing the sentence that after he had served a reasonable time for the crimes on which he entered pleas of guilty to ask you to pardon him.

As I say, by purpose was to break up the practice that seemed to be quite common in the county at the time of robbing chicken roosts, and this sentence seems to have accomplished the purpose. I believe no indictment has been before the Court since that time charging this character of offense.

Mr. Hogue, while he entered pleas of guilty to only two of the charges, was not permitted by the District Attorney to enter pleas on the other 12 or 13 cases, simply as a matter of saving costs to the county, and although he in 1909 seems to have had a disposition to monopolize the chicken stealing business in Lawrence county, we believe he has been sufficiently punished, and we would ask you to now pardon him."

The letter of the District Attorney is as follows:

"I have been notified that application is being made for the pardon of John Hogue, alias Baldwin, who entered a plea of guilty upon two charges, at No. 35 and 37 March Session, 1909, in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Lawrence County for entering a building with intent to commit a felony, and larceny, the defendant being sentenced to imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for six years upon each charge.

I was District Attorney in Lawrence County at the time this offense was committed, and the offense consisted of breaking open chicken houses and stealing chickens. The sentence, in my judgment, was excessive, and as the defendant has already served three years of his term, I believe he has been sufficiently punished for the offenses he committed, and that he should be pardoned."

In view of these letters, and for the reasons given, we unite in recommending that a pardon be granted this applicant, John Hogue, alias Baldwin.

Harrisburg, March 20, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Philadelphia, to No. 34 February Term, 1907, Mock Yen was returned as guilty of manslaughter on an indictment charging him with Murder, and was thereupon, November 14, 1907, sentenced to pay the costs, a fine of five hundred dollars, and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of ten years.

On January 16, 1912, an application for pardon was filed, which was heard at our meeting of to-day. We have given the application careful consideration, and are of the opinion that our action thereon should be favorable, We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Mock Yen.

Mock Yen, as his name would indicate, is a Chinaman. His age is thirty-four years. The homicide for which he was indicted took place in the City of Philadelphia on January 13, 1907. The victim was Mock Gin, another Chinaman. The latter had borrowed money from the former, and the creditor had called upon the debtor at No. 938 Race Street in said city, which was the regular Sunday meeting place of the Mock family, for the purpose of collecting the debt. Some dispute arose between the two over the affair. Mock Gin was a large and powerful man, while Yen was a small man. Gin knocked Yen over on to a bed where Yen fell upon a pile of Chinese blouses which were lying there. According to defendant's story he found in a pocket of one of the blouses a pistol which he seized upon to protect himself from Gin's attack. Gin advanced towards him in a threatening way, when Yen fired two shots toward the floor, and then on Gin's further advance he fired at him and hit him on the hip. It is alleged that this shot was fired with no murderous intent, but for the purpose of self-protection. However, Mock died within a few days from the effects of the wound, and Mock Yen was indicted for his murder.

The reasons laid in the application, as ground for clemency are: That the defendant has been in prison long enough in view of the verdict rendered; that if released now he has he opportunity to engage in business with a relative in Seattle, Washington, whereas, if he serves out his full time this opportunity will be lost; that the killing of Gin was not in pursuance of any of the well known Chinese feuds, but was brought about in a dispute over money matters and was a killing in hot blood.

There is on file with the papers a letter addressed to the Board from Reverend Frederic Poole, who for a long time had been engaged in missionary work among the Chinese in this country, who says he knew Mock Yen very well and gives him a good character bill; he strongly recommends the favorable action of the Board on the application for pardon.

From all we can gather from the record and from the statements of counsel, and under the belief that upon his release the prisoner will immediately leave this jurisdiction and avail himself of the chance to go into business in Seattle with a relative, we have concluded that we can with safety suggest the exercise of Executive Clemency in this case.

We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted Mock Yen.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and Quarter Sessions of the County of Philadelphia, on July 7, 1909, Eugene Miller was sentenced on a conviction on a charge of Larceny to undergo an imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than nine months and not more than three years.

After serving twenty months in prison he was, March 18, 1911, paroled by order of Your Excellency in pursuance of a recommendation of the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary endorsed by the Board of Pardons, as provided in the Act of Assembly in such case made and provided.

On January 3, 1912, the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary recommended that the said Miller be given his final discharge, stating in their recommendation the following: "For the reason that he has reported regularly for ten months, and by straight forward conduct while on parole has given evidence that he can and will remain a good citizen. His maximum term expires on July 7th, 1912. His present address is at No. 241 So. 15th Street, Philadelphia."

It appearing that the provisions of the Act of Assembly bearing upon this subject have been fully complied with, and that all the rules, both of the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern Penitentiary and of the Board of Pardons, have been observed, we recommend that the action of the Board of Inspectors be approved, and that for the reasons assigned by the said Board a pardon and order for final discharge be now granted the said Eugene Miller.

Nos. 1920—1912.

Harrisburg, April 17, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Schuylkill, to No. 1407, September Sessions, 1909, William E. Grow was indicted on a charge of making false returns as an election officer; in the same Court, to No. 1409, September Sessions, 1909, William J. Jones was indicted on a similar charge. On March 11, 1910, verdicts of guilty were rendered in each case. Apparently the cases were tried together. On April 18, 1910, the Court sentenced each defendant to pay a fine of One Dollar, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Schuylkill County Prison for the term of three years, and be disfranchised for four years. By reason of motions for revocation or modification of sentence, new trials and appeals to the higher Court, neither of the defendants entered upon his term of actual imprisonment until about four months ago.

On April 8, 1912, applications for pardon were filed. These applications were heard at our meeting of to-day. As the charges in each case grew out of the same transaction, and the reasons urged in support of the applications are identical, the two applications were argued and considered together. Upon due consideration of the cases, we are of the opinion that under the circumstances, as detailed to us, we are warranted in recommending favorable action on the applications, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted to each of the applicants.

The reason advanced in support of these applications is substantially that on account of the peculiar circumstances existing at the time of the hearing of the cases in Court, the Defendants did not receive fair trials. In support of this reason there was produced at the hearing, and filed with the Board, the following letter written by the Trial Judge, and endorsed by the other two judges of the Court of Schuylkill County:

"Pottsville, Pa., April 8, 1912.

To the Honorable the Members of the Board of Pardons;

Having been informed that a petition is to be presented to you asking for the pardon of William Grow and William Jones, both of whom were convicted in the Schuylkill County Court and sentenced by me for making false returns at the Primary Election held at William Penn Precinct, West Mahanoy Township, June, 1909, I feel it my duty to present to you reasons why both these men should be pardoned.

They were jointly indicted with three others, the five being the full election board. Before trial, they asked for a severance, which, upon consultation with my colleagues, I refused to grant because of the crowded condition of our criminal calendar. In fact, we had called in His Honor Judge McClure, to assist us during that term.

Since their sentence I have learned that they were both anxious to go on the stand and wanted to prove good character, but because of the joint trial it was not deemed advisable for them to do so. I feel that had they been severally tried they would not have been convicted, and, if convicted, their sentence would have been much lighter because of the mitigating circumstances that have developed since their sentence.

Taking all the facts as I know them, I do not hesitate to say that they did not get a fair trial, and therefore earnestly urge your honorable body to grant the prayer of their petition for a pardon.

I have the honor to be
Yours respectfully,
CHARLES N. BRUMM,
Trial Judge.

I cordially endorse the above.

ARTHUR L. SHAY,
Ex. Pres. Judge.

I have no objection to the granting of pardons to these men.

H. O. BECHTEL,
P. J."

A petition signed by 400 citizens of the County, and upwards of 160 letters from residents of the County, endorsing the applications, have also been filed with us.

In view, therefore, of the recommendation of the Judges of the Court, who were thoroughly familiar with all the circumstances and details of the cases, and of the expression of public sentiment as voiced by the petition and letters of citizens, it seems to us that the Board is called upon to accede to the prayer of the petition, and we accordingly recommend that pardons be now granted to each of the applicants, William E. Grow and William J. Jones.

Harrisburg, March 20, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Armstrong, to Nos. 25 to 31 inclusive December Sessions 1910, Peter Keltonik entered pleas of nole contendere to indictments charging him with False Pretense and Embezzlement. He was sentenced, December 5, 1910, in the aggregate to pay fines of fifteen hundred dollars, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than thirty-six months and not more than twelve years.

An application for pardon was filed March 12, 1912. We heard the case at our meeting to-day, and from information furnished us we are persuaded that clemency should be shown the prisoner, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Peter Keltonik.

The applicant is a man about twenty-nine years of age. He is by birth a Hungarian. He came to this country when about fourteen years old. He is now a citizen. He is well educated, and has good social standing. He is an accomplished musician, but events proved that he had not much practical business capacity.

In some way he became acquainted with a fellow countryman, J. R. Pacovsky, who, is seems, was a great schemer and a keen and shrewd operator. Keltonik's brother, Stephen Keltonik, was a man of considerable prominence in the Western part of the State; was well known among the foreign element as a banker of reputation and reliability, and had high standing in the business world. Pacovsky evidently appreciated the value of the name, and he induced Peter Keltonik to go into the banking business with himself under the name P. Keltonik & Co. Peter consented to the plan, and put into the operation all the money he had—some six or eight hundred dollars, Pacovsky furnishing the executive ability. A very nice business was established at Ford City. Pacovsky was the Manager and had sole charge of the business. Keltonik busied himself in other directions, trusting entirely to Pacovsky to manage the affairs of the bank. To outward appearances the bank flourished, but in the end the crash came. It was found that the concern was insolvent and heavily involved. Informations were laid against the partners. Keltonik realized that as a partner he was liable for the wrong doing of the other partner in the conduct of the business, and did not contest the prosecutions. Pleas of nole contendere were entered by each partner, and each received the same sentence.

The ground on which this application for Keltonik's pardon is based is substantially that the applicant was only technically guilty, and that the sentence imposed on him was too severe. We believe that this ground is well taken. Keltonik actually was in ignorance of the affairs of the bank. He profited nothing whatever by the fraudulent acts of his partner, and he lost all his own money. He was not guilty of the positive commission of any guilty act, and the imprisonment of more than fifteen months and its attached degredation and disgrace have been sufficient punishment for his acts of omission

Under these conditions therefore we recommend that a pardon be granted Peter Keltonik.

Respectfully submitted,

JNO. M. REYNOLDS,
Lieutenant Governor.

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, April 17, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Lawrence, to No. 1, June Term, 1903, Robert Nugent was indicted on a charge of murder, and upon was allowed, and the application for pardon was again second degree. On June 16, 1903, the said defendant was sentenced by the Court to pay a fine of One Dollar, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for the term of 20 years. At the June meeting of the Board of Pardons last year, an application for pardon of this defendant was urged, and the application was then refused. Recently an application for rehearing was presented, which June 12, 1903, was returned as guilty of murder in the taken up and heard at our meeting of to-day. Upon giving the matter due consideration, and being now persuaded that the reasons assigned are meritorious, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Robert Nugent.

Nugent is a man of about 40 years of age. He is married, and is the father of a daughter now agout twelve years old. On the evening of March 8, 1903, he, with his family, took passage on a railroad train, in the City of New Castle, with the intention of going to Coraopolis, Allegheny County, where they intended making their future home. For several weeks prior to this day, Nugent had been drinking very heavily, and at the time of his departure was grossly intoxicated. While on the train it was noticed that he was acting foolishly, although not boisterous or disorderly. At new Castle Junction there was a change of cars. Nugent's wife then admonished him and said "Don't be making a fool of me down here." Nugent then started out on the platform, and a short distance from the station he met a man by the name of Ferguson, and without any provocation, without any knowledge of Mr. Ferguson, and without ever having seen him before, walked up to him and shot him down, Ferguson dying instantly. Ferguson had been a passenger on the train to New Castle Junction, but occupied a seat in the day coach, while Nugent rode in the smoking car. There was no difficulty between Ferguson and Nugent, either on the train, or immediately preceding the shooting. The evidence in the case was positive that they were absolute strangers to each other; no motive was alleged, nor could one be inferred. Immediately after the shooting Nugent was apprehended by one of the train crews, staggering along the railroad track, and was taken into custody and delivered to the officers. He has no recollection of the occurrence and can give no explanation of his act.

The reasons alleged for pardon are in substance that there was no motive proven, nor could one be inferred from the evidence. That is was proven by the witnesses of the Commonwealth that an abnormal mental condition prevailed in the mind of petitioner by reason of gross intoxication, which rendered him incapable of forming a deliberate and premeditated intention to commit the crime; and that under all the evidence and circumstances the defendant has been sufficiently punished and the ends of justice fully satisfied.

The applicant has been in confinement for almost nine years. He had never been convicted of any crime previous to this homicide. Letters from a number of people who knew him and who are familiar with the details of his unfortunate experience ask our favorable consideration of his application. Judge W. D. Wallace, who presided at the trial, on being served with notice of this application, endorsed thereon: "I hereby accept notice as above stated, and believing that further imprisonment would result in no special good, join in the petition."

Charles E. Mehard, the District Attorney who tried the case, writes to the Board as follows:

"I was District Attorney for Lawrence County at the time Robert Nugent was tried and convicted of murder in the second degree, and I will say that I think he had a fair trial and was justly convicted, yet the reasons assigned for his pardon have considerable virtue in them.

There is no question about his being in a grossly intoxicated condition at the time he left New Castle to go to New Castle Junction where the crime was committed, and the man who was killed was a total stranger to Nugent, which would indicate that at least previous to that time there could not have been any ill will and an absence of motive.

The last reason, however, appeals to me more than the others, 'that he has been sufficiently punished,' and under all the circumstances I feel that I can join with the petition in asking for the pardon of Robert Nugent.

Very respectfully,

CHAS. E. MEHARD."

It thus appearing that the Commonwealth's officers, as well as many others who have knowledge of the facts, are convinced of the validity and strength of the application, it seems to us that the Board is justified in acting along the line of their endorsement. We, therefore, for the reasons stated, recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Robert Nugent.

Harrisburg, April 17, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Mifflin, to No. 2, November Term, 1898, Joseph Morrison was indicted on a charge of murder. On January 21, 1899, a verdict of murder in the first degree was rendered. On May 22, 1899, the defendant was sentenced to be hanged. On February 23, 1900, upon application duly filed with the Board of Pardons, commutation of death sentence was recommended, and commutation issued accordingly.

On March 20, 1912, an application for pardon was filed, which was heard at our meeting of to-day. From all that has been shown to us with regard to the case, we are led to the conclusion that the application should be granted, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Joseph Morrison.

Morrison is a man about 48 years old. At the time of the perpetration of the homicide, August 18, 1898, he must have been about 33 or 34 years of age. He is married, and is the father of seven children. He has been in confinement about 13 years and 8 months. By occupation he is a farmer. The victim of the crime with which he is charged was a man by the name of Harry Dougherty, with whom the defendant had no previous acquaintance at all much less any feelings of hostility or ill will.

On the morning of August 18, 1898, Morrison left his home with the intention of attending a picnic somewhere in the neighborhood. On the way he started in to drinking. He came to Belleville, a village in Mifflin County, and there at the hotel stable talked with some of his acquaintances about playing a game of poker. Dougherty happened to hear the talk, and soon got into the conversation with him, stating that he would not play poker with him, but that he would match dollars. Although these two had had no previous acquaintance and were total strangers they started into matching dollars. Very soon a dispute arose, when Morrison entered the stable, Dougherty seized him by the throat and tried to get back the dollar that Morrison had won on the match. Dougherty is said to have been a large and powerful man, while Morrison was a man of much smaller stature and weight. Morrison resisted Dougherty's assault, when the latter struck him a hard blow, knocking him some ten or twelve feet away. Morrison got up as soon as he could, and approached towards Dougherty, who again struck him. Morrison got from his pocket his pocket knife, and making a lunge at Dougherty cut him in the upper part of the leg, striking the femeral artery, from which wound Dougherty bled to death, as there was no surgeon available.

The reasons advanced in favor of this application for clemency are substantially that the offense was not a deliberate, premeditated, or unprovoked murder; that there was not an intention of killing, and that the homicide was not of higher degree than manslaughter or murder in the second degree at most, and that therefore the imprisonment of more than thirteen years has been an expiation of the crime.

From statements made at the hearing, and form an examination of the record before us, and after giving the application careful consideration, we feel that the reasons assigned are sufficient to sustain their approval by the Board, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Joseph Morrison.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 270, January Term, 1910, James C. Gordon was indicted on a charge of murder, and upon January 27, 1910, with permission of the Court entered a plea of guilty of manslaughter; on January 29, 1910, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than three years and not more than twelve years.

On March 6, 1912, an application for his pardon was filed, and the case was heard at our March meeting, but has been held under advisement since that time. We now assent to the allowance of the application and recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, James C. Gordon.

Gordon is a man of about 40 years of age, a miner by occupation; married, with wife and two children living. The homicide with which he is charged, took place in the Borough of Yatesville, Luzerne County, on the evening of the 31st of December, 1909. The victim was his mother-in-law, Mrs. Lydia Newinger. There had been an estrangement between Gordon and his wife. On the evening mentioned he called at the house of Mrs. Newinger, where his wife was living for the purpose of inducing his wife to live with him again. He was in an intoxicated condition. Some trouble arose then and there, and, from what is said to have been a toy pistol which he had in his possession, he fired a shot which grazed Mrs. Newinger's arm, leaving scarcely any trace of a wound. He fired this shot over his shoulder while being pushed out of the house. Mrs. Newinger died soon afterwards. The Defendant made no attempt to escape. The deceased woman had been treated for a period of two years for heart disease. At the trial a plea of not guilty was entered, which was changed to that of guilty of manslaughter.

The application for pardon is based on the ground that the death was not caused by the wound, and that the prisoner has been sufficiently punished. In support of the application there have been produced letters from the District Attorney who prosecuted, and from the Judge who tried the Defendant.

The District Attorney writes as follows, after stating the facts of the case:

There was no evidence that Gordon intended to kill his mother-in-law, but fired the shot over his shoulder as he was being pushed out of the building. His mother-in-law, who had a weak heart, apparently died from fright.

When we sat down to try the case we were somewhat embarrassed in the proof of the cause of death, but Gordon in a spirit of remorse for his conduct in having gone to this home in a drunken condition agreed to enter a plea of guilty to the manslaughter count in the indictment. He was sentenced to a minimum term of three years and a maximum term of twelve years in the Eastern Penitentiary.

Notice has been given me that an application is about to be made for his pardon and I have been asked to recommend the same.

Prior to this trouble Gordon had borne a good reputation in the community where he lived, his sole trouble being a weakness for drink, which has undoubtedly aggravated because of his family troubles. The outcome of his visit to the home of his mother-in-law was most unfortunate, but under all the circumstances of the case I have no hesitation in saying that I believe Gordon has been sufficiently punished for his conduct on that day.

I do not believe the interests of justice in this community will in anywise be prejudiced by his pardon, and I respectfully join in his prayer that mercy be extended to him and a pardon granted.

Very respectfully yours,

EVAN C. JONES."

Judge Ferris, who tried the case, but who is now on the bench, in replying to a letter from the Board as to his views of the case, writes under the date of April 23, 1912 as follows:

"I have your letter of yesterday relating to the application for pardon of James C. Gordon who was sentenced by me January 29, 1910, on a plea of guilty of the crime of manslaughter. The sentence being to pay a fine of $500 and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than three years and not more than twelve years. This seemed at the time to be a proper sentence under the circumstances. I believe the purport of the evidence produced and statements of counsel made at the time of the sentence was to the effect that Gordon being somewhat under the influence of liquor engaged in a quarrel with another man; the deceased woman being present; that he in the course of the quarrel drew a small revolver and fired a shot which inflicted upon the woman an apparently slight wound, but that she died shortly afterwards not so much from the effect of the wound itself, but principally by reason of the shock to her system. There was no trial, and the evidence was produced merely for the information of the judge in imposing the sentence. I have been informed since that the deceased was an aged woman, and that if the case had gone to trial, medical testimony could have been produced showing that the immediate cause of her death was heart failure, and that she had been suffering from heart disease for some time previously.

I know nothing more about the case than I have here stated, and would deem the pardoning of this man to be a proper exercise of clemency, and would not oppose it, as I am satisfied that the man did not intend to kill this woman."

From these letters it is apparent to us that the demands of justice have been met by the almost 28 months of imprisonment of the Defendant. We, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, James C. Gordon.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Montgomery, to No. 29, June Term, 1911, James W. Mundell was, October 11, 1911, convicted on a charge of aggravated assault, and thereupon, on the same day, was sentenced to pay a fine of Ten Dollars, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Montgomery County Prison for one year. In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the same county, to No. 29-1, June Sessions, 1911, on the same day the Defendant was convicted on a charge of carrying concealed deadly weapons, and was sentenced to pay a fine of Ten Dollars, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Montgomery County Prison for the term of one year; this sentence running concurrent with the above mentioned.

On April 29, 1912, an application for pardon was duly filed, and the same was heard at our meeting of today. The case having been fully considered, we are of the opinion that it is proper to favor the application; and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, James W. Mundell.

Mundell is a colored man about 26 years of age. He is married but has no children. He has been employed as butler in the family of Dr. J. A. Willson, of Rosemont. He had the reputation of being a quiet, sober, industrious man, but, unfortunately, one afternoon, in company with a companion named Brown, he indulged in drinking, an unusual occurence for him, and which brought about his trouble. On the afternoon in question, his employer, intending being away from home over night, left Mundell in charge of the house, giving into his possession a revolver as a means of defense against tramps, whose depredations had been annoying the neighborhood. Mundell not being accustomed to the use of liquor, the drinking that afternoon affected him greatly, so that after having separated from his friend Brown and upon meeting him later on, for some reason, he discharged the revolver towards his companion, the ball striking Brown in the fleshy part of the arm, but not inflicting any serious injury. Mundell was arrested, and afterwards tried, but Brown did not appear against him. However, he was convicted on a charge of aggravated asssault, although indicted for the more serious charge of assault with intent to kill and sentenced as above.

Dr. Willson, Mundell's employer, writes to the Board speaking of Mundell in the highest terms, and expressing a desire to have him in his employ again, and asking for his release. We have other letters to the effect of Mundell's previous good character.

J. B. Larzelere, Esq., the Distrist Attorney who tried the case, writes the Board as follows:

"The Honorable the Board of Pardons of Pennsylvania, Gentlemen:—

* * * * *

I believe the applicant's predicament was due entirely to the fact that he had indulged in too much liquor, and that his mind was not in condition to form a willful design to injure the person whom he shot.

I understand the victim, Brown, had no desire to appear against Mundell, and, in fact, our officers were unable to locate him for the purpose of serving him with subpoena to appear at the trial; my belief being that he intentionally absented himself in order that he might escape the necessity of testifying against his friend.

I am of the opinion that Mundell has been sufficiently punished for his offense, and that the ends of justice will be properly subserved by your Board recommending Executive Clemency.

Judge Swartz has stated that he has no objection to my writing to your Board such letter as I see fit, from which I gather that he has no objection to the granting of a pardon."

It would seem, therefore, that the ends of justice have been met by the imprisonment which the applicant has been subjected to up to this time, and, in view of the endorsements of the application to which we have alluded, we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, James W. Mundell.

Harrisburg, May 15, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Lancaster, No. 1, September Term, 1909, on an indictment charging her with murder, Mabel Dommel was returned as guilty of murder in the second degree, with recommendation to the mercy of the Court.

She was thereupon, September 17, 1909, sentenced by the Court to undergo an imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a period of not less than five years nor more than twenty years.

On April 23, 1912, an application for her pardon was duly filed. This application was given a hearing at our meeting to-day, and, after a careful consideration of all the aspects of the case as brought out at the hearing, we deem this a proper case for the intervention of Executive Clemency, and we, therefore, recommend that the petition on behalf of the applicant be granted.

The applicant is a young woman now between 24 and 25 years of age. She was left an orphan at an early age, and as she grew up, was deprived of parental care and did not enjoy the benefits of careful home training. The crime with which she was charged was the killing of her own infant child, a ten weeks old baby. It appears that being thrown on her own resources for a living she found the possession of the child, (which, it was stated, was an illegitimate,) a hindrance, and she herself being rather weak mentally had not the will power to resist the suggestion of getting rid of the baby. She administered a dose of laudanum, or soothing syrup, to the baby from the effects of which it died. She made no special effort to conceal the crime, and her conviction followed as a matter of course. The sentence of the Court cannot be considered an unreasonable one in the light of giving a warning to others and a proper protection of society.

Since the imprisonment of this applicant certain charitable persons have become very much interested in her case, have brought to bear upon her good influences, and have sought toawaken in her a desire for leading a proper life. They have been so far successful in their humane endeavors, and have sufficient confidence in the results of their efforts, that there were presented to us offers by responsible persons that if a pardon is granted to her, they would take the woman into their own homes, give her employment, look after her welfare, and be accountable for her right living in the future. We have no reason to doubt the sincerity of these offers, and, inasmuch as more than one-half of the minimum term of imprisonment has been served, it seems to us that it will be greatly to the advantage of this unfortunate woman to have her placed under good and moral surroundings outside of prison, and we believe that her release now will more likely insure her complete reformation and subsequent proper living than will the serving of two or more years additional imprisonment.

Therefore, in view of all the conditions attending this application as brought out at the hearing, and out of feelings of mercy, we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Mabel Dommel.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Lawrence, to No. 3, June Term, 1908, Samuel Brown was convicted on a charge of burglary, and on June 17, 1908, was sentenced to pay a fine of Five Dollars, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for eight years.

On May 1, 1912, an application for pardon was duly filed. After hearing the case at our meeting to-day, we reached the conclusion that the application should be allowed, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Samuel Brown.

Brown is a young colored man, about 24 years of age. He was employed in the family of Hon. William M. Brown, in the City of New Castle, as a servant and butler. In April 1908, the family of his employer was away from the City for a period of time, and some time in the later part of the month, this applicant received a leter from Mrs. Brown, telling him to go to the house and make certain preparations for the family's return. The applicant went to the house as directed, but, unfortunately for him, he took with him a number of companions. This crowd of young men spent the evening at the house, and undertook to enjoy themselves in their own way. Among other things they did, they went to the wine cellar and helped themselves to the liquor they found there. Their action attracted the attention of the police, who dispersed the crowd, and arrested young Brown. He was afterwards tried, and convicted as above stated. The other young men, who perhaps were the really guilty parties, it appears, were not proceeded against.

The grounds of this application are that the Defendant was not in reality guilty of a higher crime than larceny, and, that he has already served the maximum sentence for that offense; that the sentence imposed was excessive, and that the Defendant has been sufficiently punished in any event.

The application is supported by a request from Hon. William M. Brown, whose property was interfered with, recommending that we grant the pardon. Also by Judge Porter, who sentenced the prisoner, and by the District Attorney, who tried the case. Judge Porter's letter is in the following terms:

"New Castle, Pa., April 24, 1912.
To the Honorable, the Board of Pardons.
Gentlemen:—I have been informed that Samuel Brown is making an application for pardon, and of his case I desire to say that I believe he has been sufficiently punished, and would recommend his pardon.

Yours respectfully,
WILLIAM E. PORTER."

The District Attorney closes his letter with the following expression of opinion:

"The sentence of eight years imprisonment I am inclined to believe was excessive, and in view of the nature of the offense, and the previous good record of the defendant, it would seem to me that he has served sufficient time, and the ends of justice would be met by granting him a pardon.

Very respectfully,
CHAS. H. YOUNG."

With these letters on our record, and from information we gathered at the hearing, we feel that this case should receive our favorable action, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Samuel Brown.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Bucks, to Nos. 55, 56 and 57, February Sessions, 1908, J. Frank Afflerbach was indicted on charges or forgery and uttering forged instruments. Waiving the finding of bills by the Grand Jury, the Defendant, on Feburary 24, 1908, entered pleas of guilty. He was thereupon, February 25, 1908, sentenced to pay a fine of One Dollar in each case, the costs, and undergo an aggregate imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary of eleven years.

On April 30, 1912, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The case was fully heard and considered at the meeting held to-day, with the result that it is the opinion of the Board that the application merits favorable action. We, therefore, recommend that the prayer of the petition be granted, and that a pardon be awarded the applicant, J. Frank Afflerbach.

The applicant is a man 42 years old. He is married, his wife and two children are living. His aged parents are also living. He has been engaged in business in the Borough of Perkasie, and other parts of Bucks County, and prior to his yielding to the temptation which landed him in prison on the charges above mentioned, he had enjoyed an excellent reputation. There is no doubt, however, of his guilt as to the charges in the indictment, which was the forging of certain school bonds, he being the President of the School District of the Borough of Perkasie.

Among the reasons for clemency laid in the application are, the fact that this is the applicant's first and only criminal offense. The severity of the sentence, in view of the applicant's full confession and efforts at restitution; the sufficiency of the punishment, and the fortitude of the prisoner in its endurance; the fact that the provision has been made for his immediate employment if released; the destitute condition of his family; the favorable recommendation of the Trial Judge, and the endorsement of the application by a large number of the very best citizens of his neighborhood, including various officials, and the prosecutors in the several cases.

The letter of Judge Stout, who presided at the trial, is as follows:

"In the matter of the application for pardon of J. Frank Afflerbach.

To the Board of Pardons.

Gentlemen:—The applicant pleaded guilty of forgery, and was sentenced to a term of eleven years in the Eastern Penitentiary. The circumstances demanded a severe penalty. Subsequent reflection, however, convinced me a shorter term of imprisonment would have met the ends of justice. I am satisfied that he has paid the penalty of his offense by his imprisonment by this time, and public justice has been vindicated. I recommend his pardon.

MAHLON H. STOUT,
Trial Judge, then Prest. Judge, 7th Jud. Dist. of Penna."

Doylestown, Pa.,
April 27, 1912.

The present Judge, Hon. William C. Ryan, who was the District Attorney in the prosecution of the case in accepting service of notice of the application, says:

"I have no objection to offer to the granting of the pardon."

A reading of these letters and of the many others on file, which voice the same sentiment, leads us to the belief that the reasons offered in support of the application are valid and worthy of our adoption. We, therefore, recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, J. Frank Afflerbach.

No. 29—1912.

Harrisburg, May 15, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Chester, at April Term 1909, to wit, April 19, 1909, James Rooney, waiving the finding of Bills by the Grand Jury, entered pleas of Guilty on three separate Indictments each charging him with the crime of Burglary; and thereupon was on that day sentenced in the aggregate to pay fine of sixty dollars, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of twenty-five years.

On April 30, 1912, an application for pardon was duly filed, which was heard and considered at our meeting of this day; and after due deliberation it was decided by us that the application is well grounded, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be issued the applicant, James Rooney.

Rooney is now about twenty-two years of age having been only nineteen at the time of his incarceration. He had never been in any trouble of a criminal character prior to the lapses for which he is now undergoing punishment. His plea of guilt was entered under the hope of receiving a moderate sentence, although it is not alleged that any promise to the effect was held out to him. As a matter of fact he was not represented by counsel at the time.

The main reason advanced for clemency is in the nature of a plea for mercy by reason of the severity of the sentence imposed. When it is considered that this was Rooney's first offense it cannot be denied that the imposition of a sentence of a quarter of a century upon a young man of his age is a pretty hard blow, and an appeal for mercy is well worthy of consideration.

Rooney did not have a criminal record, and it has been shown to our satisfaction that the punishment already experienced by him has been an adequate penalty for his violation of the law. Moreover, petitions, leters and recommendations on file from persons familiar with the facts bearing on the application give strong support to his appeal for relief. We are assured that if the prisoner is released he will be furnished useful employment and will be given encouragement to lead a proper life, and thus in all probability will become a worthy citizen. During his imprisonment in the Penitentiary he has shown an apitude for study and self-improvement, and has made very satisfactory progress along these lines.

In view, therefore, of all that has been brought to our attention fovoring this application we are of the opinion that much more good will result to the applicant and to society in general by relieving the applicant of further imprisonment than could be hoped for by keeping him in continued confinement, especially as the applicant has now served more than three years of his term, and we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, James Rooney.

Harrisburg, May 15, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Delaware, at the September Term 1902, on an indictment charging him with murder, David Murdie was, September 27, 1902, returned by the jury as guilty of murder in the second degree. On the eighth day of December, 1902, the said defendant was sentenced by the Court to undergo an imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a period of twenty years from that date.

In the year 1910, after having served more than eight years of his term, Murdie applied for a pardon, which application upon due consideration by the Board of Pardons, was, on December 21, 1910, refused. In March 1912, on due application a motion for re-hearing was allowed, and at our meeting of this day the application for pardon was again heard, and the same given due and careful consideration. The Board now being of the opinion that Executive Clemency may properly be extended to this petitioner we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, David Murdie.

Murdie is now a man of about thirty-four years of age. He is unmarried; his parents are living, and he has several sisters. His family connection is good. The crime with which he was charged took place in the City of Chester on March 26, 1902. The victim of the homicide was a man by the name of Harvey Green, who enducted a gambling place in that City. At this resort Murdie for several weeks prior to the date mentioned was an almost constant attendant, as he was at that time out of employment. He frequently slept there, and was on very intimate terms with the proprietor. There was no evidence in the case which showed that the friendly relations between these two men was ever disturbed, much less was any motive for murder fastened on Murdie.

Murdie, with Green and three or four other kindred spirits spent the whole of the night of the 25th of March at this place in play. The game continued until about the middle of the forenoon of the 26th. Green and one of the other men then laid down on the floor of the room and went to sleep. Murdie and the others left the place. Murdie admitted that he returned to the room about one o'clock that day, but finding the two men there still sleeping he left the premises. His movements during the rest of the afternoon appear to have been accounted for. About six or seven o'clock in the evening one of the other men returned to the place, and was unable to get into the room by the ordinary entrance but managed to get in by going around the back way. He lit the lamp. One of the sleeping men then awoke, and the two engaged in a conversation. Green seemed to them to be still slepping, and they discussed the propriety of wakening him. They tried to arouse him, when they discovered that his face was covered with blood. In their excitement they said one to the other that they believed he had been murdered, and they at once gave the alarm. It was found on examination that the man was dead, and that his death evidently had been caused by violence. The body was warm when it was removed from the place about seven o'clock. Murdie was not there at the time of the discovery of the murder. The news of the murded of course soon spread, and he first heard of it while in a hotel or saloon several squares away from the scene. He had been at this hotel some time immediately prior to hearing the news of the murder. With the proprietor of the hotel he then walked up to the place where the murder had occured and saw the body of the dead man removed. He then returned to the hotel, where he was arrested about 8.45 o'clock that night charged with the commission of the crime.

The evidence on which the conviction of Murdie was founded was entirely of a circumstantial character, viz: the presence of the defendant during the day in the room where the act of violence took place, and the finding on his clothing of stains which were pronounced on examination to have been made by mammalian blood. The defendant has all along stoutly and persistently denied his guilt. The sentence imposed was the maximum provided under the law for second degree murder. The prisoner has served nearly one-half of the full term imposed; under the commutation law he has a little more than two years and a-half to serve before he is entitled to release in the ordinary way.

These reasons presented in support of the application for pardon are: The fact that the conviction was had on circumstantial evidence; the weakness of the evidence; the inflamed state of the public mind at the time of the trial; the youth of the applicant, and his previous life; the severity of the sentence; the standing of the applicant's family; the present attitude and sentiment of the community in relation to the application for pardon as shown by the letters and petitions filed with the application; the length of time served. and the conduct of the prisoner during his confinment. All of these points were elucidated at the hearing.

In view of the state of the case as covered by this combination of reasons, especially with relation to the length of the imprisonment, the complete reformaton of the prisoner, the proposed opportunities that will be given him to become a useful member of society, and the drift of public sentiment as disclosed by the letters and recommendations on file, we are persuaded that in favoring this application we will be acting for the best interest of all concerned, and that the cause of justice will not be prejudiced.

We therefore recommend that a pardon be awarded the applicant, David Murdie.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Lycoming, to September Term, 1909, on the 6th day of August, 1909, Walter Alexander was sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than nine months and not more than three years, on a conviction for the crime of larceny.

On October 3, 1910, after having served thirteen months he was, on the recommendation of the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary, paroled under the Act of 1909. His maximum term of imprisonment will expire on August 6, 1912.

Under date of April 9, 1912. the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary recommended that the prisoner be given his final discharge on June first, 1912. assigning as a reason "that he has reported regularly for eighteen months, and by straightforward conduct while on parole has given evidence that he can and will remain a good citizen."

We gave the case consideration at our meeting to-day. We find that all the provisions of the Act of Assembly, and of the Rules of the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern Penitentiary, and of the Rules of our own Board have been complied with in regard to the application for the pardon of this paroled convict. Therefore, on the recommendation of the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern Penitentiary, and for the reasons assigned by them, we recommend that their action in the premises be approved, and that a pardon be awarded the said Walter Alexander, to be effective on June 1, 1912.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Luzerne to No. 209, January Sessions, 1912, Clara Marshall entered a plea of Guilty on an indictment charging her with keeping a bawdy house; she was thereupon, on April 12, 1912, sentenced to pay a fine of $500, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of six months.

On June 4, 1912, an application for pardon was duly filed, which came before us for hearing at our meeting of to-day. After a careful consideration of the case we are of the opinion that it would be proper to extend clemency to the petitioner, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Clara Marshall.

Mrs. Marshall is a widow, nearly sixty years of age. She is one of a score or more of persons who were engaged in business in the "tenderloin" district of the City of Wilkes-Barre during the past few years. In the month of December of last year there was a cleaning up of this district by the city authorities, but out of the large number of keepers of unlawful houses Mrs. Marshall was the only one who was arrested and called upon to take punishment for violation of law.

From all that has been shown to us with reference to this case, and from the fact that the authorities tacitly favor the application and that very many of the prominent and reputable citizens of the county, some of them living in the immediate neighborhood where Mrs. Marshall lived, openly endorse and recommend her plea for clemency, as appears from their letters and requests on file with us, and the further fact that several physicians have certified to us that she is in a critical condition of health by reason of the presence of gall stones for which an immediate operation is necesssary, which operation cannot be performed unless she is released from confinement. and taking into account the statement that she had alreday paid a fine of fifty dollars and costs under the City Ordinance, and has undergone the ignominy of actual imprisonment for more than a month, it seems to us that there has been sufficient punishment experienced by the applicant, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted her.

Harrisburg, June 19, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Lackawanna, to No. 11, October Term, 1905, William J. Neiger was, on April 21, 1906, convicted of murder in the second degree, and was then sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of eighteen years.

On June 6, 1911, an application for pardon was filed, which application was, on hearing, then refused. An application for rehearing was mode at our May meeting of this year, and we allowed the application. At our present June meeting the case was again heard and fully considered. We are now of the opinion that the ends of justice have been reached in regard to this prisoner, and we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, William J, Neiger.

Neiger is a man now nearly 42 years old. He is married, and his wife is living. He is the father of a daughter was is now about 15 years old. Before his conviction, he had been employed as clerk and coal inspector in the service of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company at Taylor. He had never been before accused of any crime, and his reputation was good.

Although Neiger was not an habitual drinking man, he indulged in occasional sprees, and it is a fact that the homicide with which he is charged was perpetrated by him while he was in a state of gross intoxication. Another fact that appears on the record is that some three years before the commission of this crime, Neiger was injured about the head in a runaway accident, from which time on he seemed to lose mental control of his actions when under the influence of intoxicants, even when the indulgence was to a very light extent.

The felony with which Neiker is charged was the murder of Jacob Yaksoniak, whom he shot and killed in the latter's bar room during a drunken brawl on August 5, 1905. An investigation at the time by the authorities failed to disclose any intelligent motive for this killing. The commission of the crime was clearly the irrational act of a drunken man.

The reasons stated as the ground of the application for pardon are:

The ends of justice have been adequately served by the nearly seven year imprisonment which petitioner has suffered.

No public interest can be safeguarded or secured to the community by a longer continuance of this imprisonment, as petitioner is in no sense vicious or of the criminal class.

Petitioner has already served altogether nearly two years more than the minimum sentence fixed by the Act of May 10, 1909, for the offense which he committed, and would have been eligible for parole under its terms; his wife, and his daughter now approaching womanhood, need his support and protection; his former position awaits him; and the sentiment of the community is strongly in favor of his release.

These reasons are well fortified by the record of the case; letters from a great number of persons of influence and standing in the community are on file with us endorsing the application. The District Attorney, who prosecuted the case, says in closing his letter to the Board:

"Considering all the circumstances surrounding this unfortunate affair, I am led to the opinion that Mr. Neiger has been sufficiently punished. I therefore unhesitatingly recommend his pardon."

The Judge, who tried the case but is now off the bench, says:

"He belongs to a very reputable family and has a wife and young daughter still living in this County. My information is that his conduct has been most exemplary since his incarceration in the Penitentiary. In view of the fact that the law relating to sentences for murder in the second degree has, since his sentence, been changed and that he has now served the minimum time required under the present statute, I feel justified in recommending his pardon."

Richard P. Thomas, Forman of the Pyne Mines, says, in his letter:

"I am sure this unfortunate affair was the result of a drunken delirium of a man unaccustomed to intoxication. The man is in no sense a criminal, and in fact is one of the kindest and most sincere men I ever knew. I trust that he may be pardoned and returned to his family, confidently believing that he would round out his days with an honest, useful life.

I am employed as mine forman for the D. L. & W. Company, and, should a pardon be granted to him, will place him in his old position the day he is ready to go to work."

On the strength of testimonials of this character, we cannot help but admit the reasons laid are well founded. We, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, William J. Neiger.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Bucks, to No, 30, February Sessions, 1909, David Warner and Charles Abrams were, on the 26th day of February, 1909, convicted on an indictment containing five counts, charging burgulary, felonious entry, horse stealing, larceny, and receiving stolen goods; and on the same day were sentenced each to pay a fine of $50, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of six years.

On June 4, 1912, an application for the pardon of Warner was duly filed, which was heard and considered at our meeting of to-day. Upon carefully reviewing the matters laid before us at our hearing with reference to this case, we are of the opinion that clemency may, in fairness to the interests of justice, be shown the petitioner, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, David Warner.

Warner, who in his application says that his name is Weiner, although indicted as Warner, is a young man of about 24 years of age. He is a foreigner, having been in this country only a short time. His home here, so far as he has a home, is Baltimore, Md., where his invalid and destitute sister resides. The Defendant at the time of his arest and trial had a very limited knowledge of the English language, and had trouble in making himself understood, to which fact he attributes his hasty conviction.

On February 17, 1909, a barn in Bucks County was entered, and two horses, a wagon and harness were stolen. Soon afterwards these stolen articles were found in the possession of Warner and Abrams. The only proof of their being guilty of the stealing was the possession of the stolen goods. Their explanation of this possession was not believed by the jury, or possibly was not understood. They asserted that they had no part in the felony, and denied that they stole the horse and wagon, and said that the same was put into their charge by a third party, who was not apprehended. This applicant has all along denied his guilt. Nothing is known of his previous character or record. It has been shown to us that his sister in Baltimore is dependent upon him for support. We have the assurance that if he is pardoned, he will at once go to Baltimore and devote himself to the care and support of this sister.

Upon the conditions shown, and in the absence of any protest by the authorities, and with the thought that the more than three years imprisonment in the Penitentiary has been a sufficient punishment to the Defendant, we think that the release of this prisoner may be favorably considered without prejudice to the public. We, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, David Warner.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Cumberland, to No. 49, September Sessions, 1909, James Alexander, together with Dudley Miller, was indicted for larceny, receiving stolen goods, and horse stealing. Miller pleaded guilty. Alexander was convicted on the first and third counts in the indictment, and, on September 26, 1909, was sentenced to pay a fine of $50, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penientiary for not less than seven years and six months, and not more than thirty years.

April 23, 1912, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The application was heard at the May meeting of the Board, and was then held under advisement. We now recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, James Alexander.

Alexander is a man 29 years of age, a butcher by trade, and not married. He has a criminal record, having served two terms in the Penitentiary. On August 12, 1909, a horse, buggy and harness were stolen in the Borough of Mount Holly, in Cumberland County. Miller pleaded guilty to this larceny. The stolen property was found in Miller's possession in the adjoining Couny of Franklin a short time after the theft. Alexander was in Miller's company when the stolen property was discovered and recovered, but it was not shown that he was in the company of Miller in Cumberland County. Alexander denies complicity in the larceny.

Several reasons are given as the grounds for pardon, but the only ones with which we are concerned are those which substantially aver excessive punishment. In as much as there seems to be some doubt as to Alexander being with miller in Cumberland County, where the larceny was perpetrated and trial had, and as miller, who admitted that he alone stole the horse and buggy, was sentenced to a fine of $10 and imprisonment in the Penitentiary for the indeterminate term of from two years and six months to ten years, we are inclined to look upon Alexander's sentence of three times as great as that of Miller as being rather severe, as set forth in the reasons. Alexander's imprisonment of two years and nine months up to this time would seem to about measure up to an adequate penalty for his offense.

In view, therefore, of this aspect of the case, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, James Alexander.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Schuylkill, to No. 863, June Sessions, 1910, John Burke was convicted on an indictment charging him with conspiracy to make false return as an election officer; and on April 10, 1911, was sentenced to pay a fine of $10, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for two years and six months, and be disfranchsed for four years.

An application for his pardon was duly filed March 7, 1912. The matter was heard at our March meeting, but has been held under advisement until this, our June meeting. After giving the case fair consideraton, we are of the opinion that the application can properly be approved, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, John Burke.

Burke is a young man of about 26 years of age. He is a school teacher by profession, and has never been charged with the commission of any crime other than the offense mentioned. His present trouble arose out of certain irregularities in connection with the primary election in the district of Brownsville, Schuylkill County, in June, 1909.

The ground on which the application for pardon is based is that the sentence was too severe in comparison with sentences imposed by the courts throughout the Commonwealth for similar offences.

The Defendant has been in prison for more than a year. Many letters and requests favoring the application are on file with the papers in the case, and upon a review of the whole matter it has been made to appear to us that the punishment endured has been sufficient, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, John Burke.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Schuylkill, to No. 1420, September Sessions, 1909, Frederick Zimmerman was convicted on an indictment charging him with making false returns as an election officer; on April 18, 1910, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $1.00, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the county prison for the term of five years, and be disfranchised for the period of four years.

On March 7, 1912, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The case was heard at our March meeting, but has been held under advisement until this, our June meeting. After giving the case fair consideration, we are of the opinion that the application can be properly approved, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Frederick Zimmerman.

Zimmerman is a young man about 27 years of age. He is married, and is the father of one child. He has never been charged with any crime except the offense mentioned. This trouble grew out of certain irregularities in connection with the primary election held in the Borough of Shenandoah, in Schuylkill County, in June 1909.

The ground on which the application for pardon is based is that the sentence was too severe in comparison with sentences imposed by the Courts throughout the Commonwealth for similar offenses.

The Defendant has been in prison for more than two years. Many letters and requests favoring the application are on file with the papers in the case, including a petition from the twelve jurymen who sat on the case.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Schuylkill. to No. 1424, Septmeber Sessions, 1909, Michael M. Cuff was convicted on an indictment charging him with making false returns as an election officer. On June 20, 1910, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $1.00, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for four years and six months, and be deprived of the right of franchise for four years.

On March 7, 1912, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The case was heard at our March meeting, but has been held under advisement until this, our June meeting. After giving the case fair consideration, we are of the opinion that the application can be properly approved, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Michael M. Cuff.

Cuff is a young man 26 years of age, by occupation a clerk. He has never been charged with any crime except the offense mentioned. This trouble grew out of certain irregularities in connection with the primary election held in the Borough of Shenandoah, in Schuylkill County, in June, 1909.

The ground on which the application for pardon is based is that the sentence was too severe in comparison with sentences imposed by the courts throughout the Commonwealth for similar offences.

The Defendant has been in prison two years. Many letters and requests favoring the application are on file with the papers in the case, including a petition from the twelve jurymen who sat on the case.

Upon a review of the whole matter, it has been made to appear to us that the punishment endured has been sufficient, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Michael M. Cuff.

Respectfully submitted,

Harrisburg, June 19, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Beaver, No. 1, December Term, 1901, LeRoy Evans, sometimes called Roy Evans, was tried on a charge of murder, and was convicted of murder in the first degree. On February 28, 1902, he was sentenced to be hanged, but, on due application, commutation of death sentence was recommended by the Board of Pardons, May 21, 1902. Commutation was issued accordingly, and the defendant has since been confined in the Western Penitentiary.

On June 7, 1912, an application for his pardon was duly filed. This application was heard and considered at our meeting to-day, with the result that we have decided upon a favorable recommendation of the petition.

Evans is a man now about 34 years of age. He is represented to be a very light colored mulatto. Before his conviction, he was employed as an ordinary day laborer. He was of good reputation, and was not a criminal. The man whom he killed was named McKee, who was the proprietor of a drinking and gambling resort, of rather a bad character and reputation, on the outskirts of the town of Beaver. It is said that McKee, in the conduct of his place, was himself always sober, but was interested in getting those who resorted to his place drunk. On the night of November 24, 1901, Evans, while intoxicated, went to this place. He engaged in a game of cards with McKee. A quarrel arose. Evans was beaten and thrown out of the place. In a rage he went to a nearby house and secured a weapon, and in company with another man, a white man, returned to McKee's place. The quarrel was renewed. It was known that McKee was always armed. In the melee several shots were fired. Evans was beaten into insensibility and dragged from the room; his companion was shot in the leg, and McKee was also shot, from the effects of which he died within a day. Evan's trial occured in the second week of December following, less than a month after the shooting.

The reasons assigned in support of the application for pardon are in substance:

That the defendant had not sufficient time to prepare his defense before the trial of his case; that the jury were subject to an inflamed public sentiment, the result of exparte statements published and circulated throughout the county just before and at the time of the trial;

That at the time of the commission of the crime he was under the influence of liquor, and just before the killing had been knocked down and thrown out of the house by McKee, the man whom he killed; that the killing was done in the heat of passion and rage engendered by the injuries received from McKee.

That under all the facts and circumstances of the case, considering the character of the place where the killing occured, the character of the witnesses relied upon for conviction, and the drinking that was done at the place at and immediately before the killing of McKee, the verdict should not have been more than murder in the second degree.

That applicant has been confined in the Penitentiary for a period of ten years, where he has demeaned himself in a proper manner, and he believes that he has suffered adequate punishment for the aforesaid offense.

Under the conditions attending this case, and considering the more than ten years imprisonment of the applicant, and recognizing the force of the endorsements which come with the application, we fell that it is consistent with the administration of justice that the clemency prayed for be accorded the applicant. We, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, LeRoy Evans.

Respectfully submitted,

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Lehigh, to No. 37, September Sessions, 1911, May Peters was indicted on the charges of Keeping a Disorderly House and Keeping a Bawdy House. A plea of guilty was entered to the charge of Keeping a Bawdy House, and on September 13, 1911, the defendant was sentenced to pay a fine of one thousand dollars, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for the period of two years.

In April last an application for pardon was duly filed in the matter, but the hearing was continued until the May meeting of the Board, when it was argued before us, since which meeting it has been held under advisement until our June meeting of to-day. We have given the application careful consideration, and in view of all that has been brought to our attention we think it would be for the best interests of all concerned that clemency be shown the prisoner, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted May Peters, the applicant.

Mrs. Peters is a married woman about thirty-four years of age. Her husband is living, and also their son, who is a lad about fifteen years of age. The husband and wife were not living together, as we understand, at the time of the arrest of the defendant, nor for some time previous. We are advised that proceedings in divorce have been started in the Court of Lehigh County. The petitioner has been in prison under the sentence more than nine months, almost one-half the time she would be compelled to serve under the provisions of the Commutation Act, provided her prison conduct is good, and it has been represented to us that such conduct has been exemplary. It may be remarked also that the sentence imposed in the case is the extreme penalty allowed by law. Moreover, it transpires that a certain reputable business man of Philadelphia, who is employed with a large public service corporation under a good salary, holds himself ready to marry Mrs. Peters as soon as she is free, through the pending divorce proceedings to enter into another marriage. There is before the Board his written statement to this effect.

This woman having been confined in prison for what would ordinarily be regarded as an adequate term for the offense charged, whereby the dignity of the law has been upheld; and the prospect of her future right living being thus reasonably assured, whereby she will become restored to her normal position as a member of society, we are of the opinion that the pardoning power may consistently favor the application, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, May Peters.

Harrisburg, September, 18, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Philadelphia, to No. 237, June Term, 1895, Alphonzo F. Cutaiar, Jr., (in the indictment called Alphonzo Cutair, Junior,) was, May 26, 1896, convicted on an indictment charging him with murder, and on the 23rd day of June, 1896, was sentenced to be hanged.

On October 29, 1896, an application for commutation was filed, with the Board of Pardons, and on June 24, 1897, commutation was recommended. On May 9, 1903, an application for pardon was filed, and, after hearing, commutation was recommended by the Board December 9, 1903, which recommendation the Governor of the Commonwealth declined to follow. On May 27, 1910, an application for re-hearing was made, but a re-hearing was then denied. On December 11, 1911, another application for re-hearing was duly filed, and such application was allowed; and at the meeting of the Board of February 21, 1912, the case was again heard on its merits by this Board. Since this last mentioned meeting the matter has been held under advisement by the Board.

Having carefully considered the case in all its details as brought to our notice we are now of the opinion that favorable action should be accorded the application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Alphonzo F. Cutaiar, Jr.

Cutaiar is a man now about fifty-one or fifty-two years of age. He was arrested in April 1895, so that he has been in confinement by reason of this charge for about seventeen years and a half. The crime imputed against him was the killing of his Aunt, Mrs. Johanna Logue, wife of "Jimmie" Logue, who himself was a man of then well known criminal notoriety. This alleged felony, it is avered, was committed on the night of February 22, 1879. Cutaiar was then living in a house No. 1250 North Eleventh Street, Philadelphia where he conducted a barber shop. According to the story of the defendant Mrs. Logue came to this house on the afternoon of the day named, after having partaken freely of liquor during the day. She was in an intoxicated condition when she came there that afternoon, but then stated her intenion of going to New York that night. However, during the early part of the evening Cutaiar found her in the kitchen of the house, still in a drunken state. This was about eight o'clock. Fearing for her safety alone in the kitchen near the fire, he helped her upstairs, and put her to bed, fully dressed. In order to prevent her going out of the house in his absence he tied her feet and her hands as she lay in the bed, and then returned to give attention to his barber shop. On his return to this bedroom after closing his shop, about eleven o'clock that night, he found his aunt lying with her head under the bolster, face downward. Upon examination he discovered that she was dead—apparently having smothered or suffocated. By reason of his fright and fear he did not disclose the state of affairs to any one. On the next day, being Sunday, he took up the boards of the kitchen floor, and placed the dead body of his aunt on the ground between the joists, (there was no cellar,) and then replaced the floor boards and the floor covering.

A few days afterward Logue came to the house and inquired about his wife, whose strange disappearance he could not understand. He was informed by Cutaiar, who was in a great dread of Logue's high temper, and who of course feared to tell the truth about his aunt's death, that Mrs. Logue had gone back to New York on the previous Saturday. Logue made an extensive search for his wife, but without avail, and the mystery of her disappearance never was cleared up during his life.

Cutaiar continued living in the Eleventh Street house for some time, and subsequently lived at other places in the city. He went into another business, subsequently married, and became the father of several children, who are now grown.

The Eleventh Street premises were subsequently sold, and in 1893 the owner, in making certain repairs, caused the kitchen floor to be taken up when the bones of the murdered woman were found. Investigation seemed to establish the identity of the person whose remains were thus discovered. They were without doubt those of Mrs. Logue. Naturally Cutaiar was connected with her disappearance. He was arrested, charged with the crime of murder, induced to make statements involving material contradictions, tried for the murder of his aunt, and finally convicted and sentenced.

The reasons set forth in this present application for pardon are the following:

Because a space of sixteen years had elapsed between the alleged disappearance of Johanna Logue and the arrest of this defendant.

Because at the time of the alleged disappearance of Johanna Logue this defendant was only a youth of barely nineteen years of age.

Because there was no motive shown by the Commonwealth for the commission of the alleged crime by this defendant.

Because this defendant was wrongfully and unjustly convicted of murder in the first degree, for the reason that the death of Johanna Logue was accidental.

Because the prisoner has now served a term of imprisonment more than equal to the maximum sentence which could have been imposed upon him had he been convicted of murder in the second degree, making allowance for commutation for good behavior to which the prisoner is entitled.

Because the testimony at the trial of the case showed a reasonable doubt as to murder in the first degree, and the jury should have given the prisoner the benefit of the doubt.

Because this prisoner has heretofore been recommended a pardon by the Honorable Board of Pardons, but in which recommendation the Governor of the Commonwealth refused to concur.

A very great many letters, petitions and recommendations favoring this application have been submitted to the Board. These recommendations come from sources entitled to our utmost respect. Among others who ask for the pardon of Cutaiar on the belief that there was no premeditated and deliberate murder are the brother and sister of Mrs. Logue. Included also in this array of letters is one from Hon. George S. Graham, who was District Attorney at the time of the trial, and who personally conducted the prosecution. In this letter, written under date of January 24, 1912, Mr. Graham says, among other things:

"I was District Attorney at the time of the trial of Cutaiar, and personally conducted the prosecution. * * * * * I pressed for murder in the first degree, and the jury convicted the prisoner on that grade of crime. The attrocious circumstances connected with the concealment of the body helped to give an atmosphere to the case that made everyone at that time accept the verdict as correct.

When reviewing all the facts and evidence in the case it was imposible for me to exclude the thought that I had not proved first degree murder beyond a doubt. Of my own motion, solely because this view impressed itself upon my mind, and with the desire of doing justice to the prisoner, as well as the Commonwealth, I asked the Board of Pardons very shortly after the conviction to commute the prisoner's sentence from death to life imprisonment.

As the offense was not clearly and beyond doubt first degree, then it fell back into the next grade, murder in the second degree. The maximum punishment for murder in the second degree is twenty years imprisonment, which, with the commutation allowed by law, would entitle this man to his liberty at this time or earlier. I would therefore say to the Board as my deliberate judgment, based upon an intimate knowledge of the entire case, that it seems to me the ends of justice have been fully satisfied in this case, and the liberation of this man at this time would be only fair and right."

Upon the ground therefore of the adequacy of the punishment already borne by Cutaiar, which would follow the acceptance of the theory of the lack of proof of first degree murder beyond a doubt, as well as out of respect to the character and number of favorable endorsements of the application, we recommend that a pardon be now granted this applicant, Aphonzo F. Cutaiar, Jr.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Luzerne, to No. 66, April Term, 1909, Mike Maslosky was indicted on the charge of murder. On April 29, 1909 upon the trial of the case he entered a plea of guilty of manslaughter, and on the same day was sentenced to pay a fine of five hundred dollars and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of eight years.

On June 5, 1912, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which was heard at our June meeting, and since then has been held under advisement. At our meeting to-day, after having given the case full consideration, we reached the conclusion that this is a deserving application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Mike Maslosky.

Maslosky is a man now about forty-six or forty-seven years of age. He was a policeman in the Borough of Kingston, Luzerne County, where he had resided for a number of years. In January 1909 there was a marriage celebration among certain Polish residents of that town, on which occasion there was more or less drinking, and consequent disturbance. Maslosky, in the pursuit of his duty, as he viewed it, undertook to quell the disturbance, but was resisted to a certain extent, and thus became mixed up in a fight. In the excitment, and for the purpose of defending himself, he drew his revolver and fired; one of the participants in the melee was shot who afterwards died from the effects of the wound. Maslocky's arrest, trial and conviction, as stated, followed.

The ground on which relief from the sentence is asked is substantially that the alleged crime was committed in the dischargeof his duty, as he saw it, as a police officer, and that having been confined for a period of more than three years he feels that he has been sufficiently punished.

The application is supported by the letters and petitions of a great many residents of the county endorsing the reasons assigned for clemency, and attesting to the previous good character of the applicant. Almost one-half of the full term of imprisonment has been served, and about two-thirds of the commuted time.

In view of the conditions under which the offense charged was committed, and having in mind the three and one-half years imprisonment in the Penitentiary which the defendant has undergone, we are of the belief that the prisoner has been sufficiently punished, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Mike Maslosky.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Mifflin, to No. 3, January Sessions, 1910, J. A. Martin, (named in the indictment as Andy Martin,) was, October 31, 1911, convicted on a charge of selling liquor without license. On December 29, 1911, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the County Jail for six months. An appeal was taken to the Superior Court, which under an order of the Court, operated as a supersedeas, and the imprisonment did not begin until May 11, 1912, shortly before which date the Superior Court had affirmed the judgment of the Court below. On a previous trial of the case, when the defendant was convicted on the same testimony, the sentence of the Court then imposed was an imprisonment of three months in jail. However, on appeal, the Court of Quarter Sessions was reversed in that case and a new venire awarded, and it was on the trial and conviction that followed that the six months term was imposed.

On June 5. 1912, an application for pardon was duly filed. A hearing was given the application at our June meeting, but the matter has been held under advisement until this time. We are of the opinion that the application should now be favored; and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant.

Martin is a man of the age of forty-five years. He is married and his wife and one child constitute his family. He was the agent of the Hagerstown Brewing Company for the purpose of taking orders for their beer. He took such orders in the county of Mifflin, and transmitted the same to the company at Hagerstown, Md. The company there filled the orders, setting aside the goods in packages addresed to the several purchasers in Mifflin County, forwarded the packages by freight to the consignees in care of a man named Wick, who appeared to be their agent for that purpose in Mifflin County, which agent received the packages and delivered them to the customers and collected the price of the beer. It was not shown that Martin at any time delivered any of the goods or accepted or received any money in payment for the same, ecxept in one instance, the testimony with regard to which was not clear.

The reasons advanced in support of this application for pardon are:

That the evidence taken at the trial was not sufficient in volume and quality to overcome the presumption of defendant's innocense.

That even if the defendant is technically guilty, the testimony taken at the trial shows clearly that the defendant did not intend to violate the law.

Defendant is and has been imprisoned—the moral effect has been had.

The District Attorney who conducted the trial has removed from the State, so that his view as to the merit of the application could not be obtained. However, the present District Attorney of the County, who is conversant with all the facts, in his letter to us practically endorses the reasons above stated. He writes the Board as follows, under date of June 4, 1912:

"I have been notified that an application will be made to your Honorable Board on the 19th instant for the pardon of J. A. Martin, convicted and sentenced by the Court of Quarter Sessions of Mifflin County, Pa., for selling liquor without a license.

The evidence in the case, I believe, warrants me in stating that even if the defendant was technically guilty, that he did not violate intentionally the laws of the Commonwealth, and I therefore recommend a favorable consideration of his application."

Under all the circumstances of this case, it seems to us that the imprisonment of more than four months which the applicant has undergone is adequate. The law has been vindicated, and the lesson has been taught. Apparently no further good result can be expected from a longer imprisonment of this defendant. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant J. A. Martin.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of York, on January 10, 1910, Martin Greene, alias E. P. Valentine, alias J. Goldberg, alias J. Greenberg, was sentenced on a conviction for conspiracy and false pretense to undergo an imprisonment in the Eastern State Penitentiary for a term of not less than nine months and not more than three years.

On January 27, 1911, after having served more than a year he was released on parole, the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary having recommended such action to the Executive, which recommendation was approved by the Board of Pardons, and Executive Order is issued accordingly.

On September 6. 1912, the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary further recommended that the said paroled convict "be given his final discharge. for the reason that he has reported regularly for twenty months, and by straightforward conduct while on parole has given evidence that he can and will remain a good citizen. His maximum term expires on January 10, 1913. His present adress is at 305 W. 145th Street, New York, N. Y.''

The said Board further state: "The prisoner has been out on parole since January 27, 1911. He is now engaged as an eye doctor in New York City. has, in every way, complied with the parole rules, and has shown by his industry, success and decent manner of living, that he is worthy of consideration in this respect in the opinion of the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern State Penitentiary."

This application for pardon and final discharge having been duly filed with this Board, and having been considered at our meeting of thtis day, and it appearing that the provsions of the Act of Assembly, and our rules, have in all respects been complied with, we recommend that the application of the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern Penitentiary be approved, and that a pardon be now granted Martin Greene, alias E. Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, September 18, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Philadelphia, to No. 437, March Term, 1899, William Epps, alias William Turner, alias "Face," was, on June 27, 1899, convicted on an indictment charging with murder, and on July 14, 1899, was sentenced to be hanged. On appeal to the Supreme Court the judgment of the Court of Oyer and Terminer was affirmed.

On December 9, 1899, an application for commutation was filed with the Board of Pardons. This application was then refused. Subsequently an application for re-hearing was allowed, and upon reconsidering the case the Board, on April 18, 1900, recommended commutation of death sentence. The prisoner has been confined in the Eastern Penitentiary since the granting of the commutation.

On February 7, 1912 an application for pardon was duly filed, and this application was heard at the February meeting of the Board. It has been held under advisement since that time. Having given the matter full examination and consideration, we now recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, William Epps, alias Turner, alias "Face."

The applicant is a colored man, and is now about thirty-four years of age. He was indicted jointly with another colored man by the name of Dodson, but was tried separately. After Epp's conviction Dodson entered a plea of guilty of murder in the second degree, which was accepted by the Commonwealth.

The crime with which these two defendants were charged was the killing, in the City of Philadelphia, of an old lady named Lawler on the evening of January 30, 1899. Mrs. Lawler kept a little store in the lower part of the city, living in the rooms above the store. She was known to carry about with her a little canvas bag in which she kept her money. On the evening in question these two men went to her store, and, while Dodson engaged the attention of Mrs. Lawler in the purchase of a bucket of coal, which took them out of doors, Epps entered the house and concealed himself in her sleeping apartments. When she came upstairs, according to the theory of the Commonwealth, he caught her by the throat and choked her, thus overpowering her, and took her money away from her and escaped from the house. The next day Mrs. Lawler was found in her room, dead, with the furniture and carpet disarranged, and the lamp which she had carried with her shattered to pieces. The testimony of the examining physician established the fact that she had died of strangulation. The defendants were not immediately known in connection with the crime, and they soon afterwards left the city. However, in a short time it was ascertained that they were the guilty persons, and they were traced, and then arrested in Virginia and brought back to Philadelphia for trial.

The reasons upon which the former Board based its recomendation for commutation were, that, whereas both Epps and Dodson were equally guilty of whatever crime was committed, that is as to the degree of murder, the Commonwealth in accepting from Dodson a plea of guilt in the second degree admitted that the essential elements of the crime of murder in the first degree were absent in his case, and consequently would have to admit that these elements were also absent in the case of Epps, and that therefore it behooved the Executive to supplement and correct that wherein the judicial power had proved deficient in Epps' case and grant him the relief to which in justice and fairness he was entitled.

The reasons upon which this present application for the pardon of Epps is based are the following:

That the ground upon which the Board acted in commuting the sentence was based upon the fact that your petitioner was, at most, guilty of manslaughter, and that the maximum sentence under the law of this Commonwealth for such a crime is twelve years, which time he had served.

That at the time of the conviction the petitioner was comparatively young and ignorant, but that since that time he has become well educated and is now well qualified to lead a useful life, if given his liberty.

That the ends of justice have been fully served by the imprisonment already imposed.

It is a material fact to be considered in this connection that the trial of Dodson was not called until after the final disposition of the Epps case in the Supreme Court. And also that, although it must be admitted that Dodson was equally guilty with Epps for the reason that he was an accessory and aided and abetted in the crime, Dodson, on his plea of guilty of murder in the second degree, received a sentence of eight years and six months imprisonment, and was discharged from prison under the commutation law after having served five years six-and-a-half months, while Epps has has now served more than thirteen years imprisonment.

Further, it was argued before us that there is no reason for discrediting Epps' statement which is on file with our record, and to which he has always adhered, that he never meant to kill Mrs. Lawler; that he never tried to choke her, but only threw her to one side in his effort to escape, and did not pause for a single instant in his flight; that he had no knowledge of her death, nor did he suspect it until he read of it in the "Item."

The prisoner was not a man of bad reputation. His character was at no time assailed by the prosecution during the trial. His application for commutation bore the endorsement of a large number of prominent and influential citizens of Philadelphia. He has made good use of his time while in confinement, and has became a changed man morally and intellectually. He is now well fitted to associate, with credit to himself, with his fellow members of society outside of prison walls.

The reasons formally laid, in connection wth all that has been brought to our attention with respect to this case and with respect to the applicant himself, appear to us to be sufficient to justify the exercise of Executive Clemency, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, William Epps, alias William Turner, alias "Face."

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Philadelphia, to Nos. 564 and 565, January Term, 1905, Harry Coleman and Charles Ryan were jointly indicted on two separate charges of robbery. On February 2, 1905, they entered pleas of guilty. On indictment No. 565 they were each sentenced to pay a fine of one hundred dollars, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of ten years; and on indictment No. 564 they were each sentenced to pay a fine of one hundred dollars, costs and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of five years after the expiration of the sentence in bill No. 565. This making an aggregate fine of two hundred dollars and imprisonment of fifteen years each.

On June 15, 1912, an application for pardon was duly filed. This application was heard and considered at our meeting of to-day. We are of the opinion that the application should be allowed, and we therefore recommend that pardons be now granted these defendants Harry Coleman and Charles Ryan.

Coleman is about thirty years of age, and is by occupation a clerk. Ryan is about thirty-three years of age, and is by occupation a printer. Both are unmarried. Both were strangers in Philadelphia. The depredations with which they were charged were serious offenses, such as from their very nature tend to shock and inflame the public mind, and hence their sentences were correspondingly severe. However, it is shown to us that they had been drinking heavily for some time prior to the commission of the crimes, and it is argued that they did not appreciate the gravity of the offense. Further, being unknown in the County of Philadelphia, and without friends, and having no counsel, they were unable to furnish testimony of previous good character, or submit to the Court any other extenuating circumstances.

Moreover, during the more than seven-and-one-half years of their incarceration they have shown by their excellent prison record that, even if they have been men of evil disposition, one of the objects of punishment—the reformation of the offender—has been brought about. It follows, that if released there is a probability that they will become useful citizens. They have learned their lesson, and have attoned for their lawlessness. It does not seem that either the Commonwealth or these prisoners can be further benefitted by a more prolonged imprisonment. Under the commutation act they should be entitled to a discharge in less than a year and nine months. It was represented to us that each of these men has friends who will aid and encourage them in leading a proper life upon their release from prison.

Under all the circumstances of the case as brought out at the hearing we deem it proper to recommend that a pardon be now granted these applicants, Harry Coleman and Charles Ryan.

Respectfully submitted,

Lieutenant Governor.

Sir:—The Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 205, April Sessions, 1912, Hyman Mayer was convicted on an indictment charging him with selling lipuor without a license. On June 13, 1912, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for a term of six months.

September 3, 1912, an application for his pardon was duly filed, and the same was given a hearing at our September meeting, and then held under advisement. We now recommend that the application be granted, and that a pardon be issued the applicant, Hyman Mayer.

The applicant is a man about forty years of age; and his wife and five children, the oldest being ten years of age. He carreid on a restaurant in the vicinity of third and South Streets, in the City of Philadelphia, and it was his custom to serve with meals a glass of home-made wine or grape juice. This custom was generally followed by the restaurants throughout that section of the city.

On a certain day early in this year two policemen visited Mayer's place and were served the customary glass of wine with their meal. Later in the day one of them reappeared and sought to purchase a bottle of the wine, but was refused by Mayer on the ground that he was not a dealer. Upon being importuned by the officer that he wanted the wine for his sick mother-in-law Mayer sold him a bottle of the wine or grape juice. Soon after this a large number of restaurant keepers were arrested on the charge of selling liquor without license, under the custom above referred to, among whom were Mayer. All of them, however, with the exception of Mayer, were discharged on the payment of costs. Mayer alone was fined and imprisoned.

The ground laid in the application for relief is substantially the severity of the sentence. The details of the matter were stated fully to the Board at the hearing, and now it has been shown to us that the full amount of the fine has been paid by the applicant, the receipt for the payment of which, signed by the proper officer, has been exhibited to the Board. It does therefore appear to the Board that the applicant having been in prison more than four months of the six months term, and having paid the fine of $500, he has been sufficiently punished in view of all the circumstances of the case.

We therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Hyman Mayer.

Harrisburg, October 16, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Lackawanna, to No. 11, October Term, 1907, Knidsu Howrelso was tried on an indictment charging her with murder. During the progress of the trial of the case, December 6, 1907, she withdrew her plea of "not guilty," and entered a plea of "guilty of murder of the second degree," and upon the same day was sentenced by the Court to pay a fine of one dollar, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of ten years.

On September 28, 1912, an application for her pardon was duly filed. The case was presented at our meeting to-day. after fully considering the matter we are of the opinion that the application merits favorable action, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Knidsu Howrelso.

The applicant indicted under the name given above, but who is mentioned in the application as Knidsu Horrelso, is a young woman now of twenty-five years of age, a native of Austria-Hungary, who came to this country about two months before the commission of the offense with which she is charged. When she was seventeen years of age she was married to the man for whose death she has been blamed—a man she did not know until he was introduced to her by her parents who directed her to marry him. In the summer of 1906 she followed her husband to this country, and after six weeks work in a factory at Taylor went to Scranton where she was joined by her husband. They lived there but a short time when a quarel arose between them, during which, it is alleged, a lighted lamp was overturned, and her husband who was drunk at the time, was burned and injured so that he died. At the trial she was indifferently defended, so it is alleged, and being without friends, and without means, and unable to speak our language, her case even at that time excited pity and sympathy.

Since her incarceration she has learned to speak English, and has acquired other accomplishments, and has gained the good will and friendship of officials and others who have come into contact with her. The application for pardon is made on her behalf through persons who are actuated solely out of philanthropic motives, who think they see in her a person who is capable of leading a good life and of becoming a useful member of society. She is promised employment if released, and it is the opinion of persons qualified to speak on the subject that the granting of a pardon to her now would not interfere with, but on the contrary would promote, the cause of justice. The belief of these friendly persons seems to be justified by the views of the trial judge, who writes the Board under date of October 7, 1912 as follows:

"In re application of Knidu Horrelso for pardon.

"The Board of Pardons, Harrisburg, Pa.

Gentlemen:—In this case formal notice has been served on me sec. reg., coupled with reguest that my impression of the merits be stated.

The Commonwealth accepted a plea of guilty with the understanding that no higher grade than seoond degree was asked for. In the absence of anything to reduce it to manslaughter, judgment of guilty of that degree was inevitable, and defendant was sentenced accordingly. The sense of pity for the young woman, then little more than a mere girl, was very acute. The nature of the crime seemed to call for somewhat stern punishment and thus she was accorded only so much mitigation as then seemed consistent. The case was pitiful for several reasons. Defendant's manner and appearance were decidedly in her favor, but she was apparently friendless. Again, so far as the trial proceeded, she was most incapably defended by one who is no longer a member of this bar. But, perhaps more than anything else, one could not resist the impression that in an evil moment she had become the weak instrument of a fellow countryman, who, taking advantage of her unhappy domestic life, had gained an influence over her whereby he had eventually inflamed her resentment against her husband to the breaking point, though he had carefully prepared an alibi for himself and was thus some distance away at the fatal moment. No doubt the history and circumstances of the case will be furnished by counsel. I can only say that an effort was made to temper justice with mercy as governed by the duties of the court, yet, if in the meantime her conduct has merited favorable consideration, executive clemency would be cheerfully acquiesced in as well by the court as by local sentiment.

Yours very truly,
E. C. NEWCOMB."

From all that was brought to our attention with regard to this application at the hearing, and from an examination of the record, we feel that it is a proper case for the exercise of Executive Clemency, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Knidsu Howrelso.

Respectfully submitted,

Harrisburg, October 16, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 82, September Term, 1902, Mike Yushkis was tried on an indictment charging him with Murder. Three others John Smith, Ignatz Shukis and Paul Tomschek, were jointly indicted with him, separate trials were granted the defendants. On November 12, 1902, Smith entered a plea of guilty, and the Court adjudged the crime to be Murder of the Second Degree on the same day Yushkis entered a plea of guilty, and the crime was adjudged by the Court to be Murder of the Second Degree. On November 17, 1902, Shukis, on trial, was acquitted. Tohschek was also acquitted on trial. On May 5, 1903, Yushkis was sentenced by the Court to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of twenty years.

In 1907 an application for the pardon of Yushkis, who is named in the proceedings before the Board as Yuskis, was filed, and after hearing was, November 20, 1907, refused by the Board of Pardons. In the following May an application for re-hearing of the case was refused. In November 1908 a second application for re-hearing was allowed, but after hearing the case in January 1909 and then holding the case under advisement until April 21, 1909, the application for pardon was refused. Another application for re-hearing was filed in the subsequent December, which at the February meeting 1910 was denied. Again on April 6, 1912, another application for re-hearing was filed, and on this application a re-hearing was granted. The hearing of the case on its merits was continued until our meeting of to-day, when the case was presented to the Board and argued at length. And now, upon due consideration, we are of the opinion that the application is at this time worthy of favorable action, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be awarded the applicant, Mike Yuskis.

This applicant is a man about thirty-three years of age. At the time of the homicide with which the above named defendants were charged he was about twenty-three years old. He is a foreigner, and at the time of the trial was unacquainted with the English language and had little knowledge of American customs, and was especially ignorant with respect to Court procedure. The victim of the homicide was a man named Daniel Sweeney, who, on the morning of August 6, 1902, was found dead on the street in the village of Hanover, Luzerne County, evidently murdered, because his skull was fractured, apparently by means of some blunt instrument, and a club which bore evidence of having been used in the assault was found near the body. By reason of the defendants having been seen in the company of the dead man during the preceding evening and night, and some other criminating circumstances, these four men were charged with the murder.

Smith's trial was called first. After it had progressed a while the defendant withdrew his plea of "not guilty," and entered a plea of "guilty." Yuskis case seemed to have been called later the same day, and the same counsel who had been assigned to defend Smith were appointed to defend Yuskis. During an early stage of the latter's trial, on the advice of counsel he also withdrew his plea of "not guilty," and entered a plea of "guilty." He has been in the Penitentiary since the early part of May, 1903, and has been in prison more than ten years.

The formal reasons assigned in the present application for clemency are the following:

1. The applicant has now served nine full years of his term, and has been confined in prison nearly ten years. Three years have elapsed since a former application for pardon was refused.
2. Further imprisonment will permanently and injuriously affect the health of the applicant.
3. The defendant entered a plea of guilty under a misapprehension, and has been punished for an offense in which he did not participate.

It is observed that the two defendants who stood trial were acquitted. The case of Yushkis was never passed on by a jury. Subsequent examination into the real state of affairs connected with this homicide appears to have satisfied the prosecuting officials and the trial judge that the plea of guilty on the part of Yushkis was made under a misapprehension and through ignorance and mistake. The defendant was unacquainted with the English language, and it is the opinion of those who are in a position to speak intelligently on the subject that he did not understand the import of his plea, and that he did not intend to admit that he was guilty of the crime charged. He has always maintained his innocense, but admits having been in the company of the other defendants during a portion of the night. It seems to be the consensus of opinion that one of the other men acquitted on trial was the real murderer.

The District Attorney who tried the case wrote to the Board when the application was pending in 1907, as follows:

"Wilkes-Barre, Pa., November 19, 1907.

To the Honorable Members of the Board of Pardons.

Gentlemen:—Mike Yuskis pleaded guilty to the killing of Mr. Sweeney. This crime took place during the labor troubles in our county in 1902. Yuskis and three other men, Tomschek, Smith and Shukis were indicted for this crime. Yuskis and Smith were unable to understand our language, and appeared in Court without counsel. The Court appointed two young attorneys to look after the interests of Yuskis and Smith, and a short time afterwards they entered a plea of guilty. Tomschek was then called for trial and Yuskis was used as a witness for the Commonwealth, although he denied having taken any part in the killing of Mr. Sweeney. Tomschek was acquitted by direction of the Court. Afterwards Shukis was tried and Yuskis was used as a witness, and he was acquitted.

At all times Mike Yuskis denied any guilt whatever, excepting such admission by the entry of his plea of guilty. Within a week or so other counsel asked the Court for permission to withdraw the plea entered by Yuskis and Smith, on the ground that they were not properly informed of the charge against them, and insisting that at no time did they ever authorize or approve of the entry of a plea of guilty by their counsel. The Court refused to permit them to withdraw their plea, and both Smith and Yuskis were sentenced. In view of the fact that Tomschek and Shukis were both acquitted, and the testimony against Yuskis was not strong, I now feel that if Yuskis had gone to trial he would have been acquitted. Since the trial and acquittal of Tomschek and Shukis, I have grave doubt as to the guilt of the young man Yuskis, and in view of the acquittal of the two men above mentioned, the fact that Yuskis has continually insisted on his innocense and that he took no part in the crime, and that he has now been imprisoned for about five years, I think this is a case for favorable action upon the part of the Board of Pardons, and I respectfully ask that his appeal be heard and a pardon granted.

Yours respectfully,
B. R. JONES,
Dist. Atty. at time of trial."

Judge Halsey, the trial judge, appends to Mr. Jones' letter the following:

"I have read that which the District Attorney has said about this case. My recollection in so far as the case was before me concurs with his. I have no objection to submit in opposition to the application for pardon.

G. A. HALSEY,
Trial Judge."

11-19—07.

Subsequently on the re-hearing of the case in 1909, Mr. Jones again writes:

"Wilkes-Barre, Pa., December 13th, 1909.

To the Honorable Members of the Board of Pardons, Harrisburg, Pa.

Gentlemen:—Having received notice from Frank A. McGuigan, Attorney for Mike Yuskis, that an application for rehearing and pardon in behalf of Mike Yuskis will be presented to your Honorable Board on Wednesday next. I desire to state that I unqualifiedly recommend that your Honorable Board accords this application favorable consideration by granting to Mike Yuskis a pardon.

I make this recommendation knowing all the facts in the case, having been prosecuting attorney at the time of trial.

Most respectfully yours,

B. R. JONES,
Prosecuting Attorney."

To this letter Jugde Halsey appends the folowing statement:

"I concur in that which Mr. Jones says tbout this application.

G. R. HALSEY."

Other letters of similar import from prominent Court officials and other persons well acquainted with the facts in the case are on file, in which the writers express grave doubts as to the guilt of this applicant, and signify it as their belief that the application before us is meritious, and that the applicant is fairly entitled to be pardoned.

In view therefore of what has been said, and with the thought that the prisoner has served in the Penitentiary about four-fifths of his sentence with the commutation allowance, and with the advice that his record as a prisoner has been good and that he has made good use of his time in confinement towards self improvement, we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Mike Yuskis or Mike Yushkis, as he is named in the Court record.

Respectfully submitted,

JNO. M. REYNOLDS,
Lieutenant Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 519, November Term, 1895, William Green was tried on an indictment charging him with Murder, and on May 20, 1896, being allowed to withdraw his plea of "not guilty," entered a plea of "guilty of murder in the second degree." He was thereupon on May 26, 1896, sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of seventeen years.

After serving ten years and six months in the Penitentiary the prisoner was discharged on November 26, 1906, having earned a commutation of six and a-half years for good behavior.

Early in 1909 the applicant was arrested on the charge of larceny, and on March 2, 1909, was convicted on this charge in the Court of Quarter Sessions of the County of Philadelphia, and was thereupon sentenced to serve an imprisonment of one year in the County Prison. Under the commutation law the defendant would have been entitled to his discharge under this last sentence on the second day of January, 1910, if his record had been clear. But having been sentenced for a felony within the period intervening between his former discharge and the date of the expiration of the full term he became liable to be detained to serve out the unexpired previous term of six and one-half years from January 2, 1910. He is now in prison serving this unexpired term, nearly three years of which he has already served.

On October 1, 1912, an application for his pardon was filed. This application was represented at our hearing today by Mr. Frederick J. Pooley, the General Agent of the Pennsylvania Prison Society, who has given this case careful attention and examination, and who, from his long experience in matters of this character, is well qualified to speak with authority upon such subjects. From his statement of the circumstances surrounding the charge of larceny it appears that there was no felonious intent upon the part of Green. His connection with the stolen goods was purely accidental, and his conviction was simply a technicality. The applicant's conduct in prison has been good, and it is thought that if released he may become a useful citizen.

The formal reason assigned in the application is:

That the punishment inflicted upon this applicant has, under the circumstances, been sufficient, that the ends of justice have been fully served, and that it would be an act of mercy to pardon this applicant.

In further support of the application Mr. Pooley files with the Board a letter from former Judge Yerkes, who, as Judge specially presiding, imposed the seventeen year sentence on Green. Among other things Judge Yerkes says in his letter:

"It may be unnecessary for me to say to the Board of Pardons that at the time I imposed the sentence I considered, as was my invariable practice, the commutation which presumably he would obtain the benefit of under the law, and that had there been no prospect of his earning such commutation, the term of his sentence would have been correspondingly less. * * * This defendant promptly pleaded "guilty" to the offence with which he was charged, and I recall that there were circumstances in the case which, in the event of his having made a defence, might have impelled the jury to have reduced the grade of the offence to manslaughter. * * * In my opinion, the sentence which he has already undergone for this offence fully meets the ends of justice and he should be discharged from further imprisonment. I therefore unhesitatingly recommend that his pardon be granted."

In view of the light reflected on the application from these sources we are constrained to regard the application as well grounded, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, William Green.

Respectfully submitted,

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Dauphin, John Gray on March 7, 1910, was sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Pententiary for a term of not less than nine months and not more than three years on a conviction for felonious entry.

On November 22, 1911, having served twenty months of his imprisonment he was released on parole under the provisions of the Act of Assembly.

The Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary, under date of September 30, 1912, recommend that he be given his final discharge, for the reason that he has regularly reported to them under the rules for eleven months, and by straightforward conduct while on parole has given evidence that he can and will remain a good citizen. His maximum term expires March 7, 1913; his present address is The Rush Hospital, 33rd and Lancaster Avenue, Philadelphia. He has been confined in the hospital with consumption during the entire period of his parole, and is now dying; he is worthy of consideration in this respect in the opinion of the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary.

It appearing that all the requirements of the Act of Assembly, and of the Rules of the Board of Inseeptors of the Penitentiary, and of the rules of the Board of Pardons have been observed in regard to this application, and the application and recommendation having been duly considered by us, we recommend that the Report of the Board of Inseetors of the Penitentiary be apporved, and that a pardon be now granted the prisoner, John Gray.

Harrisburg, September 18, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir.—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Dauphin, to No. 166, September Term, 1911, Jacob G. Feist was convicted on indictment charging him with statutory rape and adultery, and, on December 2, 1911, was sentenced to pay a fine of $300, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not more than five years and not less than two years. A motion for a new trial was overruled. On appeal to the Superior Court the judgment of the Court of Oyer and Terminer was affirmed. An application to make the appeal to the Superior Court a supersedeas having been denied December 5, 1911, the imprisonment of the defendant in the Penitentiary began December 7, 1911.

On September 4, 1912, an application for pardon was duly filed, and the matter was heard at our meeting of this day. Upon consideration we are of the opinion that the application should be allowed; we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Jacob G. Feist.

Feist is a man about thirty-two years of age. He is a married man, and, with his family, consisting of his wife and two children, lived at 2116 North Third Street in the City of Harrisburg. He had been a resident of Harrisburg for two years or more preceding his trial. He was engaged in the banking and brokerage business. The prosecutrix, Margaret Douglass, is a young girl, who, at the time of the commission of the offense with which the applicant is charged, was under the age of fifteen years. She had at one time been employed in the family of the applicant as a maid, but was not living with him at the time of the alleged offense. However, her sister, Eleanor Douglass, at the time was living at Feist's house as a domestic; Margaret was then living at service with a family in the same section of the city.

According to the testimony of the prosecutrix, she visited her sister at the Feist house on the evening of May 22, 1911. After leaving there about half-past six or seven o'clock she started to walk down Third Street, but was soon overtaken by Feist in his automobile, who stopped and asked her to get in with him, saying that he would take her down town to where she told him she intended going. Instead of driving to the part of the City where she wished to go, he drove over several different streets, passing among others along Sixth Street, and then going across the bridge spanning the railroads, and on down to and beyond Steelton. After getting out into the country below Steelton, and while on the public road and while it was yet light he stopped his car, alighted and told her to get out, under pretext of fixing something about the machine. After she got out he took hold of her, laid her down alongside the road and then and there had intercourse with her. He then got her into the car and drove back to the City, leaving her out somewhere in the vicinity of the Reading Station, from which place she walked to her home up town, arriving there about nine o'clock.

The testimony of the prosecutrix was not corroborated, except that a young girl, an acquaintance of the Douglass sisters, testified that on the evening in question she saw the Feist automobile, (which she recognized,) with a man and a girl in it, pass down Sixth Street, and that she thought the girl was one of the Douglass girls. The defendant, on the trial, denied the story of the prosecutrix in its entirety, and also sought to establish an alibi by the testimony of a number of people, including his wife. Further, he produced at the hearing before us an affidavit executed by a man named Lucas, who now lives in Detroit, Mich., wherein Lucas states that he was living in Harrisburg in May, 1911, and that on the evening of the 22nd of that month he himself was in company with Margaret Douglass walking the streets of Harrisburg, from about half-past seven until nine o'clock; that interval being the greater part of the time covered, according to the testimony of the prosecutrix, by the trip in the automobile to Steelton. The following is a copy of this affidavit:

State of Michigan,) County of Wayne,) ss.

Peter Lucas, of the City of Detroit, said State and County, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

That he resides in the City of Detroit, and has resided therein since the first day of June, A. D. 1911. That prior to June 1, 1911, he resided in the City of Harrisburg, Penna., for upwards of three years continuously. That during the month of March, 1911, he first met and became acquainted with Margaret Douglass, who stated that she lived at Mechanicsburg, Penna. That he met her on a Saturday evening of March, 1911, at the corner of Second and Walnut Streets, Harrisburg, Penna., about 8 o'clock P. M. That he walked around with her that evening and later took her to the Pennsylvania Railroad Station and she took the train for Mechanicsburg. Before going on the train she told this deponent that she was going to work for Mr. Feist, of Harrisburg, within a short time, and wanted to meet him then. Shortly thereafter, she met this deponent on three or four accasions while she was working for Mr. Feist. Then she told this deponent that she was going back to Mechanicsburg, and got from this deponent his address in Harrisburg. A short time after returning to Mechanicsburg, she wrote this deponent a letter which he received, in which letter she stated that she had secured a position in Harrisburg and asking him to meet her on the following Sunday at the corner of Second and Walnut streets about seven o'clock in the evening. Deponent met said Margaret Douglass at Second and Walnut streets on said Sunday evening about seven o'clock and walked with her to No. 1817 North Second street, at which place she stated to deponent she was going to work, and that said Margaret Douglass was then and there carrying a suit case. That when deponent and Margaret Douglass reached the residence at 1817 North Second street, she was unable to gain admittance at the rear door, so she then and there left her suit case on the rear porch of said residence and she and deponent went out for a walk, and while on said walk met said Margaret Douglass' sister and several other girls, and spent some time with them, and did not get back to No. 1817 North Second Street until nearly 12 o'clock midnight. That said house was at that time entirely darkened and said Margaret Douglass stated that it was too late for her to go in and ask deponent if he knew some place where she could spend the night. That deponent then and there took said Margaret Douglass to a boarding house conducted by the mother of an acquaintance of his by the name of Andrew Smith, and there tried to secure a room in which said Margaret Douglass could pass the night but he was informed by said Andrew Smith that there was no vacant room in the house and deponent then and there took said Margaret Douglass to the Spot Hotel, in the vicinity of Seventh and Herr Streets, Harrisburg, Penna., and then and there secured a room for said Margaret Douglass at a price of fifty cents. That this deponent did not have the fifty cents in his possession, but that he then and there left his watch with the bartender at said Spot Hotel as security for the payment of the price of said room, and that thereupon said Margaret Douglass went upstairs toward said room with said bartender, and on the following mornng this deponent returned to said Spot Hotel and paid to the bartender, then and there in charge of said Spot Hotel said sum of fifty cents for said Margaret Douglass' room rent, and in return therefor received his watch from said bartender, and to the best of deponent's knowledge and belief this was in the month of April, 1911.

Deponent further says that on the Thursday following the Sunday night that he took said Margaret Douglass to the said Spot Hotel as aforesaid, he again met her and walked around with her on that evening and made an appointment with her to meet her again on the following Monday evening, and that thereafter he met her and walked around with her frequently every week, and generally on Mondays, Thursdays, and Saturdays or Sunday evenings, until Monday evening, May 22, 1911.

Deponent further says that on Monday evening, May 22, 1911, he met said Margaret Douglass between 7.30 and 8 o'clock P. M., near the corner of Second and Maclay streets in said City of Harrisburg; that he then and there went with her for a walk along the river front and sat and talked with her on some of the benches, and remained with her until about 9 o'clock P. M., at which time she said it was getting late and she had better start home. That this deponent then and there started with said Margaret Douglass and walked with her to No. 1817 North Second street and saw her go into the residence of Mr. Dollinger between 9 and 9.30 P. M., on said May 22, 1911, and that this was the last time that this deponent ever saw said Margaret Douglass.

Deponent further says that he is certain and positive that the last time he ever saw said Margaret Douglass was on the evening of May 22, 1911, and that he spent the evening of said day with her as hereinbefore set forth, because it was a week from that evening that he left Harrisburg and came to the City of Detroit to live. That before he left her on the evening of May 22, 1911, he made an appointment with her to meet her on the following Thursday evening, May 25, 1911, but did not meet her because he spent that evening with some friends on Seventh street.

Deponent further says that on May 29, 1911, he left Harrisburg, Penna., for the purpose of coming to Detroit to live and that he reached Detroit on the following day, which was Decoration Day, and has ever since resided in Detroit. That about a week after arriving at Detroit he received a letter written by said Margaret Douglass, asking him why he had not met her. That said letter was in an envelope addressed to this deponent at his former home in Harrisburg and was forwarded to this deponent at Detroit by his sister who was still living at deponent's old address in Harrisburg.

Deponent further says that he makes this affidavit voluntarily and of his own free will and without any promise or hope of reward, and without any intimidation or duress, and that the facts herein set forth are all true.

PETER LUCAS.

I, Frank G. Cook, a Notary Public in and for said State and County, do hereby certify that on the 25th day of November, A. D. 1911, Peter Lucas signed the foregoing affidavit in my presence, and being by me duly sworn did depose and say that all the statements contained in said affidavit are true, and that said statements are made by him voluntarily and of his own free will and without any promise or hope of reward, and without any intimidation or duress practiced upon him.

FRANK C. COOK,
Notary Public Wayne County, Michigan,
My Commission expires Aug. 6, 1912.

Certain other details tending to weaken the testimony of the prosecutrix were adverted to at the hearing: As, for example, she testifies that the moon was shining when the act was committed. Calendars produced, covering the date, show that the moon did not rise that night until one o'clock in the morning.

We also quote a letter, alleged to have been written by the prosecutrix, who, at the time of writing it, was said to be fourteen years and ten months of age. Its tone is that of a business letter, which a girl of her age and education, would not, in our opinion, be capable of writing. This letter reads as follows:

"Margaret Douglass,
1802 Green St.

In care of L. J. Ray,
Harrisburg.

"Dear Sir:—I suppose you recall the incident that occured while out automobiling one night it is going to cause trouble just as I thought it would. I am almost crazy to know what to do. Please answer this letter as soon as possible or I will expose you.

Yours truly,
MARGARET D."

The prosecutrix also denied having any acquaintance with the man Lucas. The following letter received by him from her, and produced at the hearing, indicates that in this particular at least her testimony was false:

"At 7.30

Harrisburg

Dear Pete. You can meet me at the corner of Walnut and Second streets on Sunday night. Please excuse my writing as am going till Sunday night. I've got a place.

Goodbye From
MARGARET D."

The ground upon which this application for pardon is based is mainly that the conviction, resting upon the practically unsupported testimony of the prosecutrix, in view of all the circumstances of the case, was a miscarriage of justice, and that the applicant is therefore entitled to the relief which the pardoning power of the Commonwealth alone can afford.

From what we have referred to above and from an examination of the record before us, and the further information gleaned at the hearing, we have grave doubt as to whether the applicant was properly convicted or would have been convicted if the additional evidence had been produced at the trial, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Jacob G. Feist.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Chester, at August Sessions, 1911, Claude E. Stoll, on October 2, 1911, entered a plea of guilty to an indictment charging him with the crime of forgery. On October 25 he was sentenced thereon to pay a fine of $100, costs, and undergo an imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not more than ten years and not less than two years.

An application for his pardon was duly filed November 9, 1912, which application was heard and given consideration at our meeting to-day. We find that the application is meritorious, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Claude E. Stoll.

Stoll is a man of the age of twenty-nine years; he is married and his wife and three children are living. He is a painter and paperhanger by trade; for some time before his arrest he was in the employ of a man by the name of Mull, of Phoenixville, as his foreman. He was a workman of ability; he enjoyed the confidence of his employer, and of the community generally. During the absence of Mull form his business on account of sickness Stoll collected and disbursed money for him. On a certain Saturday night in August of last year, while under the influence of liquor, (which we understand was not an habitual habit.) Stoll forged the name of his employer to five checks and obtained money on them to the amount of $280. On complaint of Mull a warrant for his arest was issued, but, not served; Stoll hearing of the information against him, voluntarily appeared before the Court and pleaded guilty to the charge. All the money raised on the forged checks was recovered from him. On his plea of guilty sentence was suspended, but subsequently, on account of some dispute as to the payment of the costs, he was apprehended on a bench warrant, and the sentence above indicated was imposed.

Inasmuch as this applicant had previously been a man of good character, had never been charged with any violation of the law, and as all the money he obtained on the forged paper was paid back to the parties entitled, and as the Court and the prosecuting officer, as well as the prosecutor himself and all the victims of the forgery were in the first instance satisfied that a suspension of sentence would meet the ends of justice, which suspension of sentence was revoked only by reason of a dispute subsequently arising between the prosecutor and the defendant, and as the prosecutor, the District Attorney and the parties imposed on by the forgeries now unite in recommending clemency, and as the applicant has served more than a year in the Penitentiary,—it can safely be assumed that no public benefit can result from a continuance of his imprisonment, and that public security will not be jeopardized by its termination. Under these conditions, and the further circumstance of the destitution of the prisoner's wife and three small children, and the fact that the applicant is a skillful workman and can secure employment on his liberation, as we believe that the Commonwealth's interest in the administration of justice will not be offended by extending the clemency prayed for in this application. We therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Claude E. Stoll.

Harrisburg, November 20, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Schuylkill, to No. 1147, November Term, 1899, Rollis Bubniss, with ten others, was indicted on the charge of murder. On the trial, January 6, 1900, eight of the eleven defendants were convicted of murder of the first degree. The other three were acquitted. Seven of the eight convicted defendants were granted new trials. Rollis Bubniss alone was refused a new trial, and his conviction of first degree murder stood. On the second trial of the other seven defendants, with the same evidence as adduced at the first trial, one of them, Andrew Koras was convicted of murder in the second degree, and afterwards sentenced to ten years imprisonment; the other six were convicted of manslaughter, and each sentenced to six years imprisonment.

Bubniss, on June 30, 1900, was sentenced to be hanged. An application for commutation was filed in March, 1901, and on March 27, commutation was recommended; Executive Warrant, commuting the sentence of death to that of imprisonment for life was issued in due course.

On April 7, 1902, an application for the pardon of Bubniss was filed, but the application was then refused. At our meeting of October last, upon proper cause shown, an application for re-hearing of this application was allowed. We heard and considered this allowed application at our meeting to-day, and, after deliberation, and being of the opinion that sufficient reasons for clemency exist, we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Rollis Bubniss.

Bubniss, the applicant, is now thirty-five years of age. Prior to his arrest on this charge he worked in the mines, but during his imprisonment he has learned the trade of baking, and is now a skilled baker. He is not married. He is a foreigner, and has no immediate relatives in this country. The victim of the homicide was another foreigner, by name of Ruthsowski, against whom the defendant had no grievance so far as was shown to us. At the time of the commission of the crime in question the applicant had been in this country about one year. He was then unable to speak our language, and of course was to a great degree ignorant of our customs and laws. He and his co-defendants, it is alleged, were members of a certain society or faction among the foreigners in the coal regions, and the murdered man was a member of a rival faction. These two factions were bitter enimies one to the other. The applicant was the youngest in years of his particular party, and possibly the youngest in experience as well. On the day of the occurrence under review Bubniss, with his party of friends, spent the time from noon until dark in drinking, and by evening Bubniss was in a drunken condition. In a fight between Bubniss and his party and a party of their rivals Ruthsowski was killed—struck with an axe in the hands of Bubniss, it is alleged, but at the instigation of his older companions. Although it was proved that the actual blow which killed Ruthsowski was inflicted by Bubniss, the testimony of the main witness to this effect is now impeached. Moreover it seems to be conceded that it was the intention of the party with whom Bubniss was associated that night to kill the leader of the opposing faction, but in the melee the intended victim escaped, and Ruthsowski met the fate intended for another.

The ground on which this application for pardon rests is mainly that Bubniss was the instrument in the hands of the leaders of his gang, and being the most pliable member of the party was persuaded to commit violence, and was purposely filled with intoxicants; that the murderous intent was in the minds of his co-defendants, and that under the law all were equally guilty; that the others having escaped with a conviction of a lower degree of murder, and all having now regained their liberty through the serving of their sentences of definite terms, it is but an act of justice that this applicant should be released also and his life term lessened. It is also urged that whereas when this applicant's term of imprisonment began he was an untutored foreigner he has improved his time, and is now not only a skilled workman in the line of new trade but has become proficient in the use of our language and has acquired an education that will fit him to become a useful member of society if released.

It is the opinion of the officials who conducted the prosecution against all these defendants that the ends of justice have been served through the imprisonment which Bubniss has undergone, especially as the other defendants, some whom were equally as guilty and possibly more guilty than he, have been restored to their liberty, and now mingle with their fellow men unrestrained.

Edgar W. Bechtel, Esq., the District Attorney for the County in 1899, and special counsel for the Commonwealth in 1910, when the cases were tried, has written a lengthy letter of recommendation for favorable action on the application. He concludes his letter in the following words:

"As District Attorney in the trial of Koras and his co-defendants, aiders and abettors to Rollis Bubniss who actually struck the blow, and in the trial of Bubnis, and also as ex-District Attorney and private counsel for the Commonwealth, I conducted the trials against Bubniss and Koras and his co-defendants which resulted as above stated.

Being fully cognizant of all the facts presented on the side of the Commonwealth, and not unmindful of the fact that a life had been taken, and that as prosecuting counsel the laws of the State must be vindicated, yet a man must be mentally faithful to himself, I feel after the lapse of thirteen years and upon conscientious and calm reflection that your Honorable Board would do an act of mercy in pardoning Rollis Bubniss, as I believe that justice has been fully vindicated, and that through your decision a new and useful life may be entered into by your petitioner."

M. P. McLoughlin, Esq., who was the District Attorney at the trial of this appilcant, and the Assistant District Attorney under Mr. Bechtel, during whose administration the prosecution of these defendants began, says in his letter among other things:

"Rollis Bubniss was the only one of all the defendants who was convicted of murder in the first degree and was sentenced therefor. Under the principle of law that all are principals in a criminal case there seems to be no special reason why such an extreme penalty should be meted out to Rollis Bubniss as compared with the others, he being the only one now incarcerated. Besides, since the trial and conviction the principal witness for the Commonwealth, I am informed, has married the widow of the deceased, which lends strong force to the charge that he was in collusion with the wife of the deceased prior to the killing and had an object in getting him disposed of.

Again, Rollis Bubniss was one of the youngest of the defendants, if not the very youngest, and was more likely to be influenced by older heads more accustomed to drastic action in cases of differences between this class of people, and thereby, perhaps, not so much imbued with the spirit of savagery as some of his older co-defendants, and more susceptible to the influence of his elders. * * * * * *

As it was a general melee, or stronger expressed, a combined attack on the deceased, and the others having received much lighter punishment, I can not declare that he is not at the present time entitled to some clemency. This is further impressed upon me from the fact that, I am assured, his intentions are to forever keep himself away from the region where the trouble occured and entirely eschew all his former associates.

Glancing back at the occurence, when miditation has been more exercised than in the heat of the trial, I would say to you that I would not nor will not oppose any clemency the Board of Pardons may see fit to extend to Rollis Bubniss. He is yet, comparatively speaking, a young man, and in the orderly course of events has quite a number of years before him, which I believe will be spent in an effort to prove himself worthy of the clemency he anticipates."

There are other letters from responsible sources advocating favorable consideration of this application which we do not deem it necessary to quote at length.

From what we gather on an examination of the record before us and the statements of counsel made at the hearing, and being mindful of the fact that all the others implicated in this homicide are now at liberty, we are impressed with the feeling that as an act of mercy and justice it is proper to relieve this applicant from further restraint and that the interests of the Commonwealth will not suffer by extending to him the clemency asked. We therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Rollis Bubniss.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Montgomery, on October 10, 1910, James E. Stuart, on a conviction for felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods, was sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than nine months and not more than three years.

On December 22, 1911, after serving fourteen months of his term, he was, on the recommendation of the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary, paroled through the regular proceedings in such cases.

The said Board of Inspectors now, under date of November 11, 1911, report to us as follows: "We respectfully recommend that he be given his final discharge, for the reason that he has reported regularly for ten months, and by straightforward conduct while on parole has given evidence that he can and will remain a good citizen. His maximum term expires on October 6, 1913. His present address is at 12 South Salford Street, Philadelphia, Pa."

This report of the Inspectors was considered at our meeting of this day, and, it appearing that there has been compliance with all the requirements of the Act of Assembly in such case made and provided, and that the Rules of the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary, and the Rules of the Board of Pardons have been observed, we endorse the Report of the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern Penitentiary, and recommend that a pardon and order for final discharge be now awarded the said prisoner, James E. Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Lawrence, to No. 3, September Term, 1903, on an indictment charging murder, Charles Grannis was convicted of murder in the second degree, September 17, 1903, and upon October 5, 1903, was sentenced to pay a fine of $1, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for the term of seventeen years.

On October 1, 1912, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The application was heard at our meeting in October, but has been held under advisement since that time. After due examination into the merits of the application we have concluded that it would be proper to allow the prayer of the petitioner, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Charles Grannis.

Grannis is thirty-seven years of age. He is a slater by trade, and has never been married. At the trial of his case it was shown that he, Della Ryhal, and the latter's mother, Mrs. Stewart, spent the afternoon and evening of Sunday, May 24, 1903, at Cascade Park in Lawrence County. Nothing unusual was noticed in the behavior of these people at that time. About nine o'clock in the evening, while the three were together Della Ryhal was shot twice by a pistol in the hands of Grannis, and then Grannis turned the pistol on himself. The woman died from the effect of the shots, but Grannis recovered from his wound. Mrs Stewart was the only eye witness to the tragedy, but at the time of the trial was too sick to testify, and her version of the affair is not of record. The defendant was convicted on the dying statement of Miss Ryhal and his own admission, although his statement was that the shooting was accidental. The jury rendered a verdict of murder in the second degree.

The basis of this application for clemency is the claim of adequacy of the punishment already endured by the defendant under the circumstances of the case. In support of this contention we are furnished with confirmatory letters from the trial judge, the District Attorney, and others who are familiar with the details of the homicide as far as known.

Judge Wallace in accepting service of notice of the application states:

"Now, September 30, 1912, I hereby accept service of the above notice, and, believing that the ends of justice have been fully met, join in the prayer for executive clemency."

Charles E. Mehard, Esq., District Attorney, writes under date of October 11, 1912:

"I have had notice of the application of Charles Grannis for a pardon. I was the District Attorney who tried the case, and am familiar with the facts. Grannis was convicted of second degree murder, and sentenced by Judge Wallace to serve Seventeen years in the Western Penitentiary. Grannis had a fair trial, and was rightly convicted, but, knowing the conditions as I do, I think I am justified in joining with the applicant in asking that his application be granted. I think he has been sufficiently punished for the crime he was convicted of.

Very respectfully,
CHAS. E. MEHARD."

Relying on the opinions of these officials we feel justified in reporting that the demands of justice have been complied with on the part of this defendant in the time he has served in prison. He has served more than nine years out of a commuted sentence of ten years and a half. We therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Charles Grannis.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Mifflin, on January 14, 1907, to No. 1, January Term, 1907. John Kluck was convicted on an indictment charging him with Statutory Rape and Adultry, and on the same day was sentenceh to pay a fine of $100, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for the period of fourteen years.

On November 9, 1912, an application for his pardon was duly filed. This application was heard and considered at our meeting to-day. Upon giving the matter full consideration, we are of the opinion that the applicant is entitled to the clemency asked, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted said applicant, John Kluck.

Kluck is now about twenty-eight years old, and at the time of his conviction was about twenty-two. He is married and has a wife and child living. His home is Shamokin, Northumberland County. In the fall of 1906 he came into Mifflin County and secured work at his trade as a carpenter, in the neighborhood of Lewistown. He boarded and lodged at the house of a man named McClenahen. His room mate at this place was another young man named Marsh. In the family of McClenahen was a daughter, who, at that time, was under the age of sixteen years. According to the story of this girl, and as she testified at the trial, Kluck had intercourse with her on two occasions, and as a result she became pregnant. Marsh, the room mate of Kluck, took an active interest in the prosecution, and was himself a material witness on the trial. Kluck himslef, being a stranger in that locality, and being entirely without funds, was unable to prepare his defense, and when the case was called for trial had no counsel to look after his interest. Counsel was assigned him then, but as the trial took place immediately there was no opportunity for preparation of defense. His conviction and heavy sentence followed.

The principal reason urged for favorable action on this application is the severity of the sentence in the case, which, it is alleged, is made to appear on taking into account subsequent developments. It was shown to us that Marsh and the girl, the witnesses whose testimony brought about the conviction, were married within six months after the trial of the applicant and before the birth of the child whose paternity was charged on Kluck. This circumstance, it is argued, raises the inference that Marsh himself may have been the father of the child, or at least, if not casting doubt upon the guilt of Kluck, it reduces the grade of his offense to a degree that would not warrant the severity of the sentence imposed.

There is an abundance of evidence on file with our record in the way of letters and recommendations from responsible citizens of Mifflin County to the effect that it is the sentiment of the community that the almost six years penitentiary imprisonment already borne by the applicant has worked full atonement for what ever transgression can justly be charged to him. The District Attorney who prosecuted the case, and also the present District Attorney, unqualifiedly recommend favorable action on the application on the ground of sufficiency of punishment. And for the same reason many others in official and in private life, who know all the circumstances, and still others who knew the defendant and who were familiar with his previous good reputation, ask that clemency be accorded Kluck.

When it is remembered that the sentence of imprisonment meted out to this defendant measures very close to the maximum limit of penalty for statutory rape, and that the defendant has now served nearly six years of that sentence, which, under the Commutation Act would be reduced to eight years and nine months, it does seem that, in the light of subsequent events, the allegation of severity of sentence is well founded.

From our examination into this case we are of the opinion that the ends of justice have now been served with respect to this defendant, and that he is entitled to relief from a longer confinement under the sentence. We therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, John Kluck.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions for the county of Lackawanna, at October Term, 1911, Jennie E. Brink was convicted upon an indictment charging her with the crime of keeping a bawdy house, and was on December 11, 1911, sentenced to pay a fine of $50 to the Commonwealth, the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Lackawanna County jail for the term of one year. An appeal was taken to the Superior Court; the judgment of the Court below was affirmed; and the term of imprisonment, under the original sentence, begun on May 25, 1912.

After hearing the arguments on the application this day, the Board decided to recommend a pardon.

In support of the application for a pardon numerous letters have been filed. Among them is one from the Burgress of the Borough of Dunmore, the place where the crime was committed, who says, among other things: "Individually and officially I wish to say, in as strong terms as I can put it, that in this case the law has been vindicated and the ends of justice have been fully met by the imprisonment which Mrs. Brink has already undergone."

The Solicitor of the Borough of Dunmore writes the Board a letter from which we quote: "We believe she has been fully and adequately punished, and that no good can be accomplished by keeping her in jail any longer."

The Hon. William Haggerty, of the House of Representatives, writes a letter urging in the strongest terms the granting of clemency in this case.

We have also on file the statements of several physicians as to the serious condition of the prisoner's health. Because of her condition it was necessary to remove her from the county jail to the Hahnemann Hospital, in Scranton, where she now is.

Because of the numerous letters urging the granting of clemency in this case, and because of the statements made by reputable citizens of the borough where the crime was committed, and believing that the ends of justice have been fully satisfied, we respectfully recommend that a pardon be now granted to the said Jennie E. Brink.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Chester, at August Sessions, 1912, Charles Hitchens was indicted on a charge of illegal voting. Upon being arraigned in Court the defendant, September 5, 1912, entered a plea of guilty, and thereupon on the same day was sentenced by the Court to pay a fine of $200, costs, and undergo an imprisonment in the county jail for one year.

On December 4, 1912, an application for his pardon was duly filed. This application was heard and considered at our meeting of to-day, and on examining the case in all its phases we are of the opinion that the application should be favored; we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Charles Hitchens.

Hitchens is a colored man, now about thirty years of age. He is married, but has no children. The township in which he lived in Chester County was, for voting purposes, divided into three precincts of voting districts, known as the western, middle and eastern districts. Up to about the time of the Primary Election of September 1911 Hitchens was living in the Middle District. Just about that period he moved from the Middle District to the Eastern District, but the actual moving of all his effects was not completed at one and the same time, but appears to have extended over some days, and while his wife had taken up her abode in the new place and a good part of his goods had been removed to his new home prior to the day of the Primary Election some of his property remained in the Middle District, and he himself owing to the exigencies of the situation was sometimes in one district and sometimes in the other. By the time of the November election his moving had been completed. However, at the time of the September Primary, while he was in this unsettled domiciliary state, he appeared at his usual voting place in the Middle District for the purpose of voting, and his vote was accepted without question, and he actually did vote there in that division. When the subsequent November Election was held he appeared at the polls in the Eastern District and had himself vouched for as having been in the District for at least sixty days, and his vote was accepted there, and he actually voted in that District. Part of these sixty days, however, embraced the time that he was passing back and forth from his old abiding place to his new home, and as a matter of fact it does appear that within sixty days he voted in these two separate Districts. One or the other vote was clearly illegal. By entering the plea of guilty of voting in his new home district without proper qualification he saved a prosecution for voting illegally in his former home district; if he had been acquitted of wrongful voting in one district then he could have been proved guilty of illegal voting in the other district. Technically one vote or the other was illegally cast, but it seems to be admitted that there was no fraudulent intent or purpose to violate the law. Evidently the applicant made a mistake in voting at the Primary Election in his old home district, and this mistake occured most likely by reason of inadvertance or ignorance.

The application for clemency is based on the lack of criminal intent, substantially and the adequacy of the punishment already undergone by the prisoner. The persons who inspired the prosecution are satisfied that the petitioner has been sufficiently punished, and some of them have signified their desire to have the petitioner pardoned by joining in this application. The petitioner enjoys the good will of the people in his community, and he can get steady employment with his former employer if liberated.

Under all the circumstances of the case it does seem that the penalty imposed was pretty severe. The defendant has been in jail about three and one-half months under the sentence. This imprisonment has served as a warning to others, and its continuance does not seem to be required for the correction of the prisoner who is not an habitual lawbreaker.

For these reasons therefore we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant Charles Hitchens.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 679, September Sessions, 1912, J. J. Weitzman entered a plea of nole contendere to an indictment charging him, together with H. J. Schierson, Ira L. Berry, James McKay and James A. Clark, with the crime of Conspiracy, and on November 9, 1912, was sentenced to pay a fine of six and one-quarter cents, costs, and undergo imprisonment in the Allegheny County Work House for eight months.

On December 7, 1912, an application for the pardon of the said Weitzman was duly filed, which we heard at our meeting to-day. At this hearing the details connected with this applicant's prosecution were explained at length, and, upon giving the matter thorough consideration, and in view of all that was shown to us, we are of the opinion that executive clemency should be shown this defendant, and we therefore recommend that a pardon issue to the applicant, J. J. Weitzman.

Weitzman is a man of the age of thirty-three years, and is by profession a physician. He is married, and his family connection is good. Prior to his association with his co-defendant, Schierson, he was engaged in the practice of his profession in his native city of Detroit, Mich., where he is said to have borne an excellent reputation. In some way he there became acquainted with Schierson, who, it is alleged, is a man of considerable ability intellectually, but of unscrupulous business tendencies. He had established a chain of some score of medical offices in as many of the large cities and towns of the country, with a corps of assistants and interpreters. His business was the treatment of all sorts of ailments, real and imaginary, by practicing upon the credulity of persons who sought his aid and advice, etc. A large portion of his patients were foreigners, and of course a large percentage of his clientle were persons of ignorance. While his treatment of his patients or customers was not particular harmful, its purpose and result was to defraud them of their money. At first Weizman did not realize the fraudulent aspect of the business, but later on he seems to have come to an understanding of its real character. Not long after his taking up with Schierson he was in charge of the Pittsburgh office, and it was while he was conducting this office that this prosecution was started.

Berry, another co-defendant, was Assistant Chief County Detective of Allegheny County, and McKay was a member of the detective force of the county. They were both trusted officers in their Department. They gained a knowledge of the fraudulent operations of Schierson's office in Pittsburgh, and, in violation of their duty, and for the purpose of "graft," extorted large sums of money from Schierson in "protecting" him. The District Attorney's office obtained an intimation of what was going on in this line, and started an investigation, in the course of which Weitzman, when confronted, made a frank and full disclosure of the plan to the District Attorney. In pursuance of the information imparted by Weizman the defendants above named were prosecuted. Schierson pleaded nole contendere, and Berry and McKay stood trial, and were convicted. Clark was not tried.

The following is the formal reason assigned in the application for pardon:

"The application is urged for the reason that through the information furnished by him and by his truthful testimony upon the trial of County Detectives Ira L. Berry and James McKay, who were indicted with him, convicted (after two trials) and sentenced, the applicant performed a valuable public service, enabling the District Attorney to secure a conviction which otherwise would have been difficult or impossible, and that in the judgment of the District Attorney said service thus rendered to the public by the applicant fairly balances any wrong of which he may have been guilty, and renders it just that clemency be exercised by the granting of a full pardon to him."

This reason is abundantly substantiated by the record before us and by what transpired at our hearing. The District Attorney in his letter to the Board said among other things after giving the details of the prosecution:

"During our further investigation after the arrest and preparation for trial, he answered our every summons and assisted us in every way possible, and we are free to say that had it not been for his assistance the Commonwealth would have been put to great difficulty in procuring a conviction.

In making investigation as to the character of one of the other defendants, Dr. H. J. Scierson, we found that he was not a man that should have been dealt with leniently by the court, and we rather felt that Weitzman, the applicant, was a victim of circumstances. The sentence as to Dr. H. J. Schierson was ten months to the Allegheny County Work House; As to the applicant, Weitzman, the sentence was eight months to the Allegheny County Work House. Ira L. Berry and James McKay each received a sentence of six months to the Allegheny County Jail.

When called for trial Weitzman, the applicant, pleaded nole contendere and was placed upon the stand by the Commonwealth to assist in proving their case against Ira L. Berry and James McKay. Upon investigation of the character of Weitzman we could find nothing against him.

For these reasons we are free to say to the Board of Pardons that we believe this particular case is one in which executive clemency should be shown, and would, therefore, join in the application for pardon."

Further, the District Attorney happened to be in attendance at our meeting, and personally stated to the Board his belief that the applicant is entitled to our favorable consideration, and that the application for clemency is meritorious by reason of the assistance given the Commonwealth by Weitzman voluntarily and without promise of immunity or reward.

Inasmuch, therefore, as this application is so well grounded, we recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, J. J. Weitzman.

COMMUTATION No. 1—1911.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, March 15, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Montgomery, to No. 111, October Term, 1909, John Ballon was, on December 10, 1909, convicted of the crime of murder. Upon February 21, 1910, he was sentenced to be hanged. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court; the judgment of the lower Court was affirmed. On November 15, 1910, an application for Commutation was filed with this Board. The application was heard at the recent February Meeting of the Board, and the case was held under advisement until our meeting of to-day. We recommend that a commutation of the death sentence imposed upon the applicant to that of imprisonment for life be now granted.

The applicant is a native of Italy. He is about twenty-four years of age. He came to this country some seven years ago, and has been living at Norristown for the past four years. His real name is Giovanni Ianerelli, but he assumed the name of John Ballon before coming to Norristown, and was known only by the latter name, and by that name was indicted. He has been an ordinary laborer, and was employed in a paper mill. He is unmarried, and has no home associations. His companions were people of his own nationality, some of whom were not of good reputation. Among those with whom he became friendly were three men named Frank Chicarine, Nick Maringe and Felix Faire.

On the night of August 31, 1909, these four men entered into a conspiracy or scheme to break into the house of an old man by the name of George A. Johnson, who lived a short distance outside the limits of Norristown. This man lived all alone; he was a shoe cobbler by occupation; it was reputed that he had money secreted about his house. The purpose of these desperados was to rob the old man of his money, and they evidently prepared themselves to go to any extent to carry out their design. They went together to Johnson's house about midnight, or a little later. An entrance to the building was forced. Two of the men entered the building and the other two watched on the outside. It is claimed that Ballon was one of the latter two. The old man was murderously assaulted by the two who went into the house. Then all fled. Johnson was not killed outright, but somehow managed to get to the house of his nearest neighbor, several hundred feet from his own house, where he gave the alarm. He was hurried to the hospital, and died on the next day, September 2, from the effects of the assault. His assailants escaped that night without detection, but shortly afterwards they were apprehended and charged with the commission of the murder. Faire made a confession. Ballon, when confronted with Faire's confession, also confessed. Their stories disagreed to some extent, but there is no doubt that the four men mentioned above were participants in the felony.

All four were joined in the indictment for murder. Severences were allowed on the trial. Chicarine, Maringe and Ballon was convicted of murder in the first degree, and each sentenced to be hanged. Chicarine and Maringe have been executed. Faire was returned by the jury as guilty of murder in the second degree, and was sentenced to a long term if imprisonment. On the day before, or on the day fixed for the execution of the other three, Ballon was respited to enable him to appeal to the Supreme Court, and further respited to allow him to make his application to this Board for commutation.

The plea, on which this application for mitigation of the severity of Ballon's sentence is based, is the allegation of weakmindedness of the applicant. It has not been made to appear that Ballon is insane; but it does appear that he is a man of weak mentality. His mind is easily influenced, overpowered and led by persons of stronger mental characteristics. Being of this weak and vascillating disposition, and drifting into an association with men of more pronounced strength of mind, who were men possibly more inclined to criminal activity then himself, he readily yielded to their suggestions of getting Johnson's money in a seemingly easy way, and, being persuaded to go with them on this marauding expedition, he became an accomplice in the murder without having a murderous intent. There is no allegation that the fatal injury was inflicted by Ballon, or even that he took part in the actual assault. On the contrary the confessions of his accomplices show distinctly that he was outside the house when the murder was committed. They show further that after he heard the shots fired, and when the other men all ran away, Ballon before leaving the scene went into the house, and seeing the injured man he compassionately bound up his wounds and did what he could to stop the flow of blood, making use of his own red handkerchief for this purpose. When Johnson was found by his neighbors, to whose house he dragged himself, he still had this handkerchief bound about his head. This action of Ballon's indicates that he did not have in his heart the murderous intent. Moreover, Faire, although returned by the jury that tried him as guilty of murder in the second degree only, was certainly not less guilty than Ballon. His life has been spared. The burden of the crime rests no more heavily upon Ballon than it did upon Faire. Indeed, there is reason to believe that Faire shared more nearly on an equality with Chicarine and Maringe in the conception and execution of the evil design of the four men than Ballon did. It was represented to us that when Chicarine and Maringe left their prison cells the day of their execution to go to the scaffold, they, not knowing that a respite had been granted to Ballon, but expecting him to be hanged at the same time as themselves, said: "We are sorry for poor John. Felix Faire should be in his place, and John should be where Felix is."

On a careful consideration of the case it appears to the Board that the execution of Chicarine and Maringe for the murder of George Johnson having been secured, the law has been vindicated so far as concerns the exaction of capital punishment for the felony; and Faire, another of the culprits, being doomed to undergo an imprisonment of twenty years, the ends of justice will be served if this applicant, John Ballon, be granted commutation of the death sentence, his life spared and he be consigned to life imprisonment. We therefore recommend that the sentence of death imposed upon John Ballon be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Respectfully submitted,

COMMUTATION No. 2—1911.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
Board of Pardons.

Harisburg, April 25, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Dauphin, to No. 138, September Sessions, 1909, Wells W. Detweiler was, January 19, 1910, convicted of the crime of Murder in the First Degree. On May 19, 1910, motion in arrest of judgment and for a new trial was overruled, and the defendant thereupon sentenced to be hanged. Upon appeal to the Supreme Court the judgment of the Court of Oyer and Terminer was, November 9, 1910, affirmed, and the record remitted.

On February 1, 1911, an application for commutation of sentence of death was duly filed with the Board. This application was heard at length at our meeting regularly held in February last, and has been held under advisement since that time. After a careful and thorough consideration of the application in all its aspects as presented to us we have reached the conclusion that the merciful intervention of Executive authority may properly be invoked in this case, and we therefore now respectfully recommend that the sentence of death imposed upon this applicant, Wells W. Detweiler, be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Detweiler is a man about forty-three years of age. He has been a resident of Harrisburg most of his life. His occupation is stated to be that of Clerk, although it might more properly be said that he was a man of leisure who followed the bent of his inclinations, which, unhappily, led him into evil ways. Early in life he became addicted to the use of narcotics. He drank to a considerable extent, and was known to be an habitual user of morphine and opium. His indulgence in these evil habits amounted to excess.

The homicide in which he was the guilty actor took place on the early morning of Monday, September 13, 1909, in the City of Harrisburg. The victim was Thomas Dwyer. Death resulted from the effects of two pistol shots fired by Detweiler into the body of Dwyer at close range in a room at a certain Club House maintained by a society or association known as "the Owls." Previous to the shooting Detweiler and Dwyer had been on friendly terms, and no existing cause of enmity, or even of bad feeling between them is known. Late on the Sunday night preceding the morning of the murder Detweiler went to the Club House mentioned, of which he was a frequenter, after having for some days prior to that been smoking and taking opium to excess. Just before going into the Club House it is alleged he took an opium pill about the size of a pea. Soon after entering the apartments of the Club he began drinking beer with a party of friends, among whom was Dwyer; Dwyer being the steward of the Club. Somewhere about midnight Detweiler and Dwyer engaged in a game of cards, playing for a money stake and a bottle of beer each game. This continued during the whole night. Nothing occured to mar the harmony of their intercourse. About six o'clock in the morning they changed their game from cards to throwing dice for money. Soon after starting this species of sport some sort of altercation arose over the stake, and Detweiler became very much excited. In moving about the room he fell to the floor, and had to be helped to his feet. In a maudlin way he said something about "wanting his dough," which would seem to indicate that he thought some advantage was being taken of him. He then went out of the building, procured a revolver, and returned to the Club Rooms. He came across Dwyer in the bath room sitting on the commode. He fired the two shots at him then and there, and thus became a murderer. The wounded man was hurried to the hospital, where he died within a few minutes after his admission. Detweiler was at once arrested and taken to jail. He remained in a state of stupor for a considerable period of time.

The reasons for clemency which were urged at the hearing are:

1. At the trial the Commonwealth failed to show motive for the killing.

2. For many years prior to the killing the petitioner was addicted to the use of morprine and opium, and while under the influence of said drugs would be wholly irresponsible, and after reason had returned would have no recollection of what had occured at such times.

3. At the time of the commission of the offense the petitioner was, from the conjoint use of opium and alcohol, in such a condition of mind as to be unable to reason or to discern right from wrong, and he has no recollection whatever of the crime.

5. The ends of justice would be satisfied by a commutation of the death sentence to that of life imprisonment.

Under the unbending rules of law all these points were determined against the defendant. They nevertheless weigh with the Pardon Board. It is proper for the pardoning power to regard the mental condition of this unfortunate man during the week before this occurrence. During the four or five days just preceding the night of the debauch at the Club Detweiler had been smoking opium three or four hours daily. On the night of Friday, and on Saturday, and twice on Sunday, just before the tragedy, he had taken opium pills as large as an ordinary pea. How much alcoholic liquor he drank during this interval is not known. During the night at the Club he drank beer of an uncertain quantity, but certainly more than a little. Under these conditions it is hardly possible to conceive that on the morning when he fired the fatal shots his mental state was normal. His mind must have been very much beclouded—so much so, as we believe, to seriously impair, if not destroy his ability to form a deliberate and premediated intent to kill.

There are on file with the papers in the case favorable endorsements of the application signed by more than two hundred residents of Harrisburg and Dauphin County, in addition to a similar endorsement signed by twenty-three members of the Bar of Dauphin County, certifying to the belief that the ends of justice will be accomplished by a commutation of the death sentence imposed on the applicant to that of imprisonment for life.

Under all the circumstances of this case we are of the belief that this is an instance in which Executive Clemency may properly be shown, and we therefore recommend that the sentence of death under which the applicant, Wells W. Detweiler, rests, be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Respectfully submitted,

COMMUTATION No. 3—1911.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, May 17, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Lawrence, to No. 3, September Term, 1910, Dominic Panaro was convicted on an indictment charging him with Murder. On March 16, 1911, he was sentenced to be hanged.

April 5, 1911, there was filed an application for commutation of the sentence of death to that of imprisonment for life. This application was fully heard at our April meeting, and since that time has been held under advisement. At our regular meeting held this day, having given the case careful consideration, we have decided to recommend that the prayer of the petitioner be granted.

The applicant is an Italian, a young man about eighteen years of age, unmarried, and without any relatives in this country. He himself has been in the country only about four or five years. Hs is an ordinary laborer, and, so far as we have been advised, has had no criminal record.

The homicide charged against him took place in the City of New Castle on the night of August 7, 1910. The victim was Owen Maguire, a street car conductor, between whom and the applicant there was no acquaintance, and of course no emnity; so that there was no preexisting motive for the murder. On the afternoon and evening of the day mentioned Panaro, in company with a number of other Italians, attended a christening celebration in New Castle. In this party were Tony Toskins and his wife. Late at night these three boarded a street car in New Castle, with the intention of going to Hubbard, Ohio. Toskins was considerably under the influence of liquor. Panaro was not under the influence of liquor. In the car Panaro occupied a seat on the opposite side of the aisle from Toskins and his wife. When the conductor, Maguire, passed through the car collecting fares Panaro paid for the three. When the conductor reached Toskins, the latter, who was an employe of the railway company, tendered him two employe's passes, and asked that he return to Panaro the amount of two fares and accept these passes for himself and wife. The conductor declined to do this. Toskins became excited, and insisted upon the return of the two fares to Panaro. He followed Maguire into another compartment of the car, and kept up the dispute. Panaro he joined the two, and tried to quiet Toskins. He endeavored to get him to go back to his seat with his wife, saying to him, "Don't you have no trouble here, you leave the ten cents go, you better sit down." Toskins would not be persuaded, but continued his profane and abusive talk to the conductor, when the latter stopped the car for the purpose of ejecting the whole party. He took hold of Panaro, and according to Panaro's statement, struck him in the face and kicked him in the stomach, and threw him off the car, saying, "You Dago son-of-a-bitch I will kill the three of you." Panaro is a man of small stature and of light weight; Magurie, the conductor, was a man six feet tall, and weighed about 175 pounds. So that the latter had no trouble in handling the young Italian. After putting Panaro off the car the conductor grappled with Toskins and tried to put him off too. In the struggle they both fell off, the conductor alighting on top of Toskins. The assault upon Panaro, being unexpected and, to him, unjustifiable, so excited and inflamed him, that in his rage, when Toskins and Marguire fell off along side of him and lay before him in their struggling, he drew his revolver and fired it five times; four of the shots took effect on the person of Maguire and one on Toskins. Maguire was hit on vital parts, and died soon after his removal to the hospital. Parano at once fled, but was arrested within a short time.

The preliminary hearing took place on the 11th of August, and the defendant was of course held for trial. The indictment was returned on the 6th of September. Counsel was assigned the defendant the same day. On the 9th of September a motion was made for a continuance of the case, which was refused; the case was then ordered for trial at the current term, and the day for trial fixed for September 13th, on which day the trial began. The verdict was rendered September 16th. Sentence was imposed March 16, 1911.

We have carefully considered this application. The verdict of the jury, under the law, fixes the grade of the crime, the penalty for which is death. The learned court did not feel justified in disturbing that verdict, and therefore refused a motion for a new trial, and imposed sentence. Our examination of the case warrants us, we think, in recommending that the sentence of death be commuted to that of imprisonment for life. The ground on which we base that belief is, substantially, that a mistake, from the standpoint of humanity, may have been made in the application of the rigid rules of law to the facts in this particular case. When the murderous shots were fired the defendant was under the stress of great excitement, was overcome by fear and rage, and on the spur of the moment and with but little time for deliberation he made use of the weapon in his possession. The trial followed soon after the commission of the crime, and circumstances were all adverse to the defendant. He belongs to a class of people who at the time of this trouble were regarded with suspision throughout that section of the state. Many violations of law had been charged up against the foreigners who lived in that and adjoining counties, and very often with good reason; owing to the frequent commission of crimes the state of the public mind was anything but favorable to that element of the population. Panaro was a stranger and was without friends except among his own countrymen. Naturally the feeling throughout the community was against him. It is not at all surprising that there was a verdict of murder in the first degree. However, when we reflect that there was absolute lack of motive for the commission of murder, that the deed was done under the aggravation of an assault in the heat of passion and with little time for premeditation, that a speedy trial followed, and that the verdict was rendered while the public mind was unsettled, we are impressed with the belief that a merciful intervention of the pardoning power is warranted and proper, and we are of the opinion that the ends of justice will be met by relieving this unfortunate man from the death penalty and commuting his sentence to that of prisonment for life.

We therefore recommend that the sentence of death imposed upon Dominic Panaro be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Respectfully submitted,

COMMUTATION No. 4—1911.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, September 20, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in for the County of Luzerne, to No. 80, September Term, 1909, George L. Marion was, January 27, 1910, convicted on an indictment charging him with murder; and upon March 4, 1911, was sentenced to be hanged. On appeal to the Supreme Court the judgment of the Court of Oyer and Terminer was, July 17, 1911, affirmed,

On September 6, 1911, an application for commutation of death sentence was duly filed, and the case was heard at the meeting of the Board held this day.

After giving the case the careful examination and consideration its importance demands, the Board has decided that the application should receive favorable attention, and we, therefore, recommend that the sentence of death imposed upon the applicant, George L. Marion, be commuted to that of life imprisonment.

Marion is a man of about 54 years of age. He had been engaged in the theatrical business, working some times as an advance agent, and some times as manager. Some eight or nine years ago he met in the City of Chicago a woman named Frances Lee, to whom he became very much attached. They contemplated marriage and began living together as husband and wife, although no marriage ceremony was ever actually performed. They were recognized by their friends, and by the parents of the woman, with whom they lived for a considerable period, as man and wife, and there is no doubt but that the common law relationship of husband and wife existed. A male child was born to them several years after their common law marital began. During the summer of 1909, while Marion was temporarily absent from their home in Illinois, his wife, with their child, took up her abode in the State of New Jersey, and soon afterwards Marion received reports of the infidelity of his wife. He attempted to win her back but was unsuccessful. These things preyed heavily upon his mind and worried him to excess. Within a short time afterwards the woman took up with another man whose home was in Wilkes-Barre, this State. Marion was informed that these two were married, the marriage taking place on August 13, 1909. The new husband within a few days deserted the woman, whereupon she secured employment in Wilkes-Barre as waitress at a hotel. Marion learned of her whereabouts, and arraigned through the aid of the Chief of Police of that City to have a meeting with her. He came to Wilkes-Barre from New York on August 20, having procured a revolver, which he concealed on his person, loaded ready for use. He met his wife at the office of the Chief of Police in Wilkes-Barre, and after a few minutes conservation with her, he requested that he and his wife be left alone. The others went out of the room. Immediately upon their departure they heard the report of two shots. They rushed back into the room where they found the woman lying on the floor with two bullet wounds on her person, and Marion, with the smoking revolver in his hand, pointed to his own head. He was at once disarmed and placed under arrest. The woman never regained consciousness and died within a few moments.

The reasons on which the prayer for clemency is based are:

1. That at the time of the commission of the crime, the applicant was of unsound mind.

2. That the ends of justice will be met if his sentence is commuted to life imprisonment.

The issue of mental soundness was raised at the trial. However, Marion was a stranger in Luzerne County, and was entirely destitute and friendless. Counsel were appointed to defend him, but there was no provision for securing the atendance of witnesses, or the service of mediac experts. On the consideration of the bare facts by the jury, it would appear that their verdict could hardly have been any thing else than what it was. It has been learned since though that it was well known among Marion's acquaintances in the theatrical business, that there were times when he gave evidence of mental unsoundness. These persons, owing to the nature of their business, were not accessible at the time of the trial, and their testimony could not be produced. Many persons who saw Marion and talked with him immediately after the commission of the crime, were impressed to the effect of his mental unsoundness, but under the rules of law, they were not qualified to testify with regard to their impressions. Dr. H. B. Meredith, the well known expert on insanity, was a witness on the part of the Commonwealth, but was not cross-examined. His testimony, it seems, was based on a hypothetical question. There was submitted to the Board a letter written by Dr. Meredith, under date of September 16, 1911, giving the result of his personal examination and observation of the man, in which he says:

"I, the undersigned, chief expert witness in the case of George L. Marion, convicted of murder in the first degree by the Courts of Luzerne County, Pa., and now condemned to hang on or about September 27, 1911, ask due consideration of the case looking to commutation to imprisonment for life. While guilty of the act and apparently appreciating its penalty, the circumstances surrounding its commission were such as probably to obsecure in his mind its serious nature, and I believe the ends of justice would be fully subserved by the commutation asked for, and I heartily concur in the same."

Mr. Hourigan, the Assistant District Attorney who took part in the trial, also writes, under date of September 15, stating among other things:

"Prior to the trial I never had any conversation with Marion. Since the trial I have called to see him many times. I do not believe that he is the kind of man that the law contemplates should be hanged. He is not a normal man. While I feel that he was sane, according to the standards fixed by law at the time of the killing, I do not believe that he is a man of such mentality that should be held responsible to the high degree of punishment inflicted by the law.

I know that this opinion prevailed somewhat during the time of the trial, and such a noted authority as Dr. Meredith, Superintendent of the Danville Insane Asylum, was of the opinion at that time, and so stated to me. You will note in the Paper Book that Dr. Meredith was not cross examined by counsel for the defense, and I feel that had he been cross examined he would have aided materially in establishing the fact that Marion was very weak mentally.

From conversation and observation of Marion, since the time of the trial, I thoroughly agree with Dr. Meredith. I believe that the ends of justice will be met in this case by a commutation of sentence."

It is our judgment, therefore, that there is doubt as to the soundness of mind of this defendant at the time of the commission of this homicide, testimony in relation to which, had it been accessible at the trial, would have justified a different verdict.

Further, we are assured that public sentiment in the community where the homicide occured, is favorable to the commutation of the death penalty. Both the judge who presided at the trial and the District Attorney who had charge of the prosecution, are now dead. The Assistant District Attorney, who is the only official living who took part in the prosecution, writes to the Board favoring the commutation, as hereinbefore qpoted. Likewise, ten of the jurors who heard the case and who rendered the verdict; one of the other two having left the County and his whereabouts being at present unknown. Many letters from well known and reputable citizens of the vicinity, endorsing the application, are on file with our record.

From all that has been brought to our attention it is our opinion that the two reasons for clemency set forth are well grounded, and we, therefore, recommend that, for the reasons asigned, the sentence of death imposed upon the applicant, George L. Marion, be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

COMMUTATION No. 5—1911.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, September 20, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Cambria, to No. 7, September Term, 1910, John R. Edwards, on December 14, 1910, entered a plea of guilty to an indictment charging him with Murder, and, on January 17, 1911, after hearing testimony, the Court filed an opinion adjudging the degree of guilt to be that of Murder of the First Degree; and thereupon, March 7, 1911, the defendant was sentenced to be hanged.

On May 2, 1911, an application for commutation of death sentence to that of imprisonment for life was duly filed. The case was heard at the May meeting of the Board, and has been held under advisement since that time. We have given the matter careful examination, and, after thoroughly considering all the features of the case as brought out at the hearing and from a study of the record before us, we have reached the conclusion that it would be proper to extend to the applicant the clemency prayed for. We therefore recommend that there be allowed a commutation of the sentence of death imposed on the defendant, John R. Edwards, to that of imprisonment for life.

Edwards is a man of fifty years of age. The victim of his felonious act was his wife, Margaret Edwards, whom he shot to death at their home in Johnstown on June 21, 1910. At the time of the commission of the deed Edwards was in a state of gross intoxication, and had been in such condition for about two weeks immediately prior thereto; and for a period of some two years before the date of the homicide had been drinking heavily.

It is urged in support of this application that this habitual and prolonged use of intoxicants had seriously impaired his mentality to the extent of depriving him of all control over himself so that his conduct was that of one destitute of the sense of thinking and intending to commit the crime of murder in the first degree.

In a court of justice such a defense possibly would not secure a verdict lower than first degree murder under the facts of the case. On the testimony submitted, the finding of the Court was without doubt warranted. However, the argument based on such a defense has weight before a board of clemency, whose power and duty is to soften the rigor of the rules of law; and therefore out of motives of mercy we are disposed to favor the application grounded on the reasons alleged.

We are supported in this recommendation by the array of a great number of endorsements of the application which show clearly the drift of public sentiment throughout the county of Cambria. Among the letters to this effect on file with us is the following from Judge O'Connor, who heard the testimony and sentenced the prisoner:

"Johnstown, Pa., April 28, 1911.

To the Board of Pardons, Harrisburg, Penna.

Gentlemen:—I hereby certify and declare that as President Judge of the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, after hearing and carefully considering all of the evidence for and against one John R. Edwards, charged with murdering his wife, I fixed the degree of his guilt as that of murder in the first degree on the 17th day of January 1911. Subsequently, on the 15th of March, 1911, I sentenced him to be hanged.

At the date of fixing the degree, as well as upon the day of sentence, I declared if an application were made for commutation of sentence to that of life imprisonment, I would not feel like making any opposition to such move.

The degree of defendant's guilt was properly found and fixed. We could not have fixed otherwise unless influenced by fear or cowardice. His friends say since sentence has been passed that they have discovered some evidence in the condemned man's favor. Of this we know nothing except as we state it. There, however, exists in our city considerable sympathy for defendant due to the fact that he bore a good reputation prior to his commission of the act for which he stands convicted, and was kindly disposed toward all mankind until indulgence in strong drink, likely due to domestic infelicity, seems to have wrought a complete change in the man's disposition. I am personally not so strongly in favor of hanging as others whom I have known, and even though I were, I would not interpose any objection to commutation of the sentence of that of life imprisonment in the present case.

Respectfully submitted,

FRANCIS J. O'CONNER."

The District Attorney in his letter, after setting forth the history of the case, writes as follows:

"When the case was called for trial the defendant did not take the witness stand, but entered a plea of guilty, and the Court heard the evidence and filed an opinion, fixing the degree at Murder in the First Degree.

The Court, at the time of rendering the decision and fixing the degree at Murder in the First Degree, suggested to the defendant that if an effort were made to commute the sentence from hanging to life imprisonment, he would join in a request to the Board of Pardons that the sentence be commuted to life imprisonment. I am informed that he has writtten such a communication to the Board of Pardons.

I do not feel called upon to interfere with any suggestions which the Court may make in this case. Mr. Edwards maintains that his mind was a blank from the time he reached Johnstown until he was landed in the County Jail after the murder was committed. There was some considerable testimony on this feature of the case, and some strong testimony in opposition to it. I am reliably informed that all of the friends and relatives of the deceased are of the opinion that he was irresponsible and did not know what he was doing, and are earnestly praying the Board of Pardons for commutation of sentence.

Mr. Edwards and his wife had but one daughter who is married and is at present in a delicate condition, and it is the belief that she will not survive the execution of her father if he were to be hanged.

These are some of the reasons that have been urged by the daughter and her friends, and the sister and relatives of the woman who was murdered. There is no doubt that Mr. Edwards' repentance for the deed is deep and sincere. He made an eloquent plea to the Court when he was sentenced to be hanged, in which he blamed all his trouble on intoxicating drinks, and again reiterated that he did not have the slightest recollection of anything that happened from the time he landed in Johnstown until he was committed to the County Jail, and spoke of his wife in the most endearing terms.

There seems to be considerable sentiment in favor of commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment; and the Judge having suggested a commutation at the time he rendered an opinion fixing the degree at Murder in the First Degree, and again when he sentenced the defendant to be hanged, I do not feel called upon to urge any objection to the court's suggestion."

Believing, therefore, that this is a case deserving of merciful intervention we recommend that there be issued a commutation of the sentence of death imposed upon the applicant, John R. Edwards, to that of life imprisonment.

Respectfully submitted,

Lieutenant Governor.

COMMUTATION No. 6—1911.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
Board of Pardons.
Harrisburg, November 15, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Philadelphia, to No. 297, June Term, 1910, William Cunningham was, November 3, 1910, convicted on an indictment charging him with the crime of murder, and on January 20, 1911, he was sentenced to be hanged.

On October 12, 1911, an application for commutation of death sentence was filed with the Board. We heard the application at our October meeting, and have held the matter under advisement since that time. We now recommend that the prayer of the application be allowed, and that the sentence of death imposed upon William Cunningham be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Cunningham is a colored man, 33 years of age. So far as known, he had never been accused of any crime prior to the commission of the felony charged in this indictment. The victim of homicide was James McDevitt. The murder took place in the City of Philadelphia on the evening of June 7, 1910.

It does not appear to have been shown at the trial that these men were acquainted with one another. As we understand their meeting on this evening was casual. McDevitt was a peddler of coal. On the evening in question he was plying his trade on Clarion Street in the City of Philadelphia. A dog belonging to a house nearby where Cunningham boarded, barked at the peddler, and the latter began throwing coal at him. About this time Cunningham came along, and he took up the defense of the dog in a wordy conflict with McDevitt. This war of words soon ended, and Cunningham went into his house, where he remained for 15 or 20 minutes. It does not appear that he was at all excited over the occurence with McDevitt, nor was it shown that he started out from the house with the intention of making further trouble. However, he went a short distance from his home and stood on a street corner. Soon afterwards McDevitt came along, and in some manner the two men again met, and the altercation started up once more. In the course of the dispute and the calling one another hard names, the two men grappled. In the scuffle, Cunningham drew a razor and slashed at McDevitt, making but a single stroke, which caught McDevitt on the neck at a vital point, from the effects of which blow McDevitt soon afterwards died. Cunningham not knowing the serious consequence of his blow left the neighborhood for the night, but returned the next morning, when he was arrested.

The reasons upon which the claim for clemency is based are the following:

"1. Because from all the evidence of the Commonwealth's witnesses in the trial of the case against William Cunningham arises great uncertainty as to the events immediately surrounding the killing of James McDevitt.

"2. That the act of William Cunningham as a consequence of which James McDevitt died was not of such atrocious nature as to demand expiation so severe as the death penalty.

"3. That the fact that William Cunningham stabbed the deceased but once after an altercation, and immediately fled from the scene without inflecting any further blow should be of controlling value in the determination of the penalty he should pay.

"4. That the circumstances of the Defendant's voluntary return to the City after fleeing to Conshohocken and mingling with the people in the neighborhood of the crime shows that his mental disposition concerning the matter was not one of a murderer who had accomplished a homicide, but on the contrary evidences his ignorance as to the full termination of his single blow.

"5. That under the facts of this case as contained in the testimony given at the trial of the Defendant, and in view of the prior good character of this Defendant, a commutation of the penalty of death by hanging to one of life imprisonment will fully meet the ends of justice and provide sufficient punishment for the offense committed."

From our examination of this case we are inclined to the belief that there is sufficient doubt as to the presence of the elements of murder in the first degree to warrant a board of clemency in interposing in favor of human life, and we, therefore recommend that the sentence of death imposed upon William Cunningham, be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Respectfully submitted,

JNO. M. REYNOLDS,
Lieutenant Governor.

COMMUTATION No. 7—1911.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
Board of Pardons.
Harrisburg, November 15, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Philadelphia, to No. 445, September Term, 1908, George

Lee was, October 28, 1908, convicted on an indictment charging him with murder, and on the 31st day of March, 1911, he was sentenced to be hanged. On appeal to the Supreme Court, the judgment of the Court of Oyer and Terminer was affirmed.

On October 4, 1911, an application for commutation of death sentence was duly filed. We gave the application a hearing at our recent October meeting, since which time we have held the matter under advisement. We now recommend that the prayer of the petitioner be granted, and that there be allowed commutation of the death sentence heretofore imposed upon the applicant, George Lee, to that of imprisonment for life.

The applicant, George Lee, who was also known by the name of Moy Lung and Moy Chon Lung, is a young Chinaman, believed to be about 23 years of age, who in the Summer of 1908 came to the City of Philadelphia from the City of Chicago. At 2 o'clock on the afternoon of July 14, 1908, some eight or nine days after his arrival in Philadelphia, he shot and killed Lee Chit, another Chinaman, as the latter was about entering his own place of business, 917 Race Street, in the City of Philadelphia. No motive was shown for the homicidal act. There was no quarrel between the two men, and, so far as is known they were not even acquainted with each other. The prisoner was standing on one side of the street, and, seeing Lee Chit on the other side, he walked across the street, and without any warning or preliminary display of intention to commit murder, pulled out a revolver and fired at his countryman at close range and killed him. The defense on the trial was insanity. Expert testimony was submitted on both sides of this issue, and the jury determined the question against the Defendant.

The applicant has been in confinement in the Philadelphia County Prison since July 14, 1908. At the time of the trial it was the belief of the Assistant Resident Physician of the Prison that the prisoner was sane, and he so testified. One of the attendants at the prison testified to the same effect. In the three years that have elapsed since the trial it was the belief of the Assistant Rerident Physician mediate supervision, and both of them, as well as the Physician-in-Chief and other attendants and nurses at the prison, are now of the opinion that the prisoner is insane, and that his malady is growing worse. There appears of record before us the testimonials of these officials given by them a few days prior to our meeting, wherein they thus express their belief.

Under the feeling of doubt as to the prisoner's present sanity brought about by this condition of the record, the Board felt impelled to seek further information on the subject, and we accordingly requested Dr. Frank Woodbury, of the Board of Public Charities, and Secretary of that Board's Committee on Lunacy, to make an examination of the prisoner and to submit to this Board a report as to his opinion of the present mental condition of the applicant. Dr. Woodbury promptly and cheerfully acceded to our request, and under date of October 26, tendered to the Board the result of his examination and inquiry, wherein he sets forth in detail the reasons for his conclusion. The Doctor closes his report in the following language: "I beg, therefore, to most respectfully report that in my opinion the convict, George Lee, or Moy Chun Lung, is now insane."

Thus, it appearing to us that this applicant is now for a certainty of unsound mind, we conclude that it would be contrary to the impulses of humanity and against the policy of the law, to inflict upon him the penalty of death, notwithstanding the testimony of his insanity did not at the time of the trial preponderate and overbalance the presumption and proof of sanity when the homicide was committed. We deem it our duty, therefore, to recommend that the sentence of death imposed upon the applicant, George Lee, be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Respectfully submitted,

Lieutenant Governor.

COMMUTATION No. 8—1911.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, November 15, 1911.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Northumberland, to No. 2, September Term, 1910, Antonio Rizzi was, October 4, 1910, convicted on an indictment charging him with murder; and upon September 18, 1911, was sentenced to be hanged.

On October 4, 1911, an application for commutation of death sentence was duly filed, which application was heard at our October meeting, and has been held under advisement since that time. We now recommend that the prayer of the application be allowed, and that a commutation of the sentence of death imposed upon Antonio Rizzi to that of imprisonment for life be granted.

Rizzi is a young Italian aged about 27 years. He came to this county about 7 years ago. He lived at Pottsville a while, then at Reading, and then at Wilkes-Barre. About four years ago he went to Mount Carmel, where he was living at the time of the commission of the felony for which he has been sentenced.

The victim of the homicide was Henry Lechleitner. Those two men were not acquainted with one another in the slightest degree. There were no previous threats, and no motive whatever can be assigned for the felonious assault. The defense at the trial was insanity, or mental unsoundness. The jury determined this issue against the Defendant. The ground on which the application before us is based is the same as that urged before the Court.

The facts connected with this distressing homicide are few. Mr. Lechleitner was standing on the street in Mount Carmel in company with two other gentlemen, all engaged in conversation. The Defendant happened to approach them along the opposite side of the street, coming in their direction. No attention at all was given to him by the three citizens, but he seems to have noticed the small group of gentlemen talking with one another in a lively manner. When about passing them he "let out a yell," as one of the witnesses says, bounded across the street, and thrust a knife into the body of Lechleitner, and attempted to inflict stabs on the other two men. He was of course at once apprehended. His only reason given for his act was that these men were laughing at him, which, to be sure, was entirely foreign to the truth.

After hearing these facts detailed, the Board felt constrained to seek further light upon the subject of the Defendant's mental condition. To this end we requested Dr. Frank Woodbury, Secretary of the Board of Public Charities' Committee on Lunacy, to make an examination of the prisoner, and to report to the Board with reference to his present mental condition. Dr. Woodbury acceded to this request, and upon November 10, a few days ago, submitted to the Board an exhaustive report in writing covering all aspects of Rizzi's physical and mental condition. The conclusion reached by the Doctor is the following:

"Summing up the evidence of all kinds in this case, I am of the opinion that Antonio Rizzi is insane, and that he is classified as an instance of constitutional inferiority, or high grade imbecile. This condition being chronic and incurable, and of a homicidal type, he is a proper subject for permanent incarceration in a hospital for the insane."

This being the view of so competent an expert upon the subject as Dr. Woodbury, this Board deems it to be the duty of the Board to advise that Executive clemency be shown this applicant to the extent of commuting the death sentence to that of imprisonment for life. We, therefore, recommend that the sentence of death imposed upon Antonio Rizzi by the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Northumberland County, be commuted to that of life imprisonment.

COMMUTATION No. 1—1912.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, January 17, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Mifflin, to No. 1, May Term, 1910. Wiliam C. Schrader was, September 2, 1910, convicted on an indictment charging him with murder. Upon June 15, 1911 he was sentenced to be hanged. On January 4, 1912, an application for commutation of death sentence to that of imprisonment for life was duly made. This application was heard at our meeting of this day, and, after giving the case careful consideration and examination, we are of the opinion that the application should be allowed, and we, therefore, recommend that a commutation of the death sentence imposed upon said Schrader to that of imprisonment for life, be granted.

The applicant is a young man of about 24 years of age. He had been living at Lewistown, Mifflin County, for several years before the commission of this crime, working in the steel works near that place, and boarding in the town with a family by the name of Specht. On Christmas Day of 1909 the Spect family visited the family of Mrs. Specht's parents, whose name is Singley and who lived several miles out of town. They invited their boarder Schrader to go with them, which he did. At the house of the Singley's, Schrader met Myrtle Singley, a daughter of the people of the house, and a sister of Mrs. Specht. He became smitten with the girl, although it seems she was somewhat older than he was. He visited her from time to time, and soon became infatuated with her. He made her numerous presents, and took her to places of amusement. The girl accepted his presents and received his attentions, but did not reciprocate his feelings of love. She declined his proffer of marriage. In various ways, however, it is alleged, she lured him on and encouraged him in his attentions. He wrote her passionate letters, and she replied, but not in kind. This course of conduct on her part preyed on his mind, and he became wrought up to a high state of excitement. He said that he could not sleep or eat through thinking of her, and was not able to do his work properly.

On Sunday, March 20, 1910, Myrtle Singley and a girl friend of hers started out from the Singley home to take a horseback ride. They rode through the streets of Lewistown, passed the Specht house once or twice, and finally stopped in front of the house. Schrader was in his room on the second story of the house and saw them. When they finally stopped in front of the house he went to the window of his room, and, goaded with a sudden impulse, seized a gun that he had in his room, fired at Mrytle Singley, the shot striking her in the breast and causing her death. He was of course at once arrested and lodged in prison. At the trial which followed, the defense was unsoundness of mind.

The reasons set forth in the application for commutation are the following:

First. The applicant was of unsound mind from childhood.
Second. The applicant's unsound mind was hereditary from his father.
Third. Applicant's sister was affected with a disordered mind.
Fourth. Applicant was crazed with love for Myrtle Singley, and thereby his mental disorder was rendered more intense.
Fifth. Applicant's love was unrequited by Myrtle Singley and aggravated by her accepting numerous presents from Schrader and treating him badly.
Sixth. At the time of the commission of the crime Schrader's mind was so wrought up by the conduct of Myrtle Singley that he did not realize the enormity of the crime and its consequences, and had not will power sufficient to resist the impulse to commit the crime.
Seventh. Applicant's excellent and uniform good character prior to the tragedy.

Although the jury found against the Defendant on the issue of unsoundness of mind, there seems to be a prevailing opinion in the community that the case merits Executive intervention to the extent of commuting the death sentence to that of imprisonment for life. The man had a fair trial and the jury found against him. The verdict and the judgment were just, and under the law, the Defendant's life is a forfeit. However, yielding to the voice of mercy, the pardoning power reasonably may, by sparing to this unfortunate man his life, modify the hard demands of the law and still satisfy the claims of justice and protect society by exacting from him an imprisonment during the remainder of his natural life without hope of further relief. Any punishment less than life imprisonment should not be tolerated for his flagrant violation of law.

Many letters from prominent and influential people of the County of Mifflin are on file with us favoring commutation. The present District Attorney and one of the Commonwealth's associate counsel in the trial of the case, ask our favorable action on the application. The District Attorney who had chrage of the trial removed from the County soon after the trial and before the expiration of his term of office, but we are advised that he does not object to the grant of commutation.

In the light of all that was brought to our attention, we are disposed to accept the reasons set forth in the application as warranting our approval of the petition for clemency. We, therefore, recommend that there be granted to this applicant, William C. Schrader, a commutation of death sentence to that of imprisonment for life.

Respectfully submitted,

COMMUTATION No. 2—1912.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, February 21, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Philadelphia, to No. 273, October Term, 1907, Frank Endrukat was, December 12, 1907, arraigned on an indictment charging him with murder. When called upon to plead counsel, who had been assigned to his defense, entered a plea of "Present Insanity," which plea was overruled. Upon being called upon to plead further the prisoner stood mute, and a plea of "not guilty" was ordered to be entered of record. Upon the issue thus formed the Commonwealth introduced facts with respect to the commission of the crime, and the prisoner introduced evidence which bore upon the condition of his mind at the time of trial. Under instruction of the trial judge the jury was directed to try the prisoner upon the indictment, and also to determine the question of insanity at the time of the trial. December 13, 1907, the jury returned a verdict upon both issues, viz.; That the prisoner was guilty of murder in the first degree, and that he was insane at the time of trial. The verdict was so recorded. The prisoner was then committed to the Norristown Insane Asylum, where he was confined for some time—more than a year—when, upon certificate of the Superintendent of the Institution, that he no longer needed remedial treatment or custody there, he was returned to the Philadelphia County Prison. After the lapse of three years from the time of the original trial the prisoner was brought into Court upon motion of the Commonwealth for judgment on the verdict. The Court refused this motion, and, against the objection of the defendant, set aside the previous verdict, and directed that the prisoner be arraigned again and be again called upon to plead to the indictment. When arraigned this second time a special plea was entered setting up the former trial, etc., and asking for the discharge of the prisoner. This plea was overruled, as well as other motions looking to the discharge of the prisoner, and the trial proceeded on the indictment. Neither the prisoner or his counsel took any active part in this trial. A verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree was entered on the finding of the jury. Sentence of death was imposed January 12, 1911. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court on certain technical questions involved in the proceedings, but the judgment of the Court of Oyer and Terminer was affirmed.

On September 6, 1911, an application for commutation of death sentence was duly filed. The matter was heard at our September meeting, and the case has been held under advisement since that time. After careful examination of the case, aided by the report of a medical expert of our own selection, we have reached the conclusion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive Clemency, and we therefore recommend that the sentence of death heretofore imposed upon the applicant, Frank Endrukat, be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Endrukat is a man of about thirty-two years of age. He has born in Germany, but when about two years old his family removed to Russia, where he was reared. He came to this country early in January, 1907. While living in Russia there was an attachment between him and a young woman by the name of Martha Corias. The girl's parents objected to their marriage, and the two young people entered into a pact to commit suicide together. The attempt was made, but was not successful. Soon afterwards the woman came to this country. Later on Endrukat emigrated also. In some way, apparently altogether by accident, they met in the City of Philadelphia. The girl did not respond to his desires for a renewal of their relations as sweethearts. According to the evidence of the Commonwealth at the trial the girl, on April 29, 1907, was in a bakery buying bread when the defendant entered, spoke to her in German, and she said "Let me go." He then pulled a revolver from his pocket and shot her, afterward turning the revolver on himself and inflicting a wound in his head. The girl died instantly, and Endrukat was taken to the hospital, where he remained in a semi-conscious condition for a long time. The bullet is still in his head, although so far as bodily injury is concerned he has recovered from the wound.

When counsel were assigned to defend the prisoner they found that he knew nothing whatever of his homicidal act, and was unable to confer with them intelligently in the preparation of his defense. It is claimed that the memory of the prisoner with reference to the occurrence was a blank: that he was in a condition of mind at the time of the trial known to medical science as "traumatic amnesia," or loss of memory due to physical injury to the head. In other words that the prisoner was insane at the time of the trial.

The applicant has been the subject of examination on the part of a number of medical men who are experts in the line of insanity. The opinion prevails among these experts that there is so much doubt as to the sanity of the prisoner that it would not be humane to inflict upon him the death penalty. The conclusion reached by Dr. Frank Woodbury, the Secretary of the State Board of Charities, Committee on Lunacy, to whom we referred the question, is as follows:

"From my personal examination and observation I can find no positive indication of insanity in the prisoner, Frank Endrukat, at the present time. I have a strong conviction, however, that he is to a certain degree abnormal. His total unconsciousness of the gravity of his crime and of his nearness to death, and his marked unconcern and cheerful demeanor at all times, do not appear to be the natural attitude of the normal human being under such circumstances. Furthermore, the presence of a brain lesion and of bullets in his cranium, warrant the inference that his cerebral organs are not in an entirely normal condition. Under such circumstances, if the suggestion is permissible, I beg to recommend that this man's sentence be commuted to life imprisonment, as I agree with Dr. Richardson that there is just sufficient element of doubt in the case to warrant this act of clemency. No advantage would result from sending him to a hospital for the insane for treatment at present, but in the future if he should have a maniacal outbreak this eventuality might be properly considered."

On the ground, therefore, of the doubt as to the prisoner's sanity, and with the belief that the ends of justice will be reached, and the interests of society protected, by the confinement of this man during the remainder of his natural life without hope of further relief from imprisonment, and where he can be watched, and be restrained if occasion arises,—we recommend that the sentence of death imposed upon Frank Endrukat, the applicant, be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Respectfully submitted,

COMMUTATION No. 3—1912.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, April 17, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Mercer, to No. 17, October Term, 1909, Velka Ankarich was indicted on a charge of Murder, and upon November 10, 1909, was convicted of murder in the first degree. On January 3, 1912, he was sentenced to be hanged.

March 29, 1912, an application for commutation of death sentence was duly filed. The case was presented at our meeting of to-day, and, after careful consideration, we are of the opinion that clemency may properly be shown towards the petitioner. We therefore recommend that there be issued a commutation of the sentence of death imposed by the Court on Velka Ankorich to that of imprisonment for life.

The applicant is a foreigner, and is about twenty-eight years of age. He has a wife and child living in Austria. He has been in this country but a little more than four years, and had been here less than two years when he was apprehended for this crime. He has no friends or relatives on this side of the ocean.

On the evening of July 26th, 1909, near the City of Sharon, Mercer County, a foreigner by the name of Marcukite was set upon by three other foreigners, and then and there killed. The three assailants escaped from the county. They had been seen and recognized by certain other foreigners at the time of the assault. A short time afterwards Ankarich was arrested in the City of Chicago, charged with participating in the murder, and brought back to Mercer County for trial. Although he has at all times persistenly maintained his innocence of the crime the jury on the trial found against him. The two men have never been apprehended, and Ankarich alone is in the grasp of the law to expiate the murder. The testimony tended to show that one of the men who escaped struck the blow that killed Marcukite.

This application for commutation is favored by a great many of the citizens of Mercer county, who have signed petitions to us asking that it be granted. Also a very considerable number of the substantial citizens of the county, including members of the jury, court officials, clergymen, members of the bar, and many others, have written us letters endorsing the application in strong terms. The feeling of the community seems to be that, under all the the circumstances, the Commonwealth, in the interest of justice, ought to be satisfied with a sentence of life imprisonment for this unfortunate and friendless stranger as a punishment for whatever part he took in the commission of the murder. Ankarich himself is in such a condition of health that, acording to the opinion of four or five physicians who have examined him recently, and whose certificates supported by their affidavits are on file with the papers in the case, his death will in all probability occur from natural causes within two or three years, and possibly in the very near future.

Among other letters submitted to us is one from Judge A. W. Williams, who presided at the trial, and who says, among other things: "In view of all the circumstances in this case, considering the precarious condition of the defendant's health and his persistent assertion of his innocense of the crime, if we had had any discretion in the case as to the sentence to be imposed, we would have imposed that of life imprisonment. The case is before your honorable Board, however, to be disposed of in such manner as all of the circumstances seem to warrant, and we shall have no complaint to make should your Board conclude to commute the sentence."

From all the information imparted to us at the hearing, and recognizing the force of the petitions, letters and endorsements on file, and actuated to a considerable extent out of considerations of mercy, we are led to favor this application.

We therefore recommend that a commutation of the sentence of death imposed upon Velka Ankarich to that of life imprisonment be granted.

Respectfully submitted,

COMMUTATION No. 4—1912.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, September 18, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Lackawanna, to No. 22, February Term, 1912. William Peter Bishee, (or Bishie), was, on February 9, 1912, convicted on a charge of murder, and on February 14, 1912, was sentenced to be hanged.

On April 30, 1912, an application for commutation of sentence of death to that of life imprisonment was duly filed with this Board, and upon hearing at the May meeting of the Board the same was refused. At the following June meeting of the Board an application for a re-hearing of the case was duly presented, and a re-hearing was allowed.

The case came on regularly to be heard at our September meeting held this day. Upon reviewing the application, and upon full consideration of the case in the light of all that has been brought to our attention, we are now of the opinion that the best interests of the Commonwealth would be served by relieving this defendant of the extreme penalty of death, sparing his life, and assigning him to an imprisonment for the rest of his days. We therefore recommend that the sentence of death under which Bishee now rests be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

The applicant, Bishee, is a youth now under the age of nineteen years. At the time of the commission of the offense charged against him, to wit, November 17, 1911, he had not reached his eighteenth year. He shot and killed Irvan Borger, an express messenger of the United States Express Company, employed on the Lackawanna Railroad on the train running between Northumberland and Scranton. The murder took place within the limits of the City of Scranton.

The ground on which the application for clemency is based is that Bishee at the time of the commission of the crime was so feeble-minded and mentally deficient that he was unable to appreciate the gravity of the offense.

From the letters, testimonials, petitions, etc., made part of the record of the case before us it has been made to appear that this ground is substantial. Public sentiment in that community is to the effect that the ends of justice would be met by the substitution of a degree of life imprisonment for the decree of death, under which Bishee now rests. The expression of this sentiment is condensed in the statement contained in the petition signed by all the jurors who tried the case, wherein they state that the jury believe that while the evidence of the mental condition of the defendant was not sufficient to warrant them in acquitting, they believe that under all the evidence in the case his sentence should be commuted to life imprisonment. They further state that if they could under the law have recommended or sentenced the said defendant to life imprisonment they would unanimously have done so.

The Judge who tried the case, in accepting notice of the application for commutation, wrote to the Board as follows:

"To the Board of Pardons, Harrisburg, Pa.

Gentlemen:—Referring to the annexed notice I beg to say I have no reason to doubt the properiety of the verdict. The case on its undisputed facts presented all the elements of first degree murder. The only defense was mental unsoundness. But I have no reason to doubt that the accused is entirely responsible. True, he is mentally shallow. It is his moral sense that is specially lacking. While the verdict was right, I cannot resist the belief that there are some good reasons in favor of commutation, provided it is to be imprisonment for life. There would be nothing to favor it if he is likely to be discharged after a few years. His lack of moral sensibility is radical, and, at large, he might be a menace. I wouldn't say he is a degenerate as that term is used by professional writers. But as he impressed me I can only describe him as a poor, weak, scrofulous, narrow-shouldered, hollow-chested, ill-developed boy. To my mind hanging would reflect no credit on either the law of the gospel. He is a weakling with a crude appetite for ostentation and notoriety and to put him away for life would to me seem the more consistent thing to do.

Very truly yours,

E. C. NEWCOMB."

Therefore, for the reason stated, and with the belief that he should never again be allowed his freedom, we recommend that the sentence of death passed upon William Peter Bishee be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

COMMUTATION No. 5—1912.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, October 16, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir.—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Berks, to No. 27, December Term, 1911, Lazarus Schonour was, December 14, 1911, convicted on an indictment charging him with Murder, and upon March 18, 1912, was sentenced to be hanged.

On July 22, 1912, an application for the commutation of the sentence of death to that of life imprisonment was duly filed, and the application was heard at our meeting of September 18th. The case has been held under advisement since that time. We now recommend that the prayer of the applicant be granted and that Executive Warrant issue commuting the sentence of death passed by the Court upon Lazarus Schonour to that of life imprisonment.

Schonour is a man now past fifty-six years of age; a native of Berks County, a Pennsylvania German with little or no ability to speak and understand the English language. He is married—his family consisting of his wife and two daughters, one twenty-eight years old and married, and the other sixteen years old. By occupation he is a farm laborer. He is the owner of a small piece of land in Cumru township, Berks County, which he farms and on which he lives.

This lot of ground did not abut on a highway, and in order to get access to the public road Schonour had purchased the right of way from his lot over adjoining lands. This privilege of way he seemed to regard as of great value to himself, and he jealously upheld his rights with respect to it. The owner of a neighboring tract, a man named Reisch, had access to the public road by another outlet, but chose to use occasionally the road owned by Schonour. Schonour strongly objected to this use of his road by Reisch, and seriously looked upon Reisch as a trespasser and a lawbreaker, and repeatedly warned him off the premises. Reisch treated Schonour's objections with indifference—possibly with contempt, and rather enjoyed the discomfiture of his neighbor. He made sport of Schonour in different ways, and apparently regarded the disturbance of Schonour's peace of mind as a joke. Trouble arose between the two and lawsuits followed. Schonour was defeated in the litigation. The troubles and annoyance Reisch caused him preyed on his mind. Naturally he was of low mentality. Reisch's action towards him was given exaggerated importance, and he dwelt upon it until the thought of it became a fixed idea which gradually overshadowed his mind and became associated with persecutory ideas.

On the morning of September 18, 1911, Schonour while working in his field saw Reisch pass along his right of way over his land. His mind seemed to become inflamed. He went into his house, procured his shot gun, and then went to his wagon shed, where he concealed himself waiting for Reisch's return, when Reisch came along the road again and was about passing the wagon shed Schonour shot him. Reisch fell to the ground, and Schonour came out of his concealment. Reisch tried to get away, and besought Schonour not to shoot him again. Schonour followed him up and shot him the second time. Schonour then returned to his house, put the gun away, and went on with his customary work. Reisch was soon afterwards found by his neighbors, terribly wounded, was hurried off to the hospital, but died on the way.

On Schonour's trial the Commonwealth pressed for conviction of first degree murder. The facts were not disputed. Under normal conditions the verdict of the jury convicting of first degree murder could not have been successfully questioned. On the part of the prisoner the defense of partial and emotional insanity was advanced. The jury found in favor of the Commonwealth's contention.

The ground laid in this application for commutation is the same as that set forth as a defense at the trial. At the hearing before us both counsel for the applicant and counsel for the Commonwealth expressed the belief that the Board would be aided in the disposal of the application by causing to be made an examination of the prisoner, and report upon his mental condition, by an expert on insanity to be selected by the Board. Accordingly the application was held under advisement, and the Board subsequently requested Dr. Frank Woodbury, Secretary of the Board of Public Charities' Committee on Lunacy, to make such examination and report.

Dr. Woodbury submitted his report under date of October 4th instant, wherein he states that he made a through examination of the prisoner. He describes his physical and mental condition very fully. Among other afflictions he reports that Schonour has become totally blind since his incarceration, although he does not seem to realize this misfortune and does not complain about it. He reports him as being possessed of delusions of various sorts, and that he is entirely unappreciative of his impending doom. In concluding his report Dr. Woodbury says:

"The crime appears to have been the result of a sudden overwhelming impulse, which the mind, weakened by dwelling upon supposed insults and wrongs, could not resist, and probably made no attempt to resist. As soon as he saw his victim, Schonour acted as if under possession by a dominant influence. Like an automaton or somnambulist, as soon as he caught sight of Reisch he went into his house and obtained his gun, and shot the man twice, without saying a word, either to explain why he did it, or to gloat over the downfall of his enemy, which a normal individual would naturally have done.

To sum up the case, I think that Lazarus Schonour is naturally mentally defective, or constitutionally inferior, not far removed from imbecility. That at present he is in a state of depression, and has fixed, systamatized delusions of persecutery and paranoidal type, and is therefore suffering with chronic insanity, allied to paranoia.

An individual having the state of mind existing in this case, has his judgment so affected by his mental condition that he would not be able to judge between right and wrong as to the act committed by him."

Upon the reading of this report at our meeting to-day, counsel for the applicant, and counsel for the Commonwealth, being present, counsel for the Commonwealth declined to press further that the execution of the sentence imposed by the court be carried out, and acquiesced in the suggestion that the application for commutation on the ground of insanity of the prisoner be favorably acted on by the Board. We therefore recommend that the sentence of death under which the applicant, Lazarus Schonour, now rests, be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Respectfully submitted,

Lieutenant Governor.

COMMUTATION No. 6—1912.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, October 16, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 213, November Term, 1909, Michael Comporto was, November 11, 1910, convicted on an indictment for murder. On January 14, 1911, he was sentenced to be hanged. On appeal to the Supreme Court the Judgment of the Court below was affirmed.

On April 8, 1912, an application for commutation was duly filed, which, after hearing and consideration, was, May 15, 1912, refused. At the subsequent June meeting of the Board a re-hearing was allowed, and at our September meeting the case was again heard, and it has been held under advisement until our present meeting. We now recommend that the application for the commutation of death sentence be allowed.

Comporto is a foreigner, twenty-seven years of age, a laborer, and not married. He had served a term in the Bradford County Jail and another in the Eastern Penitentiary prior to his commitment on the charge of murder on which he now stands convicted.

The homicide with which he is charged was the murder of James F. Quinn, who was shot and killed in a saloon at Old York Road and Lycoming street, in the City of Philadelphia, near midnight, September 27, 1909. The murdered man was the bar tender in the saloon, which was owned and conducted by his father.

At the time mentioned, according to the testimony, a masked man entered the saloon, and made demand on the bar keeper for money, and upon refusal he shot Quinn. Quinn died during the night from the shooting. Two other men were in the bar room at the time, customers, one of whom was shot by the masked man, and died the same night, and the second of whom, named Cassidy, was also shot but not fatally. He was present at the trial and testified. On the firing of the first shot these two men attempted to leave the room, and it was in their flight that the assailant fired at them. The assailant himself after rifling the cash register escaped from the premises.

This applicant was not charged with the murder until about a month after the commission of the crime. At first Cassidy was suspected, and was held under arrest pending an examination. Comporto's arrest grew out of certain remarks he voluntarily made some three of four weeks after the occurrence, although no suspicion had previously attached to him. After report of these remarks to the authorities, who were then without a clue in their search for the guilty persons, Comporto was taken in charge, and on being pressed by detectives made a statement in which it was set out that he and a companion by the name of De Masi were together in the neighborhood of the Quinn saloon on the night of the murder, and that the latter went into the saloon for the purpose of robbery while he waited on the opposite side of the street; that De Masi, after rejoining him, and after he had heard the shooting, told him that he had gotten thirty dollars, and that he had killed one man and had wounded another. Search was then made for De Masi, who was apprehended, and was afterward tried and convicted.

At the trial it was shown that two Italians had been seen in the neighborhood of the saloon during that day, although there was not a very satisfactory identification of Comporto and De Masi as the men. De Masi's conviction was effected mainly through the testimony of Comporto, who, it is alleged, had some grievance against his supposed companion. Comporto retracted his confesison and afterwards reasserted it. His course throughout the trials has been peculiar and difficult of satisfactory explanation on the theory of mental soundness and honesty of purpose.

The Reasons relied on to suport this application are:

1. That the testimony presented at the trial of this case showed conclusively that Michael Comporto was not the actual perpetrator of the alleged crime.

2. That from all the evidence presented in this case there arises a grave uncertainty as to the events surrounding the killing of James F. Quinn.

3. That the evidence since discovered in the case of Sabatino De Masi casts further doubt upon the story told by Comporto, and strengthens the theory that the entire strength of this prosecution rests upon the imagination of a man of unsound mind.

4. That Michael Comporto is not a man of sound mind and understanding, and is not responsible for the statements made by him.

5. That under all the facts of this case a commutation of sentence of death by hanging will fully meet the ends of justice and provide sufficient punishment for the offense committed.

From all that has been brought to our attention in the presentation of this case, especially with respect to the third and fourth reasons assigned, there is serious doubt, in our judgment, as to whether the interest of justice would be advanced by the infliction of the death penalty upon this applicant. Moreover, it is the view of the District Attorney who prosecuted the case that the approval of the application for commutation would satisfy the demands of the law under the conditions as he understands them. His letter to that effect is on file with our record.

In the belief therefore that the prisoner should be given the benefit of the doubt as to his mental soundness which has been made to apear, and of the additional doubt that has been cast on the truthfulness of his story of the murder by the knowledge of matters of fact which have been established by subsequent investigations, which matters were not within the knowledge of counsel at the time of the trial, and testimony concerning which was not then available, and with the further belief that the confinement of the prisoner for the remainder of his natural life in proper custody and under adequate restraint and with no chance of disturbing the peace of society at any time in the future, will meet the ends of justice under the circumstances of the case, we recommend that the sentence of death imposed upon Michael Comporto be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Respectfully submitted,

JNO. M. REYNOLDS,
Lieutenant Governor.

Secretary of the Commonwealth.

COMMUTATION No. 7—1912.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, October 16, 1912.

His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor.

Sir:—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 377, O tober Term, 1909, Salvatino De Masi was, February 11, 1911, convicted of Murder, and on June 7, 1911, was sentenced to be hanged. The Judgment of the Court of Oyer and Terminer was affirmed on appeal to the Supreme Court.

April 8, 1912, an application for commutation was duly filed, and the case was heard in regular course and was held under advisement. On May 15 the application was refused. At the June meeting a re-hearing was allowed. On September 18 the case was again heard. Having held the matter under advisement until our meeting of to-day, we now, in the light of atfer discovered evidence, recommend that the application for commutation be granted.

De Masi is a man twenty-nine years of age; a foreigner, a laborer by occupation; he is married, and his wife now resides in Philadelphia.

He was convicted for the murder of James F. Quinn on the night of September 27, 1909. The murdered man was the bar keeper in his father's saloon at Old York Road and Lycoming Street, in the City of Philadelphia. About 10.40 o'clock of the night in question a masked man entered the saloon while two customers were there, and demanded money from the bar keeper. On refusal the intruder immediately shot the bar keeper, Quinn, which caused his death that night, and then fired at the other two men, Cassidy and Saylor by name, who started to get out of the room at the first shot. Saylor was fatally wounded, and Cassidy was also wounded, but not fatally. The murderer then rifled the cash register, and escaped. For several weeks the police authorities were without a clue to the discovery of the guilty parties. Cassidy was held on suspicion of having some guilty knowledge. Some two or three weeks after the murder an Italian by the name of Comporto casually made certain remarks concerning the murder which aroused suspicion that he, Comporto, was connected with the crime. He was placed under arrest and examined by detectives. This brought about his confession that on the night of the 27th of September he and De Masi were in the neighborhood of the Quinn saloon; that De Masi went into the place for the purpose of securing money, while Comporto himself waited for him on the other side of the street; that after the shots were fired De Masi rejoined him and told him that he had secured thirty dollars, and had killed one man and wounded another. On this confession Comporto was held for the murder and De Masi was locked up and arrested and also charged with the murder. Comporto was tried first and convicted. The conviction came about through Comporto's confession and certain corroborative evidence which was held sufficient to sustain the verdict. He then testified against De Masi on the trial of the latter, who was also convicted. De Masi's conviction was secured mainly through Comporto's testimony, although there was some other testimony, but not of a very strong character. De Masi has always maintained that the story of Comporto was false, and that he was not present with him on the evening of the murder and had no participation whatever in the commission of the crime. There was also some testimony to establish an alibi.

During the time this application for commutation has been pending steps were taken by counsel for the applicant to investigate the truth of Comporto's statements with respect to his acquaintance with De Masi as testified to by the former. It was ascertained that at the time Comporto in his testimony against De Masi fixed certain acts of De Masi as having taken place in other parts of this State De Masi was not in this country at all. There have been filed with us affidavits taken in Italy, properly authenticated through the American Consular Office at Naples, that at such time De Masi was performing service in the Italian army as a soldier. It is argued therefore that the testimony of Comporto being shown to be false in this regard cannot be taken as true when he places De Masi in his company on the night of the murder and charges him with having entered the Quinn saloon with the felonious intent of extorting money. With the shattering of Comporto's story the evidence against De Masi would not convict the defendant.

The reasons on which this application for commutation is urgently pressed are the following:

1. Because the testimony of Michael Comporto, whose evidence was the sole ground upon which conviction was based, is false, in this his statement of an acquaintance with Sabatino De Masi is utterly false as proved by the affidavits of witnesses taken by your petitioner in Naples, Italy, and the certified and authenticated copy of the military service of the said Sabatino De Masi.

2. Because Comporto at the trial convinced the District Attorney and the jury that his identification of De Masi and his testimony as to De Masi being a perpetrator of the offense was corroborated and made plain and convincing by reason of Comporto's prior acquaintanceship with De Masi and which acquaintanceship and the shooting of Comporto by De Masi, as alleged by Comporto at the De Masi trial, is proved utterly false by the affidavits annexed and made part of this record.

3. Because counsel for defendant had no opportunity of contradicting Comporto at the trial on the De Masi case, and the affidavits and the authenticated and certified copy of the military service of De Masi have been secured in Naples since the last session of the Board in June proves the utter unreliability of Comporto and gave rise to the presumption that if he is false in one thing he is false in all.

4. Because at the time when he said he knew De Masi in Towanda, Pennsylvania, and where it was alleged De Masi had shot Comporto, and where also the District Attorney had an impression and asked the question as to De Masi's shooting a man in Towanda, Pennsylvania, on Easter Sunday, 1906, De Masi was in Italy, having entered the Army in 1904, in December, and not having been discharged therefrom until December, 1907. That from September, 1904, until December, 1904, he lived at Airiola, Benevento, Province, Italy; that he entered the military service in Italy in December, 1904, and after leaving the service, December, 1907, he went to live with his father in Airiola, where he remained until March, 1909, all which is evidenced by affidavits taken before the American Consul in Italy.

5. Because the testimony of Comporto being wholly weakened, and in fact eliminated as matter of testimony worthy of belief, the case against De Masi entirely fails, because there is no other testimony to connect him with the shooting other than the testimony of the now discredited Comporto.

6. Because the testimony of Comporto discredited and discarded the alibi produced by De Masi as to his presence on the night of the murder at a house on Rittenhouse street, playing cards with several of his countrymen, stands out as the truthful statement of the real facts as to De Masi's presence and location on the night and at the time of the murder in the Quinn saloon.

The affidavits referred to, together with the certificate of De Masi's military service, have been made part of our record, and they support the reasons given. If the facts established through them had been available at the time of the trial the Commonwealth manifestly could not have secured a verdict of guilty. Viewing the case with the aid of the information thus supplied, and seeing that the conviction of De Masi was procured largely, if not entirely, on the testimony of Comporto, whose mental soundness, it may be here remarked, is open to doubt, and who, it is alleged had some grievance against De Masi, and therefore falsely accused him, we are prepared to say that, in our judgment, the ends of justice call for the relief of this applicant from the severity of the sentence under which he now rests. Therefore for the reasons and matters hereinbefore stated we recommend that the sentence of death passed upon Sabatino De Masi be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

JOHN K. TENER.

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

REPORT

OF

INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS COMMISSION

1912.

Harrisburg, Pa., December 31, 1912.

To His Excellency, John K. Tener, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Sir:—The Industrial Accidents Commission, appointed in pursuance of the provisions of the Act of June 14, 1911, P. L. 917, respectfully makes report to you, for transmission to the General Assembly as provided in this Act:

Two subjects of investigation were prescribed for us,—the prevention of industrial accidents, and the compensation of injured workmen and their dependents.

The original compilation by this Commission of statistics showing the causes of accidents in the many different industries of Pennsylvania has been neither necessary nor possible. To prepare a set of such statistics, complete enough to be reliable, would have required more time, more authority and more funds than have been given our Commission. Furthermore, it would have been, in the main, a mere duplication of the data which for years past has been gathered and digested by the Department of Factory Inspection, all of which has been freely offered for and has been extremely valuable to us. We are greatly assisted also by having the information collected in this country and abroad during the past decade by many other authorities, both public and private, for there is no radical difference between the industrial accidents of Pennsylvania and those of our neighboring States.

It may be stated, with fair exactness, that twenty per cent. of all factory accidents are primarily due to the negligence of the employer, or of those representing him in positions of superintendence; that twenty-five per cent. are chiefly due to the negligence of the injured man himself; that twenty per cent. are due to the negligence of a co-employee of the injured man; while thirty-five per cent. are due to what may be called the hazard of the industry. Each extension of the duties of the employer, however, tends to diminish this last group and to increase the first group of accidents chargeable to the employee's negligence. Under our present system of compensation for such injuries, an accident of the first of these classes alone furnishes a right of action against the employer, and, even then, the action may be defeated by the defenses of contributory negligence or of assumption of risk. From statistics of all kinds, from a comparison of the records of our Courts of Common Pleas with the records of our Factory Inspection Department, and from our actual experience with cases of this character, we can assert with entire confidence that in less than five per cent. of the industrial accidents in this State is a substantial sum (i. e., as much as medical expenses and actual wages lost) recovered by the injured man or his dependents. It will be seen at once that the pecuniary advantage to the employer of a decrease in the number of accidents is hardly great enough to furnish a powerful incentive to the introduction of safety appliances. The factory law, with its threat of punishment for non-compliance, furnishes a stronger incentive. We believe, however, that no "Factory Act" can do as much towards the prevention of accidents as a system that will make it directly and immediately expensive to the employer to be careless of the safety of his workmen. This should be borne in mind in weighing the relative advantages of the different systems of workmen's compensation,—a subject mentioned later in this report.

THE FACTORY ACT

We find in force in Pennsylvania, in the Act of May 2, 1905, P. L. 352, a Factory Act similar in its terms to those of most of the important manufacturing States of this country. We have sought from every source criticisms of the provisions of this law, having begun our task with the impression that this could be strengthened and added to with promptly beneficial results, but we are now agreed that little change is required in the language of the law. What is required is its continued and vigilant enforcement. Something was accomplished under the old Factory Act of 1899, much under the present law, and much yet remains to be done. It is a matter of efficient administration rather than of legislation. In some of the industrial plants that we have visited we have seen frequent instances of non-compliance with the Act, but this fact is not necessarily indicative of inefficiency in the Department of Factory Inspection, nor of the disregard of the law on the part of the employers. It may show only the magnitude of the changes required by the existing law and the impossibility of complying with them all up to the present time. We believe, however, that the Department of Factory Inspection should adopt more stringent measures to compel compliance with that part of the law (Section 11) that requires the guarding of machinery, and we believe that the passage of an adequate compensation law for injured workmen will materially assist the Department in this direction.

The Factory Act seems to us to require amendment in its definition of the kind of establishments covered by it. The administration of the Act has been affected by the vagueness of the definition given in Section 1, and the narrow construction put upon that section has seriously restricted the operations of the Department of Factory Inspection. For this reason, we recommend the change in that section shown in the proposed Act appended to this report as Exhibit "A."

HOURS OF LABOR FOR WOMEN

A fertile cause of accidents, recognized by every authority upon the subject, is overwork,—i. e., excessive hours of labor. Many accidents, which in statistical tables are ascribed to the negligence of the injured workman himself, are in reality due entirely to overwork. And this is particularly true of women, whose incapacity for long-contiued toil, particularly at periods of illness, is strikingly shown by these statistical reports. The Factory Act of 1905 (Section 3) limits the hours of labor of women to twelve hours per day and sixty hours per week. This provision is not sufficiently restrictive. No other important manufacturing State allows women to be employed in factories for such long hours as these. In Ohio the limitations are ten hours per day and 54 hours per week, in New York 10 hours per day and 54 hours per week, in New Jersey 55 hours per week, in Maryland 10 hours per day, in Massachusetts 10 hours per day and 54 hours per week, in Connecticut 10 and 58, and in Illinois 10 hours per day. We feel that we do no injustice to the industries of our State in recommending, as we do in Exhibit "A," the reduction of the limitation of hours of labor for women in industrial establishments to 10 hours per day and 54 hours per week, but in view of the law in this State up to the present, and in view of the laws now obtaining in other States, industrially competitive with Pennsylvania, we believe that this reduction is all that is proper at this time.

REPORTS OF ACCIDENTS

Undoubtedly further preventive measures will in the future be found to be desirable, and to this end the study of the subject should be continued. We have already in our Bureau of Industrial Statistics an organization equipped for the compilation of the necessary data, and it is plain that in formation, promptly reported to it after each accident, will in time furnish a basis for legislation far more accurate and complete, and at far less expense to the State, than the incomplete returns obtainable by circular inquiries issued during a short interval by a commission such as ours. It will be much easier to observe the effect of any compensation law adopted by the legislature if such prompt and complete reports are made by the employer. The reliabilty of such reports will be increased if the employers making them may do so without fear of their production in evidence in any litigation. For these reasons we recommend the proposed law attached hereto as Exhibit "B."

WORKMAN'S COMPENSATION.

The compensation of injured workmen is a subject that has received exhaustive study in every civilized country; and within the past decade the current of public opinion in favor of such compensation has become so strong that no argument in its favor is necessary. To contend for the continuance of the old common law system is futile. That the injured workman should be made whole at the expense of the industry seems now as indisputably right as that the industry should bear the expense of repairing a broken machine. On the other hand, the subject of a just and equitable compensation is rendered so difficult by constitutional limitations, and is necessarily a matter of such delicate adjustment, that to permit it to be controlled by sentimental or demagogic considerations is to invite the total failure of the effort. The varied experience of our ten sister States that have adopted laws on this subject shows that ignorance or insincerity cannot be permitted to interfere if a just and useful result is to be attained. Important everywhere, in Pennsylvania the subject is of extreme importance, because of the industrial leadership of our State. So many persons and so much property are involved that to attempt a reckless experiment in this matter would be a grave moral and economic offense.

Four general systems of compensation for injured workmen have been tried at various times and in various countries. They are:

(a.) Employer's Liability, based on fault.

(b.) Compulsory or Elective Insurance Funds.

(c.) Compulsory Compensation by Employer to Employee.

(d.) "Elective" Compensation by Employer to Employee.

Our views as to each of these methods and their availability in Pennsylvania are summarized as follows:

EMPLOYER'S LIABILITY.

This means the present system of the common law, with such statutory modification or enlargement of the right of action as may be made by the legislature. However favorable to the employee such new legislation may be, this system will always be open to many objections. These are so well recognized that mere reference to them will be sufficient. They are (1) the delay while the case is awaiting trial and while appeals are pending, always preventing relief at the moment of the workman's greatest need; (2) the technicality inseparable from hard-fought litigation; (3) the frequent failure of cases through the employee's inability to produce "evidence of negligence;" (4) the success of a plaintiff whose conscience and whose counsel permit him to exaggerate or to lie, while one more scrupulous will be defeated in a case quite as meritorious in fact; (5) the bitterness that nearly always results, to the injury of both the employer and employee; (6) the frequency of illogical and unjust verdicts, and the possibility of corrupt verdicts; (7) the waste of litigation in lawyers' fees, witnesses' fees, disturbance of business, and expenses of preparation for trial—a victory for the employer often costing him as much money as would have quite relieved the needs of the employee; and (8) the exorbitant contingent fees often charged by lawyers representing the employee. It is no exaggeration to say that, under this system as now applied in Pennsylvania, not more than one-third of the amount spent by the employer in claim department outlay ever reaches the employee. The balance is absorbed in transmission.

We believe that to discuss the demerits of such a system would be superfluous. It has brought injustice, suffering and discontent. Its appearance will be welcomed by every thinking man.

COMPULSORY OR ELECTIVE INSURANCE FUNDS.

These are sometimes administered directly by the State itself, as in most continental European countries and in the States of Ohio and Washington, and sometimes by private associations under the general oversight of the State, as in Germany and in Massachusetts. In some cases the employees themselves are required to contribute toward such funds. Almost invariably the payment is made directly from the fund to the injured employee, regardless of any question of negligence, and the employer is relieved of all personal liability. In some cases, subscription to the insurance fund is compulsory, as in Washington, while in others it is optional with the employer, as in Ohio.

This system undoubtedly has the advantage of securing the payments to the workman entitled to compensation, and this element of security deserves to be borne in mind, but the system is, nevertheless, open to serious criticism. The chief objection that we make to it is that it tends to remove the incentive to vigilant safety-work on the part of the employer, because the pecuniary penalty for carelessness falls, not directly upon him, but upon a fund in which his interest is relatively small. We fell that this incentive to be careful is one of the most important results to be aimed at in the adoption of any system. In reply to this argument against the insurance plan, it is said that the insurance premiums should and would be increased for careless employers, but it is obvious that this punishment will always be remote and uncertain. And where, as in Ohio, the employee is required to pay part of the insurance premium, it is also obvious that he, although perhaps quite blameless, is thus forced by the increased premium, to pay a part of the penalty for his employer's negligence.

Many of these insurance funds are elaborate in their administration, and require a large number of officials to see to their operation. To adopt such a system in Pennsylvania would entail the creation of many new offices.

Another objection, to our minds important, is that the fixing of premiums must of necessity be largely discretionary in the official or officials in charge of the fund. In no other way can the careful employer be protected and the careless punished. As a result, the opportunity for administrative favoritism, for unjust assessment, for irregularity of management is always present. Furthermore, the basic idea of this plan is a compulsory association among all employers in the payment of compensation, without free choice of associates. It is opposed to the idea of individual liberty and full individual responsibility that underlies the whole theory of our government. The fact that it has not yet in any State in America proven successful is, in our minds, a powerful argument against it.

A compulsory insurance act of this description, modeled chiefly upon the German system, has been drafted and strongly urged upon us by representatives by an association of employers. We are earnestly of the opinion that such an act should not be recommended. Disregarding details in which we think the act as submitted is defective, but which could be corrected, we believe it to be open to all of the fundamental objections stated above, and to grave constitutional objections as well. In that it involves a delegation of the power of taxation, we are of the opinion that it violates Section 20 of Article III of the State Constitution. In that the essence of the proposed act—the key of its success and fairness—would be the power of discriminating in insurance rates between individual employers according to the freest discretion and judgment of the rate-fixing authority, we are of the opinion that it would violate Section 1 or Article IX of the State Constitution, which provides that "all taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects * * * and shall be levied and collected under general laws." We believe further that the proposed system would be quite unworkable in its project of taxation of all employers of one or more persons—such as the employers of domestic servants and of farm labor,—for we think that the cost of assessment and collection of the small premiums due from such employers would exceed the premiums themselves. The merits of such a scheme should be very great to justify the creation of the multitude of public and semi-public positions that would be required for its operation, but it is notable that, while its only merit over the system that we propose is in affording an increased security for the compensation payments, no representative of labor has urged its adoption instead of our act. Conceding its success in Germany, where it has been operated in connection with a system of sickness-insurance and old-age pensions, we firmly believe that its adoption in Pennsylvania under present political and industrial conditions would be intolerable to the employers of the State. At best, it would be but an experiment, practically untried in this country, and we believe that the welfare of too many workmen and to much property is involved to warrant the imposition of an experiment so gigantic upon the industries of Pennsylvania.

We are agreed that the disadvantages of the insurance system outweigh its advantages over the two remaining methods now to be discussed.

COMPULSORY COMPENSATION BY EMPLOYER TO EMPLOYEE.

Under this system, the employer is required to pay directly to the injured employee or his dependents compensation for injury of for death, regardless of any fault that may have led to the accident. As in the insurance fund plans, the amount of compensation payable is so regulated by the nature of the injury, the duration of the disability and the wages of the injured man as to be as nearly as possible automatic in computation. Certainty and promptness of payment are regarded as of prime importance. Safeguards for security of the payment are usually provided, such as giving them the same preferred lien as is given to wages.

This system we regard as unquestionably the best. It places the penalty for dangerous conditions immediately upon the careless employer, while it rewards for vigilant care are prompt and certain. Every safety device that may be installed means a direct money saving to the employer. The retention of an employee who is careless of the safety of his fellows means a direct money loss to the employer. Under this system, the relationship between care and money-profit is plain to everyone, and the interposition of no premium-assessing official is required.

Three laws of this kind deserve study,— the "Sutherland bill" now pending in the Federal Congress, the English Workmen's Compensation Laws of 1897, 1900 and 1906, and the New York Hazardous Employments Act of 1909. The first of these has not yet gone into effect, and therefore no conclusions can be drawn from its operation, but it is worth noting that its recommendation by the Sutherland Commission followed a most exhaustive study of the subject. Its constitutionaltiy of course has not yet been settled, but the weight of legal opinion seems to be in favor of the validity of the Act. The English law has met with great success, and is considered by all interests to be a satisfactory system, although its failure to provide adequate definitions of the terms used in it led to a large number of litigated cases before the meaning of the law became settled—a difficulty not peculiar to this kind of legislation. The New York Act was held by the Court of Appeals of that State to offend the "due process of law" clause of the State Constitution, in that it required payments by the employer where he neither was at fault nor had agreed to pay. (Ives vs. South Buffalo Ry. Co., 201 N. Y., 271.) This decision has provoked a storm of discussion and criticism, and it is seemingly irreconcilable with recent decisions of the courts of last resort in Montana and Washington. (Cunningham vs. Imp. Co., 44 Mont., 180; State vs. Clausen, 65 Wash., 156.) But we need not enter into this controversy, for the provisions of our own State Constitution, as they now stand, leave no doubt of the impossibility of sustaining such a law. Section of Article III of our Constitution, which prohibits the General Assembly from limiting the damages recoverable for injury or death, certainly would prohibit a law whose essential feature is the exact fixing of compensation and the establishment of the maximum and the minimum limits of the payments.

The unquestionable desirability of such a law leads us to recommend the proposed amendment of Section 21 of Article III of the Constitution, attached hereto as "Exhibit C."

In the meanwhile, the same result fortunately can be reached in most cases by an indirect method that has proved successful in several other States.

"ELECTIVE" COMPENSATION BY EMPLOYER TO EMPLOYEE.

The essential idea of the Acts that carry out this plan is as follows: The Act begins by enlarging greatly the common-law liability of the employer. It then sanctions an agreement between employer and employee for the adoption of a definite compensation plan, applicable to all cases regardless of fault, and provides that where such agreement is in effect it shall wholly supersede the common law. The acceptance of this compensation plan is facilitated by a provision that it shall be presumed to be agreed to unless expressly rejected by either employer or employee. If the Act is intelligently drawn, it will be found to be to the advantage of both employer and employee to accept the compensation plan rather than to remain under the liability law. The employer, on the one hand, is saved the tremendous expense of litigation under the common law, the delays and time losses incident thereto, the maintenance of an elaborate claim department, the danger of excessive verdicts and the disturbance of business that frequently accompanies a long trial in court. He finds that he can secure insurance against his liability under the "compensation section" as cheaply or more cheaply than under the "liability section" of the law, although such insurance ordinarily protect him against "liability" verdicts only up to $5,000, while it protects him against every cent of "compensation" payments under the proposed Act. On the other hand, the employee's reason for acceptance of the compensation plan are quite as strong. He, or his family if he is killed, is protected with certainty, and is not subject to defeat on some abtruse technicality. The payments, though moderate in amount, begin almost at once and continue regularly, as against a possible large verdict received some time in the distant future, long after the distress was most acute. The procedure in case of disagreement is simple and prompt, and lawyers' fees are subject to the control of the court, insuring moderation. It requires the creation of no new tribunals, but utilizes those in existence, thus avoiding increased expenses and making use of existing experience and skill.

In one of the States where this plan has been tried, its success may be gauged by the fact that, although the Act has been in force for a year, only three employers are known to have rejected the "compensation section." And its effect can be gauged by the further fact that, out of more than two thousand reported cases during the first six months of its operation, only ten were taken into court, most of the latter being simple applications for a commutation of payments in a lump sum instead of periodical installments, while several of the other controversies could have been avoided by the inclusion in the Act itself of carefully drawn definitions of its terms.

In another State where the same plan was resorted to its operation was ruined by ignorant treatment of the compensation schedule. In a misguided effort to be "liberal," the compensation plan was made so severe as to cost in operation nearly three times as much as the "liability section," with the natural result that practically every employer in the State in question rejected the plan, leaving the liability law in force with all its inherent evils.

As to the constitutionality of the Acts of this sort, we feel the greatest confidence. The objections that were used to defeat the Hazardous Employments Act in New York have no application to Acts of the elective type. The decisions in other States upon the "elective" Acts have been in favor of their validity (Sexton vs. Newark Dist. Tel. Co., N. J. Law Journal, Vol. 34, page 368, and Vol. 35, page 8; Borgnis vs. Falk Co., 147 Wis. 327; Opinion of Justices, 209 Mass., 607; State vs. Creamer, 85 Ohio St., 349), and this is also the opinion given in the communications which we have received from many of the ablest lawyers of the State.

RECOMMENDATION OF ELECTIVE ACT.

For these reasons we have drafted, and now recommend for passage by the Legislature, the form of Workmen's Compensation Law appended hereto as "Exhibit D."

In the preparation of this bill, we have tried to adopt the best features of the laws of the same kind in other States and countries; but, with a view to the prevention of controversies and litigation, we have gone further than any other Act in the definition of the terms used. In most cases, if the experience of other States may be relied upon, the Act will be found to be automatic in operation, and unless our precautions are futile the operation of the law ought not to be hindered by the uncertainties that marred the early years of the English law. The schedule of compensation has been prepared with the utmost care, and, while it is more liberal in its allowance of compensation for serious permanent injuries than many similar laws,—that of New Jersey, for example,—this feature is balanced by restricting the allowance for medical attention to a sum more nearly commensurate with the ordinary cost of such attention. We have tried in this way to give directly to the injured man what under some laws is found to go to his medical attendants in excessive fees. Similarly it will be seen that we have endeavored to prevent the extortion of excessive fees for legal service when these are required by the employee.

MUTUAL INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS.

The natural effect of such legislation as we have recommended will of course be to increase the demand for liability insurance, and it would be unwise to allow this business to be monopolized and the rates for it to be wholly controlled by the existing stock companies. The present laws of Pennsylvania authorize the creation of mutual insurance associations of all other descriptions,—life, fire, accident, cattle, plate glass and what not,—but no provision has been made for the creation of mutual associations for employer's liability insurance. For this reason we have drafted, and appended hereto as Exhibit "E," page 43, a law allowing the formation of such assiciations to insure against liability of employers for the compensation fixed in Article II of the Workmen's Compensation Law. Such associations ought not, we think, to be permitted to gamble on "liability" verdicts, and for this reason we have restricted their field of operation to the compensation section alone. Remembering still that the prime object of all of this legislation is the prevention of accidents, we have given such associations broad powers in the adoption and enforcement of safety regulations. We have also provided for them the same precautions to preserve their assets and insure their insolvency as have been provided for stock companies doing similar business.

INSOLVENCY OF INSURED EMPLOYERS.

In the past it has sometimes been found that the insolvency of an employer has prevented the recovery of damages by an injured employee, although the employer may have carried insurance in a solvent company. The liability of the insurance company being to the employer only, and not to the employee, the latter has had no remedy for this state of affairs. We learn, however, by the testimony of several insurance experts who have appeared before us, that this possible excuse for non-payment is not considered in the fixing of insurance rates. We therefore recommend in Exhibit "F," a law requiring in all such insurance policies against workman's compensation, a covenant by the insurer to pay the employee directly should the employer default. This will not increase the employer's premiums, will do no injustice to the insurer, and will afford to the worker a protection to which he is entitled.

Another objectionable feature of our present system of employer's liability insurance is the custom of limiting the insurer's obligation in the case of a single accident or group of accidents, yet is not customary for the insurance companies in fixing rates to make any allowance in return for this limitation. Hence, if a catastrophe occurs, the employer is deprived of the protection of his insurance just at the moment when he needs it most. We therefore have included in Exhibit "F" a section prohibiting such limitations.

NECESSITY OF ANOTHER COMMISSION.

If the legislature shall see fit to adopt our recommendations, by the passage of the bills that accompany this report, we believe that it will be of great advantage to have the operation of those laws carefully studied by a commission during the following two years. If any modifications of this legislation should prove necessary, they probably will best be framed by such a body. We therefore recommend, in the bill attached hereto as Exhibit "G," the creation of a commission of seven, made up of representatives of the same interests as are represented in our commission.

THE COMMISSION'S PROCEDURE.

Before the preparation of any of these bills was commenced, the Commission held public hearings in Harrisburg, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, at which all persons interested were urged to appear and present their views, since it was our desire to learn the general public sentiment on the subjects of our work. The recognition of the need for new legislation was very apparent and very general, but the details by which the desired result was to be reached had not been the subject of much general consideration. The Commission then, for its own instruction, particularly in the matter of accident prevention visited and inspected a number of representative manufacturing plants in different parts of the State, including a textile factory, a ship-yard, a coal mine, an engine-building plant and several iron furnaces and steel works. Frequent executive sessions were then held, during which the laws considered necessary were drawn, discussed and revised. These Acts were then in every instance published in tentative form as soon as they had been approved by the Commission, and thousands of copies were distributed on applications made to the Commission.

After a sufficient time had elapsed for careful consideration to be given to our work, we again held public hearings in Harrisburg, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, at which the fullest criticism of our published bills was invited. These meetings were well attended, and an abundance of criticism was forthcoming both by the speakers at our hearings and in a large number of written communications received by us; but to our great satisfaction it was found that in the great majority of instances this criticism was favorable to our work. Many suggestions of changes in detail and phraseology have been made to us, and such of them as we felt would lead to greater fairness or certainty have been gladly adopted. But it has been gratifying in the extreme to find that the proposed legislation has met with the heartiest approval of employers and employees alike, as well as of lawyers, insurance experts and economists.

More than one-third of the $15,000 appropriation for the expenses of the Commission remains unused.

From you, sir, from all the officers of your administration with whom we have come in contact, from the members of similar commissions in several other States, from associations of employers and employees too numerous to mention, from insurance companies and their officers, and from many public-spirited members of the bar, we have received the most cordial support and assistance in our work.

You have given us an unusual opportunity to serve our State. Our hope is that the work that has been done will be worthy of our loyalty to her and our pride of her.

Respectfully submitted,

EXHIBIT "A."

AN ACT

Amending an Act entitled "An Act to regulate the employment, in all kinds of industrial establishments, of women, by fixing the hours of labor for women; to provide for the safety of all employees in all industrial establishments, and of men, women, and children in school-houses, academies, seminaries, colleges, hotels, hospitals, store-houses, office buildings, public halls and places of amusement, in which proper fire-escapes, exits and extinguishers are required; to provide for the health of all employees, and of men, women, and children in all such establishments, storehouses and buildings by proper sanitary appliances; and to provide for the appointment of inspectors, office clerks and others, who, with the Chief Factory Inspector, to enforce the same, shall constitute the Department of Factory Inspection, to enforce the same, and provide penaltes for violations of the provisions thereof; fixing the term and salaries of the Chief Factory Inspector and his appointees," approved the second day of May, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and five, defining the terms "Industrial establishment" and "establishment" as used in said Act, and further limiting the hours of labor for women.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of an Act entitled "An Act to regulate the employment, in all kinds of industrial establishments, of women, by fixing the hours of labor for women; to provide for the safety of all employees in all industrial establishments, and of men, women, and children in school-houses, academies, seminaries, colleges, hotels, hospitals, store-houses, office buildings, public halls and places of amusement, in which proper fire-escapes, exits and extinguishers are required to provide for the health of all employees, and of men, women and children in all such establishments, store-houses and buildings by proper sanitary appliances, and to provide for the appointment of inspectors, office clerks and others who with the Chief Factory Inspector shall constitute the Department of Factory Inspection to enforce the same and providing penalties for violations of the provisions thereof; fixing the term and salaries of the Chief Factory Inspector and his appointees," approved the second day of May, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and five, which reads as follows:

"Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That the term 'establishment,' where used for the purpose of this act, shall mean any place within this Commonwealth other than where domestic, coal mining or farm labor is employed; where men, women, or children are engaged and paid a salary or wages by any person, firm or corporation, and where such men, women, or children are employees in the general acceptance of the term," be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That the terms 'establishment' and 'industrial establishment' wherever used in this act shall not include a home, coal-mine, farm, hospital or asylum but shall include every other place within this Commonwealth where men, women, or children are employed in manual labor by any person, firm or corporation."

Section 2. That section 3 of this act, which reads as follows:

"Section 3. No minor under sixteen, and no female, shall be employed in any establishment for a longer period than sixty hours in any one week, nor for a longer period than twelve hours in any one day. No minor under sixteen shall be employed in any establishment between the hours of nine post meridian and six ante meridian: Provided, That where the material in process of manufacture requires the application of manual labor for an extended period after nine o'clock post meridian, to prevent waste or destruction of said material, male minors over fourteen years of age, and who have not been employed in or about such establishment between the hours of six ante meridian and nine post meridian, may be employed, for not more than nine consecutive hours in any one day, after nine post meridian: And provided further, That in establishments where night work is hereby permitted to prevent waste or destruction, and where the nature of the employment requires two or more working-shifts in the twenty-four hours, males over fourteen years of age may be employed partly by day and partly by night: Provided, Said employment does ont exceed nine consecutive hours: and provided further, That retail mercantile establishments shall be exempt from the provisions of this section on Saturday of each week, and during a period of twenty days beginning with the fifth day of December and ending with the twenty-fourth day of the same month: Provided, That during the said twenty days preceding the twenty-fourth day of December, the working hours shall not exceed ten hours per day, or sixty hours per week;" be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Section 3. No minor under sixteen, and no female, shall be employed in any establishment for a longer period than fifty-four hours in any one week, nor for a longer period than ten hours in any one day. No minor under sixteen shall be empoyed in any establishment between the hours of nine post meridian and six ante meridian."

Section 3. That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

EXHIBIT "B."

AN ACT.

Requiring employers to make report to the Bureau of Industriai Statistics of accidents to employees, and prescribing a penalty for non-compliance therewith.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That within thirty days after the beginning of the disability of an employee because of any personal injury caused by an accident occurring in the course of his employment, the employer, whether a person, firm or corporation, shall make report of such accident to the Bureau of Industrial Statistics. Such report shall set forth the name, address and nature of business of the employer; name, address, sex, age, nationality and occupation of the employee; date, day of week, hour, place and character of the accident; and the nature of the injury and the duration of the disability or probable disability, as far as the same can be ascertained. Such employer shall also, upon request of the Bureau of Industrial Statistics, make such further report as may reasonably be required by it.

Section 2. Any person, firm or corporation, having knowledge of the occurrence of such personal injury to an employee in the course of employment, who shall fail to make report as aforesaid, shall be liable to the Commonwealth for a penalty of one hundred dollars, to be recoverable by action brought by said Bureau.

Section 3. Reports made in accordance with this act shall not be evidence against the employer in any proceeding either under the Workmen's Compensation Law of 1913 or otherwise.

Section 4. No employer who has made the report required by this act shall be required to make any other or further report of such accident to any other department of the government of the Commonwealth.

Section 5. This Act shall not apply to casual employments, nor to accidents resulting in disability continuing less than two days.

EXHIBIT "C."

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section twenty-one of article three of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Comonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania be and the same is hereby proposed in accordance with the eighteenth Article thereof:—

Amended Section Twenty-one, Article Three, of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, which reads as follows:

"No act of the General Assembly shall limit the amount to be recovered for injuries resulting in death, or for injuries to persons or property; and, in case of death from such injuries, the right of action shall survive, and the General Assembly shall prescribe for whose benefit such actions shall be prosecuted. No act shall prescribe any limitations of time within which suits may be brought against corporations for injuries to persons or property, or for other causes, different from those fixed by the general laws regulating actions against natural persons, and such acts now existing are avoided;"

so that it shall read as follows:

"The General Assembly may enact laws requiring the payment by the employers, or employers and employees jointly, of reasonable compensation for injuries to employees arising in the course of their employment and for occupational diseases of employees, whether or not such injuries or diseases result in death, and regardless of fault of employer or employee, and fixing the basis of ascertainment of such compensation and the maximum and the minimum limits thereof, and providing special or general remedies for the collection thereof; but in no other cases shall the General Assembly limit the amount to be recovered for injuries resulting in death, or for injuries to persons or property; and, in case of death from such injuries, the right of action shall survive, and the General Assembly shall prescribe for whose benefit such actions shall be prosecuted. No act shall prescribe any limitations of time within which suits may be brought against corporations for injuries to persons or property, or for other causes, different from those fixed by general laws regulating actions against natural persons, and such acts now existing are avoided."

EXHIBIT "D."

AN ACT

Defining the liability of an employer to pay damages for injuries received by an emyloyee in the course of employment, establishing an elective schedule of compensation and regulating procedure for the determination of liability and compensation thereunder.

ARTICLE I.

Damages by Action at Law.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That in any action brought to recover damages for personal injury to an employee in the course of his employment, or for death resulting from such injury, it shall not be a defense

(a.) That the injury was caused in whole or in part by the negligence of a fellow employee, or

(b.) That the employee had assumed the risk of the injury, or

(c.) That the injury was caused in any degree by the negligence of such employee, unless it be established that the injury was caused by such employee's intoxication or by his reckless indifference to danger. The burden of proving such intoxication or reckless indifference to danger shall be upon the defendant, and the question shall be one of fact to be determined by the jury.

Section 2. The employer shall be liabel for the negligence of all employees, while acting within the scope of their employment, including engineers, chauffeurs, miners, mine-foremen, fire-bosses, mine superintendents, plumbers, officers of vessels, and all other employes licensed by the State or other governmental authority, if the employer be allowed by law the right of free selection of such employees from the class of persons thus licensed.

Section 3. An employer, who permits the entry, upon premises occupied by him or under his control, of a laborer or a an assistant hired by an employee or contractor for the performance, upon such premises, of a part of the employer's regular business entrusted to such employee or contractor, shall be liable to such laborer or assistant in the same manner and to the same extent as to his own employee.

Section 4. No agreement, composition or release of damages made before the happening of any accident, except the agreement defined in Article II of this act, shall be valid or shall bar a claim for damages for the injury resulting therefrom, and any such agreement, other than that defined in Article II herein, is declared to be against the public policy of this Commonwealth. The receipt of benefits from any association, society, or fund to which the employee shall have been a contributor, shall not bar the recovery of damages by action at law nor the recovery of compensation under Article II hereof; and any release executed in consideration of such benefits shall be void.

ARTICLE II.

Elective Compensation.

Section 1. When employer and employee shall by agreement, either express or implied, as hereinafter provided, accept the provisions of Article II of this act, compensation for personal injury to or for the death of such employee by an accident in the course of his employment shall be made in all cases by the employer without regard to negligence, according to the schedule contained in Sections 5 and 6 of this Article; provided that no compensation shall be made when the injury or death be intentionally self-inflicted, but the burden of proof of such fact shall be upon the employer.

The terms "injury" and "personal injury," as used in this Article, shall be construed to mean only violence to the physical structure of the body, and such disease or infection as naturally results therefrom; and wherever death is mentioned as a cause for compensation under this Article, it shall mean only death resulting from such violence and its resultant effects and occurring within three hundred weeks after the accident. The term "injury by an accident in the course of his employment," as used in this Aritcle, shall not include any injury caused by an act of a third person intended to injure the employee because of reasons personal to him and not directed against him as an employee, or because of his employment, but shall include all other injuries sustained while the employee is actually engaged in the furtherance of the business or affairs of the employer, whether upon the employer's premises or elsewhere, and shall include all injuries caused by the condition of the premises or by the operation of the employer's business or affairs thereon sustained by the employee, who though not so engaged, is injured upon the premises occupied by or under the control of the employer or upon which the employer's business or affairs are being carried on, the employee's presence theron being required by the nature of his employment.

Section 2. Such agreement shall be an acceptance of all the provisions of Article II of this act, and shall operate as a surrender by the parties thereto of their rights to any form or amount of compensation or damage for any injury or death occurring in the course of the employment, or to any method of determination thereof, other than as provided in Article II of this act. Such agreement shall bind the employer and his personal representatives and the employee, his or her wife or husband, widow or widower, next of kin and other dependents.

Section 3. (a.) In every contract of hiring made after June 30, 1913, and in every contract of hiring renewed or extended by mutual assent, expressed or implied, after said date, it shall be conclusively presumed that the parties have accepted the provisions of Article II of this act, and have agree to be bound thereby, unless there be, at the time of the making, renewal or extension of such contract, an express statement in writing from either party to the other that the provisions of Article II of this act are not intended, to apply, and unless a true copy of such written statement, accompanied by proof of service thereof upon the other party setting forth under oath of affirmation the time, place and manner of such service, be filed within ten days after such service in the Bureau of Industrial Statistics of this Commonwealth. Every contract of hiring, oral, written or implied from circumstances, now in operation or made or implied on or before June 30, 1913, shall be conclusively presumed to continue subject to the provisions of Article II hereof, unless either party shall on or before June 30, 1913, in writing have notified the other party to such contract that the provisions of Article II hereof are not intended to apply and unless there shall be filed in the Bureau of Industrial Statistics a true copy of such notice, together with proof of service, within the time and in the manner hereinabove prescribed; provided, however, that the provisions of this Section shall not be so construed as to impair the obligation of any contract now in force. In the employment of minors, Article II shall be presumed to apply, unless the said written notice be given by or to the parent or guardian of the minor. It shall not be lawful for any officer or agent of this Commonwealth, or for any county, city, borough or township therein, or for any officer or agent thereof, or for any other governmental authority created by the laws of this Commonwealth, to give such notice of rejection of the provisions of this Article to any employee of the State or of such governmental agency.

(b.) After June 30, 1913, an employer, who permits the entry, upon premises occupied by him or under his control, of a laborer or an assistant hired by an employee or contractor for the performance, upon such premises, of a part of the employer's regular business entrusted to that employee or contractor, shall be conclusively presumed to have agreed to pay to such laborer or assistant compensation in accordance with the provisions of Article II, unless the employer shall post, in a conspicuous place upon the premises where the laborer's or assistant's work is done, a notice of his intention not to pay such compensation, and unless there be filed with the Bureau of Industrial Statistics within ten days thereafter a true copy of such notice, together with proof of the posting of the same, setting forth upon oath or affirmation the time, place and manner of such posting; and after June 30, 1913, any such laborer or assistant who shall enter upon premises occupied by or under the control of such employer for the purpose of doing such work shall be conclusively presumed to have agreed to accept the compensation provided in Article II, in lieu of his right of action at common law or under Article 1, unless he shall have given notice in writing to the employer, at the time of entering upon such employer's premises for the purpose of doing his work, of his intention not to accept such compensation, and unless within ten days thereafter, there shall have been filed with the Bureau of Industrial Statistics a true copy of such notice accompanied by proof of service thereof upon such employer, setting forth under oath or affirmation the time, place and manner of such service. And in such cases where Article II binds such employer and such laborer or assistant, it shall not be in effect between the intermediate employer or contractor and such laborer or assistant, unless otherwise expressly agreed.

Section 4. The contract for the operation of the provisions of Article II of this act may be terminated prior to any accident by either party upon sixty days' notice to the other in writing, if a copy of such notice, with proof of service be filed in the Bureau of Industrial Statistics, as provided in Section 3 of this Article.

Section 5. The following schedule of compensation is hereby established for injuries resulting in disability.

(a.) For the first three hundred weeks after the fourteenth day of total disability, fifty per centum of the wages received at the time of injury, but the compensation shall not be more than ten dollars per week nor less than five dollars per week; provided that, if at the time of injury the employee receives wages of less than five dollars per week, then he shall receive the full amount of such wages per week as compensation. And after the first three hundred weeks of total disability, for the remainer of the life of the employee, forty per centum of the wages received at the time of the injury, but the compensation shall not be more than eight dollars per week nor less than four dollars per week; provided that if at the time of the injury the employee receive wages of less than four dollars per week, then he shall receive the full amount of such wages as compensation. Nothing in this clause shall require the payment of compensation after disability shall cease. Should partial disability be followed by total disability, the period of three hundred weeks mentioned in this clause of this section shall be reduced by the number of weeks during which compensation was paid for such partial disability.

(b.) For disability partial in character (except the particular cases mentioned in clause (c,) fifty per centum of the difference between the wages recived at the time of injury and the earning power of the employee thereafter; but such compensation shall not be more than ten dollars per week. This compensation shall be paid during the period of such partial disability; not, however, beyond three hundred weeks after the fourteenth day of such disability. Should total disability be followed by partial disability, the period of tnree hundred weeks mentioned in this clause shall be reduced by the number of weeks during which compensation was paid for such total disability.

For the loss of a hand, fifty per centum of wages during one hundred and seventy-five weeks.

For the loss of an arm, fifty per centum of wages during two hundred and fifteen weeks.

For the loss of a foot, fifty per centum of wages during one hundred and fifty weeks.

For the loss of a leg, fifty per centum of wages during two hundred and fifteen weeks.

For the loss of an eye, fifty per centum of wages during one hundred and twenty-five weeks.

For the loss of any two or more of such members, not constituting total disability, fifty per centum of wages during the aggregate of the periods specified for each.

The loss of both hands or both arms, or both feet, or both legs, or both eyes shall constitute total disability, to be compensated according to the provisions of clause (a.).

Amputation between the elbow and the wrist shall be considered as the equivalent of the loss of a hand, and amputation between the knee and ankle shall be considered as the equivalent of the loss of a foot. Abputation at or above the elbow shall be considered as the loss of an arm, and amputation at or above the knee shall be considered as the loss of a leg. Permanent loss of the use of a hand, arm, foot, leg or eye shall be considered as the equivalent of the loss of such hand, arm, foot, leg or eye.

This compensation shall not be more than ten dollars per week nor less than five dollars per week; provided that, if at the time of injury the employee receives wages of less than five dollars per week, then he shall receive the full amount of such wages per week as compensation.

(d.) No compensation shall be allowed for the first fourteen days after disability begins, except as hereinafter provided in clause (e.) of this section.

(e.) During the first fourteen days after disability begins the employer shall furnish reasonable surgical, medical and hospital services, medicines and supplies, as and when needed, not to exceed twenty-five dollars in value, unless the employee refuses to allow them to be furnished by the employer.

(f.) Should the employee die as a result of the injury, the period during which compensation shall be payable to his dependents under Section 6 of this Article shall be reduced by the period during which compensation was paid to him in his lifetime under this Section of this Article. No reduction shall be made for the amount which may have been paid for medical and nospital services and medicines nor for the expenses of the last sickness and burial. Should the employee die from some other cause than the injury, the liability for compensation shall cease.

Section 6. In case of death, compensation shall be computed on the following basis, and distributed to the following persons:

1. To the child or children, if there be no widow nor widower entitled to compensation, twenty-five per centum of wages of deceased, with ten per centum additional for each child in excess of two with a mximum of sixty per centum, to be paid to their guardian.

2. To the widow or widower, if there be no children, twenty-five per centum of wages.

3. To the widow or widower, if there be one child, forty per centum of wages.

4. To the widow or widower, if there be two children, forty-five per centum of wages.

5. To the widow or widower, if there be three children, fifty per centum of wages.

6. To the widow or widower, if there be four children, fifty-five per centum of wages.

7. To the widow or widower, if there be five children or more, sixty per centum of wages.

8. If there be neither widow, widower nor children, then to the father and mother, or the survivor of them, if dependent to any extent upon the employee for support at the time of his death, twenty per centum of wages.

9. If there be neither widow, widower, children nor dependent parent, then to the brothers and sisters, if actually dependent to any extent upon the decedent for support at the time of his death, fifteen per centum of wages for one brother or sister, and five per centum additional for each additional brother or sister, with a maximum of twenty-five per centum; such compensation to be paid to their guardian.

10. Whether or not there be dependents as aforesaid, the reasonable expenses of last sickness and burial, not exceeding one hundred dollars (without deduction of any amounts theretofore paid for compensation or for medical expenses), payable to the dependents, or if there be no dependents then to the personal representativs of the deceased.

Compensation shall be payable under this Section to or on account of any child, brother or sister, only if and while such child, brother, and sister, is under the age of sixteen. No compensation shall be payable under this Section to a widow, unless she was living with her deceased husband at the time of his death or was then actually dependent upon him for support. No compensation shall be payable under this Section to a widower, unless he be incapable of selfsupport at the time of his wife's death and be at such time dependent upon her for support. The terms "child" and "children" shall include step-children and adopted children if members of decedent's household at the time of his death, and shall include posthumous children. Should any dependent of a deceased employee die, or should the widow or widower remarry, or should the widower become capable of self-support, the right of such dependent or such widow or widower to compensation under this Section shall cease. If the compensation payable under this Section to any person shall for any cause cease, the compensation to the remaining persons entitled thereunder shall thereafter be the same as would have been payable to them had they been the only persons entitled to compensation at the time of the death of the deceased.

The wages upon which death compensation shall be based shall not in any case be taken to exceed twenty dollars per week nor to be less than ten dollars per week. This compensation shall be paid during three hundred weeks, and in the case of children entitled to compensation under Clause 1 of this Section the compensation of each child shall (if the other parent be dead or have abandoned such child) continue until such child reach the age of sixteen, at the rate of fifteen per centum of wages if there be but one child, with ten per centum additional for each additional child, with a maximum of fifty per centum.

Section 7. Except as hereinafter provided, all compensation payable under this article shall be payable in periodical installments, as the wages of the employee were payable before the accident.

Wherever in this article the term "wages" is used, it shall be construed to mean the money rate at which the service rendered is recompensed under the contract of hiring in force at the time of the accident, and shall not include gratuities received from the employer or others, nor shall it include board, lodging or similar advantages received from the employer, unless the money value of such advantages shall have been fixed by the parties at the time of hiring. In occupations involving seasonal employment or employments dependent upon the weather, the employee's weekly wages shall be taken to be one-fiftieth of the total wages which he has earned from all occupations during the year immediately preceding the accident, unless it be shown that during such year, by reason of exceptional causes, such method of computation does not ascertain fairly the earnings of the employee, in which case the period for calculation shall be extended so far as to give a basis for the fair ascertainment of his average weekly earnings. In continuous employments, if immediately prior to the accident the rate of wages was fixed by the day or hour, or by the output of the employee, his weekly wages shall be taken to be five and one-half times his average earnings as such rate for a working day of ordinary length, excluding earnings from over-time and using as the basis of calculation his earnings during so much of the preceding six months as he worked for the same employer. Where the employee is working under concurrent contracts with two or more employers, his wages from all employers shall be considered as if earned from the employer liable for compensation.

Section 8. Compensation under this article to alien dependent widows, children and parents, not residents of the United States, shall be the same in amount as is provided in each case for residents, except that, at any time within one year after the death of the injured employee, the employer may, at his option, commute all future installments of compensation to be paid to alien dependents not residents of the United States by paying to such alien dependents two-thirds of the total amount of such future installments of compensation. Alien widowers, brothers and sisters not residents of the United States shall not be entitled to any compensation.

Section 9. Unless the employer shall have actual knowledge of the occurrence of the injury, or unless the employee or some one on his behalf, or some of the dependents or some one on their behalf, shall give notice thereof to the employer within fourteen days after the accident, no compensation shall be due until such notice be given or knowledge obtained. If notice be given or the knowledge obtained after fourteen days but within thirty days after the accident, the delay shall not bar compensation unless the employer shall show that he was prejudiced thereby, and then only to the extent of such prejudice. If the notice be given or the knowledge obtained after thirty days but within ninety days after the accident, and if the employee or other beneficiary shall show that his delay in giving notice was due to his mistake or ignorance of fact or of law, or to his physical or mental inability, or to fraud, misrepresentation or deceit, or to any other reasonable cause or excuse, then compensation shall be allowed, except to the extent that the employer shall show that he was prejudiced by such delay. Unless knowledge be obtained or notice given within ninety days after the accident, no compensation shall be allowed.

Section 10. The notice referred to in Section 9 hereof shall be substantially in the following form:

> To (name of employer)
> You are hereby notified that an injury of the following character ( ) was received by (name of employee injured), who was in your employment at (place) while engaged as (kind of employment) on or about the ( ) day of ( ) A. D. ( ), and that compensation will be claimed therefor.
> Date: Signed (:)

but no variation from this form shall be material if the notice be sufficient to inform the employer that a certain employee, by name, received an injury, the character of which is described in ordinary language, in the course of his employment on or about a time specified and at or near a place specified.

Section 11. The notices referred to in Section 3 and Section 9 hereof may be served personally upon the employer, or upon the manager or superintendent in charge of the works or business in which the accident occurred, or by sending them through the registered mail to the employer at his or its last known residence or place of business, or if the employer be a corporation, either foreign or domestic, then upon the president, vice president, secretary or treasurer thereof. Knowledge of the occurrence of the injury on the part of any of said agents shall be the knowledge of the employer.

Section 12. After an injury, the employee, if so requested by his employer, must submit himself for examination at some reasonable time and place, and as often as may be reasonably requested, to a physician or physicians legally authorized to practice under the laws of such place, who shall be selected and paid by the employer. If the employee requests, he shall be entitled to have a physician or physicians of his own selection, to be paid by him, present to participate in such examination. For all examinations, after the first, the employer shall pay the reasonable traveling expenses and loss of wages incurred by the employee in order to submit to such examination. The refusal of the employee to submit to such examination shall deprive him of the right to compensation under this Article during the continuance of such refusal and the period of such refusal shall be deducted from the period during which compensation would otherwise be payable.

Section 13. In case of a failure to agree upon a claim for compensation under this Article between the employer and employee, or the dependents of the employee, either party may submit the claim, as to questions of fact, the nature and effect of the injuries and the amount of compensation due therefor according to this Article, to the court of common pleas of the county in which the accident occurred, or of the county in which the adverse party resides or has a permanent place of business, or by agreement of the parties to the court of common pleas of any other county, which courts shall hear and determine such disputes in a summary manner, and their decisions as to all questions of fact shall be conclusive.

Section 14. In case of personal injury, all claims for compensation shall be forever barred unless, within one year after the accident, the parties shall have agreed upon the compensation payable under this Article, or unless, within one year after the accident, one of the parties have filed a petition as provided in Section 15 hereof. In case of death, all claims for compensation shall be forever barred unless, within one year after the death, the parties shall have agreed upon the compensation under this Article, or unless within one year after the death, one of the parties shall have filed a petition as provided in Section 15 hereof. Where, however, payments of compensation have been made in any case, said limitation shall not take effect until the expiration of one year from the time of the making of the last payment.

Section 15. Procedure in case of dispute shall be as follows: Either party may present a petition to said court or any judge thereof setting forth the names and residences of the parties and the facts relating to employment at the time of the accident, the extent and character of the injury, the amount of wages received at the time of the accident, the knowledge of the employer or notice of the occurrence of the injury, and such other facts as may be necessary and proper for the information of the said court, and shall state the matter or matters in dispute and the contention of the petitioner with reference thereto. This petition shall be verified by the oath or affirmation of the petitioner.

Uuon the presentation of such petition, the same shall be filed with the prothonotary of the court of common pleas, and the court shall fix a time and place for the hearing thereof not less than three weeks after the date of the filing of said petition. A copy of said petition and order shall be served upon the advise party as a summons in a civil action may be served. Within seven days after the service of such notice (unless the time be extended by the court for cause shown), the adverse party shall file an answer to said petition, which shall admit or deny the substantial averments thereof, and shall state the contention of the answering party with reference to the matters in dispute. The answer shall be verified in like manner as the petition. If no answer be filed as aforesaid, evidence shall be offered at the hearing by the petitioner only. The court shall in every case have authority to allow amendments of the petition or answer, and to suspend the proceedings during the refusal of the employee to submit to the examination required by Section 12 hereof.

At the time fixed for hearing or any adjournment thereof, the said court or any judge thereof shall hear the witnesses, and in a summary manner decide the merits of the controversy. This decision, called an award, shall be in writing and filed with the prothonotary of the court of common pleas, and shall contain a brief statement of the facts as determined by said court. Costs may be awarded, by said court in its discretion, and when so awarded, the same costs shall be allowed, taxed and collected as are allowed, taxed and collected for like services in the same court. After petition filed, the court of common pleas may, in its discretion, upon motion of either party, or of its own motion, appoint one or more impartial physicians or surgeons to examine the injuries of the claimant and to report thereon to the court. Said court shall have power to fix the compensation of such physicians or surgeons, and to tax the same as a part of the costs of the proceedings. The report of any physicians or surgeons appointed by the court as aforesaid shall be filed with the prothonotary and shall be a part of the record and shall be open to inspection by both parties. Such report shall not be conclusive of the facts therein stated, but shall be advisory only. Appeals may be taken from the award of the court of common pleas to the Supreme or Superior Courts in such manner and upon such terms as the Supreme Court shall by rule prescribe, but no appeal shall operate as a supersedeas unless allowed by the trial or appellate court, except where the compensation shall have been commuted as provided in Section 16 of this Article. Cases arising under this act shall have precedence, both in the courts of common pleas in the appellate courts, over all other civil cases.

Section 16. The conpensation contemplated by this Article may be commuted by said court of common pleas, at its present value when discounted at six per cent, interest, with annual rests, disregarding the probability of the beneficiary's death (except in commuting payments due under Clause (a.) Section 5 of this Article), upon application of either party, with due notice to the other, if it appear that such commutation will be for the best interest of the employee or the dependents of the deceased employee, or that it will avoid undue expense or undue hardship to either party, or that such employee or dependent has removed or is about to remove from the United States, or that the employer has sold or otherwise disposed of the whole or the greater part of his business or assets. Except as provided in Section 8 hereof and in this Section, no commutation of compensation shall be made.

An agreement or award of compensation may be modified at any time by a subsequent agreement, or may be reviewed by said court upon the application of either party on the ground that the incapacity of the injured employee has subsequently increased or diminished or that the status of the dependent has changed. In such case, the provisions of Sections 12 and 15 of this Article with reference to medical examination shall apply.

At any time after the entry of the award, a sum equal to all future installments of compensation may, (where death or the nature of the injury renders the amount of future payments certain) by leave of court, be paid by the employer to any savings bank trust company or life insurance company in good standing and authorized to do business in this State and having an office in the county in which the award was entered, and such sum, together with all interest thereon, shall thereafter be held in trust for the employee or the dependents of the employee, who shall have no further recourse against the employer. The payment of such sum by the employer. The payment of such sum by the employer, evidenced by the receipt of the trustee noted upon the prothonotary's docket, shall operate as a satisfaction of said award as to the employer. Payments from said funds shall be made by the trustee in the same amounts and at the same periods as are herein required of the employer until said fund and interest shall be exhausted. In the appointment of the trustee, preference shall be given, in the discretion of the court, to the choice of the employee or the dependent of the deceased employee.

Section 17. The right of compensation granted by this Article of this act shall have the same preference (without limit of amount) against the assets of the employer as is now or may hereafter be allowed by law for a claim for unpaid wages for labor. Claims or payments due under this Article of this act shall not be assignable, and (except as provided in Section 2 of Article III hereof) shall be exempt from all claims of creditors and from levy, execution or attachment, which exemption may not be waived.

Section 18. Where the employer and the employee, or the dependents of the employee, shall, after any accident, agree upon the compensation payable hereunder for such accident, a memorandum of such agreement, signed by the parties, may be filed with the prothonotary of said court of common pleas. The costs of the prothonotary for such service shall be allowed, taxed and collected as heretofore upon a confession of judgment. When thus filed, such agreement shall have the same effect as if it were an award of the court, as provided in Section 15 hereof, but shall be subject to review by the court for fraud, mistake or other cause shown; provided, however, that nothing in this Section shall be construed to permit a commutation of payments, except as provided in Sections 8 and 16 hereof; and provided further that no agreement relating to compensation shall be valid if made within fourteen days of the accident nor shall any such agreement be valid if it vary the precentage of wages payable as compensation or the period during which compensation is to be paid, as stated in Sections 5 and 6 hereof.

Section 19. If default shall be made by the employer for thirty days after demand, in the payment of any amount due under any of the provisions of this Article, then upon petition of any person interested, and after ten days' notice thereof to the employer served in the same manner in which a summons may be served, the court or any judge thereof shall, if the default still exists, enter judgment thereon for the amount or amounts due, together with interest thereon and costs. Upon such judgment, no stay of execution shall be allowed, except in the discretion of the court.

Section 20. It shall be the duty of the prothonotary of each court of common pleas to make report monthly to the Bureau of Industrial Statistics of all proceedings begun in such court under this Article of this act, classifying such report in such manner as to show whether the proceedings are brought for the settlement of a dispute as to liability for compensation, for a modification thereof, for a commutation of payments, for a judgment in default of payment, or for fixing of counsel fees; and such report shall state the number and term of each proceeding, but neither names nor further detail need be given unless required by the Bureau of Industrial Statistics.

Section 21. Where a third person is liable to the employee or the dependents for the injury or death, the employer shall be subrogated to the right of the employee or the dependents against such third person, but only to the extent of the compensation payable under this Article by the employer. Any recovery against such third person in excess of the compensation theretofore paid by the employer shall be paid forthwith to the employer or to the defendants, and shall be treated as an advance payment by the employer on account of any future installments of compensation.

ARTICLE III.

General Provisions.

Section 1. Wherever in this act the singular is used, the plural shall be included; where the masculine gender is used, the feminine and neuter shall be included.

Employer is declared to be synonymous with master and includes natural persons, partnerships, joint stock companies, corporations for profit, corporations not for profit, municipal corporations, the Commonwealth and all governmental agencies created by it. Employee is synonymous with servant, and includes all natural persons who perform service for another for a valuable consideration, exclusive of casual employees, and exclusive of persons not employed in the course of the regular business or domestic affairs of the employer, and exclusive of persons to whom articles or materials are given out to be made up, cleaned, washed, altered, ornamented, finished or repaired or adapted for sale in the worker's own home or on other premises not under the control or management of the employer.

The exercise and performance of the powers and duties of a local or other public authority shall, for the purposes of this act, be treated as the trade or business of the authority.

Section 2. No claim or agreement for legal services or disbursements in support of any demand made or suit brought under the provisions of any Article of this act shall be an enforceable lien against the amount to be paid as damages or compensation or be valid or binding in any other respect, unless the same be approved in writing by the judge presiding at the trial, or, in case of settlement without trial, by a judge of the common pleas court of the county in which the accident occurred. After such approval, if notice in writing be given to the employer of such claim or agreement for legal services and disbursements, the same shall be a lien against any amount thereafter to be paid as damages or compensation; Provided, however, that where the employee's compensation is payable by the employer in periodical installments, the court shall fix, at the time of approval, the proportion of each installment to be paid on account of legal services and disbursements.

Section 3. If any provision of this act shall be held by any court to be unconstitutional, such judgment shall not affect any other section or provision of this act, except that Articles I and II are hereby declared to be inseparable and as one legislative thought, and if either Article be declared by such court void or inoperative in an essential part, so that the whole of such Article must fall, the other Article shall fall with it and not stand alone.

Section 4. Nothing in this act shall affect or impair any right of action which shall have accrued before this act shall take effect.

Section 5. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

Section 6. This act shall take effect on the first day of July next succeeding its passage and approval, and shall be known as the "Workmen's Compensation Law of 1913."

EXHIBIT "E."

AN ACT

To Provide for the Incorporation and Regulation of Employers' Mutual Liability Insurance Associations.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., that any twenty or more employers, who have in the aggragate not less than five thousand employees in the State of Pennsylvania, and who have accepted the provisions of Article II of the Workmen's Compensation Law of 1913, may form an incorporated employers' mutual liability insurance association for the purpose of insuring themselves and such other employers as may become subscribers to the association, against liability for the compensation payable under the terms of Article II of such Act.

Section 2. The article of association thereof shall state:—

(a.) The name of the association.

(b.) The place of its principal office.

(c.) The duration of the association.

(d.) The name and address of its treasurer.

Any name not in use by an existing association may be adopted, but must clearly designate the object and purpose of the association.

Section 3. The subscribers to said article of agreement shall acknowledge the same before some person empowered to take acknowledgments of deeds, and forward the same in duplicate to the Commissioner of Insurance, who shall certify in duplicate to the Governor whether all of the requirements hereof have been complied with. Whereupon the Governor shall, in case he approves the application, endorse his approval thereon in duplicate, and cause letters patent to issue creating the subscribers and their associates a body corporate, under the name designated in said articles, but such association shall not engage in business until the further provisions of this act have been complied with.

Section 4. Such association shall not begin to issue policies until a list of the subscribers, with the number of employees of each, together with such other information as the Commissioner of Insurance may require, shall have been filed at the Insurance Department, nor until the President and Secretary of the association shall have certified under oath that every subscription in the list so filed is genuine and made with an agreement of all the subscribers that they will take the policies subscribed for within thirty days of the granting of a license by the Commisioner of Insurance.

Section 5. Upon the filing of the certificate provided for in the preceding section, the Commisioner of Insurance shall make such investigations as he may deem proper, and if his findings warrant it, grant a license to the association to issue policies.

Section 6. Charters under this act may be perpetual, or limited in time, as the articles of agreement shall specify.

Section 7. Such association shall have the power to make by-laws for the government of its officers and the conduct of its affairs, and the same to alter and amend; and adopt a common seal.

Section 8. The annual meeting for the election of directors shall be held at such time in the month of January as the by-laws of the association may direct. Of the time and place of said meeting at least thirty days' previous written or printed notice shall be given to the subscribers, or such notice may be given by publication not less than three times in at least two daily or weekly newspapers, published in the city or county wherein the association has its principal office, and in the legal periodical, if any, designated by the rules of court of the proper county for the publication of legal notices. Subscribers who, during the preceding calendar year, have paid into the treasury of the association, premiums amounting to more than one-half of the total premiums received by it during that year, shall constitute a quorum. At such annual meeting the subscribers shall elect, by ballot, from their own number, not less than five directors, a majority of whom shall be residents of this Commonwealth, to serve for at least one year and until their successors are duly chosen: Provided, however, that such association may provide in its by-lays for the division of its Board of Directors into two, three or four classes, and for the election thereof, at its annual meetings, in such manner that the members of one class only shall retire and their successors be chosen each year. Vacancies may be filled by election by the Board until the next annual meeting. In the choice of directors and in all meetings of the association, each subscriber shall be entitled to one vote for every one hundred dollars or any fraction thereof paid by him in premiums into the treasury of the association during the preceding calendar year. Subscribers may vote by proxy, and the record of all votes shall be made by the Secretary, and shall show whether the same were cast in person or by proxy and shall be evidence of all such elections. Not less than three directors shall constitute a quorium. The directors shall annually choose, by ballot, a President, who shall be a member of the Board; a Secretary; a Treasurer, who may also be either the President or Secretary; and such other officers as the by-laws may provide; and they shall fix the salaries of the President and Secretary, as well as the salaries or compensation of such other officers and agents as the by-laws prescribe. Vacancies in any office may be filled by the directors or by the subscribers, as the by-laws shall prescribe.

Section 9. Policies of insurance issued by any such association may be made either with or without the seal thereof, and they shall be signed by the President, or such other officers as may be designated by the directors for that purpose, and attested by the Secretary.

Section 10. If at any time the number of subscribers falls below twenty, or the number of the subscribers' employees within the State falls below five thousand, no further policies shall be issued until the total number of subscribers amounts to not less than twenty, whose employees within the State are not less than five thousand.

Section 11. The Board of Directors shall be entitled to inspect the plant, work-room, shop, farm or premises of any subscriber, and for such purpose to appoint inspectors, who shall have free access to all such premises during the regular working hours, and the Board of Directors shall likewise from time to time be entitled to examine by their auditor or other agent, the books, records and payrolls of any subscriber, for the purpose of determining the amount of premium chargeable to such subscriber.

The Board of Directors shall make reasonable rules and regulations for the prevention of injuries upon the premises of subscribers; and they may refuse to insure or may terminate the insurance of any subscriber who refuses to permit such examinations or disregards such rules or regulations, and forfeit all premiums previously paid by him, but such termination of the insurance of any subscriber shall not release him from liability for the payment of assessments then or thereafter made by the Board of Directors to make up deficiencies existing at the termination of his insurance.

Section 12. Every subscriber to such association shall be under a contingent mutual liability for the payment of losses and expenses in excess of the funds of the association to an amount equal to the premium paid by him during the current year.

Section 13. The Board of Directors shall determine the amount of the premiums which the subscribers of the association shall pay for their insurance, in accordance with the nature of the business in which such subscribers are engaged, and the probable risk of injury to their employees under existing conditions, and they shall fix premiums at such amounts as in their judgment, subject to the approval of the Commnssioner of Insurance, shall be sufficient to enable the association to pay to its subscribers all sums which may become due and payable to their employees under the provisions of Article II of the Workmen's Compensation Law of 1913, and also the expenses of conducting the business of the association. In fixing the premium payable by any subscriber, the Board of Directors may take into account the condition of the plant, work-room, shop, farm or premises of such subscriber in respect to the safety of those employed therein, as shown by the report of any inspector appointed by such Board, and they may from time to time change the amount of premiums payable by any of the subscribers as circumstances may require, and the condition of the plant, work-room, shop, farm or premises of such subscriber in respect to the safety of their employees may justify, and they may increase the premiums of any subscriber neglecting to provide safety devices required by law, or disobeying the rules or regulations made by the Board of Directors in accordance with the provisions of Section eleven of this Act. No policy of insurance issued to any subscriber shall be effective until he shall have paid in cash the premium so fixed and determined.

Section 14. If the association be not possessed of cash funds, over and above its unearned premiums, on undertermined risks, sufficient for the payment of incurred losses and expenses, it shall make an assessment for the amount needed to pay such losses and expenses upon the subscribers liable to assessment therefor, in proportion to their several liabilities.

Section 15. The Board of Directors may from time to time fix and determine the amount to be paid as dividends upon policies expiring each year, after retaining the unearned premiums upon undetermined risks and sufficient sums to pay all the compensation then payable, or which may become payable on account of injuries received by employees of the subscribers, and to pay the expenses incurred in the operation of the business of the association.

Section 16. The Board of Directors may divide the subscribers into groups in accordance with the nature of their business and the probable risk of injury therein. In such case they shall fix all premiums, make all assessments, and determine and pay all dividends by and for each group in accordance with the experience thereof, but all funds of the association and the contingent liability of all the subscribers shall be available for the payment of any claim against the association: Provided, however, that (as between the association and its subscribers), until the whole of the contingent liability of the members of any group shall be exhausted, the general funds of the association and the contingent liability of the members of other groups shall not be available for the payment of losses and expenses incurred by such group in excess of the earned premiums paid by the members thereof.

Section 17. A statement of any proposed premium, assessment, divided or distribution of subscribers into groups, shall be filed with the Insurance Department and shall not take effect until approved by the Commissioner of Insurance.

Section 18. If any officer of the association shall falsely make oath to any certificate required to be filed with the Commissioner of Insurance, he shall be guilty of perjury.

Section 19. Any subscriber of the association who has complied with all its rules and regulations, may withdraw therefrom by written notice to that effect, sent by such subscriber by registered mail to the association, and such withdrawal shall become effective on the first day of the month immediately following the tenth day after the receipt of such notice, but such withdrawal shall not release such suscriber from liability for the payment of assessments thereafter made by the Board of Directors to make up deficiencies existing at the date of his withdrawal, and such subscriber shall be entitled to his share of any dividends earned at the date of his withdrawal.

Section 20. If the Commissioner of Insurance shall find that more than fifty per centum of the contingent liability of all the subscribers is required to pay accrued losses, after charging against the funds in hand the unearned premiums on undetermined risks, no further insurance shall be issued until the subscribers have made good such deficiency.

Section 21. Such Association shall invest and keep invested all its funds of every description, excepting such cash as may be required in the transaction of its business, as follows:—

First.—In such real estate as it is authorized to hold by Section 22 of this Act.

Second.—In bonds of the United States or the District of Columbia, or of any State or territory of the United States.

Third.—In the legally authorized bonds or notes of any city, county, township, municipality, school or water district of this Commonwealth, or of any other State or territory of the United States or Canada.

Fourth.—In the bonds or notes of any solvent railroad or street railway corporation, upon which no default in interest has been made.

Fifth.—In loans upon improved and unincumbered real estate; provided, that no loan on such real estate shall exceed sixty-six and two-thirds per centum of the fair market value thereof at the time of making such loan.

Section 22. No such association shall purchase, hold, or convey real estate, except for the purpose and in the manner herein set forth, to wit,—

First.—Such as shall be requisite for its convenient accommodation in the transaction of its business.

Second.—Such as shall have been mortgaged to it to secure loans previously contracted or for moneys due.

Third.—Such as shall have been conveyed to it in satisfaction of debts.

Fourth.—Such as shall have been purchased at sales, upon judgments, decrees, or mortgages obtained or made for debts due the association, or for debts due other persons, where said association may have liens or incumbrances of the same.

Any real estate purchased under the second, third or fourth paragraphs of this section, which has been held for a period of more than five years from the date of its purchase, shall be sold and disposed if within a period of six months after notice to the association from the Insurance Commissioner to sell and convey the same: Provided, however, that the Commissioner may extend the time for such disposition if he believes the interest of the association will suffer materially by a forced sale.

Section 23. Any money of such association, over and above the unearned premiums on undertermined risks and such sums as are required to pay all accrued losses, may be invested in the securities above enumerated or loaned upon the security of the same; or in the stock or other evidence of indebtedness of any solvent, dividend-paying corporation, created under the laws of this Commonwealth or of any other State of the United States or loaned upon the pledge of the same, except its own stock or the stock of any other insurance company: Provided, the current market value of such security shall be at least twenty per centum more than the sum loaned thereon. But no such association shall invest any of its funds in any unincorporated business or enterprise, nor in the stocks or evidence of indebtedness of any corporation the owners or holders of which stock or evidence of indebtedness may in any event be or become liable on account thereof of any assessment, except for taxes; not more than one-fifth of its capital shall be invested in a single mortgage, nor shall any of its funds be loaned on personal security alone. No such association shall invest in, acquire or hold, directly or indirectly more than ten per centum of the securities of any single company, nor shall more than ten per centum of its assets be invested in the stock of a single company. No such association shall enter into an agreement to withhold from sale of any of its property; but the disposition of its property shall be at all times within the control of its Board of Directors. If any investment or loan is made in a manner not authorized by this Act, the officers and directors making or authorizing the same shall be personally liable for any loss occasioned thereby.

AN ACT

Regulating Policies of Insurance Against Liability Arising Under Article II of the Workmen's Compensation Law of 1913.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That no policy of insurance against liability arising under Article II of The Workmen's Compensation Law of 1913 shall be made unless the same shall contain the agreement of the insurer that, in the event of the failure of the insured promptly to pay any installment of compensation insured against, the insurer will forthwith make such payments to the injured employee, or the dependents of the deceased employee, and that the obligation shall not be affected by any default of the insured, after the accident, in the payment of premiums or in the giving of any notices required by such policy or otherwise. Such agreement shall be construed to be a direct promise to such injured employee and to such dependents, enforceable by action brought in the name of such injured employee and in the name of such dependents.

Section 2. No suit shall be maintained for the collection of premiums upon any such policy of insurance, unless said covenant is contained in said policy.

Section 3. No insurer shall pay, directly or indirectly, to any agent, broker or other representative, for writing or procuring such insurance and collecting the premium thereon, more than fifteen per cent. of the annual premium on such insurance, either as commission, compensation, expenses or otherwise; and any insurer violating this section of this act shall for each offense pay to the Commonwealth a penalty of Five hundred Dollars, to be recovered in an action brought by the Insurance Commissioner.

Section 4. No policy of insurance against liability arising under said article of said law shall contain any limitation of the liability of the insurer to an amount less than that payable by the insured under said Article of said Law, nor shall any such policy contain any limitation of the total liability of the insurer because of injuries to two or more persons in a single accident; nor shall any action be maintained for the collection of premiums on any policy violating this section.

Section 5. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

AN ACT

Authorizing the appointment of a commission to inquire into the causes and results of industrial accidents, to study advanced methods for safeguarding against the same, to inquire into the subject of fair compensation for those injured or killed as a result thereof, and to study the operation and effect of the Workmen's Compensation Law of 1913, and making an appropriation for the expenses of said commission.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That the Governor is heheby authorized to appoint a commission of seven persons, to be known as the Industrial Accidents Commission,— two of whom shall be employers of labor, two of whom shall be employees in either mines or industrial establishments of this Commonwealth or duly accredited representatives thereof, two of whom shall be learned in the law, and one of whom shall be a person skilled and experienced in making investigations, —to inquire into the causes and results of industrial accidents in the mines, mills, factories, stores and upon the railroads, street railways, ships, wharves and in all industrial establishments, and in all other places where men, women and children are employed in manual labor in this Commonwealth; to study the most advanced methods for safeguarding against these accidents; to inquire into the subject of fair compensation for those who are injured in these accidents and for the families of those who shall be killed as a result thereof; and to study the operation and effect of the Workmen's Compensation Law of 1913.

Section 2. The chairman of said commission shall be designated by the Governor, and the person named on said commission as a skilled and experienced investigator shall be the secretary of the commission. The commission shall have power to employ such legal counsel and other officers and employees as it may deem necessary to properly perform its duties.

Section 3. The secretary of said commission shall receive an annual salary of two thousand four hundred dollars ($2,400), and his actual necessary expenses and the other members of the commission shall receive no compensation for their services, but shall be allowed their actual traveling and other necessary expenses. The salaries of any other persons employed by the commission shall be fixed by it.

Section 4. Said commission shall make a full report in writing of its findings, together with such recommendations as it may deem proper, to the next meeting of the General Assembly, which will convene in January, one thousand nine hundred and fifteen.

Section 5. The sum of twelve thousand dollars ($12,000), or so much thereof as may be necessary, be and the same is hereby appropriated for the expenses of said commission. The said expenses shall be paid on warrant duly signed by the chairman of the commission.

REPORT.

The Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennslyvania to consider and report upon a revision of the corporation and revenue laws of the Commonwealth to the Legislature pursuant to Joint Resolution of May 14, 1911.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Gentlemen:—On May 24, 1911, (P. L. 1151), the following resolution, adopted by your Honorable Bodies, was approved by the Governor.

In the Senate, May 23, 1911.

A Concurrent Resolution extending the provisions of the Concurrent Resolution, approved May 13, A. D. 1909, providing for the appointment of a Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Representatives to consider and report upon a revision of the laws of this Commonwealth relating to corporations and to revenue for the employment of counsel and other necessary officers and employees, and giving it authority to compel the attendance of persons and the production of books and papers.

Resolved, (if the House of Representatives concur), that the concurrent resolution approved May 13, 1909, entitled "A concurrent resolution providing for the appointment of a joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives to consider and report upon a Revision of the Laws of this Commonwealth relating to Corporations and to Revenue; for the employment of counsel and other necessary officers and employees, and giving it authority to compel the attendance of persons and the production of books and papers," be, and the same is hereby extended, as follows: That the present President pro tempore of the Senate shall appoint three Senators, and the present Speaker of the House of Represetatives shall appoint three of its members, which shall constitute a joint committee, whose duty it shall be to consider the laws of this Commonwealth relating to corporations and to revenue and the practical working thereof, and report to the General Assembly in 1913 whatever changes may be deemed necessary therein, together with the draft of an Act or Acts of Assembly to accomplish said changes, and together with such recommendations as may be deemed necssary relative to the administration of existing laws or as to the enforcement of said suggested Act or Acts. Said committee shall have power to elect its own chairman, to sit after the adjournment of the Legislature, to employ legal counsel and such other officers and employees as may be needed to enable it to properly perform its duties as aforsaid; but its expenditures shall be limited to the amount provided therefor in the general appropriation bill to be passed at this session of the Legislature, and shall be paid out of the State Treasury upon vouchers signed by the chairman of said committee.

Said committee shall also have power to issue subpoenas, signed by its chairman, requiring the attendance of persons and the production of books and papers as in its judgment will assist in the performance of its duties as aforesaid.

Approved—The 24th day of May, A. D. 1911.

JOHN K. TENER.

In compliance with the said resolution, your Committee has the honor to report:

As the Resolution recites, it is an extension of the provisions of a Concurrent Resolution, approved May 13, 1909.

Pursuant to the authority of the Resolution of May 13, 1909, a Joint Committee, consisting of James P. McNichol, William H. Keyser and William C. Sproul, Senators, and James F. Woodward, David Hunter, Jr., and Gabriel H. Moyer, Representatives, was appointed and served. They "considered the laws of this Commonwealth relating to corporations and to revenue and the practical workings there of, and reported to the Legislature of 1911, the changes they demmed necessary therein, together with the drafts of Acts of Assembly to accomplish said changes, and recommendations relative to the administration of existing laws, and as to the enforcement of the said suggested Acts."

A short resume of the results of the work of that Committee, composed, as it was, of the same senators and members, with the exception of two, as the present committee, we believe to be appropriate and instructive.

The following acts recommended by the Committee were adopted by the Legislature of 1911:

"An Act to provide for the better collection of money and taxes due the Commonwealth, and property belonging to, or liable to escheat to, the same."

See Report of 1911, page 209.
Act of June 15, 1911, P. L. 974.

By this Act the Auditor-General was given full power to discover taxes due the Commonwealth from persons and corporations, and to recover the same. It was an enabling and effective measure.

The Auditor-General reports, (December 17, 1912):

"Over $150,000 of taxes have been collected through attorneys employed by the Auditor-General by authority of the Act of June 15, 1911, P. L. 974, and cases are still pending wherein additional moneys due the Commonwealth will be recovered under the provisions of the same Act. We consider this Act of Assembly a great aid to the workings of this Department, but some of its provisions have not as yet been invoked in aid thereof."

"An Act making appropriations to institutions not wholly managed by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, liens on the premises of such institutions, for the use of the Commonwealth, and providing for the collection thereof."

See Report of 1911, page 56.

By this Act all moneys appropriated by the Commonwealth for the erection, enlargement or alteration of any buildings, or for any permanent improvement in connection with any institution not wholly managed by the Commonwealth, were made non-interest bearing liens on the property of the institution, and provision was thereby made to secure the return to the Commonwealth of the moneys so appropriated in the event of a judicial sale, or if the institution ceased to be used for the purpose for which it was organized.

Prior to this Act many millions, approximately $8,000 000, had been donated by the Commonwealth to charitable institutions over which there was no dominating State control for the construction, alteration, enlargement, improvement, etc., of buildings, etc., and such institutions, so enriched at the public cost, could at any time dispose of their property for their individual benefit. Such disposal would clearly be a perversion of the Commonwealth's philanthropy, which is prevented by this Act.

It is but fair to say that the nearest approach to such a condition has been that some institutions which received such donations have discontinued the receipt of State aid, and, though not legally bound to render charitable service, have continued so to do.

The Act was recommended not because of any past actual loss thereabout, but to allay a somewhat general feeling that the money of the Commonwealth so given should be secured from diversion to other uses.

It will be noted that this Act, like several others adopted by the Legislature of 1911, while not in the exact language of that recommended by the Committee, is, in substance, the same, and its introduction was evidently prompted by the recommendation.

"A joint resolution proposing an amendment to Article 9, Section 4, of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, authorizing the State to issue bonds to the amount of $50,000,000 for the improvement of the highways of the Commonwealth."

See Report of 1911, pp. 127-131.
Pamphlet Laws, 1911, 1162.

This again was not in the language advised by your Committee, but the effect was the same.

The purpose of this is to enable the Commonwealth to create a State debt not exceeding $50,000,000 for the improvement and rebuilding of the highways to meet the needs of the people for good roads. The Committee, (of 1911), after declaring the necessity therefor, and comparing the work done in other States with that of Pennsylvania, reported, in recommending substantially the above amendment, "your Committee is of opinion that our borrowing power should be enlarged to meet the demand, (for better roads), and thus enable us to keep pace with our sister Commonwealths in this respect."

"A joint resolution proposing an amendment to Section 1, Article 9, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, relating to taxation."

See Report, 1911, page 150.
Resolution Pamphlet Laws, 1911, page 1167.

The proposed amendment provides that "the subjects of taxation may be classified for the purpose of laying graded or progressive taxes." This subject will be further considered in the report of the work of the present Committee.

"An Act providing for the report to the Auditor-General, by the prothonotaries of the courts of common pleas, of corporations incorporated by such courts."

See Report of 1911, pages 191-193.
Act June 11, 1911, P. L. 738.

Prior to this Act many corporations chartered by the Court ostensibly as not for profit, though engaged in business and subject to tax on corporate loans, such as baseball and exhibition companies, which are required to register with the Auditor General, did not do so. As the charter did not emanate from Harrisburg there was no record there to advise State officers so that reports for purposes of taxation might be required.

The Auditor-General reports (Dec. 17, 1912):

"In relation to the Act of June 9, 1911, P. L. 738, entitled 'An Act providing for the report of the Auditor-General, by the prothonotaries of the courts of common pleas, of corporations incorporated by such courts,' will say that the prothonotaries of the State are making a limited number of reports provided for by this Act of Assembly. Since the enactment of this law we have received in this Department about 150 returns by prothonotaries, mostly from Philadelphia, Allegheny and Lackawanna Counties."

"A joint resolution providing for the issuing of an invitation to the neighboring States to a conference with respect to the taxing of oil, gas and bituminous coal."

See Report, pages 161-164.
Resolution, June 19, 1911, P. L. 1044.

The Committee of 1911 recommended a tax on anthracite coal in which Pennsylvania had a monopoly, which will be hereinafter treated, but in view of the fact that bituminous coal, oil and gas were in the immediately adjoining States of Ohio. West Virginia and Maryland, with which Pennsylvania coal, oil and gas competed, it was deemed wise to have the taxation of these three commodities considered by a commission representing these States and an equitable tax levied by each, which would be fair to all.

The Governor has not appointed delegates to represent Pennsylvania at such a conference, nor has he invited the Governors of other States so to do.

"An Act in relation to the printing of appropriation bills in the Pamphlet Laws."

See Report of 1911, pages 226-227.
Act, June 10, 1911, P. L. 872.
Act, June 3, 1911, P. L. 664.
Resolution, June 3, 1911, P. L. 1153.

Heretofore the appropriation bills have been printed in full in the Pamphlet Laws at large cost to the Commonwealth, increasing the size of the book fully one-third and with no practical benefit to the people. Hereafter a tabulated list of appropriations will be published in the Phamphlet Laws, and an edition of 3,000 copies of the appropriation bills in full will be issued and distributed, so that all necessary publicity, etc., will be accomplished thereby. This will result in a substantial biennial savof the cost of printing the Phamphlet Laws of at least 22,000 copies of these bills

"An Act authorizing the establishment and maintenance of psychopathic wards in certain hospitals; providing for the regulation thereof, the commitment of persons suffering with mental disorders to such wards, and for the payment of the expenses of maintaining and treating persons committed thereto."

See Report of 1911, page 98.
Joint Resolution, June 14, 1911, P. L. 927.

The Act of June 9, 1911, is intended to provide psychopathic wards in hospitals where mental conditions, such as neurasthenia, hysteria, etc., not amounting to insanity, can be investigated and treated without the stigma attaching to residence in an asylum for the insane.

The Joint Resolution of June 14, 1911, provided for "a Commission to investigate and report to the General Assembly a place for the segregation, care and treatment of feeble-minded and epileptic persons, the object being to devise some remedy for unrestrained propagation of these defectives."

A "Commission on the Segregation, Care and Treatment of the Feeble-minded and Epileptic," composed of Joseph S. Neff, M. D., Samuel G. Dixon, M. D., Isaac Johnson, George W. Ryon, Patrick C. Boyle, Cyrus B. King, Edward K. Rowland and Frank Woodbury, M. D., was duly appointed and actively engaged in compiling statistics of the feeble-minded and epileptic in Pennsylvania. It has held sessions once a month, in Philadelphia and Harrisburg, and has visited a number of institutions in this Commonwealth, New York, Massachusetts and New Jersey. circular letters and return postal cards have been sent to the various school districts, county medical societies and public institutions of different kinds where the defective class of persons might be found, including almshouses and jails. Conferences with superintendents and experts in this Commonwealth and elsewhere have been held, and opinions obtained upon the various subjects relating to the investigation, and we have no doubt that the report of their labors will fully justify the creation of the Committee.

"An Act requiring sheriffs, receivers, trustees, assignees, masters or other officers, having charge of the sale of the property or franchises of corporations, limited partnerships or joint stock associations, to notify the Auditor-General of such sale, and to read at the sale a certificate, to be furnished by him, relative to leins for State taxes, bonus and other public accounts settlements; providing a fee for said officer, and imposing a penalty for neglect or refusal to perform such duties."

See Report of 1911, pages 214-217.

Prior to this Act certain officials having the distribution of funds from the sale of corporate property were required to make certain that the State had been paid, but as there was no penalty for non-compliance, and as the title conveyed was not affected thereby, the requirement was frequently ignored. The penalty for non-compliance provided by this Act should be effective.

"An Act amending Section 4 of an act entitled "An Act imposing additional taxes for State purposes, and to abolish the Revenue Board," approved the thirtieth day of April, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four; by requiring the treasuere of each school district and chief officer f each incorporated district to make report, under oath, to the Auditor-General of the amount of scrip, bonds, or certificates of indebtedness outstanding in their respective districts."

See Report of 1911, pages 192-193.
Act, May 11, 1911, P. L. 236.

The Act of 1864 intended under the designation "incorporated districts" to include "school" districts; with respect to the duties of treasurers thereof to deduct the State tax from the interest paid to the holders of the bonds thereof.

The Attorney-General, on December 17, 1908, so ruled, but in view of the confusion of officials and taxpayers thereabout this amendment was recommended and adopted.

"An Act making State taxes, unpaid bonus, interest, penalties and all public accounts a first lein upon the franchise and property of corporations, companies, associations, joint stock associations, and limited partnerships against which the same may be settled; providing for enforcing the payment therof, and for the furnishing of certificates as to the existence of such liens upon application thereof; and repealing Section 4 of the Act approved April sixteenth, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven."

See Report of 1911, page 231-232.

Act, June 15, 1911, P. L. 955.

The Act of June 1, 1889, P. L. 437, made State taxes a preferred claim. The Act of April 16, 1827, required the Auditor-General to record settlements for purposes of lien in the counties as soon as possible. This resulted in the imposition of great labor upon the Department of the Auditor-General, and to follow up these settlements was beyond its force.

As the records were all in the Auditor-General's office, the Committee recommended that as the proper place for liens, and the right of that official to certify them to the proper county at any time and with the privilege of any one interested to obtain from him a copy thereof. This Act adopts these recommendations and repeals the said Act of 1827.

The suggestion contained in your Committee's draft Act relating to inheritance taxes, that adopted children be exempted from the tax now laid on collaterals became law by the Act entitled

"An Act providing that estate passing from an adopting parent to a legally adopted child or children shall not be subject to the collateral inheritance tax."

See Report of 1911. page 141.

Act of May 5, 1911, P. L. 112.

WORK OF THE PRESENT COMMITTEE.

The resolution directs the Committee "to consider the laws of this Commonwealth relating to corporations and to revenue and the practical working thereof, and to report to the General Assembly in 1913 whatever changes may be deemed necessary therein, together with the draft of an Act or Acts of Assembly to accomplish said changes, and together with such recommendations as may be deemed necessary relative to the administration of existing laws or as to the enforcement of said suggested Act or Acts."

A more herculean task it would indeed be difficult to impose, and one impossible of fulfillment within the alloted time.

These two subjects cover, include or ramify into all of the Commonwealth's activities and directly or indirectly touch and affect the people at almost every point of endeavor in their business and social lives. They present opportunities for inquiries and investigations which have engaged, as respects revenue, the best thought of the political and social economists of all ages, and as respects corporations, their serious consideration during the last half century, and at no time more so than during the last decade, in which they have become an almost dominating factor in the conduct of the business of the Nation and, indeed, of the whole world.

For the purpose of giving an opportunity to the people to present their views, we have mailed upwards of fifty thousand letters as follows:

Dear Sirs:—The Legislature of Pennsylvania, on May 23, 1911, (P. L. 1150), adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved. That the concurrent resolution approved May 13, 1909, entitled 'A concurrent resolution providing for the appointment of a joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives to consider and report upon a revision of the laws of this Commonwealth relating to corporations and to revenue; for the employment of counsel and other necessary officers and employees, and giving it authority to compel the attendance of persons and the production of books and papers,' be and the same is hereby extended as follows: That the present President pro tempore of the Senate shall appoint three Senators, and the present Speaker of the House of Representatives shall appoint three of its members, which shall constitute a joint committee, whose duty it shall be to consider the laws of this Commonwealth relating to corporations and to revenue and the practical working thereof, and to report to the General Assembly in 1913 whatever changes may be deemed necessary therein, together with the draft of an Act or Acts of Assembly to accomplish said changes, and together with such recommendations as may be deemed necessary relative to the administration of existing laws or as to the enforcement of said suggested Act or Acts. Said committee shall have power to elect its own chairman, to sit after the adjournment of the Legislature, to employ legal counsel and such other officers and employees as may be needed to enable it to properly perform its duties as aforesaid; but its expenditures shall be limited to the amount provided therefor in the general appropriation bill to be passed at this session of the Legislature, and shall be paid out of the State Treasury upon vouchers signed by the chairman of said committee. Said committee shall also have power to issue subpoenas, signed by its chairman, requiring the attendance of persons and the production of books and papers, as in its judgment will assist in the performance of its duties as aforesaid."

The committee is collecting data upon the formation, regulation and taxation of corporations and the appropriations of State revenue for all purposes, in this State, in all of the United States, by the Federal Government, and by other nations. These subjects are being specially discussed and legislated upon at the present time throughout the world.

The committee desires the co-operation of all interested in these subjects and requests your opinion as to any defects in the present laws of the Commonwealth relating to the formation, regulation and taxation of corporations, associations, partnerships or individuals, the exemption of them or any of them from taxation, the appropriation of the revenue of the State, and any changes therein which you may think necessary.

You will notice that the resolution requires a report to be made to the Legislature in 1913, and we therefore request an early reply, as it is important that all suggestions be received for consideration prior to the public meetings which the committee may hold. We should also be glad to have from you the names and addresses of any persons whom you may know who are specially qualified to give to the committee information or assistance in the consideration of these most important subjects.

Very truly yours,

JAS. F. WOODWARD,
Secretary.

And to thousands of representative citizens throughout the Commonwealth and elsewhere, known to us, of or whom we were informed, as being interested in the subjects under consideration.

Every interest and activity of the Commonwealth affected by the payment to, or expenditures by, the Commonwealth, or having to do with the creation, conduct or regulation of corporations, was so recognized and communicated with, and appreciation of this recognition was expressed in many letters, containing opinions, suggestions, and recommendations, as various as the writers, to all of whom we have replied and with many of whom we have discussed in detail the subjects involved.

We have collected much data upon both of the subjects, formation and regulation of corporations and State revenues, and upon the relation of State revenues to those of the Commonwealth's several sub-divisions; from all the States of the United States, and from the Federal Government and from foreign countries. We have also obtained information as to the methods of assessing and collecting taxes from all cities of the world having a population of one hundred thousand and upwards, and upon all of these matters we have sought the opinions of authors of books, past and present, treating thereupon.

Your Committee held public hearings in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Erie, and Scranton. Over 10,000 notices thereof were sent to all interests throughout the Commonwealth, and all newspapers were requested to inform the people of these meetings, so that as a result of this they received the widest publicity, and the opportunities for hearings and the general discussion were the subject of favorable editorial and news comment. We were cordially received in these several cities, and the interest of the people in our proceedings, and their knowledge and discussions of the subject were earnest and helpful.

In Philadelphia your Committee heard representatives from hospitals and charitable institutions in that city and surrounding counties, educational institutions, physicians, financial institutions, trust companies, Real Estate Brokers' Association, life insurance companies, Board of Revision of Taxes, county officials, Manufacturers' Club, Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, Mayor of Philadelphia, street railway companies, Pennsylvania Railroad Company, corporations of all classes and representative men prominent in general activities, county officials from Montgomery, Chester, Delaware, Bucks and Berks Counties, and the Mayors of Easton, Reading and Chester.

In Pittsburgh, Pa., your Committee heard representatives from hospitals, homes and other charitable institutions in that city and surrounding counties, manufacturers, bankers, trust companies, city officials, county officials, County Tax Revision Board, Bar Association, real estate brokers, Single Tax Society, educational institutions, Chamber of Commerce, Retail Dealers' Association, glass manufacturers, steel and iron interests, State Grange, insurance companies, Allegheny County Laundrymen's Association, Pennsylvania State Laundrymen's Association, Manufacturers' Association, Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, corporations of all classes, county officials of surrounding counties, the Mayor of Pittsburgh and representative men of that locality.

In Erie, Pa., your Committee heard representatives from charitable institutions, lawyers, city and county officials, Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce, farmers bar associations, merchants' associations, public service corporations, manufacturing companies, Pennsylvania Maunfacturers' Association, corporations of all classes and representative men of the locality.

In Scranton, Pa., your Committee heard representatives from charitable institutions, city and county officials, Mayor of Williamsport, Board of Trade, Bar Association, water companies and other public service corporations, coal companies, financial institutions, brokers manufacturing companies, corporations of all classes, and individuals who were the representative men of the locality.

In all upwards of 100 persons spoke at these hearings, gave their opinions and suggestions and were questioned by your Committee and counsel. Many hundreds appeared as spectators, but affected by the subjects under consideration. Your Committee gave the utmost latitude for discussion and suggestion, both at the public hearings and by means of letters and arguments to it in written form, and these public meetings were a practical success.

Not only attorneys representing various interests appeared before us, but business men as well, encouraged to present their views in their own way, and they gave in many cases the most valuable material for consideration. The State Grange, Manufacturers' Associations, Board of Trade, charitable aid societies, real estate brokers' associations, and, best of all, those who represented the community at large were heard and their views have been considered. Such a subject as the taxation of anthracite coal brought out an admirable discussion of all sides of the problem.

Counsel for the Committee attended all the hearings and aided in questioning those who appeared, and in general consulted with your Committee in all the steps taken and conclusions arrived at.

CORPORATION LAWS.

The Committee of 1911 reported:

"While most of the information and argument addressed to your Committee was on the subject of the revenue laws of the State, yet a great deal of material was gathered on the subject of the corporation laws generally which was entrusted to them by the Resolution.

"Aside from the Acts applying specially to all varieties of corporations, and particularly to railroad, insurance and banking corporations, some of which are incorporated under statutes existing prior to 1873, corporations of the class known generally as business coroprations are incorporated in our State under the Act of April 29, 1874, and its very numerous amendments and supplements, which amount to the number of fifty-seven. In addition there are over a hundred other Acts which apply to the same subject.

"It is an undoubted fact that in the thirty-six years during which the law has been in existence, in consequence of these supplements and amendments, the law has unavoidably fallen into a state of contradiction and confusion on many points (particularly by reason of subsequent amendments ignoring those previously made), and is in some other points not in accord with the modern trend of legislation. Many matters have been suggested as to which these laws may be improved; and these have commended themselves to your Committee. But they do not feel that the situation is one which calls for a piece-meal revision. The laws are familiar and have been construed on most moot points, so that their operation upon everyday matters is well understood. It is not deemed advisable to recommend any radical changes until a complete revision of the whole body of the law can be presented as a corporation code or system, and such few matters as need to be cleared up or supplied can be deferred until that time. Such changes from the settled policy of the State as are deemed presently advisable can be better made in this way, and be better fitted to the body of the existing law.

"A uniform business corporation law is now under consideration by the Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. The first draft of such a law was made and printed in December, 1909, and presented for public discussion, and your Committee has been much interested in its perusal. At the same time this is not the final draft of the law, some parts of it having since been further revised and furnished to your Committee; and a further revision is to follow. The Commissioners have themselves advised your Committee under date of October, 21, 1910, to defer action in this regard. In view of the very general adoption of many of the laws recommended by this conference, Pennsylvania having adopted the Negotiable Instruments Law (1901, P. L. 194), and the Warehouse Receipts Law (1909, P. L. 19), Bills of Landing Act (1911, P. L. 838), Stock Transfer Act, (1911, P. L. 126), your Committee feels that before a general revision of the corporation law is undertaken, the proposed uniform business corporation law should have careful consideration.

"Following the report of a special committee, the Pennsylvania Bar Association, at its meeting in 1910, adopted a resolution for the appointment of a committee to draft and present an Act to the next Legislature for the appointment of a commission to revise and unify the statutes of the State. The majority of the Bar Association Committee has determined that the task of going over the whole statute law is too much to be done in the first instance, and has recommended that a definite branch of the law be considered by such a commission to report to the Legislature of 1913, and that the branch of the law to be taken up should include, among other things, private corporations, meaning by this to exclude public service corporations, insurance companies and the like.

"If your Committee is continued it will co-operate with that of the Bar Association in the consideration of this most important subject. This action of the committees of the Bar Association successively narrowing the field of proposed statutory revision is another evidence of the very large nature of the task, which has made it impracticable if not impossible for your Committee, with the means at its disposal, to do aught but lay some of the ground for future work.

"Your Committee, therefore, does not submit any recommendations with respect to the laws in general governing the organization and conduct of corporations. If the duties of the Committee be continued, as hereinafter recommended, this and other subjects not presently ripe for legislation can be investigated and considered and reported upon to the Legislature of 1913."

Your Committee in fulfillment of its promise, as above, has made further investigation and given serious consideration as to the best way to accomplish the desired object; that is, to codify or put into orderly shape the Act of 1874 and the many amendments and supplements thereto, so that all who have to do with the formation and regulation of corporations can easily learn and understand their rights and obligations thereabout.

We have deemed it inadvisable to attempt to so codify the laws relating to all kinds of corporations, considering it better to proceed along the lines followed by the Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, and the Pennsylvania Bar Association and limit our action to Private Business Corporations, excluding those engaged in public service, insurance and the like, the opinion of the Committee being that once there was adopted a satisfactory Act relating to private business corporations, it could be easily adjusted to include the other classes.

To this end we submit the draft of "An Act to provide for the incorporation, regulation and dissolution of certain business corporations," which is made part hereof. See Appendix of this Report.

In this draft are given the present law, the changes proposed or suggested, the reason therefor, the States where the law agrees, or, as the case may be, differs, with that of Pennsylvania, and the decisions of the Courts thereabout, all these features so presented that "he who runs may read."

Nearly 11,000 copies of the draft of this proposed Act were distributed throughout the Commonwealth among all trust companies, savings institutions, bankers, lawyers, newspapers trade and commercial journals, legal journals, trade and business associations, all State officers and Judges, members of the State Senate and House of Representatives, and members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives from Pennsylvania, building and loan associations, and to individuals known to be interested in the purposes of the Act. Copies were also sent to the Secretary of State of all States of the United States, each copy accompanied by the following letter:

Dear Sir:—This Committee submits herewith, for your careful consideration, criticism and suggestion, a tentative draft of a proposed 'Act to provide for the incorporation, regulation and dissolution of certain business corporations.

This Act has been prepared in deference to a general opinion and desire of all having to do with corporations, that the Act of 1874 (our general corporation law), and its many amendments (some inconsistent with others), should be embodied in one Act.

This is not in final shape, but is given to the public in this form, in much detail, to fully inform all interested, and to invite the fullest discussion, criticism and suggestion.

The resolution appointing this Committee requires a report to be made to the Legislature in January, 1913, and we therefore request an early reply with any criticism or suggestion as it is important that all suggestions be received prior to the public meetings which the Committee will hold in November. We also request the names and addresses of any persons whom you may know who are specially qualified to give to the Committee information or assistance in the consideration of this and State revenue, etc., etc.

Yours very truly,

JAS. F. WOODWARD,
Secretary.

which explained the attitude of the Committee thereto.

Hundreds of letters have been received in response to that communication. These contain, approval, as a whole, criticisms of the suggested changes, proposals of amendments by others, and some oppose any change in present laws. They are from representative lawyers from all sections of the Commonwealth, and a few from outside. They evidence an unusual interest in the subject, and justify the preparation and distribution of the draft. Though requests by the Committee of the Bar and others interested, for co-operation to the preparation of a concrete Corporation Act, had been time and again made, the responses had been few until the appearance of this proposed Act. All of which is to the Committee strongly persuasive, that, whilst it is difficult to have our citizens take the initiative in a subject, intelligent treatment of which combines legal learning and business ability and experience, they are ready to intelligently and unselfishly criticise the creature of authority when impressed with the belief that the public welfare and that alone prompted its creation.

Your Committee has considered these criticisms and suggestions and as a result thereof have in several respects made changes therein. Whilst this proposed Act would appear to contain the up-to-date thought of those whose opinions are "worth the while" and who have been sufficiently public-spirited to express them, your Committee feels that the recasting and codifying of the law upon a subject of almost universal application and of such vital import to the business life of our Commonwealth, should not be concluded until almost the "last voice" has been heard.

They appreciate that a radical change of the corporation laws might possibly at the present time be harmful to the Commonwealth, and whilst they do not assume the position that it would be better to "bear the ill we have than fly to others that we know not of," because they believe the proposed Act would cure some of our ailments thereabout, they have concluded that a little further time for consideration, etc., may be helpful.

They are also induced to this view by the following letter from the Conferenec of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws:

December 17, 1912.

FRANCIS SHUNK BROWN, Esq.,
1005 Morris Building, Philadelphia.

Dear Sir:—Responding to your request for an expression of opinion as to the advisability of urging for passage a tentative draft of an Act providing for the incorporation, regulation and dissolution of certain business corporations, I have to say that I have examined the proposed Act prepared by the Joint Committee of the Senate and House or Representatives, which has been sitting during the year and for which you are counsel, though not with the critical care it deserves.

I see that the proposed Act is the outcome of much thought and I doubt not, if adopted, would be in many respects an improvement upon the existing law. It would seem, however, to be part of wisdom not to urge this Act for passage at the coming session of the Legislature, if for no other reason, because the Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, made up of representatives of all the States, has under consideration the draft of a uniform law which it is hoped will be completed within a year, or, at most, two years.

It is obvious that there is great need for uniformity of legislation among the States on the subject of corporations. The success that has attended the efforts to secure uniformity on various commercial subjects, notably the Negotiable Instrument Act, the Warehouse Receipts Act, the Bills of Lading Act, the Sales Act and the Transfer of Stock Act, all of which, excepting the Sales Act, have been adopted in this State, warrants the belief that a uniform Act upon the subject of the incorporation of business companies may be reasonably expected. With this thought in mind, I think it would be wise to wait until another session of the Legislature before pressing for the passage of any new bill on the subject. The delay will give time for further study and comparison of views among experts, the result of which will surely be advantageous.

There is a justifiable discontent with the existing corporation law of the different States, and public opinion demands a remedy for acknowledged evils; but the problem is a difficult one and cannot be successfully solved by any one State though of course, if no agreement can be obtained upon a uniform law, we must accept the separate action of the State, and it will then be time to take up the Act suggested by your Committee.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) WALTER GEORGE SMITH.

P. S. The foregoing letter is approved by my colleagues on the Commission, Hon. Wm. H. Staake and Robert Snodgrass, Esq.

They therefore do not recommend the adoption of the proposed Act at this session of the Legislature.

A Summary of Changes in Proposed Law follows:

Summary of the principal changes in the law proposed in the draft of an act to provide for the incorporation, regulation and dissolution of certain business corporations.

The suggested Act applies only to Private Business Corporations. It does not relate to public service corporations, or those organized for the purpose of insurance, building and loan, banking, or any business intended to derive profit from the loan or use of money, or which needs to condemn lands, or occupy highways, or corporations not for profit.

It has been prepared on the principle that no change in the present law should be made unless strong reasons exist therefor. The language of the present law is retained except when it is ambiguous, or strikingly awkward. As the main object of the Act is to clarify and simplify existing law, in the arrangement of the sections the Act of 1874 is disregarded, while several matters are included, notably the part on dissolution, which are not covered by existing statutes. When any act is prohibited the penalty and method of its enforcement is provided for in the same section.

The following are the principal changes in the suggested Act, with a brief statement of the reasons therefor.

A. Right to Incorporate for More than One Kind of Business.

Under existing law no corporation can be chartered with authority to transact more than one kind of business. In the suggested Act a corporation may be formed for two or more purposes (Section 2), each purpose to be stated separately in the articles of incorporation. (Section 31, (b).) This change is in accordance with the legislation in the majority of the States, the argument in its favor being that while it is clear that a public service business should not be combined with a purely private business no set reason has been given why persons engaged in a purely private business should be obliged to confine themselves to one purpose. The corporation, with the consent of two-thirds of its stockholders, may change or add to its purpose or purposes. (Section 11 (1), Section 11 (3).) This also accords with the legislation in the great majority of the States.

B. Incorporation Complete on Issuance of Certificate—Letters Patent.

The suggested act provides that incorporation shall be complete upon the issuance of the certificate of incorporation by the Secretary of the Commonwealth. Under the present law the certificate must be recorded in the office of the Recorder of Deeds of the county where the chief operations are to be carried on before incorporation is complete. (Section 6 (1).) This has resulted in litigation upon the validity of acts done after the letters patent have issued, and before they have been recorded. It has also necessitated the passage from time to time of statutes validating, upon proper recording, acts done after the issuance of letters patent, and before record. The sub-section suggested removes the cause of this litigation and avoids the necessity of validating acts. By Section 9, recording in the office of the Recorder of Deeds of the county in which the principal office of the corporation is to be located is made a condition precedent to the commencement of business, and if debts are incurred before such recording, the directors responsible therefor are made jointly and severally liable.

The certificate is made conclusive evidence of due incorporation, whereas at present it is merely "competent evidence." (Section 6 (2).) Unde the present law, however, the Commonwealth is practically the only party which can question the certificate, in view of the principle that there can be no collateral attack upon its validity. In the suggested Act, the Secretary of the Commonwealth and the Governor must be satisfied that the requirements of the Act have been complied with before the certificate of incorporation is issued. When they have so satisfied themselves, and the certificate has been issued, the corporation should be protected thereafter from attack even by the Commonwealth. If false statements are made in the articles, the charter is subject to be forfeited. (See Section 61.) In suggesting this change in the present law the Act follows the law of Massachusetts and of England.

C. Fifty per cent. of the Capital Stock to be Paid Before Commencement of Business.

The suggested Act distinguishes sharply between the right to become incorporated and the right to commence business. No changes, except in minor detail, are made in the existing method of securing "letters patent," or, as it is designated in the suggested Act, "certificate of incorporation." But before a corporation can commence business, "fifty per centum of the amount of capital stock specified in the articles of incorporation shall have been subscribed." (Section 9 (1) (b).) There is no provision in the present law requiring that any definite amount of capital stock shall be subscribed before the corporation begins business, though the requirement that ten per cent. must be paid in prior to incorporation indirectly requires that at least that amount must be subscribed prior thereto. The additional requirement obviously is for the protection of creditors and is a substantial earnest of the character of the corporation.

D. Purchase by the Corporation of Shares of its Own Stock Restricted.

Under the present law a corporation may invest its surplus or other funds or earnings in the purchase of shares of its own capital stock. The suggested Act prohibits such a purchase unless the shares of stock are paid in full and the consideration for them is paid out of the surplus of the corporation. (Section 13 (1a). See ibid. (b) and (c), for certain exceptions.)

The purchase by the corporation of its own stock reduces, at least temporarily, the capital stock, which is the fund on which creditors rely for payment. If the stock purchased is not full paid this fund is diminished as long as the stock is held by the corporation, and therefore it is submitted that the corporation should be permitted to invest its surplus in its own stock only when full paid.

E. Purchase of Stock of other Corporations Limited.

Under existing law corporations may purchase the stock of other corporations, either for the purpose of control or investment. The suggested Act limits the holding of the stock of another corporation to 20 per cent. of the outstanding stock of such corporation. Section 14.

If adopted this provision would prohibit what is known as the "Pyramid" and other forms of purchase for control. At the same time, the limitation, in view of the large number of corporations whose stock it may purchase, in no wise curtails the ability of the corporation to make purchase for the purpose of investment.

F. Provisions Designed to Prevent "Watered Stock."

Under the present law, while it expressly provided in the State Constitution (Art. 16, Sec. 7), that no corporation shall issue either stock or bonds except for money, labor done, or money or property actually received, it is possible to issue stock and bonds greatly in execss of the real value of the property. The present law does not provide any method by which the issue of stock and bonds far in excess of the real value of the property can be prevented; while in case of loss to creditors, they only recover against the directors by proving actual fraud. The suggested Act provides that the directors are required to file in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, a statement verified by affidavit, setting forth the location, quantity and description of the property the number of shares or the value of the bonds to be issued; the names and addresses of the owners of the property or persons giving the labor or services, and their interest, if any, in the coporation; if the owners are officers, directors, or stockholders of the corporation, the price paid or agreed to be paid by them for the property which is to be transferred to the corporation must be given, and also copies of the contracts by which they acquired the ownership.

An issue of stock for property in violation of the provisions of the section is made void. (Section 20).

Where stock or bonds are to be issued for labor or services, a similar statement must be filed. (Section 20).

G. Forfeiture of Stock in Certain Cases for Non-payment of Calls and Assessments.

Under the present law, in case of non-payment of an assessment on stock, the directors are authorized to sell a sufficient number of shares to pay the amount due. In the suggested Act this power is continued, and in addition thereto, if a sufficient amount shall not be bid at such sale the stock and all previous assessments thereon may be forfeited to the corporation. (Section 23 (33).)

H. Shares Not Full Paid—Liability of Transferor.

The suggested Act requires certificates representing shares not full paid to have printed or stamped on their face the words, "Not full paid." If this provision is violated, an immediate liability to the corporation for the amount unpaid is imposed on the corporate official responsible. (Section 26).

The purpose of this provision is to afford protection not only to the purchasers of the stock, but also to creditors of the corporation.

Under the present law, the transferor, though not relieved from liability by the transfer or attempted transfer, for assessment and calls theretofore made, is relieved from liability for calls of the corporation after transfer. Under the suggested Act the transferor would remain liable for the amount, if any, remaining unpaid on such shares, for one year from the date of the transfer, though no call or assessment had been made before transfer, but the liability of the transferor would be secondary to that of his transferee. (Section 28 (2).)

The change is based on the theory that where the holder of non-full paid stock desires to transfer it, it is impracticable to go into questions of the financial condition of the transferee at the time of the transfer, and that therefore the transferor should be placed in the position of an insurer of the solvency of the transferee for at least a definite period of time. To put the matter in another way, the sub-section is a compromise between the practical necessity of protecting the creditors of the corporation and the desirability of making marketable stock which is not fully paid.

I. Liability of Directors for False Statement.

Under the present law, the directors of certain corporations (Clause 18, Corporations) are liable for all the debts contracted during their term of office, if they sign a statement containing a material representation, knowing the same to be false. The same liability, though limited to the amount of the dividend, is imposed in case a dividend is declared when the corporation is either insolvent or would be made insolvent by the payment of the dividend. In the suggested Act, in the case of false statements, the directors and officers are only liable to the creditors of the corporation for any loss or damage arising therefrom; but, on the other hand, they are liable in such case, not only when they knew the statement to be false, but also when with reasonable care they could have known it to be false. (Section 45 (a).)

The liability for illegal dividends is made a liability to the corporation for the amount of such illegal dividend. If the liability is not enforced by the directors within 60 days, any director who dissented to the declaration of the dividend, or any stockholder, or any judgment creditor of the corporation may bring an action in the name of the corporation to enforce the liability. (Section 45 (b).)

The reason for this form of liability is that when the capital stock is illegally taken there should be an immediate liability imposed on those who have wrongfully taken it, to replace the amount taken, instead of compelling creditors to wait until the insolvency of the company, when the directors responsible for the act may no longer be connected with the company and be difficult to reach.

J. Method of Enforcing Liability for Unpaid Subscriptions in case Assets are not Sufficient to Pay Creditors.

Under the suggested Act, the liability of stockholders in case the assets of the corporation are insufficient to pay its creditors can be enforced only by a receiver appointed by the Court of equity on a bill brought by any stockholder or stockholders, or by any creditor or creditors. The right of a judgment creditor to attach any debt due by a stockholder to the corporation for calls or assessments is preserved. (Section 38 (4).)

Under the present law there is continual confusion as to the proper method of enforcing liability for unpaid subscriptions. It is submitted that the remedy of the creditors should be clear and definite, and that the only proper method when the corporation has insufficient property to meet its liabilities is to give to the creditors the right to have a receiver appointed, who, under the supervision of the court, can proceed against the stockholders and distribute the fund ratable among the creditors.

K. Special Reports to Secretary of the Commonwealth.

The Secretary of the Commonwealth was given power in the tentative draft to call for special reports from any corporation when he deems it necessary. The suggested tentative draft also provided for official investigation of the affairs and conditions of any corporation by the Secretary or a person appointed by him for that purpose. (Section 47). This section is based on the principle that an executive officer of the Commonwealth should be permanently charged with the duty of making investigations, whenever in his judgment it is necessary for the Commonwealth to have complete information in regard to the condition of a corporation. See notes.

L. Consolidation of Corporations.

The section relative to the consolidation of corporations follow the present legislation, except that it is provided that the consolidated corporation shall not issue paid up capital stock in exchange for the capital stock of the consolidating corporations to an amount greater than the aggregate amount of the paid up capital stock of such corporations, plus any additional contributions of capital at the time of the consolidation. (Section 51.)

The purpose of this is to prevent over capitalization by the issuance of new stock in exchange for the old stock in excess of the vaule received by the new corporation.

M. Dissolution.

In the suggested Act a method of voluntary dissolution is provided, similar to that in force in New Jersey and numerous other States. The directors wind up the affairs of the corporation without recourse to the courts, unless an aplication for a receiver is made by an interested party, in which case the court may, in its discretion appoint such receiver, who supersedes the directors or any assignee in possession. (Section 58-64.)

Section 65 provides for the appointment of a receiver upon insolvency, and makes insolvency a ground for dissolution if, in the judgment of the court, the corporation should be dissolved.

INVESTMENT COMPANIES.

A strong demand came to your Committee for the exercise by the Commonwealth of "paternalism" with respect to what are conveniently termed "Investment Companies.'' Upon the programme of the Republican State Convention of 1912, was the enactment of such a law. Your Committee recommends the draft of an Act effective to accomplish part of the purpose desired.

This purpose is to prevent the offering to the public of securities of corporations which either have no assets behind them, or which solicit money from customers to be used in speculative investments, or otherwise, upon schemes which are financially unsound. Both the ''Mexican Rubber Plantation'' men and the ''Get-rich-quick'' syndicates, which propose to multiply the money of their customers by speculating on the Stock Exchange, and which never pay profits to anyone except out of the capital contributed by later victims, are reached by this Act. By it all companies offering securities for sale, both domestic and foreign, are required to file with the Commissioner of Banking, their charter, their by-laws, and their scheme of doing business, as well as copies of all contracts which they propose to make with customers, and a statement of their financial standing. All changes in the method of doing business, and all changes of contracts are also required to be submitted before they are put into effect, and periodical reports of financial standing and special reports from time to time as demanded, are prescribed. The Commissioner also has complete visitorial powers, as in the case of banks. If the concern is lnancially unsound, or if its scheme of doing business is wrong, it is refused a license, and the selling of securities without such license is an offence. When the law has been so complied with the securities are then required to be so stamped, and also that the Comissioner does not in any wise recommend these securities. Such a law leaves ample room for every legitimate business enterprise, but it protects the people, not worldly or financially wise, from the consequence of using their small savings in ways with which they are unfamiliar and of the soundness of which they cannot judge. In these days there is a great deal of investment in securities of the value of which even an astute man can form no adequate judgment. A man who puts his money in a mortgage on a house can go and look at the house and the neighborhood and have the title examined. But a man who puts his money in an Oregon apple orchard can have no possible idea of the real merits of the particular enterprise, and probably has no trustworthy idea of the reliability of the people with whom he deals. And yet the prevalence of investments by leading members of the financial community of such kind that an accurate original estimate of value cannot be formed—as, for example, in the case of railroad securities—is a temptation to the man of small means to put his money into what he thinks are similar lines. Granting to the large and the small man the fullest liberty to risk his money as he sees fit, he should be protected from what (on the part of the man who seeks his money) is a false pretense,—false either because lack of assets or because of a business method mathematically doomed to failure instead of success. Why should not the investor be protected when he puts his savings into an investment of the kind indicated, just as he is protected when he puts his savings into a bank for the benefit of his old age, or into the purchase of an insurance policy for the benefit of his family?

The regulative force of public opinion does not affect these concerns. It has been strong to force public utility companies to make improvements in service, because those who make public opinion come in daily contact with the service. The investing class is much smaller and in most cases does not come into personal contact with financial management. The power of government should interfere when the individual is incapable of protecting himself, and this Act will be helpful.

But this law does not cover the whole field. It will reach the sale of securities in this State by the company which issues them and will prevent the solicitation of money from our citizens by concerns which are insolvent, or which propose to do business upon a fraudulent plan. But it is much more difficult to reach the individual who sells securities issued by another concern. An attempt to regulate the doing of business by such persons would interfere with ordinary legitimate brokerage business and probably also with transactions between individual citizens. It would not be practicable to compel a broker before he sold a share of stock of a corporation located, let us say, in the mining regions of the Pacific coast, to have the solvency of the corporation approved by the Commissioner of Banking. The broker has no means of compelling the corporation to make a report, or the information to make it himself. And yet the sale of such securities is both useful and necessary. Even the sale of the securities of an insolvent concern is sometimes useful and necessary, and it can best be done through brokers who make a business of dealing in that line. A law intended to reach fraud only must necessarily, from the generality of its terms, strike at legitimate trade, if it attempts to go beyond the regulation of the corporation itself. For these reasons, your Committee does not now present any Act more extensive in its provisions than the law above referred to, except in one particular.

In one respect the provisions of that law may be supplemented for the public good. The law prohibits the doing of business by corporations which offer securities for sale unless both the method of doing the business and the contract proposed to be made with the customer have been approved by the Banking Commissioner. This approval should also be required in the case of individuals who make a business of investing the money of others. It is especially aimed at such concerns as propose to use their customers' money in speculating on the stock exchange or in contracts for the future delivery of commodities. Accordingly, the draft of an Act is presented as follows:

An Act to regulate the business of receiving for investment, or of investing the money of others.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., that no person or persons, firm or corporation in this State shall engage in the business of receiving for investment, or of investing, the money of others without having first complied with the provision of this Act. Every such person, persons, firm or corporation shall file, under oath, with the Banking Commissioner, a statement in writing, giving in full detail the plan upon which it is proposed to transact business, and a copy of all contracts, bonds or other instruments which it is proposed to make with or sell to customers. At the time of filing such statement a fee of ten dollars shall be paid.

Section 2. If, in the opinion of the Banking Commissioner, the proposed plan of business and proposed contract contain and provide for a fair, just and equitable plan for the transaction of business, the Banking Commissioner shall issue to such person or persons, firm or corporation, a statement that he, they or it have complied with the provisions of this Act, and that they are licensed to engage in the business of receiving money for investment, but such statement shall also recite in bold type that the Banking Commissioner in no wise recommends the person, persons, firm or corporation so licensed. For such license a further fee of ten dollars shall be paid.

Section 3. If any person, either on his own behalf or as the officer, agent or employee of another person, persons, firm or corporation, shall engage in the business of receiving for investment or of investing the money of others without a license therefor having first been obtained, or shall transact business upon any other plan, or shall make with or sell to customers any other contracts, bonds or other instruments than those set forth in the statement filed with the Banking Commissioner, without an additional statement thereof under oath having been filed and a license with respect thereto having been received, or shall attempt to do so, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not more than five thousand dollars, or imprisonment for not more than one year, either or both, in the discretion of the Court.

An Act for the regulation of certain corporations, joint stock companies, limited partnerships, partnership associations and associations having any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships organized under the laws of this or any other State, territory or Government which shall sell or negotiate for the sale of certain stocks, bonds or other securities, and relating to the powers and duties of the Commissioner of Banking with respect thereto, and punishing the violation thereof.

Section 1. All corporations, joint stock companies, limited partnerships, partnership associations and all associations having any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships (other than State and national banks, trust companies, building and loan associations and corporations not organized for profit), organized or which shall be organized in this Commonwealth, whether incorporated or unincorporated, which shall sell or negotiate for the sale of any stocks, bonds or other securities of any kind or character other than bonds of the United States or of this Commonwealth, or of some municipal corporation of this Commonwealth, and bonds secured by mortgages on real estate located in this Commonwealth, to any person or persons in this Commonwealth other than those specifically exempted herein, shall be known for the purpose of this Act as a domestic investment company. Every such investment company organized in any other State, Territory or Government, or organized under the laws of any other State, Territory or Government, shall be known for the purpose of this Act as a foreign investment company.

Section 2. Before offering or attempting to sell any stocks, bonds or other securities of any kind or character other than those specially exempted in Section 1, of this Act, to any person or persons, or transacting any business whatever, in this Commonwealth, excepting that of preparing the documents hereinafter required, every such investment company, domestic or foreign, shall file in the office of the Commissioner of Banking of this Commonwealth, together with a filing fee of ten dollars, the following documents, to wit:

A statement showing in full detail the plan upon which it proposes to transact business.

A copy of all contracts, bonds or other instruments which it proposes to make with or sell to its contributors or customers.

A statement which shall show the name and location of the investment company, and an itemized account of its actual financial condition, and the amount of its property and liabilities, and such other information touching its affairs as said Commissioner of Banking may require.

A copy of its articles of incorporation or association, letters patent, charter, constitution and by-laws, with all amendments as then existing, and all other papers pertaining to its organization.

If it shall be an investment company organized under the laws of any other State, Territory or Government, incorporated or unincorporated, it shall also file with the said Commissioner of Banking a copy of the laws of such State, Territory or Government, under which it exists or is incorporated, and also a copy of its charter, articles of incorporation, constitution and by-laws and all amendments thereof which have been made, and all other papers pertaining to its organization.

Section 3. All of the above described papers shall be verified by the oath of a duly authorized officer of such investment company. All such papers, however, as are recorded or are on file in any public office shall be further certified to by the officer of whose records or archives they form a part, as being correct copies of such records or archives.

Section 4. Every foreign investment company shall also comply with the law then in force requiring the registration of an agent on whom service of process may be made by foreign corporations doing business in this Commonwealth.

Section 5. It shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Banking to examine the statements and documents so filed, and if said Commissioner of Banking shall deem it advisable he shall make or have made a detailed examination of such investment company's affairs, which examination shall be at the expense of such investment company, as hereinafter provided; and if he finds that such investment company is solvent, that its articles of incorporation or association, its constitution and by-laws, its proposed plan of business and proposed contract contain and provide for a fair, just and equitable plan for the transaction of business, and, in his judgment, promise a fair return of the stocks, bonds and other securities by it offered for sale, the Commissioner of Banking shall issue to such investment company a statement reciting that such company has complied with the provisions of this Act, that detailed information in regard to the company and its securities is on file in the office of the Commissioner of Banking for public inspection and information, that such investment company is permitted to do business in this Commonwealth; and such statement shall also recite in bold type that the Commissioner of Banking in no wise recommends the securities to be offered for sale by such company. At the time of issuing such statement the investment company shall pay to the Commissioner of Banking a further fee of ten dollars. But if said Commissioner of Banking finds that such articles of incorporation or association, charter, constitution and by-laws, plan of business or proposed contract contained any provision that is unfair, unjust, inequitable or oppressive to any class of contributors or customers, or if he decides from his examination of its affairs that said investment company is not solvent and does not intend to do a fair and honest business, and, in his judgment, does not promise a fair return on the stocks, bonds or other securities by it offered for sale, then he shall notify such investment company in writing of his findings and it shall be unlawful for such company to do any further business in this Commonwealth until it shall so change its constitution and by-laws, articles of incorporation or association, its proposed plan of business and proposed contract and its general financial condition in such manner as to satisfy the Commissioner of Banking that it is solvent, and that its articles of incorporation or association, its constitution and by-laws, its proposed plan of business and proposed contract do provide for a fair, just and equitable plan for the transaction of business, and that it does, in his judgment, promise a fair return on the stocks, bonds and other securities by it offered for sale; provided, that all expenses paid or incurred and all fees or charges received or collected for any examination made under the provisions of this section of this Act shall be reported and recorded in detail by the Commissioner of Banking.

Section 6. It shall not be lawful for any investment company, either as principal or agent, to transact any business, in form or character similar to that set forth in Section 1 of this Act, except as is provided in Section 2 of this Act, until is shall have filed the papers and documents above provided for. No amendment of the charter, articles of incorporation, constitution and by-laws of any such investment company shall become operative until a copy of the same has been filed with the Commissioner of Banking as provided in regard to the original filing of charters, articles of incorporation, constitution and by-laws; nor shall it be lawful for any such investment company to transact business on any other plan than that set forth in the statement required to be filed by Section 2 of this Act, or to make any contracts other than that shown in the copy of the proposed contract required to be filed by Section 2 of this Act, until a written statement showing in full detail the proposed new plan of transacting business, and a copy of the proposed new contract shall have been filed with the Commissioner of Banking in like manner as provided in regard to the original plan of business and proposed contract, and the consent of the Commissioner of Banking obtained as to making such proposed new plan of transacting business and proposed new contract.

Section 7. Any investment company may appoint one or more agents, but no such agent shall do any business for said investment company in this State until he shall first register with the Commissioner of Banking as agent for such investment company, and for each of such registrations there shall be paid to the Commissioner of Banking the sum of one dollar. Such registration shall entitle such agent to represent such investment company as its agent until the first day of March following, unless said authority is sooner revoked by the Commissioner of Banking; and such authority shall be subject to revocation at any time by the Commissioner of Banking for cause appearing to him sufficient, after notice and hearing.

Section 8. Every investment company, domestic or foreign, shall file, at the close of business on December 31st and June 30th of each year, and at such other times as required by the Commissioner of Banking, a statement verified by the oath of a principal executive officer duly authorized thereto, setting forth in such from as may be prescribed by the said Commissioner of Banking, its financial condition and the amount of its assets and liabilities, and furnishing such other information concerning its affairs as said Commissioner may require. Each regular statement of December 31st and June 30th shall be accompanied by a filing fee of two dollars and fifty cents. An investment company failing to file its report at the close of business December 31st or June 30th of each year within ten days of that date, or failing to file any other or special report herein required within thirty days after receipt of request or requisition therefor, shall forfeit its right to do business in this Commonwealth.

Section 9. The general accounts of every investment company, domestic or foreign, doing business in this Commonwealth, shall be kept by double entry, and such company shall at least once in each month make a trial balance of such accounts, which shall be recorded in a book provided for that purpose; such trial balance and all other books and accounts of such company shall at all times during business hours, except on Sundays and legal holidays, be open to the inspection of stockholders and investors in said company or investors in the stocks, bonds or other securities by it offered for sale, and to the Commissioner of Banking and his deputies.

Section 10. The Commissioner of Banking shall have general supervision and control, for the purpose of this Act, over any and all investment companies, domestic or foreign, doing business in this Commonwealth, and all such investment companies shall be subject to inspection or examination by the Commissioner of Banking or his duly authorized deputies, or any qualified examiner of the Department of the Commissioner of Banking, when such examiner is authorized in writing under the official seal of said Commissioner or his deputies, to make such examination of any such companies. And it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Banking or his deputy to so inspect and examine each of the said companies as often as he shall deem proper, and whenever he shall deem it necessary or proper he shall assign a qualified examiner or examiners to make such examination, who shall have power to make a thorough examination into all the business and affairs of the said investment company or companies, to examine any of the officers or agents or employees thereof, or any officer or employee of any corporation or member of any firm or any individual in possession of any assets thereof, under oath or otherwise, and to examine any or all of the books, papers and records of the said investment companies, and shall make or cause to be made, in the manner aforesaid, a full and detailed report of the condition of said investment company; and such investment company shall pay a fee for each of such examinations of not to exceed ten dollars for each day or fraction thereof, plus the actual traveling and hotel expenses of said Commissioner of Banking or deputy, or official examiner, while he is absent from the office of the Commissioner of Banking for the purpose of making such examination, and the failure or refusal of any investment company to pay such fees, upon the demand of the Commissioner of Banking that the assets of any investment company do work a forfeiture of its right to do business in this Commonwealth.

Section 11. Whenever it shall appear to the Commissioner of Banking that the assets of any investment company doing business in this Commonwealth are impaired to the extent that such assets do not equal its libalities, or that it is conducting its business in an unsafe, inequitable or unauthorized manner, or is jeopardizing the interest of its stockholders or investors in stocks, bonds or other securities by it offered for sale, or whenever any investment company shall fail or refuse to file any papers, statements or documents required by this Act, without giving satisfactory reasons therefore, said Commissioner of Banking shall at once communicate such facts to the Attorney General, who shall thereupon apply in the name of the Commonwealth to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of and wind up the business of such investment company, and if such fact or facts be made to appear it shall be sufficient evidence to authorize the appointment of a receiver and the making of such orders and decrees in such cases as equity may require.

Section 12. Any person who shall knowingly or willfully subscribe to or make or cause to be made any false statements or false entry in any book of such investment company, or exhibit any false paper with the intention of deceiving any person authorized to examine into the affairs of such investment company, or shall make or publish any false statements of the financial condition of such investment company, or the stocks, bonds or other securities by it offered for sale, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than two hundred dollars nor more than ten thousand dollars, and shall be imprisoned for not less than one year nor more than ten years.

Section 13. Any person or persons, agent or agents, who shall sell or attempt to sell the stock, bonds or other securities of any investment company, domestic or foreign, or the stock, bonds or other securities by it offered for sale, which have not complied with the provisions of this Act, or any investment company, domestic or foreign, which shall do any business or offer, or attempt to do any business, except as provided in Section 2 of this Act, which shall not have complied with the provisions of this Act, or any agent or agents who shall do or attempt to do any business for any investment company, domestic or foreign, in this Commonwealth, which agent is not at the time duly registered and has not fully complied with the provisions of this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined for each offense not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than ninety days, or both such fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the Court.

Section 14. All fees herein provided shall be collected by the Commissioner of Banking, and by him paid into the State Treasury.

Section 15. The Commissioner of Banking is hereby authorized to appoint such clerks and deputies as may be necessary to carry the provisions of this Act into effect.

Section 16. All Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with his provisions of this Act are hereby repealed.

FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.

The Report to the Legislature of 1911, while postponing the revision of the General Corporation Laws of the Commonwealth, presented a fully developed scheme for regulating foreigin corporations doing business in Pennsylvania. The draft statute was the result of careful study of the laws of other States and the constitutional validity of many more or less popular features of those laws. It adapted to our use the most valuable parts and contained some novel provisions.

The Legislature of 1911, however, did not see fit to adopt this Act or any part of it. Aside from the Acts hereinafter referred to, treating in a partial way of the ownership of real estate by foreign corporations, the only action taken by the Legislature was the passage of the Act of June 8, 1911, P. L. 710, which regulated the doing of business by foreign corporations and prescribed the mode of registration of an agent for service of process. This Act made the Secretary of the Commonwealth the agent for all foreign corporations for service of process, and required such corporations to file a power of attorney appointing that official their agent for this purpose. The Act, however, does not meet the evils pointed out by your Committee in its previous report, and fully set forth in the notes herein.

The difficulty with the previously existing law was that its several penalties were ineffectual in practice to compel registration by a very large number of foreign corporations doing business in this Commonwealth. The penalty was not actually enforced. Especially with the smaller companies, their existence was not brought to the attention of the Commonwealth's officials, who were already overburdened with work. As a result, many foreign corporations came into this Commonwealth and did business with our citizens, and when it became necessary to bring suit against them, it was found there was no one upon whom service of process could be made. In other words, while the Act sought to compel the appointment of an agent, there was no automatic process by which some person easily reached was to act as the agent in cases where there was no designation.

Following the practice in other States, the Act recommended by your Committee gives the corporation the liberty of appointing its own agent, or agents, at a designated place or places, but provides that if the corporation should do business without appointing such an agent, the Secretary of the Commonwealth should thereby become the agent of the corporation for service of process. The validity of such a provision is fully discussed and justified in these notes.

It is also provided in this draft Act that in case of the service on the Secretary of the Commonwealth, further actual service should be had outside of the Commonwealth. The purpose of this was to satisfy the technical requirements of the law by service of process within the Commonwealth upon some one who should be by law created the agent of the corporation, so that the corporation was "brought into court," and also to certify the demands of natural justice, by giving actual notice outside of the Commonwealth. The corporation will then have a real opportunity to defend, and need not suffer judgment by default, as might happen if service of process was made only on the State official, who might have no means of conveying actual notice of such service to the corporation itself.

The Act of 1911 seems to your Committee to be wrong in principle, because of its forces upon the foreign corporation in every instance what is really a fictitious agency. A corporation should have the choice of appointing its own agent in all cases where it genuinely tries to comply with our laws, and should only be compelled to accept an agent whose acts cannot be controlled, in case it defies our laws. The Act of 1911 requires the Secretary of the Commonwealth to mail to the corporation, at a designated address, the process thus served, and in the final result, what the Act of 1911 provides for is service of process upon a foreign corporation by mail notice only, although it is doing its best to comply with our laws. Such notice, except in case of necessity, is opposed to the law everywhere, which requires service of process to be actual, instead of presumtive, and to be made by a responsible officer.

The Act of 1911 also failed to adopt other features of the Act drafted by your Committee, which the Committtee then thought and still believes to be valuable. There is no provision in the Act for the filing by a foreign corporation of its charter in this Commonwealth, so that our citizens may know the foundation of its organization and powers. The Act (1911) did not regulate the burden of proof in actions at law with respect to compliance by the foreign corporations with our laws. The law should be that compliance should be taken to be admitted unless put in issue specially. This is analogous to the provision by which the existence of a corporation is taken to be admitted unless specially put in issue, as made by the Act of June 24, 1885, P. L. 149, and unnecessarily re-enacted by the Act of June 9, 1911, P. L. 723.

As your Committee believes that its draft Act is a better regulation of foreign corporations than the Act of 1911, so far as the latter goes, and that it contains other valuable features which should be the law, that draft is again presented to the Legislature with the recommendation that it be passed. It is hoped that the Act will solve some of the most important present problems in dealing with corporations. The same ground is not covered by the proposed Act herewith submitted with regard to private business corporations. Full explanatory notes are added, giving the source of the particular provisions, the authorities for their validity, and the reasons, practical and legal, why they are necessary.

A brief statement of the most important provisions in addition to those already referred to in commenting on the Act of 1911, is as follows:

Authority to foreign corporations to hold real estate in Pennsylvania upon complying with our law. This followed requests from all sources which have been repeated in the last two years. Pennsylvania has been almost alone in the situation of refusing the right to hold real estate to corporations who comply with our laws regulating them. Besides Pennsylvania only Nebraska makes a rule of prohibiting the holding of real estate by foreign corporations. In 30 States the rule is otherwise.

No good reason for this policy has been advanced. It is probably a relic of the necessities of feudal duties, which prevented all aliens from owning real estate. We have got rid of this as to individuals, even in case of dower.

The most curious feature of the present Pennsylvania law is the numerous exceptions which have been created by statute from time to time with respect to special classes of foreign corporations. These classes bear little or no relation to each other, and have no characteristics which would justify the holding of real estate as distinguished from other kinds not so included.

In addition, the Legislature of 1911 added to the exceptions by the Act of June 23, 1911, P. L. 1115, extending the privilege to a curious variety of corporations having to do, in some way or another, with electricity; and the Act of April 20, 1911, P. L. 68, extending the privilege to foreign corporations formed for the purpose of manufacturing garden implements and dealing in seeeds, etc.

Only the Commonwealth can take advantage of violation of the law by bringing proceedings to escheat such lands, and in practice such proceedings are never instituted. From time to time such corporations take title to real estate and then convey to citizens. This has caused the passage of various validating Acts, forgiving all such past offenses, and the Legislature of 1911 added to the list by the Act of March 7, 1911, P. L. 13, repeated in the same words by the Act of June 15, 1911, P. L. 955, and substantially repeated by the Act of June 23, 1911, P. L. 1114.

What good reason can their be for continuing a policy of which no advantage is ever taken, as to violations of which periodical pardons, of an omnibus character, are issued by the Legislature, and upon which inroads are continually made by each successive Legislature at the request of special interests which desire exemption form time to time, thus giving rise to one of the most obnoxious forms of special legislation? What reason of policy there is for permitting a corporation which manufactures velvet, ice or pyroligneous acid to own real estate and prohibiting such ownership by manufacturing corporations or other business corporations generally, if they happen to be chartered by another State, it is impossible to conceive. These corporations are permitted to do business with us on the same terms as our own corporations. They are permitted to hold all sorts of personal property. They have established themselves among us to stay, and they do, in fact, in a great many cases, own real estate under the cover of trusteeship or leases for 99 years, or real estate holding companies. It is a reproach to our law that these companies are forced to accomplish by subterfuge in this way what they should have the right to do openly.

In one respect, however, the Act of 1911 did follow the lines recommended by your Committee. This is the provision in Section 4, that contracts entered into by a foreign corporation which shall do business in the Commonwealth without complying with the law, shall be validated if, before commencing an action they shall comply with the law and pay a license fee or fine of $250. The previous state of the law, which invalidated contracts so made and gave no opportunity for repentance, failed to compel foreign corporations to register, and failed to put money in our Treasury, but did not permit gross injustice to be done by individuals who pleaded such noncompliance to escape from paying honest debts.

In the opinion of your Committee, however, the Act of 1911 did not go far enough. It should have provided —as the Act drafted by your Committee does provide— that the corporation should not only register and pay a fine, but should also pay the bonus and taxes which the Commonwealth had not yet got. The Act of 1911 merely requires a compliance with its provisions but not the payment of bonus and taxes.

And if the policy thus inaugurated is a wise one, there is no reason why it should not be extended to past Acts as well. The invalidation of contracts was not part of the penalty prescribed by the original Foreign Corporation Act of 1874, or by any other statute. It was a result of construction by the courts. It has not been a part of our law upon which our citizens relied in dealing with foreign corporations, or if any have so relied on it they have been men of small conscience designing to take advantage of a loophole in the law. The policy of validating such contracts with respect to past matters was recognized by the Legislature of 1907, (P. L. 205). The same policy is indicated by the Act of May 11, 1901, P. L. 172. It is anomalous that there should be a period extending from 1907 to 1911 as to which the law permits such an evasion of just obligations, while as to the period before and the period after that time the law is otherwise, although the general policy of requiring the registration of foreign corporations and forbidding actions on contract until the corporations are registered, remains the same for all periods. A further validating Act has therefore been drafted.

The Act drafted by your Committee includes a provision by which foreign corporations which have their principal place of business in this Commonwealth are in effect prohibited from resorting to the Federal Courts. A corporation cannot be denied its remedy in the Federal Courts, but it can be refused the right to do business for the future if in any particular case it does resort to the Federal Courts. The argument is—and it is in line with the practice elsewhere—that a corporation which is really doing business here and the foreign birth of which is but an accident, should confine its litigation to the local courts as though it was in theory, as it is in fact, one of our own citizens.

The same considerations apply to the regulation by the courts of the internal affairs of foreign corporations owned by our citizens and having their business here. As pointed out in the notes our courts have held, (in conformity with decisions elsewhere), that they have no authority over these concerns. A step in the direction which the draft Act proposes to take is found in the recent case of Machen vs. Machen, 237 Pa. 212, holding that our courts might compel directors of a foreign corporation which kept its books here to exhibit them to stockholders.

An Act to regulate foreign corporations, That is to say, corporations, joint stock companies, partnerships limited partnership associations, and all associations having any of the powers or privileges of corporations, not possessed by individuals or partnerships, organized, under any laws other than those of this Commonwealth, doing business in this Commonwealth.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., that any foreign corporations may own or convey real estate within this Commonwealth as fully as any corporation might which was organized under the laws of this Commonwealth for a similar purpose, provided that such corporation at the time of acquiring title to the real estate shall have complied fully with the laws of this Commonwealth relating to the doing of business in this Commonwealth by foreign corporations; and provided further, that nothing in this Act shall be construed to exempt said real estate and such corporations from taxation as otherwise required by law.

Section 2. The non-compliance by a foreign corporation with the laws of this Commonwealth may only be taken advantage of with respect to real estate by the Commonwealth itself, and before the same shall have come into the ownership of a purchaser for value in good faith.

Section 3. The title to any real estate in this Commonwealth now or heretofore owned by or in trust for any such foreign corporation is hereby confirmed with the same effect as if the said real estate had been purchased, held or owned under the provisions of this Act, upon the said corporation complying with the laws of this Commonwealth relating to the doing of business by foreign corporations, and paying the bonus on its capital stock required by law, and all State taxes for each year that it shall have done business in this Commonwealth, together with such interest and penalties thereon as shall have been settled against it by the officers of this Commonwealth.

Section 4. The term "foreign corporation," as used in this Act, shall be construed to mean all corporations, joint stock companies, partnerships limited, partnership associations, and all associations having any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships, organized under any laws other than those of this Commonwealth, and the provisions of this Act shall apply to such corporations heretofore or now or hereafter doing business in this Commonwealth.

NOTE.

This draft Act is composed of the sections of the draft Foreign Corporations Act, put together by themselves, in order that the Legislature may conveniently, if it so desires, enact this provision of the law without the rest.

A difficulty which foreign corporations have to contend with in this Commonwealth is that their fiscal year does not correspond with the year for which reports to our officers for purposes of taxation are required to be made up. This becomes more aggravated when the corporation does business in a great number of States, as each State may, and often does, have a different tax year. A like difficulty exists as to the matters required to be reported, which must be cast in different forms in the different States. As to the last matter, it is not practicable for any one State to lead in the movement for uniformity, and the roform must come from such a body as the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. But with respect to the fiscal year, a basis for reform already exists.

The calendar year is so natural a division that it must be the basis for any uniformity which may be achieved, and the fact that the Federal Corporation Law prescribed the calendar year as the fiscal year makes it imperative that all corporations should make at least one report upon the basis of the calendar year and tends strongly to compel this as the uniform year for all corporations.

During the past four years many complaints were made to your Committee of the lack of uniformity in the period for which reports are required of domestic corporations. It was suggested that some corporations, (as department stores), do not find the holidays a convenient time for stock taking, and that each corporation should have the privilege of making its own fiscal year its tax year. This would be confusing and burdensome to the authorities and might lead to evasion. Certainty is as desirable as uniformity. For the benefit of both foreign and domestic companies, therefore, your Committee recommends the adoption of the calendar year, and presents the draft of an Act to accomplish this. To it are added notes showing the present lack of uniformity.

The attention of your Committee was called to evils growing out of the practice of foreign corporations in issuing securities "tax free." Cases have risen where securities were issued by foreign corporations containing provisions that guaranteed the payment of interest free of Pennsylvania taxes. This provision has sometimes been so worded as to compel the corporation to pay only such taxes as it is required by Pennsylvania to deduct from the interest paid to the holder of the security and to remit to the Commonwealth. As foreign corporations are not required by law to deduct or remit any such interest, the corporations did not in fact pay the tax, and the holder was compelled to pay it himself. This was contrary to his expectation derived from a hasty reading of the language or from misleading advertisements. There are cases existing in which the foreign corporation undertook to pay all taxes assessed by the State of Pennsylvania. In such case also as the foreign corporation was not compellable to make any loan tax report to this Commonwealth, the holder of the security was compelled to return the security to the tax officers, and to pay the tax himself, and then sue the corporation for the money so paid. In either case the result was irritation on the part of the security holder, and often complaint against our taxing officers that they did not collect the tax from the corporation itself. The security holder did not realize that the agreement of the corporation could not change the method by which we collect our taxes. The corporation took advantage of that method, and its knowledge that it would not be required to make a return to the Commonwealth or to pay the tax direct thereto to misleading representations. What remedy is to be applied as long as the present system exists your Committee is at a loss to suggest. Doubtless the remedy most often applied in practice is that the security holder, either through ignorance or easy conscience, does not return the security for taxation, relying on the representation that it is tax free in Pennsylvania. The solution will probably be found when a more efficient method is found of taxing foreign securities held by our citizens, and of compelling a more accurate return by domestic corporations of the securities held by our citizens, as distinguished from those held by non-residents, which are taxable. A step in the latter direction is proposed elsewhere in this report in discussing the collection of revenue. Attention is also directed to the proposal to radically alter the principle by which loans of domestic corporations are taxed, so as to include all such loans. This, however, will not affect foreign corporations.

An Act to regulate foreign corporations, that is to say, corporations, joint stock companies, partnerships limited, partnership associations and all associations having any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships organized under any laws other than those of this Commonwealth, doing business in this Commonwealth.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc. A foreign corporation shall not do any business in this Commonwealth until said corporation shall have established an office and appointed an agent for the transaction of its business therein. (1.)

Section 2. It shall not be lawful for any such corporation to do any business in this Commonwealth until it shall file in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and in the office of the Recorder of Deeds for the County in which its principal office is located, a copy of its articles of incorporation or of its charter or of the statute or legislative, executive or governmental acts or other instrument of authority by which it was created and all alterations and amendments thereof, (2) duly certified by the authorized officer of the government under the laws of which such corporation was organized, (3) and in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth a statement under the seal of said corporation and signed by the president attested by the secretary thereof, showing the title and objct of said corporation, the location of its principal office for the transaction of business in this Commonwealth, and the name or names of its authorized agent or agents therein. (4) A fee of one hundred dollars ($100.00) for filing such statement shall be paid to the Secretary of the Commonwealth for the use of the State.

Section 3. Any person or persons, agent, officer or employee of any such foreign corporation who shall transact any business within this Commmonwealth for any such foreign corporation without having complied with the provisions of this Act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding thirty days and by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars ($1,000), or either, at the discretion of the Court trying the same; (5) but the said person or persons, agent, officer or employee, shall not be personally liable for any acts done in the transaction of business within this Commonwealth for such foreign corporation, except in the case of insurance companies. (6.)

Section 4. If any foreign corporation shall do any business in this Commonwealth without having complied with the laws of this Commonwealth relating to the doing of business in this Commonwealth by foreign corporations (7) all contracts relating to such business made or to be performed within this Commonwealth shall be void (8) and no action at law or in equity for any cause of action arising out of such doing of business shall be maintained by it in the Courts of this State, (9) but if any foreign corporation, prior to the commencement of an action on any contract made heretofore or hereafter without having so complied or prior to the commencement of any other action, shall comply with said laws and shall also pay the bonus on its capital stock required by law and all State taxes for each year that it shall have done business in this Commonwealth, together with such interest and penalties thereon as shall have been settled against it by the officers of this Commonwealth, such contracts made prior thereto shall be validated and such foreign corporations may maintain action thereon and all other actions both at law and in equity in the Courts of this Commonwealth. (10.)

Section 5. The doing of business in this Commonwealth by any foreign corporation shall be taken to be its irrevocable assent to be sued in the Courts of this State upon any liability arising out of acts done in the course of such business, irrespective of whether such corporation be doing business in this Commonwealth at the time suit is brought. (11.)

Section 6. If all the agents designated by any foreign corporation shall die or resign or be otherwise disqualified to act as the agents of the corporation under this Act, or if their authority to act as such be revoked, and such corporation shall not within thirty days thereafter designate a new agent or agents, (12) or if such corporation shall cease to maintain as one of its officers the place designated as its principal office, and shall not designate another office in place thereof, (13) or if any foreign corporation shall do any business within this Commonwealth without the provisions of this Act being complied with, (14) the said corporation shall be taken to have consented that the Secretary of the Commonwealth or his Deputy shall be its agent for the service of process, and that service upon him or his Deputy shall be as effectual as though served upon an agent specially designated by such corporation under this Act, (15) provided, that in case of service upon the Secretary of the Commonwealth or his Deputy such process shall also be served upon such foreign corporation, or upon the officers theerof wherever it or they may be found, whether in this Commonwealth or not, in the same manner as though found in this Commonwealth. (16) Such service may be made by any competent person and proof thereof made by his affidavit. Such service shall be made twenty days before any judgment in such suit shall be rendered. (17.)

Section 7. Any foreign corporation may own or convey real estate within this Commonwealth as fully as any corporation might which was organized under the laws of this Commonwealth for a similar purpose (18), provided, that such corporations, at the time of acquiring title to the real estate, shall have complied fully with the laws of this Commonwealth relating to the doing of business in this Commonwealth by foreign corporations, and provided further, that nothing in this Act shall be construed to exempt said real estate and such corporation from taxation as otherwise required by law.

Section 8. The non-compliance by a foreign corporation with the laws of this Commonwealth may only be taken advantage of with respect to real estate by the Commonwealth itself, (19) and before the same shall have come into the ownership of a purchaser for value in good faith. (20.)

Section 9. The title to any real estate in this Commonwealth now or hereafter held by, or in trust for, any such foreign corporation, is hereby confirmed to the same effect as if the said real estate had been purchased, held or owned under the provisions of this Act, upon the said corporation complying with the laws of this Commonwealth relating to the doing of business by foreign corporations and paying the bonus on its capital stock required by law and all State taxes for each year that it shall have done business in this Commonwealth, together with such interest and penalties thereon as shall have been settled against it by the officers of this Commonwealth. (21.)

Section 10. In all actions the compliance by a foreign corporation with the laws of this Commonwealth shall be taken as admitted unless the party asserting non-compliance shall put the same in issue by special plea of appropriate character; and when so put in issue the burden of proving compliance shall be on the party asserting the same, and the certificate of the proper public officers as to the facts connected with such compliance shall be proof thereof. (22.)

Section 11. The Courts of this Commonwealth, both at law and in equity, shall have jurisdiction over all matters concerning the internal management of any foreign corporation doing business in this Commonwealth, the principal office of which for the doing of its business with the public shall be in this Commonwealth, whenever it shall appear that the judgment or decree of the Court can be enforced in this Commonwealth. (23.)

Section 12. If any foreign corporation which has its principal office for the doing of its business with the public within this Commonwealth shall without the consent of record of the adverse parties, remove to a Federal Court any action pending against it in any court of this Commonwealth, excepting in such cases as a corporation created under the laws of this Commonwealth may do so, or shall without such consent begin an action against a citizen of this Commonwealth in any Federal Court, or shall, upon the request of the adverse party, refuse to discontinue the same, such action on the part of the corporation shall forfeit its right to do any business in this Commonwealth, and it shall thereafter be deemed not to have complied with the laws of this Commonwealth. (24.) Such forfeiture shall be declared by proceedings in the same nature of a writ of quo warranto on the suggestion of the Attorney General. (25.)

Section 13. The term "foreign corporation" as used in this Act shall be construed to mean all corporation, joint stock companies, partnerships limited, partnership associations and all associations having any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships, (26) organized under any laws other than those of this Commonwealth.

Section 14. The provisions of this Act shall apply to foreign corporations of all kinds doing business within this Commonwealth, including those foreign corporations now doing business in this Commonwealth, which shall comply with the provisions of this Act within sixty days of its passage, (27) and is intended to supply a uniform system as to them. All Acts or parts of Acts, general and special, and Acts applying to particular class or classes of foreign corporations and inconsistent with the provisions of this Act be and the same are hereby repealed. (28.)

Section 15. The following Acts and parts of Acts be and the same are hereby repealed as to all matters arising after the date of the approval of this Act. (29.) (30.)

NOTES.

(1). This is taken from the first section of the Act of April 22nd, 1874, P. L. 108, but dropping the plural of the words "office" and "agent." The constitutional provisions, Article 16, Section 5, is "no foreign corporation shall do any business in this State without having one or more known places of business, and an authorized agent or agents in the same upon whom process may be served." The object of the Constitution being to provide some one upon whom process may be served, one agent will do as well as several, especially since, under the service of process Act of July 9, 1901, P. L. 614, writs may be served outside of the county where issued. The decisions of Wall Paper Company's Appeal, 15 Superior Ct. 407, and Phoenix Silk Manufacturing Co. vs. Reilly, 187 Pa. 526, holding that there must be an agent in each office where business is transacted—the failure to do so making void contracts entered into at an office where there is no such agent—while required by the wording of the former Act impose unnecessary Acts on the corporation. The registered agent is for service of process and not transaction of business. As provided in the second section, more than one agent may be designated, but not more than one agent and one office need be.

(2). The requirement that the charter of the foreign corporation ,showing the extent of its powers shall be recorded at some central place where those doing business with it in the State may have access to it in order to determine the extent of its powers, assimilates the foreign to domestic corporations. The following States have such a requirement: Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Wyoming. (42.)

Alaska, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Delaware, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, Virginia, West Virginia, Wyoming (13) also require the charter to be recorded at the principal place of business. This assimilates the foreign still more to domestic corporations and is convenient.

(3). This is stated in general language so as to cover special cases, especially corporations from foreign countries.

(4). This is taken from Section 2 of the Act of 1874. The corporation is required, however, to state only its principal office, for the reason heretofore given. The agents may be more than one, so that the contingencies of death, removal, etc., may be provided against if the corporation desires.

The requirement that the certificate be preserved for public inspection in each office, contained in the Act of 1874, has been stricken out. This was useless, as the object was service of process and not transaction of business, and the decision was that the certificate might be kept in the safe and need not be displayed. McManus Contracting Co. vs. McFadden, 33 Superior Court, 355.

(6). Under the authority of Lasher vs. Stimson, 145 Pa. 30, the agent of a non-registered foreign corporation is personally liable on the contracts made for it on the ground that he impliedly warrants his authority, and can have no authority where he is not officially registered as the agent. This has been limited to cases where the other party did not know he was dealing with a foreign corporation. Stoner vs. Phillipi, 41 Superior Court 118. The distinction is difficult to draw from the reasoning given for the decision in Lasher vs. Stimson, and as the corporation cannot set up its own failure to register to avoid its contracts, Swan vs. Insurance Co., 96 Pa. 37, the principal is really liable. The real difficulty is to have service of process on the principal. Where service can be obtained, however, the other party obtains an opportunity to sue the very person with whom he contracted, and a rule making the agent personally liable is a harsh one, giving the other party more than he bargained for. It is, however, the statutory rule in Utah; and in Idaho and Virginia the officers are liable with the agents on contracts made before registration.

But this liability should be preserved as to foreign insurance companies. The public does not deal with them on the same footing of equality, and the agent should be personally liable if he assumes to deal on behalf of an irresponsible foreign company, which has not provided for our citizens the security required by our law.

(7). This language will cover failure to register with the Auditor-General and to pay bonus, to make annual reports and to pay taxes as well as failure to register under the present Act.

(8). As the law aims at the doing of business within the State, both the making and the performing of contracts without being registered should be "doing business" and this wording makes it clear that both are included.

The law previously was that such contracts were void. This was not because of any express provisions in the Statute of 1874, although such provisions occur in other States, to wit: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, Michigan, Minnesota (if suit removed to Federal Court), Mississippi, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota and Wisconsin. (11.) It was the result of judicial construction of the effect of making the violation of the statute a misdemeanor. Delaware River Quarry, etc., Co. vs. Bethlehem & Nazareth Pass. Ry. Co., 204 Pa. 22; Pittsburgh Con. Co. vs. West Side Belt R. R. Co., 154 Fed. Rep. 929.

The same conclusion has been reached in other States. Boulden vs. Organ Co. 92 Ala. 182; American Ins. Co. vs. Stoy, 41 Mich. 385; Cary-Lombard Lumber Co. vs. Thomas, 92 Tenn. 587.

On the other hand, certain States (Connecticut, Maine, Maryland and Massachusetts) expressly provide that the contract shall not be void, and other States, including so radical a State as Kansas, follow the doctrine that the penalty imposed by the statute is the only penalty for failure to register, and the Courts will not add a further one.

(9). The denial of the right of an unregistered foreign corporation to redress in the State Courts is very common. The following States deny it in actions founded on contract: Arkansas, California, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas and Vermont. (27.)

And the following in actions of tort: Arkansas, California, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nevada, New Jersey, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Tennessee and Texas. (18.) Some States (among others Hawaii, Iowa and Utah) deny to such corporations the benefit of the laws, which would seem to deny access to the State Courts, although it has been decided to the contrary, Booth vs. Weigand, 30 Utah, 135. In New York, Oklahoma and Texas, among other States, the statute requires that the corporation be registered at the time the contract is made and a subsequent registration will not cure the defect. The law was formerly to the contrary. Neuchatel Asphalt Co. vs. N. Y., 155 N. Y. 373. The weakness of this provision is that it does not prevent a suit in the Federal Courts having jurisdiction in the State, Blodgett vs. Lanyon Zinc Co., 120 Fed. 893. Or in the Courts of another State, Allegheny Co. vs. Allen, 69 N. J. L. 270; 196 U. S. 458. If the contract is void where made, however, no suit may be brought on it in another State, Allegheny Co. vs. Allen, supra. The effective provision is that given here, to declare the contract void so that it may not be enforced anywhere and to forbid access to our Courts for all causes of action.

(10). The object of all these provisions, however, is to force the foreign corporation to comply with our laws, both for purposes of taxation and to bring it within reach of the process of our Courts. Provisions such as have just been reviewed, of course, operate very powerfully to both ends. But if the foreign corporation had not complied at the time it made a contract, and there is no way of curing the lapse, there is no incentive to the corporation to pay its taxes, and the result is not to benefit the State but to benefit the other party to the contract. He may take the fruits of it and not pay anything, and this results often in a very unjust enrichment of him, who may himself be an unregistered foreign corporation. How unjust this is will be seen by the cases cited above. In the Delaware River Quarry case a recovery of nearly $30,000 for work done by a construction company was refused, and in the West Side Belt Railroad Company case a recovery of over $325,000 was denied upon a claim so far meritorious that it was based on an award of the Railroad Company's engineer acting as arbitrator. By the provisions of this proposed Act the failure of the foreign corporation to provide an agent for the service of process is met by appointing the Secretary of the Commonwealth such agent. The best way to compel the payment of tax would be to impose severe penalties for failure to do so, but permit relief upon full compliance with our laws. This is the policy of the Stamp Acts enacted by Congress. Documents coming within their provisions which were not stamped when executed might be stamped on paying a small penalty. This is also the policy of the Pennsylvania Act of May 23, 1907, P. L. 205, which validated contracts entered into by unregistered foreign corporations upon registering and paying tax before suit was brought. By its provisions, however, it was retroactive only. The policy it indicates should be made permanent.

Your Committee feels that a change of the law in this regard is especially important, and submits herewith a draft of a separate Act to accomplish it, which should be enacted if for any reason the general foreign corporation law under discussion should not be approved.

(11). The necessity of this provision is evidenced by such cases as St. Clair vs. Cox, 106 U. S. 350; Goldey vs. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518; Mutual Life Insurance Co. vs. Spartley, 172 U. S. 602; Conly vs Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 406; holding that it is necessary to jurisdiction over a foreign corporation that it shall be doing business, in the State at the time suit is brought. But the corporation may be sued with its assent though it is not doing business, and the validity of such a provision as in this proposed Act to secure such assent is determined by such cases as Hill vs. Empire State, etc., Company, 156 Fed. Rep. 797; Home Ben. Soc. vs. Muehl, 109 Ky. 479; Germania Ins. Co. vs. Ashby, 112 Ky. 303; Groel vs. United El. Co. 69 N. J. Eq. 397; Mutual Reserve, etc., Assn. vs. Phelps, 190 U. S. 147. It is practically the law at the present time with regard to insurance companies. Act of April 4, 1873, P. L. 27.

(12). The Act of 1874 contains no provision for a substitution of an agent in case the one appointed be, for any reason, disqualified. The service of process Act of April 3, 1903, P. L. 139, permits service of process by leaving at the place of business if the agent is not there during business hours. It has been decided that if the registered agent leaves the employ of the corporation as its commercial agent, and is not found at the place of business, the corporation nevertheless maintains him as its registered agent and complies with the law so long as his authority as registered agent is not revoked. De La Vergne Refrigerator Co. vs. Kolischer, 214 Pa. 400. But the agent may die, or he may want to sue himself, and if no provision for compulsory substitution is made the object of the law will be defeated.

(13). So, also, if the corporation shall cease to maintain the office designated process cannot be served by leaving, or should not properly be so served.

(14). Equally important is a provision by which corporations which never comply with our laws and yet do business with us may be subjected to the process of our Courts.

(15). Accordingly it is provided automatically in such cases that a public official shall be the agent. A similar provision is found in a great many of the States.

In some the Secretary of State is designated as agent for service of process if the designated agent die or remove only: —Alabama, Arkansas, Idaho, Michigan, New Jersey, New Mexico, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Vermont, Washington. (11.)

In others the Secretary of State is the agent, but the party may serve any other agent at his option. This is the present law of Pennsylvania with regard to insurance companies. Act of April 4, 1873, Sec. 13, P. L. 27. So in Arkansas, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Nebraska, Pennsylvania (ins.) and West Virginia. (7.)

In others the Secretary of State is the only agent for service of process on foreign corporations and no other agent may be served:—Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia (fraternal ins.), Kentucky (ins.), Minnesota (ins.), North Dakota and Wisconsin. (7.)

In others the Secretary of State is the agent if no appointment be made by the corporation:—Arkansas, California, Idaho, Louisiana, Nevada, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon and Washington. (9.)

It seems wise to permit the corporation to designate its own agent so that notice may be more surely brought to it, but it is best to provide very fully for cases in which the corporation fails to comply with our law or to maintain its compliance.

The validity of the provision is attested by the case of Old Wayne Mutual Life Association vs. McDonough, 204 U. S. 8.

This sentence should be read in connection with Section 5 and would only authorize such service in suits growing out of business done within the State. Such service in other suits would be invalid, as the McDonough case decides. The statute usually requires the corporation to file a power of attorney designating the State officer as its agent. Of that character is the Pennsylvania law as to insurance. It has been decided that on failure to file the power of attorney the State officer nevertheless becomes agent for service of process. McCullagh vs. Railway Mail Assn., 33 Pa. C. C. 529; Diamond Plate Glass Co. vs. Minn. F. I. Co., 55 Fed. 27; Ehrman vs. Ins. Co., 1 Fed. 471; Berry vs. Indemnity Co., 46 Fed. 439; Knapp vs. Natl. M. F. I. Co., 30 Fed. 607; Lathrop Co. vs. Interior, Etc., Co., 150 Fed. 666. It seems simpler to make the designation of agent automatic

It will be convenient at times to serve the Deputy, which must, however, be especially authorized. Reynolds vs. Heptasophs, 9 Dist. Rep. 622; McCann vs. Old Wayne Etc., Co., 10 Dist. Rep. 560.

(16). The necessity of designating some known person as agent is that there may be somebody within the State upon whom the process of the Courts can be served. Such process does not run beyond the borders of the State, and the Courts have no jurisdiction upon such service. While this satisfies the technical requirement of the law, it is really a fiction, and justice is better served by actual notice outside of the State than by constructive notice in it. Therefore, to do justice and bring actual notice to the corporation, service is required also to be made outside of the State. The usual provision of the State Statutes is that the Secretary of State or State Auditor or Clerk of Court shall mail a copy of the process to the office of the corporation. These States are Alabama, Arkansas, Connecticut, Delaware (ins.), Idaho, Kansas, Kentucky (ins.), Maine, Massachusetts Michigan, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, West Virginia and Wisconsin. (17.)

Michigan requires the plaintiff himself to give mail notice. Other States require nothing to be done after serving the State official. Mailing of notice, however, is not as accurate as actual service, and most of the statutes fail to provide for a case in which the location of the company's office is not known to the State official, and a still more difficult case where the company may have no office. It seems better to provide, as Maryland does, that there shall be actual service, and that this may be made as though the corporation was in the State, so that service may be made on an officer of the company or at the company's office as shall be most convenient.

(17). Sufficient time should be allowed after this actual notice for the corporation to interpose a defense if it has any. The object is not to catch the foreign corporation napping, but to bring it within the jurisdiction of our Courts. Michigan and Mississippi require thirty days' notice, and Oregon forty days.

(18). If we permit foreign corporations freely to do business in this State, we should permit them to own the necessary real estate and not dirve them to subterfuges such as domestic holding companies and trusteeships. The Act of April 26, 1855, P. L. 329, forbade foreign corporations to hold real estate and provided for its escheat to the State. This disability, however, can be taken advantage of by the State only, taking proceedings to escheat; Leazure vs. Hillegas, 7 S. & R. 313, and in practice such proceedings are not taken by the Commonwealth. The only reported instance is Commonwealth vs. New York, Lake Erie and Western R. R. Co., 132 Pa. 591, overruling the same case, 114 Pa. 340, which failed. Exceptions have been created, until in practice they are nearly as important as the principal law. Foreign corporations may purchase at judicial sales to protect liens, Act of May 23, 1887, P. L. 176. Special classes of foreign corporations have been permitted to hold real estate: Insurance companies, Act of June 1, 1881, P. L. 38; river transportation companies, Act of May 25, 1887, P. L. 352; ferry and bridge companies, Act of May 25, 1887, P. L. 269; corporations for manufacturing iron, steel, paper, wood-pulp, chemical fibre glass, lumber, wood, cotton, velvet or other fabrics, for the dyeing, etc., of cotton and other fabrics, for the manufacture of certain chemicals, wood extracts, tanning extracts, for the manufacture of wall paper, etc., brick, etc., Act of April 27, 1909, P. L. 173, which is the final amendment of a long series of Acts of 1881, 1885, 1887, 1891 and 1893, for the quarrying of slate, granite and other rocks, the bottling of mineral spring water, the manufacture of ice, the manufacture of chemicals, foodstuffs and cement, Act of May 28, 1907, P. L. 266, which was a final amendment of a series of Acts enacted in 1881, 1893 and 1901; religious publication societies, Act of June 24, 1895, P. L. 328.

The provisions of these Acts have all been collected in one statute of which a draft is presented herewith. Owing to confusion in the various enactments as explained in a note to that draft it may be desirable to re-enact these statutes in case the provision now suggested is not approved.

The Legislature has also, by the Act of June 24, 1895, P. L. 264, validated all conveyances made by such foreign corporations before proceedings are begun by the State. This Act applies to future as well as past cases, and therefore makes unnecessary the very numerous retroactive validating Acts which have been passed by the Legislature of 1861, 1869, 1876, 1878, 1881, 1887, 1891, 1897, 1903, 1907 and 1909.

The laws of the following States permit foreign corporations complying with the laws to hold real estate: Arizona, Arkansas, Connecticut Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa (qualified), Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska (rail_road and mfg. and in cities), Nevada, New Mexico, New Hampshire (mfg.), New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina (less than 500 acres), South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia (mfg. lim.), Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin (less than 320 acres). (30.)

Besides Pennsylvania only Nebraska makes prohibition the rule and permission the exception and there the exception is a large one applying to railroad and all manufacturing corporations and the holding of real estate in towns. It is evidently aimed at farm land companies. Georgia fixed a maximum of 5,000 acres. The Act of Congress in force in the District of Columbia and in the former territories of New Mexico and Oklahoma forbids the holding of real estate by corporations where more than 20 per cent. of the stock is owned by aliens. This is also a statutory provision in Wisconsin.

The limit fixed in this Act is that imposed upon domestic corporations of the same kind.

(19). This is the present law: Leazure vs. Hillegas, 7 S. & R. 313. It seems wise to make the provision in order that a contrary construction may not prevail.

(20). This continues the policy of the present Act of June 24th, 1895, P. L. 264, which, however, is not expressly repealed.

(21). If this is to be the policy of the State for the future, it should also be for the past, and it is in line with the numerous validating Acts already referred to.

(22). The present rule is that the burden is on the foreign corporation to show that it has complied with the law, and is lawfully doing business in the Commonwealth, in all cases. As such proof in most cases will be a formal matter, it tends to expedition and the avoidance of technicality, that a special issue should be made of failure to comply, and it is in harmony with the Act of June 24, 1885, P. L. 149, requiring an issue as to the existence of a corporation to be specially tendered.

But the burden of proof should be on the person having the affirmative of the issue

(23). Under the rule of Madden vs. Electric Light Co., 181 Pa. 617, and 199 Pa. 454; McCloskey vs, Snowden, 212 Pa. 249, the Courts of one State will not hear causes involving the internal management of corporations of another State. This is because it involves dealing with the laws of another State, because the decree would only take effect in this State and there would exist the anomaly of one result in one State where the corporation operated and another result in another State, and also because the enforcement of the decree would be difficult. This applies to corporate elections, the compelling transfer of stock by mandamus, improper conduct of officers, and kindred matters. But where a corporation is merely incorporated abroad, and comes into this State to do its principal business, so that its officers and stockholders and books are all here, convenience and justice to our citizens would lead us to grant relief in our Courts, and not drive a citizen to what is but the nominal home of the corporation, which may be on the other side of the Continent. The practical difficulties are not insuperable, and if in a particular case they become so, the Act, by its express provisions, will not apply.

(24). Provisions are found in the statutes of many States to keep foreign corporations out of the Federal Courts. These States are Alabama, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina and Wisconsin. (8.)

A State statute cannot oust the Federal Court from jurisdiction of a particular case nor can it make the exercise of this right a penal offense. Insurance Co. vs. Morse, 20 Wallace, 445. But as the State may exclude foreign corporations at will, it may exclude them for invalid reasons, and a statute revoking the corporation's license to do business because it exercised its right of removal is valid. Doyle vs. Continental Ins. Co., 94 U. S. 535; Security Mutual, Etc., Co. vs. Prewitt, 202 U. S. 246. Following the policy of permitting bona fide foreign corporations full privileges under our laws, but encouraging corporations that really intend to do business here to incorporate under our laws rather than the laws of other States, the restriction is only imposed on the latter class of corporations.

(25). While other statutes do not require proceedings in Court, it seems fairer to do this and notice and hearing is then provided for.

(26). This definition so far as applies to the word "Corporation" is in part taken from the Constitution of Pennsylvania, Article 16, Section 13, with the addition of some words to refer to particular classes of quasi corporations.

Complaint was made to your Committee of the difficulty of determining whom to sue in the case of certain foreign partnerships operating under a system of quasi incorporation unknown to our laws. Certain express companies are of this character. These, however, are such special cases that it is difficult to provide for them by any more general words than are here used.

(27). The retroactive feature of this Act may be valid under the decision of St. Mary's Petroleum Co. vs. W. Va., 203 U. S. 183, in consequence of the reserved power of the State to alter charters. Uniformity is so desirable that the attempt should be made to apply this Act to all.

(28). This section is so worded that Acts applying to service of process on foreign insurance companies, such as the Act of April 4, 1873, P. L. 27, foreign mutual benefit societies and other kindred special laws shall be superseded, and the same procedure applied to all foreign corporations. This is advisable unless there is a reason for special procedure with regard to a particular class of corporations, and this is not the case as to the matters covered by this Act.

(29). The repealing clause is also made special. There have been omitted, however, the various Acts validating conveyances of real estate made by foreign corporations which were forbidden to hold real estate. While the subject matter of tahese Acts is covered by the present Act, yet, as they are muniments of title, it will be less disturbing to have them remain on the statute books.

(30). The subject of the domestication of foreign corporations as covered by the Act of June 9, 1881, P. L. 89, has been covered in this Act, because it is so intimately connected with what should be required of domestic corporations that it seems inadvisable to recast the law at all until the subject of domestic corporations is covered. The object should be to make the foreign corporation comply with the same provisions as a domestic corporation.

The policy of requiring foreign corporations to give bail on appeal and security for costs has not been altered, as the protection of our citizens requires it. The same consideration applies for foreign attachment, in addition to the tendency to discourage thereby the practice of going abroad to incorporate.

Some States require an investigation of the financial standing of foreign corporations by the officer receiving the registration and the refusal of registry to those which are irresponsible, and suggestions were made to your Committee that it be adopted by Pennsylvania. This is impracticable in a State so large as ours. It might lead to abuses, and seems premature until we so supervise our own corporations. For purposes of taxation reports of considerable fullness as to their assets, etc., are now made.

An Act validating under certain conditions contracts made by foreign corporations which shall have done or shall do any business within this Commonwealth without first having complied with the laws relating to foreign corporations.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., that whenever any foreign corporation shall have done or shall do any business within this Commonwealth, without first having complied with the laws of this Commonwealth relating to foreign corporations, all contracts entered into in the course of such doing of business shall be binding upon the parties thereto, and such corporation may enforce the same in the Courts of this Commonwealth or any other Court having jurisdiction: Provided, that prior to commencing a suit upon such contract, the said corporation shall have complied with the laws of this Commonwealth relating to foreign corporations: And provided further, that prior to commencing such suit accounts for bonus on capital stock and all State taxes for each year that it shall have done business in this Commonwealth shall have been settled against such corporation in the manner required by law, and paid by it, together with such interest and penalties thereon as shall be shown by such accounts.

NOTE.

This Act makes permanent the policy of the Commonwealth indicated by the Act of May 23, 1907, P. L. 205, which was retroactive only; and also the Act of May 11, 1901, P. L. 172. It applies to a failure to register with the Auditor-General as well as the Secretary of the Commonwealth, the principle applicable being the same. The considerations in its favor are given in connection with a similar section in the general foreign corporation law recommended by your Committee (Section 4). The passage of this Act, in addition to the general Act, is necessary in order to provide for cases arising under the laws now in existence.

An Act regulating the making of certain reports and statements to the Auditor General for purposes of State taxation.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That all reports and statements required to be made by law to the Auditor-General for purposes of State taxation by any person, persons, corporation, limited partnership or joint stock associations, shall be made in the month of January of each year, and shall cover the next preceding calendar year, and payment of all such taxes shall be made in the month of February then following: Provided, That the time of making such reports and statements by public officers shall remain as now provided by law.

NOTE.

The variety of the time at which reports are now required is shown by the following:

Premiums of insurance companies—Semi-annually on the first days of July and January. Act of June 28, 1895, P. L. 408.

Stock of trust companies—Annually on or before June 20, Act of June 13, 1907, P. L. 640.

Gross receipts of transportation and other companies—Semi-annually before July 31 and January 31. Act of June 1, 1889, P. L. 420, Section 23.

Bank stock—Annually on or before June 20. Act of July 15, 1897, P. L. 292. If 10 mills on the par value of the stock be paid before March 1, certain exemptions from taxation are secured. This will not be altered by the present Act.

Capital stock—Annually in the month of November for the calendar year. Act of June 8, 1891, P. L. 229.

Corporate loans—Annually on the first Monday of November for the calendar year. Acts of June 30, 1885, P. L. 193, and June 8, 1891, P. L. 229.

Net earnings of certain corporations (applicable only to corporations without capital stock)—Annually on first Monday of November. Act of June 1, 1889, P. L. 420.

Matured Stock of building associations—The law is indefinite, and they are therefore made for the calendar year as soon after its close as convenient. Act of June 22, 1897, P. L. 178.

Gross receipts of private bankers—Annually on the first Monday of December, for year ending November 30. Act of June 27, 1895, P. L. 396.

Notaries Public—Annually on or before December 31. Act of May 20, 1865, P. L. 846.

Orders for wages—Annually on the first day of November, Act of June 24, 1901, P. L. 596, Section 1.

Foreign corporations, bonus on capital stock—Annually before November 30. Act of May 8, 1901, P. L. 150.

The times of payment directed by these Acts vary considerably with relation to the time of report. But the practice is common to await a settlement by the Auditor-General and State Treasurer, and notice thereof, as interest does not begin to run until that time. This will doubless continue to be done.

The proviso excepts the returns of public officers. The principal return is that of municipal loans, the tax on which your Committee now proposes to abolish, and these are now required to be made for the calendar year. The numerous other requirements for the return of petty taxes and license fees are too many and complicated to be changed by a general Act, and they are therefore left untouched.

REVENUE LAWS.

Careful consideration has been given by your Committee to the laws of the Commonwealth providing State Revenue and to the relation of the Commonwealth to the several counties in the matter of taxes collected from the citizens thereof.

They have for treatment divided the subject into five heads.

A. The objects upon which State Revenue is expended.

B. Increase of State Revenue.

C. Change of the burden of taxation.

D. More effective collcetion of taxes under present laws.

E. Relation of State to counties in collection and distribution of revenue.

(A). EXPENDITURES.

APPROPRIATIONS TO CHARITY.

The present system by which the charitable work of the Commonwealth is in large part done by privately-managed institutions, assisted by the State appropriations, is one in which Pennsylvania has been the pioneer as well as now are leader. Beginning in 1850, the appropriations have increased until for the two years of 1911 and 1912 the sum so appropriated was $6,249,400 to 275 institutions. The total amount so appropriated in the years during which the practice has existed is $51,090.098.66. A table has been prepared at our request by the State Board of charities, (summary of appropriations for sixty-two years), which shows these appropriations in detail. Here is also shown the appropriations to institutions in part or in whole managed by the Commonwealth. In general, it may be said of the two classes of appropriations that they have been approximately equal. The Commonwealth endeavors to see that the money is expended for the purposes for which appropriated, but it does not attempt to supervise the details of expenditure or in any wise to interfere with the management of the institution.

The following States make similar appropriations: Delaware, Illinois, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Mexico, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Oregon, Washington and Wisconsin. Certain other States make appropriations to what we classify as semi-State institutions. These are Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, and Wyoming.

The State supports in whole or in part the following eight institutions for the insane: Harrisburg, Danville, Norristown, Warren, Dixmont, Wernersville, Farview, and Rittersville.

These institutions contain 9,467 indigent patients. Except Dixmont, they are the property of the Commonwealth and receive patients from the districts in which they are located, except Wernersville, the hospital for the chronic insane, who are transferred from other hospitals for the insane. The cost of maintenance is divided. The county and poor districts from which the indigent patient is sent to pay to the institution, for each patient, $1.75 per week. The rest of the cost of maintenance, up to a maximum of $4.25 per week, and the cost of buildings is paid by the Commonwealth. But the Commonwealth frequently makes up a deficit in case the maintenance should be more than this amount. The entire cost of maintaining the insane in Pennsylvania is, approximately, $4,000,000 per year.

The other institutions of the Commonwealth containing the indigent insane are what is known as County Care Institutions, and are in the following counties and cities:

Adams County Insane Hospital, Gettysburg.

Allegheny County Hospital, Woodville.

Pittsburgh North Side City Home and Hospital.

Pittsburgh City Home and Hospital, Marshalsea.

Blair County Hospital for the Insane, Hollidaysburg.

Chester County Hospital for the Insane, Embreeville.

Cumberland County Hospital for the Insane, Carlisle.

Elk County Asylum, St. Marys.

Erie County Home, Erie.

Franklin County Home, Chambersburg.

Jefferson County Asylum, Brookville.

Central Poor District Hospital for the Insane, Retreat.

Lancaster County Hospital for the Insane, Lancaster.

Hospital for the Insane, Hillside Home, Clark's Summit.

Mercer County Hospital for the Insane, Mercer.

Philadelphia, Hospital, Insane Department, Philadelphia.

Potter County Home, Coudersport.

Schuylkill County Hospital for the Insane, Schuylkill Haven.

Somerset County Hospital for Insane, Somerset.

Westmoreland County Home, Insane Department, Greensburg.

Blakely Home, Lackawanna County, Olyphant.

These institutions were built by and are owned by the respective counties and cities in which they are located. They are maintained by the conuties, the Commonwealth contributing to the county, for each patient, the sum of $2.00 per week. The number in these institutions is 6,993, making the entire indigent population 16,460.

All the State institutions are crowded, and blockley, in the City of Philadelphia, is so over-crowded that it is filled to double its intended capacity.

Two new State hospitals for the insane were just erected; one for the criminal insane, at Farview, Wayne County, which was opened December 17, 1912, and the other at Rittersville (near Allentown), called the Homeopathic Hospital, which was opened October 19, 1912. There is still enough surplus in the other State hospitals to fill every ward, and unless the Legislature, at the coming session makes provision for the erection of a new hospital or added wards to those in existence, there will not be, in a short time, sufficient hospital accommodations to care for the normal increase, which is about 600 a year. It is thus apparent that each session of the Legislature must provide for the care of at least 1,200 patients additional, either by building a new hospital or by adding wards to those already built.

*First class includes State and semi-State institutions.

†Second class includes hospitals, sanatoria and homes not under State control.

Commencing with 1907-09 the figures above only show appropriations to institutions over which the Board has control, and they do not include the special appropriations to the indigent insane, or institutions under construction and educational institutions.

The special appropriations to the indigent insane are shown in the following table.

SUMMARY OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE CARE AND TREATMENT OF THE INDIGENT INSANE

Date.	Maintenance.
1885-1886	$1,050,000 00
1887-1888	900,000 00

Total	$23,658,966 76

The only possible alternative to this is the building of hospitals by the counties, under the County Care Act. From present appearances, it does not look probable that many more counties will avail themselves of this Act.

As to the weak-minded, there are three institutions devoted to their care, to wit: Polk, Spring City and Elwyn. The last mentioned is not a State institution. It receives by appropriation $200 a year per capita of 700 patients. The City of Philadelphia makes a like appropriation for the support of 150 children. The amount will probably be increased 12½ per cent. this year. Polk has 1,600 patients and is a State institution. Spring City, also a State institution, is for the weak-minded and epileptic. This institution is only partly finished and contains 418 weak-minded and epileptics.

Hospitals for the deaf, dumb and blind, as well as the oral schools for the deaf mutes, are not State institutions, nor under State control, though they are almost wholly maintained by the Commonwealth by a per capita appropriation.

The only place for epileptics maintained by the Commonwealth is at Spring City, and two private institutions, the Pennsylvania Epileptic and Colony Farm at Oakbourne, in the Eastern part of the State, and the other, the Passavant Memorial Home at Rochester in Beaver County, in the Western part of the State, and both receive State-aid.

As to hospitals for the care of the sick and injured, these consist of institutions wholly supported by the Commonwealth, viz: At Mercer, Blossburg, Hazleton, Philipsburg, Scranton, Ashland, Connellsville, Nanticoke, Shamokin and Coaldale.

The inmates number over 8,000, and the total number of hospital days is about 173,000. The cost of maintenance, May 31, 1911, to June 1, 1912, was $266,043.19.

The private hospitals and sanitaria receiving State aid number 155. Their total cost of maintenance, May 31, 1911, to June 1, 1912, was approximately $3,399,720.67. The number of indoor patients treated free, 98,202, and the aggregate number of free hospital days, 1,975,516. The free dispensary days numbered 714,366. The aid given to these institutions by the Commonwealth for maintenance amounted to $4,494,800, for the years May 31, 1911, to June 1, 1913, for buildings, $429,500. A table giving this information in greater detail will be found elsewhere.

There are also homes and kindred institutions. They are all private. Those that receive State aid are 120 in number.

The pauper class is cared for by the poor districts—and always has been in this Commonwealth.

The insane were originally cared for in the poor districts with the other dependents. The burden was then borne entirely by the county, city or poor district. Afterward the Commonwealth began to shoulder part of the burden by building and equipping the present State hospitals for the insane, heretofore referred to. The Act to create the first State hospital at Harrisburg was approved April 14, 1845. These State hospitals care for all the indigent patients sent them, charging the poor districts $1.75 per week for each patient. Nearly 10,000 are cared for in this way. The other 5,000 or 6,000 are cared for in certain cities and counties which have erected hospitals for that purpose, the Commonwealth contributing $2.00 a week for each patient's maintenance. There are a few in the poor houses—probably between 200 and 300—maintained entirely by the poor authorities. Counting buildings and maintenance, more than three-fourths of the cost of maintaining is borne by the State.

All the weak-minded who are in institutions are supported by the Commonwealth, as are epileptics, save a few in two small institutions, which receive State aid.

The cost of maintaining the criminals, like that of the poor, was formerly borne entirely by the counties; but the Commonwealth took upon itself a part of the burden by erecting what is known as the Eastern and Western Penitentaries, to which certain classes of criminals may be sent, the counties from which they are sent paying the cost of maintenance, the Commonwealth being at the cost of the buildings and their maintenance, and of the officers and attendants.

The indigent inmates of the blind, deaf and dumb institutions, and schools for oral teaching of mutes, are maintained substantially by the Commonwealth. So are the inmates of the Glen Mills Schools at Philadelphia, and Pennsylvania Reform School, Morganza—incorrigible boys and girls.

Hospitals for the sick and injuerd, and homes for the dependent, and kindred institutions, except the eight hospitals heretofore referred to, are supported in part by the Commonwealth.

The Commonwealth is thus gradually coming more and more to caring for the dependent, defective and criminal classes. Except the poor in the almshouses and hospitals, it is now doing almost all of this work. The appropriations for all charities, including those above named, for the years May 31, 1911, to June 1, 1913 were $15,558,653. 21.

Assaults are made upon the present system, and so far as they are directed at the method or lack of method in the appropriations so divided among the several institutions, your Committee believes they are to a certain degree well founded. These complaints have come from so many sources that they have become generally familiar. In the report of 1911, your Committee reviewed these in some detail. It called attention to the careful estimates prepared by the State Board of Charities, and to the fact that in practice the action, both of the Legislature and of the Governor—who has a discretion to cut down the amount appropriated by the Legislature in each case—showed that the protests were unavailing. At the Fourth State Conference of Charities and Correction, held at Wilkes-Barre in October, 1912, a very vigorous protest along the same lines was made. It is elsewhere referred to in this report in connection with the creation of a Department of State Charitable Institutions.

In view of the history of these protests in the past and their repetition from other sources, your Committee will not enter into detail here, merely urging upon the Legislature the desirability of avoiding any other considerations than the merit of the particular institution in performing what has come to be, in respect to money value, one of the most important of their duties.

The State Board of Charities gives careful consideration to the requests of all such institutions for State aid, and if its recommendations were followed substantial justice would be done. Its recommendations are based upon the apparent need of the institutions, limited by the amount of free service rendered.

For information, however, a table showing the relation of the amounts asked for by the institutions, the amounts recommended by the Board of Charities, and the amounts approved by the Governor, is here inserted.

a These amounts include $3,000,000.00 for maintenance of indigent insane.
b These amounts include $3,443,966.00 for maintenance of indigent insane.

One of the possible abuses connected with these appropriations has, as heretofore mentioned, been removed by the Act of June 9, 1911, (P. L. 736), making appropriations to private institutions, liens upon their real estate, so that when they cease to give free aid the Commonwealth may have a means of recovering the money given to them for that purpose. The constitutionality of a similar Act has been recently sustained by the Supreme Court in Booth & Flinn vs. Miller, 237 Pa. 297.

The Conference of Charities and Corrections recommended, as many have done in the past, that the policy of the Comonwealth be gradually limited and reduced and eventually abandoned. It seems to your Committee that however gradual the process of withdrawing these appropriations, the fact of withdrawal would entail great hardship. The lack of funds would not soon be supplied by individual effort, and many institutions would have to close. A policy begun by one Legislature might not be continued by the next, and in view of the past history of the relation of actual appropriations to the recommendation of the Board of Public Charities, it would seem very unlikely that any well-drawn scheme would be actually adhered to. The same influences which now cause an inequality of result would distort and render ineffective any such attempted system.

So far as the recommendations of this Conference urge that State institutions be given prior consideration, they accord heartily with what your Committee has previously said and now repeats. The primary object of these appropriations is the good of our citizens (especially the good to our afflicted and unfortunate and otherwise helpless), and not the aggrandizement of any particular institution. That those institutions which the Commonwealth itself thinks necessary to establish should have the first consideration seems elementary. The review elsewhere given of the present State institutions, and the need for more, shows the inportance of the adherence to this principle.

Your Committee cannot, however, endorse any argument based upon the volume of the present appropriations or the supposed superfluity of present institutions. The Commonwealth is now free from debt and has a splendid revenue. The means are at hand and are pointed out by your Committee of gradually increasing her revenue, and this without imposing unjust burdens or adding to those which our people are abundantly able to bear. Such objects of State expenditure as highways and schools are of great importance. But they must, under any relation of revenue and expenditure, be of vastly secondary importance to the care of the poor and the suffering. The wealth of our State depends in great part upon industry and manufacturing, and these produce more than their share of accidental deaths and injury. They attract foreign laborers, who will in time become useful citizens, but who on their introduction to this country contain more than their share of the dependent classes. Partly empty institutions are better than needless suffering, and any attempt to refuse State help in this regard is unwise as well as inhumane.

There has been prepared by the Board of Public Charities, at the request of your Committee, a table which shows as to most of the hospitals of the State, (only those which did not make report being omitted), of free hospital days; that is to say, the total number of days that one free patient was treated by the hospital, and also the cost of each day of such treatment, the total cost of the free days, the State appropriation and the excess of deficiency of appropriation proportioned to the cost of free treatment and other valuable information.

The results shown by this table vary considerably. Most hospitals have expended more in free treatment than they have received from the Commonwealth. The total cost of "free hospital days," May 31, 1911, to June 1, 1912, was $3,612,322.22, and the appropriations (to these hospitals) were $2,204,900. Twenty hospitals received from the Commonwealth more money than they expended in free treatments. The table, however, does not show the results for the second year for which appropriations have been made, and as the institutions are permitted to adjust in the second year any balance for or against them as a result of the first year, the net result of the two years may show a more even result. The excess of appropriation over expense is not nearly so great as in the table submitted with your Committee's last report. The greatest excess is shown in the case of the Frankford Hospital of Philadelphia, which, however, is only $7,964.36. As to all of the 20 hospitals it must also be said that the expense of their dispensary work is not reckoned in these tables, and cannot well be estimated. Nevertheless it is a considerable item in the work of almost all the institutions. As between the several hospitals also, the table may not do justice. The ratio of dispensary work to treatment in the wards varies with the istitutions. Mount Sinai Hospital of Philadelphia, for example, for the year ending May 31, 1912, paid for "free hospital days" $46,213.56, and received a State appropriation of $24,000. It has only 53 beds, but its dispensary work extended in that year to 50,490 patients. Nor is the method of arriving at the cost of "free hospital days" the same in all institutions, owing to difference in book-keeping and the different relation of the various parts of the work to general expenses of administration, overhead charges and the like.

One of the important labors of a Department of State Charitable Institutions, such as is advocated and is discussed herein, would be the imposition of a uniform method of accounting upon institutions receiving State aid, so that their needs may all be judged upon a common basis. Complaints of the irrational method of State apropriations to these institutions are matched by complaints that the institutions themselves do not present that uniformity in the method of stating their needs, which makes a rational judgment possible.

Many institutions, on the other hand, spend far more money in free treatment than they get from the State. The Howard Hospital of Philadelphia spent $22,250.90, and received only $7,000, and the University of Pennsylvania spent $159,518.72, and received only $75,000. Jefferson Hospital, of Philadelphia, spent $122,083.20, and received from the Commonwealth $95,000. As to 23 hospitals, however, the difference was less than a thousand dollars.

The unit of cost per person also varies widely, due in some cases to the location of the hospital in a remote district, where, however, service is as necessary as in the populous centers, and in other cases to the treatment of special diseases like cancer. The following table will show the wide range:

HIGHEST.

American Oncological Hospital of Philadelphia	$3 98
American Hospital for Diseases of the Stomach, Philadelphia	3 81
Todd's Hospital, Carlisle	3 70

LOWEST.

Wyoming Valley Society for Consumptives, Wilkes-Barre	55
Children's Hospital, Philadelphia	67
Pennsylvania Epileptic Hospital and Colony Farm, Oakbourne, Chester County	69
Maternity Hospital, Philadelphia	1 05

CARE OF TUBERCULOSIS.

The present policy of the Commonwealth for the treatment of advanced cases of tuberculosis is the erection of special institutions conducted under the direction of the State Department of Health. It is during this stage alone that tuberculosis is at all contagious, and then, so eminent authorities contend, chiefly by close personal contact with a patient who is so enfeebled as not to be able to properly care for himself, and so poor as not to be able to get anyone to care for him. The policy of segregation, and of taking these patients out of their homes, is the wise one, and is approved by experts in the treatment of this disease.

To place these people in remote institutions is in many cases a hardship both to the patients and to their friends, in spite of the advantage of more skillful care. Believing that they must die they wish to do so in the company of their friends, naturally preferring their own comfort to the good of humanity. The expense and distance of travel is an obstacle to family visits and is very keenly felt.

It is the contention of other authorities that consumption may be transmitted without such continuous and intimate association with a sufferer and that many cases show no such history. Upon such a view of the case are based the present consumptive hospitals at Mount Alto and Cresson, situated at remote mountain points and separating the patients entirely from those of any other class.

Whichever view be correct, it is quite sure that the disease is not infectious or immediately contagious in the ordinary sense. All that is needed is the preventing of immediate contact with others. In the present advanced state of hospital management and the emphasis on cleanliness and the segregation of diseased matter so that it has become instinct to every doctor and nurse, tubercular cases can be treated at our present hospitals if separate wards are provided for them. This is now done successfully at both the Jewish and Episcopal Hospitals in Philadelphia. In the smaller rural communities especially, such an adjunct to the hospitals would be a boon to the people. It would result in a more numerous treatment of these cases, and by reason of utilizing the administrative equipment of hospitals already in existence could probably be done at as little expense as in separate institutions. The prejudice which is sometimes manifested against tubercular patients and the fear of contagion would disappear as the facts were better understood. This work could go hand in hand with the admirable work of the State institutions, and the patient and his advisers would have a choice of method. So important is the crusade against the white plague that your Committee believes that no reasonable means should be neglected, and it recommends that some part of the appropriations to private hospitals be used for the purpose of establishing wards for tubercular patients.

PROPOSED DEPARTMENT OF STATE CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

Your Committee in its report of 1911 recommended the creation of a Department of State Charitable Institutions, and presented a draft of an Act for that purpose. The Legislature of 1905, had passed a well considered bill creating such a department, which was vetoed by the Governor on the ground, in part, that its work overlapped that of the Board of Public Charities, which Board nevertheless was not abolished. A comparison of that bill with the law then existing shows that the Board of Public Charities still had many important lines of work, including the duties of the Committee on Lunacy, and the visitation of correctional and reformatory institutions, both State and local.

The argument in favor of such a department is that the Board of Public Charities as now constituted is composed of business men who serve gratuitously, who are scattered over the Commonwealth and have many other duties. While their service has been devoted and unselfishly given, they cannot be expected to give all of their time to that work, nor can they become as efficient in some of the activities connected with the subject as a permanent official or official force. For lack of such a central authority as this, the building of new State institutions has been committed in each case to a special commission. Nor is the Board able to obtain from the Legislature the appropriations necessary to properly perform their duties. It is proposed also to commit to such a department the whole question of the supervision of appropriations to charity, both for institutions privately managed, and those owned and managed by the Commonwealth. This work is now done by the Board of Public Charities.

It has been suggested that such a Department when created would take over the entire present work of the Board of Public Charities and the Committee on Lunacy in the supervision of the management of institutions, the care of lunatics and the like, and that one of the most important features, which would undoubtedly result in greater economy in administration, would be the purchase of supplies which are needed in quantity by all institutions of charity and correction, both public and private, and that the quantity purchased and the superior experience of the purchasing agent would be of advantage.

Admonished by the rejection two years ago of its proposition for such a department, your Committee has given further special attention to the public desires on this point. It must be said that the complaints are few which have foundation in specific facts and are not the mere prejudices of specially interested persons. From the tables of figures which will be found in this report it appears that the money now appropriated by the Commonwealth is administered with reasonable economy by private institutions. That these institutions often have empty beds is not a reproach, but an advantage. Better that the Commonwealth should be over-equipped to take care of the suffering than that any poor sick person should lack accommodation, or that the emergency of an epidemic or great disaster should find us unprepared. We must not forget that we are dealing with charity, and that the charity which counts the dollars and them alone is not the best, either for those who receive or those who give.

The whole system in Pennsylvania has been for so many years founded upon private effort and private management that it does not seem right to set our faces the other way unless new and substantial grounds of objection appear. The creation of a State Department would inevitably result in a centralizing of institutions and a decrease in their number, as well as in a centralizing of management. The benefit of the small hospital close to the scene of suffering and accident is incalculable. Only the other day the public prints gave an account of the overcoming of firemen by smoke in Pittsburgh. It so happened that a hospital only a few blocks away had recently been equipped with "Pulmotors," a device for freeing from poisonous gases the lungs of those who had been suffocated, and pumping oxygen into them. The firemen were rushed to the hospital, the device applied, and all recovered. If the aid given had been any less instant, and the men had been carried a long distance to a hospital or to one not so equipped death would have ensued.

Local management also is a vitalizing encouragement to local giving by individuals The practice of interesting as trustees of institutions those who will be able to give as well as those who will be able to direct is not without its usefulness. Even a practice of State purchase of supplies for institutions all over the State, while it might tend to economy, would also discourage individual giving. The Committee has been informed that it frequently happens that those from whom a hospital purchases supplies return all their profits and more in donations to the institution. When other States are following our example in appropriating to privately managed charities and in permitting private enterprise to provide a greater part of charitable relief, it would be unwise to discontinue the system in which we have taken the lead.

Your Committee believes that State aid is a great encouragement to private charity, and does not stifle it. There is abundant evidence to justify this conclusion, and while there may be a very few instances to the contrary they are but the exceptions which prove the rule.

Accordingly, your Committee modifies its previous recommendations in this regard.

The wise plan would be to avail ourselves of the merits of both systems. The present Board of Public Charities should be properly equipped with salaried officers to do, (more fully than the present members and their salaried assistants can find the actual days of time to do it,) the actual inspection of institutions. To this Board, composed of disinterested men giving their services from love of the work, should be committed supervision of the human side of the management of hospitals and asylums; that is, the details of care and treatment, discharge and transfer of inmates and the like. To a permanent State Department should be committed the licensing of private institutions, approval of the plans for new buildings of private hospitals and the erection of new public buildings, and particularly the standardization of accounts and administrative methods of all which receive State aid, to ensure that State money is not only spent upon the objects for which it is appropriated, but is wisely so spent. Inseparably connected with this would be the preparation of a schedule of appropriations recommended to private and public institutions.

If this plan commends itself to the Legislature the Committee will draft an act to carry it into effect.

B. NECESSITY OF INCREASING STATE EXPENDITURES.

Your Committee renews the recommendation of the report of 1911 for additional revenue for better roads. The Legislature of 1911 adopted the resolution prepared by the Committee for a constitutional amendment authorizing the issue of bonds for this purpose. There has been some objection, especially by the State Grange, to the creation of a State debt as a means of revenue for highway improvements, those so objecting contending that additional taxes should be levied therefor, and that the constantly increasing taxes under present laws, effectually enforced, will be sufficient for all reasonable expenditures in that behalf.

There is no doubt that much additional revenue can be so raised, as will be hereafter shown, but the consensus of opinion would seem to be that reliance upon such a source would unreasonably delay the accomplishment so much to be desired and so generally demanded, and a bond issue, as elsewhere referred to, seems inevitable.

HIGHWAYS.

Since the organization of the State Highway Department in 1903 we have spent $13,500,000 for State highways upon a total mileage of 86,593.

The following tables show the improved and unimproved roads of the Commonwealth outside of Philadelphia in December of 1910, and the roads reconstructed or resurfaced under Acts of 1905, 1907, 1909 and 1911 by the State Highway Department up to January, 1913.

More definite information that Department declares itself unable to furnish, but there is sufficient to show that while some progress has been made there is a vast amount of work yet to be done.

Our neighbors are spending large amounts of money upon the roads. New York amended her constitution in 1905 so as to permit her to borrow money for this purpose. Under this provision she has authorized two bond issues for $50,000,000 each, the first being effective January 1, 1906, and the second on November 5, 1912. Before these bond issues the Legislature had appropriated for highway improvement since 1898 the sum of $3,223,255, and since that time to October 1, 1912, various amounts from the first bond issue until the whole $50,000,000 had been made available for construction purposes. For the last ten years the amount so appropriated has been $53,000,000. These figures relate only to construction and not to maintenance and repair. To the latter purposes the State also appropriates large sums. In particular that State pays fifty per cent. of the amount raised by towns and counties for the maintenance and improvement of certain town and county roads.

Maryland in 1908 authorized a five million dollars bond issue for the construction of State highways, and, in 1910, authorized an additional million dollar bond issue for the construction of a boulevard between Annapolis and Baltimore and the purchase of certain bridges. The Legislature of 1908 authorized an additional bond issue of $3,170,000. The last four Legislatures have appropriated $540,000 for a boulevard between Baltimore and Washington. In 1904 there was appropriated $200,000, and 1912, $300,000 for State aid to roads.

The Commissioner of Public Roads of New Jersey had available in 1911 for road maintenance and construction $1,135,682.46. Between 1892 and 1911 State aid to the extent of $3,230,336.51 has been granted in the construction of 1,578 miles of roads. No bonds have been issued.

California is now expending an $18,000,000 bond issue upon the roads, and in Maine an issue of $2,000,000 has been authorized, to be met by fee for automobile licenses. Ohio proposed an issue of bonds, but it was defeated at the polls.

SCHOOLS.

Schools also demand increased expenditures. The State Normal Schools claim that they should receive more State money. If sold to the Commonwealth, to the expense of exclusive conduct of these institutions must be added the purchase price. The common school appropriations should be increased not only to give greater efficiency in the management of the schools, but to relieve the local taxes. One of the requests of the Pennsylvania State Grange to your Committee was that the State pay the minimum wage to public school teachers for the minimum term. This would necessitate the expenditure of $40 per month for an average school year of nearly 8 1-2 months, for 36,945 teachers, or the sum of $12,561,300. If $50 per month were paid, it would require $15,701,625. For the year ending June, 1911, the total paid by the Commonwealth for this purpose was $995,147.59, and for the year ending June, 1912, the total was $1,023,853.41. The common school appropriation for each of the last two appropriation years was $7,500,000. If the Commonwealth assumed these wages of school teachers it would mean an increase of from $5,000,000 to $8,500,000 per year, and, as this is too great a burden for the Commonwealth to bear even with the increased revenue, this specific relief is not presently possible. But some substantial advance in that direction must shortly be made.

Your attention is specially directed to "A Comparative Study of Public School Systems in the Forty-eight States," published by the "Russell Sage Foundation," a copy of which will be received by each member of the Legislature. This "study" shows that Pennsylvania ranks twenty-third in general efficiency among the systems of the Union. In current expenditures per child of school age this Commonwealth takes twenty-sixth place. In average attendance we rank eighth. In general all-around efficiency Washington is first; Massachusetts, second and New York, third.

It is not to the credit of our Commonwealth that we should be so far down in such a list, and if we are to attain the position to which our wealth and citizenship entitles us this subject must receive prompt, serious and generous consideration. "No other investment produces so large a return. More money means better schools, better schools means more efficient citizens, more efficient citizens produce more money—it is a beneficent circle."

The report just made to the Governor by the State Board of Education gives particulars of the directions in which money is needed for the schools. An increased appropriation of $5,000,000 is asked for. The principal expenses would be in the creation of a permanent State school fund and the purchase of the State normal schools. There are thirteen of the latter, with property worth $5,702,356, against which the Commonwealth holds liens for $1,571,086. The new school Code has provided admirably efficient means of expending this money and only the money itself is lacking. The local school tax rate is all that the taxpayers can bear. Your Committee strongly urges that educational advantages should be the same for each child, irrespective of the wealth of the community in which he lives. This can only be accomplished by State appropriations, and when the schools are thus equalized there will be no more removals of families from the country to the city, or from a poor to a wealthy school district, to get the proper education for their children.

NEW STATE INSTITUTIONS.

Many of the new State institutions, the need for which was discussed in the report of 1911, have been or are nearly completed in accordance with the recommendations therein contained. Notable among these are:

The State Hospital for Injured Persons of the Trevorton, Shamokin and Mt. Carmel Coal Fields, at Shamokin, authorized by the Act of June 13, 1907, P. L. 699, was opened for the reception of patients on January 8, 1912. Present capacity, 42. Number of patients on May 31, 1912, 46.

The State Hospital of Nanticoke, Luzerne County, has just been taken over by the State, under the Act of June 14, 1911, P. L. 933. Bed capacity, 48. Number of patients in hospital May 31, 1912, 9.

The State Hospital of Coaldale, Schuylkill County, formerely Panther Creek Valley Hospital, has just been taken over by the State, under the Act of June 14, 1911, P. L. 931. Bed capacity, 43. Number of patients on May 31, 1912, 40.

The Homeopathic State Hospital for the Insane, Rittersville, was opened October 3, 1912. At present this hospital has 568 insane patients. Eventually the bed capacity will be 1,200.

The State Hospital for the Criminal Insane, at Farview, Wayne County, was opened December 16, 1912, and to-day has 67 patients. As Farview is not entirely finished we cannot give the bed capacity.

Your Committee cannot forbear repeating, however, its comment upon the wastful method by which these institutions were erected, to wit: The appropriation of a small sum, comparatively speaking, the partial completion of the institution during the two years that the sum lasted, and a repetition of the process upon the several occasions of the sessions of the Legislature, until by the time the buildings were completed the capital first put into them had laid idle for years, and the buildings themselves, by reason of slow construction and lack of protection, had in many cases deteriorated. With a State Department to supervise the erection of these buildings, instead of a separate commission of volunteer citizens for each one, the work of building would be vigorous and continuous. Yet it will not be under any system, unless the funds are supplied by the Commonwealth exactly as they are needed, and there is no practical reason why this cannot be done.

WEAK-MINDED AND EPILEPTIC.

The weak-minded and epileptic are not yet sufficiently cared for. The institution at Spring City is now devoted entirely to the weak-minded. The number of these, however, is very great, and with the advance of science it is more and more coming to be recognized that a large part of our climinal classes should be included among them. It has been estimated that there are 18,000 such persons in Pennsylvania alone, and they are in every way a menace to society. The Commission appointed by the Legislature of 1911, as elsewhere pointed out, is giving careful thought to this matter.

It is certain, however, that whatever form their recommendation shall take, it will mean increased State expenditure for instiutions to meet this need.

The same conditions apply to the epileptic, an institution caring for seven or eight hundred is now needed. A farm colony for epileptics could be connected with either Polk or Spring City. There are now in the insane hospitals from twenty-five hundred to three thousand epileptics, most of whom are insane or feeble-minded.

TUBERCULOUS INSANE.

The tuberculous insane form another class needing isolation from the community and from other suffering ones. The present hospitals at Wernersville would be splendidly adapted to them, and it is suggested that the buildings be devoted to these purposes, and the present inmates distributed among other hospitals.

PSYCHOPATHIC WARDS.

The Act of 1911, establishing psychopathic wards in certain hospitals, in accordance with the previous recommendation of your Committee, will necessitate increased expenditure, and, as experience grows, the extent of the demands and the number of institutions to which it is to be adopted will grow also.

WAYWARD WOMEN.

There is now no institution for the care of the wayward girls and women corresponding to the Huntingdon Reformatory for Boys. Such delinquents over eighteen years of age are now sent to workhouses and jails. There they have nothing to do and no one to help them to reform, and they come in contact with the confirmed criminals of their own class. The result is that they often emerge in a worse condition than when they entered.

This matter has been agitated for several years by a committee of public-spirited women of the State, representing civic organizations of all kinds, and their programme will be again presented to the Legislature of 1913. They advocate such an institution as those maintained by New York, at Bedford and Albion, and by Massachusetts, at Sherbourne. The cost of buildings such as those at Bedford, New York, would be about $500,000, and if constructed on the modern approved cottage system, part could be put into service as completed with a partial appropriation. Indiana, New Jersey and Ohio also have such institutions. The results in all of them have been most admirable, and the inmates form a class in the community which appeals most strongly to our sympathies and are in most urgent need of help. Such an institution would do more to solve the "vice problem," or at least to mitigate its effects, than many "vice commissions" and than thousands of "crusades." Dependent in their criminal life upon companions and leaders of stronger character of both sexes, these unfortunates need help more than punishment.

DEPENDENT CHILDREN.

Equally appealing is the need of the dependent children of the State. It is recognized that the best method of caring for dependent children is placing them in foster homes rather than institutions. In many cases, however, especially with young children, it is necessary that board be paid for them. The State aid along this line has already been begun. There exists in most of our large cities Children's Aid Societies, which look after this work in the present absence of any care of it by the Commonwealth. To a few of these appropriations are now made, to wit: The Children's Aid Societies in Westmoreland, Franklin and Crawford Counties. A lump appropriation is made to the Children's Aid Society of Western Pennsylvania, which has headquarters in Pittsburgh, and includes in its territory twenty-three counties in the western part of the Commonwealth, with certain exceptions. The remaining forty counties, comprising Eastern and Middle Pennsylvania, have to be looked after by the Children's Aid Society of Pennsylvania. The last appropriation to the western society was but $10,000, and to the Children's Aid Society of Pennsylvania but $30,000. The result has been that many counties are not reached at all by the Children's Aid Society of Pennsylvania. These counties are entitled to the services of the Society. It seems to your Committee vitally important that the children should not be neglected, for the "way the twig is bent the tree's inclined," and sufficient appropriations should be made to carry on the work everywhere, and to carry it on adequately. The epigram of the National Health Reform Association, that, having provided for the health of the pigs, we should now look after the babies, has reason for its indignant tone.

This should not be done, however, without fixing a standard for the conduct of the societies which shall receive such aid. The State Board of Charities may well be entrusted with this oversight.

The Commonwealth has also made a beginning in contributing to children's homes, by appropriations to institutions in Lancaster, Lackawanna, McKean, Allegheny, Luzerne, Lycoming, Dauphin, Northampton, York Philadelphia, Mercer, Schuylkill, Erie, Berks and Montgomery Counties. If this is to be done in one place, it should be done everywhere, and should have some relation to population and to the amount expended locally with the insane. Experience, however, shows that this is not the best way, and your Committee does not recommend the extension of the system. There are now well regulated organizations, (Children's Aid Societies), managed by public-spirited persons, particularly the women of the Commonwealth, to do this work if the proper financial State aid is given. When this is done it will be one of the chief glories of Pennsylvania's system of privately administered charity.

LOCAL NEEDS.

All our municipalities are asking for increased revenue for their own needs to be expended in their own way. Help with the schools and the highways is only part. The farmer and real estate owner feel that they are already doing their share, and vigorously oppose an effort to increase the tax rate on land, etc. Public improvements on a large scale in the way of parks and parkways, docks, rapid transit and sewage disposal plants are contemplated by the larger cities, for whose benefit constitutional amendments are under way to increase their borrowing capacity. See the Joint Resolutions of 1911, P. L. 1160 and 1167. These, it is true, contemplate increase of debt only for self supporting public works. Yet, they indicate the tendency of the times. The same cities desire an increase in the assessed value of property, within their limits—either by legal or arbitrary methods, so the end is gained—that they may borrow more money. Interest and sinking fund charges on these are to be met.

In prosecuting its work your Committee gave special heed to this demand. Cities of any considerable size all over the world were asked for information. Everywhere the tendency is to assess and collect the tax through a central authority, and to hand back to the localities sufficient for their needs. Equality of assessment, economy of cost for the government, and economy of time and effort for the taxpayer are all promoted thereby. While we are not able to adopt the system at one stroke, as elsewhere discussed, we may easily make a beginning by adding municipal aid as a larger item of State expenditure. The ways in which this beginning should be made are discussed below.

The Commonwealth's expenditures have nearly kept pace with her revenue, as the following table will show. The balance fluctuates, but there must be an increase in revenue to meet these needs. More taxes in general, and the change of burden in some instances were recommended to the Legislature of 1911, yet no change was made. The need is just as great to-day, and further reflection only confirms our former conclusions.

(C) CHANGE IN SUBJECTS OF TAXATION.

First, let us consider the relief asked from present taxes. Formerly the most frequent point of attack was a tax said to be peculiar to Pennsylvania. This is the:

MERCANTILE LICENSE TAX.

Complaints to your Committee of this tax have not been so numerous in the last two years as they were previously, and it is so long settled a part of our taxing system that it seems unwise to disturb it. Public service corporations of various kinds pay a tax upon gross receipts which is closely analogous to the mercantile license tax on gross sales. It seems fair that the merchant should bear his part also. Many corporations engaged in mercantile business complain that they pay a capital stock tax and a license tax, and are subject to double taxation. So far as this is double taxation it applies as well to the public service corporations. It is not a double tax, however, because the capital stock tax is upon the privilege of doing business in corporate form, a privilege not enjoyed by all classes of the community, whereas the mercantile license tax in some degree, like the liquor license tax, is laid upon the privilege of doing business generally.

Complaints that the cost of collecting the tax is excessive is met by the facts. The reports of the Auditor General show that in 1907 the percentage of cose was 10.6 per cent., in 1908 10.5 per cent., in 1909 11.3 per cent., and in 1910 10.9 per cent. Part of this cost is the expense of advertising the list of taxables, a system authorized by law and actually in force everywhere except Philadelphia. This system is in line with the growing demand for publicity of all tax assessments, so that the knowledge of a man's neighbors and competitors may assist the assessor in arriving at a just result and tends to impartiality. Such publicity is strongly recommended by leading authorities with reference to taxation of real estate. It is also a feature of the Federal Corporation Tax Law. Your Committee, therefore, thinks that instead of striking down this system of publicity, it would be well to extend it, and they, therefore, recommend, that the list published should include the amount of business on which the tax is laid as well as the name of the taxable. A draft of an Act to accompany this Act is accordingly submitted.

Perhaps the most serious complaint comes from those merchants, such as dealers in grain, who do business of large volume on a very small margin of profit. The tax is laid on gross sales, and is the same for a merchant who makes 50 per cent. as for one who makes one-half per cent. on each sale. In an ideal taxing system, a tax upon business operations should undoubtedly bear some relation both to the capital invested and to the profit realized, and should not follow this rule-of-thumb-method. In practice, however, it has been found more advantageous, in other lines as well, to lay the tax in the way in which the mercantile license tax is laid. Examples of this are the tax on the gross receipts of public service companies, which falls at the same rate upon those who make a large and those who make a small profit; also the tax on moneys at interest, which is at the rate of four mills, irrespective of the rate of interest. In the latter case, as elsewhere pointed out, the fixed rate of tax is an actual obstacle to the efficient taxation of bank deposits, where a low rate of interest, such as two or three per cent., is paid.

The Federal Corporation Tax is laid on net incomes without regard to capital, going part way along the lines suggested. A full realization of the ideal system is attempted in Wisconsin Income Tax law of 1911, with respect to the tax paid by corporations. The income of Wisconsin corporations is divided into classes according to the percentage which the taxable income is of the assessed valuation of the the plant or property from which the income is derived; that is, if the income is one per cent. or less of the assessed value of the property, the tax rate is one-half of one per cent. of such income, and if the taxable income equals more than one per cent., but does not exceed two per cent. of the assessed value of the property, the rate is one per cent. of the income. This progression is maintained until the rate per cent. equals 12 per cent. of the assessed value of the property, in which case the tax rate is 6 per cent., and continues at that rate for all income beyond. These provisions have precedents in a Georgia law of 1863, and a Swedish law of 1910. Until we have constitutional authority to levy graded or progressive taxes, such a system could not be adopted here. The prospect of obtaining authority for this in the near future, as elsewhere pointed out, is a reason for not disturbing the system at this time.

And while this method may not be burdensome to corporations, its application to an individual would have proctical difficulties and dangers. To ascertain the amount of capital invested in the case of many individuals who do business without an up-to-date system of bookkeeping, and perhaps without much idea of the capital invested, is almost impossible. Even if possible, it would extend the inquisitorial methods which are everywhere unpopular to attempt to ascertain the amount of capital invested. To endeavor to ascertain the actual profit realized would be even more obnoxious, and for the same reasons more difficult. The ascertainment of these facts would put a vastly greater burden upon the mercantile license tax appraisers, and greatly increase the expenses of assessing the tax.

The present method of measuring the tax by gross sales bears some relation to profit, as much so as that of measuring it by the rental value of the premises occupied, which is current in the progressive Canadian provinces, and far more so than the tax of a lump sum on each merchant so common in other States, and used by us in taxing the liquor business.

RETURN OF MERCANTILE LICENSE TAX TO COUNTIES.

Claim was made by county officials that the proceeds of the mercantile license tax were a fit sum to be turned back to the counties in which they were collected, as is done with three-fourths of the personal property tax and with one-half of the tax on the premiums of foreign insurance companies. It may be said in general, of the revenue of the Commonwealth and its subdivisions, that the State revenue is more nearly adequate to State needs than is the local revenue to local needs. If the new taxes suggested are laid in sufficient amount to take the place of the mercantile license tax, your Committee thinks that it would be proper to turn back to the counties some part or all of this tax, and an Act accomplishing that is submitted herewith.

An Act to provide for the return by the State Treasurer to the several counties from which the same are received, for their own use, of one-half of certain taxes received or collected by County Treasurers or other officers and paid into the State Treasury.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That on and after the first day of January, one thousand nine hundred and fourteen, and annually thereafter, one-half of the net amount of the mercantile license tax upon vendors or of dealers in goods, wares or merchandise, at retail, at wholesale and at any exchange or board of trade; one-half of the net amount of the mercantile license tax upon restaurants, eating houses, cafes and quick-lunch businesses; one-half of the net amount of the license tax upon auctioneers, and one-half the net amount of license tax upon brokers, factors, commission merchants, agents and pawnbrokers, paid by the persons, firms, limited partnerships or corporations engaged in any of the aforesaid occupations or businesses and received or collected by County Treasurers or other officers and transmitted to the State Treasurer and paid into the State Treasury, shall be returned by the State Treasurer to the counties from which the same are received for their own use. Warrants for this purpose shall be drawn by the Auditor General, payable to the treasurer of the several counties in accordance with this Act; Provided, That in consideration of the return to the counties as aforesaid of one-half of the taxes so collected and paid into the State Treasury no claim shall be made upon or allowed by the Commonwealth for County Treasurers, or mercantile appraisers, commissions or fees or mileage.

Section 2. All Acts or parts of Acts, general, special or local inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed.

An Act Relative to Mercantile Appraisers' Lists.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter the Mercantile Appraisers' Lists published in each county of the Commonwealth, in addition to the names and classification of each person subject to license, shall also give the amount of the gross volume of business transacted annually upon which the tax is assessed.

INSURANCE COMPANIES.

Insurance companies have long been considered the legitimate object of heavy taxation. They represent large accumulations of money in a shape where they are already thoroughly supervised and where an accurate record must be kept, so that the sufficiency of the returns for taxation can be easily verified. As these companies do business with all classes of the community, and as their taxes form a part of their running expenses which must affect the rate of premium charged, the tax is soon distributed through the community. For this very reason, however, the companies have time and again sought to avoid the taxation, claiming, with truth, that the tax falls not upon them, but upon the citizens at large.

Mutual life insurance companies, particularly, have, during the last four years, been very earnest in their representations upon this subject. They call attention to the fact that they have no capital stock and do not work for the profit of stockholders, but for the benefit solely of their members, who constitute a very large portion of the Commonwealth's citizens, and that the tax is a discouragement to the very useful practice of insurance and especially to the insurance on lives. They are, in fact, taxed to the same extent, practically as companies having capital stock. The latter pay the five mills capital stock tax, but, in lieu thereof, the mutual companies pay the four mills personal property tax, which amounts to more in the end. In addition, both kinds of companies, pay the eight mills tax on gross premiums received.

Another burden of which these companies complain, strange to say, is the excessive tax laid upon their rivals, the foreign insurance companies. This is two per cent. on gross premiums. While the effect, of course, is to discourage such companies from doing business in this Commonwealth in competition with our own companies, yet our own companies desire to do business outside of the Commonwealth, and when they do so they are met almost everywhere by a retaliatory tax which is laid upon them in other States to the same extent that we tax the companies of that State in our own home. For this reason our companies would prefer to meet foreign companies upon an equality, both at home and abroad. In these days, when insurance companies are so thoroughly supervised, and all practically are solvent, there is no reason for discouraging the doing of business by foreign insurance companies, and our citizens should have the benefit of competition from them.

The mutual life insurance companies, therefor, propose that all companies, domestic and foreign, doing a life insurance business, both capital stock and mutual companies, should be taxed alike. The rate suggested is one per cent. on the gross premiums. This is two mills in advance of the present rate, as to the domestic companies, but as it is in lieu of both the capital stock tax of five mills on the capital stock companies and the personal property tax of four mills on the mutual companies, the net result will unquestionably be a decrease in the amount of tax paid by these companies. It is represented by the companies that the increase of business will soon compensate for the decrease in the tax rate, but the result in the decreased rate of premium would be so small that it seems very doubtful if it will be adequate to fulfill this prediction.

It is argued in favor of the proposed tax that mutual insurance companies are really benevolent institutions, like fraternal orders and savings institutions, which are exempted from the four mills personal property tax, as elsewhere discussed. An instance is cited of the weight of the present burden of taxation where the taxes paid by a company last year amounted to $154,000 more than it paid in administration expenses.

An act has beeen drafted by these companies to carry into effect the proposed change, which is appended hereto for the information of the Legislature. By its terms as drawn, the present eight mills tax on gross premiums and capital stock tax or personal property tax, according as the company is a capital stock or a mutual company, is retained as to all other companies, and the premium tax on foreign companies other than life is reduced to eight mills.

Upon the basis of the year 1911 the estimated revenue from these companies would be one per cent. upon the premiums paid to domestic life insurance companies, to wit: $10,012,764.85, and to foreign life insurance companies $52,236,680.75, making the tax $622,494.46. This tax would displace the four mills personal property tax now paid by domestic mutual life companies, as to which there are no means of submitting figures, as their returns are mingled with the assessments of individuals in the cities where their offices are located, and the tax on the same premiums at the present rates, which would amount to $1,112,234.55; Also, the revenue from tax on premiums of foreign insurance companies other than life at the rate of 12 mills, or $76,533.07. The loss to the counties on personal property tax and foreign fire insurance premium tax would be in part compensated for by the proposed return of one-half of the mercantile license tax, which in 1911 amounted to $1,387,620.80. The proposed tax would also take the place of the present revenue to the Commonwealth from capital stock tax on domestic life insurance companies amounting to about $20,000.

Your Committee last year recommended an increase in the tax on premiums of all insurance companies to three per cent., in view of the already existing policy of taxing insurance companies heavily. This proposal was not acceptable to the Legislature, and, therefore, your Committee makes no recommendation of a change at this time as respects the domestic companies, submitting the information thus gathered for the consideration of the Legislature.

It would be desirable, however, as we think, that foreign and domestic companies should be put on the same basis, so far as the rate of tax is concerned, for the considerations above set forth.

An Act Amending An Act entitled "A Supplement to the twenty-fourth section of An Act entitled 'An Act to provide revenue by taxation, approved the seventh day of June, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine,' approved the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine, amending the twenty-fourth section, by providing for the payment by the State Treasurer of one-half of the two per centum tax on premiums paid by foreign fire insurance companies to the treasurers of the several cities and boroughs within this Commonwealth," approved the 28th day of June, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five, amending the first section by providing for the payment by all life insurance companies or associations doing business in this Commonwealth of an annual tax at the rate of one per centum upon the gross premiums of every character received from residents of this Commonwealth, in lieu of all taxes to which said companies or associations might otherwise have been subject under the first section of the act approved the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine, and in lieu of all taxes to which said companies or associations might otherwise have been subject under the twenty-first section of said act, as respects so much of their capital as is invested in the business of life insurance; and providing that all sums paid out for reinsurance by any insurance company shall be deducted from taxable premiums, and that premium abatements to holders of policies of life insurance shall not be included in gross premiums.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That Section 1, of the Act of June twenty-eighth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five, entitled "A supplement to the twenty-fourth section of an Act entitled 'An Act to provide revenue by taxation, approved the seventh day of June, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine,' approved the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine, amending the twenty-fourth section by providing for the payment by the State Treasurer of one-half of the two per centum tax on premiums paid by foreign fire insurance companies to the treasurers of the several cities and boroughs within the Commonwealth," which reads as follows:

"That hereafter it shall be the duty of the president, secretary or other proper officer of each and every insurance company or association, corporation by or under any law of this Commonwealth, except companies doing business upon the purely mutual plan without any capital stock or accumulated reserve, and purely mutual beneficial associations whose benefits of members, their families or heirs are made up entirely of the weekly or monthly contributions of their members and the accumulated interest thereon; to make report in writing to the Auditor-General, semi-annually, upon the first days of July and January in each year, setting forth the entire amount of premiums and assessments received by such company or association during the preceding six months, whether said premiums and assessments were received in money or in the form of notes, credits or other substitutes for money, and every such company or association shall pay in to the State Treasury, semi-annually, on the last days of January and July, in addition to any other taxes to which it may be liable under the first and twenty-first sections of this Act, a tax of eight mills on the dollars upon the gross amount of said premiums and assessments received from business transacted within this Commonwealth; Provided, That said report shall be made under oath or affirmation, and it shall be the duty of the accounting officers of the Commonwealth to add ten per centum to the account of any company or association whose officers shall neglect or refuse, for a period of thirty days, to make said report or to pay in to the State Treasury the tax imposed by this section; And Provided further, That hereafter the annual tax upon premiums of insurance companies of other States or foreign governments shall be at the rate of two per centum upon the gross premiums of every character and description received from business done within this Commonwealth within the entire calendar year preceding," be amended to read as follows:

That hereafter it shall be the duty of the president, secretary or other proper officer of each and every insurance company or association doing business in this Commonwealth, except companies doing business upon the purely mutual plan without any capital stock or accumulated reserve, and purely mutual beneficial associations whose funds for the benefit of members, their families or heirs are made up entirely of the weekly or monthly contributions of their members and the accumulated interest thereon; to make report in writing to the Auditor-General, semi-annually, upon the first days of July and January in each year, setting forth the entire amount of premiums and assessments received by such company or association during the preceding six months from residents of this Commonwealth, whether said premiums or assessments were received in money or in the form of notes, credits or other substitutes for money, and every such company or association, except companies or associations engaged in the business of life insurance, shall pay into the State Treasury, semi-annually, on the last days of July and January, in addition to any other taxes to which it may be liable under the first and twenty-first sections of this act, a tax of eight mills on the dollar upon the gross amount of said premiums and assessments received from the business transacted within this Commonwealth, and every life insurance company or association organized under the laws of other States or foreign governments, and every life insurance company or association organized under any law of this Commonwealth shall pay in to the State Treasury, semi-annually, on the last days of July and January, in lieu of any other taxes to which it might otherwise be liable under the first section of this Act, and in lieu of any tax to which it might otherwise have been liable under the twenty-first section hereof, as respects so much of its capital as is invested in the business of life insurance, a tax at the rate of one per centum upon the gross premiums of every character and description actually received from residents of this Commonwealth during the preceding six months: Provided, That all sums paid out as premiums for reinsurance and all sums credited to residents of this Commonwealth who are policyholders in life insurance companies in reduction or abatement of premiums shall be deducted from the gross premiums received before the amount of the tax is determined; And Provided, That said reports shall be made under oath or affirmation, and it shall be the duty of the accounting officers of the Commonwealth to add ten per centum to the account of any company or association whose officers shall neglect or refuse, for a period of thirty days, to make said reports, or to pay in to the State Treasury the tax imposed by this section.

Section 2. All Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed.

EXEMPTIONS.

On the other hand, exemptions exist which are not sound in policy, and which should be done away with to the benefit of both the revenue and fair dealing.

EXEMPTION OF SAVINGS INSTITUTIONS FROM FOUR MILLS TAX.

In the previous report of your Committee, attention was called to the Act of 1909, P. L. 298, which exempted savings institutions not having a capital stock from the four mills tax on money at interest. In principal, the four mills personal property tax is laid upon the creditor. In practice, it falls upon the debtor, as is indicated by the current rate of interest in the large communities of five and four-tenths per cent. per annum for money loaned on mortgage. As long as the great bulk of the money loaned in any community comes from investors which are not exempt from the payment of the tax, the rate will remain at five and four-tenths per cent., or some other rate adapted to suit their necessities and the borrower will have to pay the same rate to institutions exempt from the tax as to private individuals. The benefit of the four mills will thus go to the institution, and if the money thus saved actually went to the depositors of small means, who by thrift are accumulating small savings accounts, it might be well to continue the relief from the tax. But in Philadelphia, where most of these institutions are located, the interest paid to depositors, to wit, 3.65 per cent., has remained the same since the passage of the Act of 1909, and the saving effected to the institution has gone to swell the surplus undistributed, which already amounts for the Philadelphia Savings Fund Society alone, in 1911, to $13,990,514.00.

Another objection to this exemption in favor of saving institutions is the discrimination in favor of those corporations which can sell their securities to such institutions tax free as against corporations engaged in similar or competitive business, which have not the opportunity to dispose of theirs to such favored customers. Your Committee is informed that the Act of 1909 creating the exemption, was inspired not by a desire to help these institutions in which are deposited small savings, to the encouragement of thrift of that class of depositors, but to enable a corporation to sell to a prominent savings institution bonds thus made tax free, which theretofore had been unsaleable. Such an exemption favors not the man or woman of small means, consideration for whom could have been to legislators the only impelling motive to the passage of such a law, whereas, in fact, it was promoted for the accomplishment of selfish ends.

The Legislature of 1911 did not enact the proposed repeal of the Act of 1909. But in another connection, to wit, the Act of May 11, 1911, P. L. 265, in exempting from the four mills tax beneficial organizations paying sick and death benefits, the Legislature may unwittingly have done so. The Act of 1909 cites for amendment Section 1 of the Act of June 1, 1889, as amended by the Act of June 8, 1891. The Act of 1911 just mentioned cites for amendment the same section of the Act of 1889 as amended by the Act of 1891, but cites it as it originally stood and not as amended by the Act of 1909, so that when it is re-enacted by the Act of 1911 the provision exempting savings institutions is omitted. There is no authoritative decision as to the effect of this, although numerous instances of it may be found in the Statute Books in other connections. It would seem, that to say that a certain statute shall hereafter read thus and so, excludes all other readings which may have been theretofore prescribed by statute. In view of the uncertainty, however, your Committee recommends a repeal of the Act of 1909 and submit the draft of a statute to accomplish that end.

An Act to repeal an act entitled "an Act to amend the first section of An Act, entitled a further supplement to an act, entitled "An Act to provide revenue by taxation," approved the seventh day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine,' approved the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine, as amended by an act approved the eighth day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, entitled 'An Act to provide increased revenues for the purpose of relieving the burdens of local taxation, being supplementary to an act, entitled "An Act to provide revenue by taxation," approved the seventh day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, amending the first, fourteenth, sixteenth, twentieth, twenty-first, twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth sections of an act supplementary thereto, which became a law on the first day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine, entitled 'A further Supplement to an act, entitled "An Act to provide revenue by taxation," approved the seventh day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine,' and providing for greater uniformity of taxation by taxing all of the property of corporations, limited partnerships, and joint stock associations having capital stock, at the rate of five mills on each dollar of its actual value, by relieving and exempting from the provisions thereof savings institutions having no capital stock," approved May first, one thousand nine hundred and nine.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That an Act, entitled "An Act to amend the first section of an Act, entitled 'A further supplement to an Act, entitled "An Act to provide revenue by taxation," approved the seventh day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine,' approved the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine, as amended by an Act approved the eighth day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, entitled "An Act to provide increased revenues for the purpose of relieving the burdens of local taxation, being supplementary to an Act, entitled 'An Act to provide revenue by taxation,' approved the seventh day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, amending the first, fourteenth, sixteenth, twentieth, twenty-first, twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth sections of an Act supplementary thereto, which became a law on the first day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine, entitled 'A further supplement to an Act, entitled "An Act to provide revenue by taxation," approved the seventh day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and sevetny-nine,' and providing for greater uniformity of taxation by taxing all of the property of corporations, limited partnerships and joint stock associations, having capital stock, at the rate of five mills on each dollar of its actual value, by relieving and exempting from the provisions thereof savings institutions having no capital stock," approved May first, one thousand nine hundred and nine, be and the same is hereby repealed.

PROVIDENT LIFE AND TRUST COMPANY, AND THE PAYMENT OF PERSONAL PROPERTY TAX.

A remarkable instance of tax evasion is that of the Provident Life and Trust Company of Philadelphia. This company has capital stock, and is does a general trust company business, and also an insurance company business. On its books the assets of the two departments are kept separate. It is not a mutual company, however, and it first seemed to the taxing authorities that the investments of the reserves of the insurance department, amounting then to about thirty million dollars, entered into the value of the capital stock and should be considered in assessing capital stock taxes. Upon the sworn statement of the officers of the company, filed of record, however, that these assets belonged to the policyholders only, and in no manner affected the value of the capital stock, the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County held (Commonwealth vs. Provident Life and Trust Company, 9 Dist. Rep., 479), that these investments could not be considered in assessing capital stock tax. This case was not taken to the Supreme Court. Accordingly, the local assessors of Philadelphia County, where the company is located, attempted to include these assets in assessing the four mills personal property tax, against the company, just as all other similar assets are taxed which do not form part of the capital, and hence are not considered in assessing the capital stock tax. The law provides, (Act of June 8, 1891, P. L. 229), that corporations paying a capital stock tax should not be required to pay any further tax on the mortgages, etc., "owned by them in their own right." The company thereupon claimed that they did own these assets in their own right, and not in trust for their policyholders, and that they did affect the value of the capital stock, and could only be assessed in the capital stock tax, and this although they had induced the Dauphin County Court to decide otherwise, and although those assets were on the books of the company specially set apart in the insurance department as part of the reserves. This contention was sustained by the Supreme Court in the case of Provident Life and Trust Company vs. Durham, 212 Pa. 68.

The Legislature then attempted, by the Act of June 7, 1907, P. L. 430, to take these securities out of the "no man's land," into which they had fallen, and, recognizing that in justice they did belong to the policyholders and not to the company, to subject them to the four mills personal property tax. In passing this Act through the Legislature the title was muddled in some way—the responsibility for which cannot now be fixed—and came out in an unintelligible form, the date of the Act to which reference was made for the purpose of amendment being so changed that it referred to an Act not in existence. In a litigation pending at the time of our previous report it had been held by the Court of Common Pleas No. 2, Philadelphia County, that the title of the Act was valid, but that the language of the Act was still ineffective to subject these assets to tax as desired. On appeal, the Supreme Court held, (Provident Life and Trust Company vs. Hammond, 230 Pa. 407), that the title of the Act was defective, and no construction was made of the wording of the statute.

In spite of the decision of the lower court, however, criticising the language of the statute, the Legislature of 1911, by the Act of June 7, 1911, P. L., 673, re-enacted the Act of 1907, with an adequate and a properly worded title, but repeated the language in the body of the statute which had been declared ineffectual by the lower court. Two suits have been brought in the same court to test the effect of this Act, a preliminary injunction has been granted and trial had of one suit, resulting in the awarding of a permanent injunction by the trial Judge. which is still the subject of exception and appeal.

Your Committee, in its previous report, recommended an Act (which is repeated in this report), which was carefully worded to meet the two previous decisions.

In anticipation of an unfavorable final decision of the Supreme Court upon the effect of the Act of 1911, your Committee again most strongly urge the passage of this Act. Whether it is necessary or not, in view of the action of this company, as above set forth, and the result which has exempted from taxation for so many years this enormous amount of securities, on November 12, 1912, $61,052,773.56, your Committee think that no step should be left untaken by the Commonwealth which will tend to put this company upon the same basis with respect to taxation as its competitors and other members of the community. Other insurance companies having captial stock pay capital stock tax; and mutual insurance companies which do not have capital stock, pay the personal property tax. This company pays nothing on these assets.

An Act to Amend Section 23 of An Act Entitled "A Further Supplement to An Act Entitled 'An Act to Provide Revenue By Taxation,' Approved the Seventh Day of June, Anno Domini One Thousand Eight Hundred And Seventy-Nine," Approved June First, One Thousand Eight Hundred And Eighty-Nine.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That Section 21 of an Act, entitled "A further supplement to an Act entitled 'An Act to provide revenue by taxation,' approved the seventh day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine," approved June first, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine, which, as heretofore amended, reads as follows:

"Section 21. That every corporations, joint stock association, limited partnership and company whatsoever, from which a report is required under the twentieth section hereof, shall be subject to and pay into the Treasury of the Commonwealth, annually, a tax at the rate of five mills upon each dollar of the actual value of its whole capital stock of all kinds, including common, special and preferred, as ascertained in the manner prescribed in said twentieth section, and it shall be the duty of the treasurer or other officers having charge of any such corporation, joint stock association or limited partnership, upon which a tax is imposed by this section ,to transmit the amount of said tax to the Treasury of the Commonwealth within thirty days from the date of settlement of the account by the Auditor General and State Treasurer: Provided, That for the purpose of this Act, interests in limited partnerships or joint stock associations shall be deemed to be capital stock and taxable acordingly; Provided also, That corporations, limited partnerships and joint stock associations, liable to tax on capital stock under this section, shall not be required to make any report or pay any further tax on mortgages, bonds and other securities owned by them in their own right; but corporations, limited partnerships and joint stock associations holding such securities as trustees, executors, administrators, guardians, or in any other manner, shall return and pay the tax imposed by this Act upon all securities so held by them as in the case of individuals; And Provided further, That the provisions of this section shall not apply to the taxation of so much of the capital stock of corporations, limited partnerships or joint stock associations, organized for manufacturing purposes, which is invested in and actually and exclusively employed in carrying on manufacturing within the State, except companies engaged in the brewing or distilling of spirits or malt liquors, and such as enjoy and exercise the right of eminent domain; but every manufacturing corporation, limited partnership or join stock association shall pay the State tax of five mills herein provided, upon such proportion of its capital stock, if any, as may be invested in any property or business not strictly incident or appurtenant to its manufacturing business, in addition to the local taxes assessed upon its property in the districts where located, it being the object of this proviso to relieve from State taxation only so much of the capital stock as is invested purely in the manufacturing plant and business; Provided further, In case of fire or marine insurance companies the tax imposed by this section shall be at the rate of three mills on each dollar of the actual value of the whole capital stock," be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

Section 21. That every corporation, joint stock association, limited partnership and company whatsoever, from which a report is required under the twentieth section hereof, shall be subject to and pay into the Treasury of the Commonwealth, annually, a tax at the rate of five mills upon each dollar of the actual value of its whole capital stock of all kinds, including common, special and preferred, as ascertained in the manner prescribed in said twentieth section; and it shall be the duty of the treasurer or other officers having charge of any such corporation, joint stock association or limited partnership, upon which a tax is imposed by this section, to transmit the amount of said tax to the Treasury of the Commonwealth within thirty days from the date of the settlement of the account by the Auditor General and the State Treasurer; Provided, That for the purpose of this Act, interests in limited partnerships or joint stock associations shall be deemed to be capital stock, and taxable accordingly; Provided also, That corporations, limited partnerships and joint stock associations, liable to tax on capital stock under this section, shall not be required to pay any further tax on the mortgages, bonds and other securites owned by them, which form part of its capital stock surplus and undivided profits belonging to the whole body of stockholders or members as such; but corporations, limited partnerships and joint stock associations, owning or holding such securities as trustees, executors, administrators, guardians, or in any other manner than as aforesaid, shall return and pay the tax imposed by this Act upon all securities so owned or held by them, as in the case of individuals; And Provided further, That the provisions of this section shall not apply to the taxation of so much of the capital stock of corporations, limited partnerships or joint stock associations, organized for manufacturing purposes, which is invested in and actually and exclusively employed in carrying on manufacturing within the State, except companies engaged in the brewing or distilling of spirits or malt liquors, and such as enjoy and exercise the right of eminent domain; but every manufacturing corporation, limited partnership or joint stock association shall pay the State tax of five mills herein provided, upon such proportion of its captial stock, if any, as may be invested in any property or business not strictly incident or appurtenant to its manufacturing business, in addition to the local taxes assessed upon its property in the districts where located, it being the object of this proviso to relieve from State taxation only so much of the capital stock as is invested purely in the manufacturing plant and business; Provided further, In case of fire or marine insurance companies the tax inposed by this section shall be at the rate of three mills on each dollar of the actual value of the whole captal stock.

PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATIONS AND THE TAX ON GROSS RECEIPTS, ETC.

The tax on the gross receipts of various public service corporations has existed in Pennsylvania since 1866. It has been gradually extended until it includes all kinds of transportation companies, including pipe line, railway, telephone, telegraph, express and electric light companies. The only difficulty in practice is in separating the receipts from inter-state business from the receipts from business within the Commonwealth, the former of which cannot be taxed.

Rules of apportionment have been devised, however, which work satisfactorily and are easy of application. It is a tax easily collected, and capable of accurate ascertainment, for the same reasons as in the case of the mercantile license tax. For the year ending November 30, 1911, it yielded to the State $1,646,666.65. In the march of progress, however, certain corporations which ought to pay the tax, as well as others of like kind which actually do pay it, have been left behind. Among these are baggage transfer companes, which should be taxed in the same way as express companies are, under the Act of 1889. For the purpose of doing so, a draft act amending the Act of 1899 is submitted herewith.

Another class is artificial gas companies. Their competitors, the electric light companies, by the Act of 1889, were subjected to a tax of eight mills on the gross receipts. These companies, (artificial gas), are also exempt from capital stock tax on the ground that they are manufacturing companies. The same considerations apply to water companies, which are often conducted under the same corporate title as artificial gas companies, and water power companies, which should be on an equality with the electric light companies, which are their rivals in the furnishing of power. The general Act levying this tax which is applicable to all these corporations, except express companies, is the Act of 1889, and accordingly it has been redrafted for the purpose of levying these taxes.

An Act to amend Section 2 of An Act entitled "A supplement to An Act entitled 'An Act to provide revenue by taxation,' approved the seventh day of June. Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, amending and extending the provisions thereof," approved the twenty-eighth day of April, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That Section 2 of an Act entitled "A supplement to an Act entitled 'An Act to provide revenue by taxation,' approved the seventh day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, amending and extending the provisions thereof," which reads as follows:

"Section 2. Every corporation, limited partnership, joint stock association, partnership, firm or association of individulas, incorporated or unincorporated, engaged in the business commonly known as express business, shall pay to the State Treasurer, for the use of the Commonwealth, a tax of eight mills upon the amount of their gross receipts from express business done wholly within this State, the said tax shall be paid semi-annually upon the last days of January and July in each year; and for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of the same, it shall be the duty of the treasurer, or other proper officer of the said corporation, limited partnership, joint stock association, partnership, firm or association of individuals, to transmit to the Auditor General a statement, under oath or affirmation, of the amount of gross receipts of the said corporation, limited partnership, joint stock association, partnership, firm or association of individuals, incorporated or unincorporated, derived from all sources, and of the gross receipts from business done wholly within the State during the preceding six months ending upon the first days of January and July in each year; and if any such corporation, limited partnership, joint stock association, partnership, firm or association of individuals, incorporated or unincorprated, shall neglect or refuse for a period of thirty days after such tax becomes due to make said returns, or to pay the said tax, the amount thereof, with an addition of ten per centum thereto, shall be collected for the use of the Commonwelath as other taxes are recoverable by law. No other tax upon express receipts, or upon the privilege of transacting express business, shall be collected without further authority of law to be hereafter enacted; Providing, That this Act shall not be construed to repeal or take the place of the tax upon capital stock now imposed by law, but the tax on gross receipts hereby imposed shall be in addition to the tax on capital stock imposed by existing law upon any of the corporations, companies or associations hereby taxed," be and the same hereby amended so as to read as follows:

Section 2. Every corporation, limited partnership, joint stock association, partnership, firm or association of individuals, incorporated or unincorporated, engaged in the business of carrying baggage or persons, or in the business commonly known as express business, or in any other business of a like character and commonly known as transfer companies, express companies and companies doing similar business, shall pay to the State Treasurer, for the use of the Commonwealth, a tax of eight mills upon the amount of their gross receipts from transfer, express and similar business done wholly within this State, the said tax shall be paid semi-annually upon the last days of January and July in each year; and for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of the same, it shall be the duty of the treasurer, or other proper officer of the said corporation, limited partnership, joint stock association, partnership, firm or association of individuals, to transmit to the Auditor General a statement, under oath or affirmation of the amount of gross receipts of the said corporation, limited partnership, joint stock association, partnership, firm or association of individuals, incorporated or unincorporated, derived from all sources, and of the gross receipts from business done wholly within the State, during the preceding six months ending upon the first days of January and July in each year, and if any such corporation, limited partnership, joint stock association, partnership, firm or association of individuals, incorporated or unincorporated, shall neglect or refuse, for a period of thirty days after such tax becomes due to make said returns, or to pay the said tax, the amount thereof, with an addition of ten per centum thereto, shall be collected for the use of the Commonwealth as other taxes are recoverable by law. No other tax upon transfer, express and similar receipts, or upon the privilege of transacting transfer, express and similar business, shall be collected without further authority of law to be hereafter enacted; Provided, That this Act shall not be construed to repeal or take the place of the tax upon capital stock now imposed by law, but the tax on gross receipts hereby imposed shall be in addition to the tax on capital stock imposed by existing law upon any of the corporations, companies or associations hereby taxed.

An Act to amend Section 23 of An Act entitled "A further supplement to an act entitled 'An Act to provide revenue by taxation,' approved the seventh day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine," approved June first, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That Section 23 of an Act entitled "A further supplement to an Act entitled 'An Act to provide revenue by taxation, approved the seventh day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine," approved June first, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine, which reads as follows:

Section 23. That every railroad company, pipe line company, conduit company, steamboat company, canal company, slack water navigation company, transportation company, street passenger railway company and every other company, joint stock association or limited partnership, now or hereafter incorporated or organized by or under any law of this Commonwealth, or now or hereafter organized or incorporated by any other State or by the United States or any foreign government, and doing business in this Commonwealth, and owning, operating or leasing to or from another corporation, company, association, joint stock association or limited partnership, any railroad, pipe line, slack water navigation, street passenger railway, canal or other device for the transportation of freight or passengers or oil, and every telephone or telegraph company incorporated under the laws of this or any other State of the United States and doing business in this Commonwealth, and every express company, incorporated or unincorporated, doing business in this Commonwealth, and every firm, copartnership or joint stock company or association doing express business in this Commonwealth, and every electric light company, and every palace car and sleeping car company, incorporated or unincorporated, doing business in this Commonwealth, shall pay to the State Treasurer a tax of eight mills upon the dollar upon the gross receipts of said corporation, company or association, limited partnership, firm or corpartnership, received from passengers and freight traffic transported wholly within this State, and from telegraph, telephone or express business done wholly within this State, or from business of electric light companies and from the transportation of oil done wholly within the State; the said tax shall be paid semi-annually upon the last days of January and July in each year; and for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of the same it shall be the duty of the treasurer or other proper officers of the said company, firm, copartnership, limited partnership, joinst stock association or corporation to transmit to the Auditor-General a statement, under oath or affirmation, of the amount of gross receipts of the said companies, corpartnerships, corporations, joint stock associations, or limited partnerships derived from all sources and of gross receipts from business done wholly within the State, during the preceding six months ending on the first days of January and July in each year; and if any such company, firm, corpartnership, joint stock association, association or limited partnership or corporation, shall neglect or refuse for a period of thirty days after such tax becomes due to make said returns or to pay the same, the amount thereof, with an addition of ten per centum thereto, shall be collected for the use of the Commonwealth as other taxes are recoverable by law; Provided, That in any case where the works of one corporation, company, joint stock association or limited partnership are leased to and operated by another corporation, company, association or limited partnership, the taxes imposed by this section shall be apportioned between the said corporations, companies, associations or limited partnerships in accordance with the terms of their respective leases or agreements, but for the payment of the said taxes the Commonwelath shall first look to the corporation, company, association or limited partnership operating the works, and upon payment by the said company, corporation, association or limited partnership of a tax upon the receipts as herein provided derived from the operation thereof, the corporation, company, joint stock association or limited partnership from which the said works are leased, shall not be held liable under this section for any tax upon the proportion of said receipts received by it as rental for the use of said works," be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 23. That every railroad company, pipe line company, conduit company, steamboat company, canal company, slack water navigation company, transportation company, street passenger railway company, and every other company, joint stock association or limited partnership, now or hereafter incorporated or organized by or under any law of this Commonwealth, or now or hereafter organized or incorporated by any other State or by the United States or any foreign government, and doing business in this Commonwealth, and owning, operating, or leasing to or from another corporation, company, association, joint stock association or limited partnership, any railroad, pipe line, slack water navigation, street passenger railway, canal or other device for the transportation of freight or passengers or oil, and every telephone or telegraph company incorporated under the laws of this or any other State or of the United States and doing business in this Commonwealth, and every express company, incorporated or unincorporated, doing business in this Commonwealth, and every firm, co-partnership, or joint stock company or association doing express business in this Commonwealth, and every electric light company, and every artificial gas company, water company and water power company, and every palace car and sleeping car company, incorporated or unincorporated, doing business in this Commonwealth, shall pay to the State Treasurer a tax of eight mills upon the dollar upon the gross receipts of said corporation, company or association, limited partnership, firm or co-partnership, received from passenger and freight traffic transported wholly within this State, and from telegraph, telephone or express business done wholly within this State, or from business of electric light companies, or from business or artificial gas companies, and from the transportation of oil done wholly within the State; the said tax shall be paid annually in the month of January of each year for the last preceding calendar year; and for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of the same, it shall be the duty of the treasurer or other proper officer of the said company, firm, co-partnership, limited partnership, joint stock association or corporation, to transmit to the Auditor General a statement, under oath or affirmation, of the amount of gross receipts of the said companies, co-partnerships, corporations, joint stock associations or limited partnerships derived from all sources, and of gross receipts from business done wholly within the State, during the preceding calendar year, and if any such company, firm, co-partnership, joint stock association, or limited partnership or corporation, shall neglect or refuse for a period of thirty days after such tax becomes due to make said returns or to pay the same, the amount thereof, with an addition of ten per centum thereto, shall be collected for the use of the Commonwealth as other taxes are recoverable by law; Provided, That in any case where the works of one corporation, company, joint stock association or limited partnership are leased to and operated by another corporation, company, association or limited partnership, the taxes imposed by this section shall be apportioned between the said corporations, companies, associations or limited partnerships in accordance with the terms of their respective leases or agreements, but for the payment of the said taxes the Commonwealth shall first look to the corporation, company, association or limited partnership, operating the works, and upon payment by the said company, corporation, association or limited partnership of a tax upon the receipts as herein provided derived from the operation thereof, the corporation, company, joint stock association or limited partnership from which the said works are leased, shall not be held liable under this section for any tax upon the proportion of said receipts received by it as rental for the use of said works."

TAXES PROPOSED, BUT NOT RECOMMENDED.

Certain taxes are proposed which, in the opinion of your Committee, it is not wise to lay—at least at this time.

MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS—TAX ON CAPITAL STOCK.

The long settled policy of the Commonwealth has exempted manufacturing corporations from capital stock tax, Under this policy, combined with our natural advantages, manufacturing has grown until Pennsylvania has taken the lead of all the States in this regard. Compared with her principal rivals:

Pennsylvania had in 1909 $2,749,006,000 invested in manufacturing, and out of a total product valued at $2,626,742,000, 78.2 per cent., valued at $2,053,458,538, was from 27,563 establishments owned by corporations.

New York had $2,779,497,000 so invested, and out of a total product valued at $3,369,490,000, 62.6 per cent., valued at $2,108,026,670, was from 44,935 establishment owned by corporations.

Massachusetts had $1,279,687,000 so invested, and out of a total product valued at $1,490,529,000, 72.1 per cent., valued at $1,182,935,652 came from 11,684 factories owned by corporations.

The laws of neighboring Commonwealths have gradually been attracted to our policy. As a result, New Jersey exempts manufacturing corporations entirely, if fifty per cent. of their capital is invested in the State, and exempts, in any event, so much of the capital as is actually invested in the State. New York exempts the amount of the capital invested in the State, provided forty per cent. is so invested. Ohio levies a tax of only one-tenth of one per cent., and the tax in West Virginia is nominal. Delaware exempts manufacturing corporations, with the exception of a nominal license tax. In Maryland there are various local exemptions of a complicated character, the result of which is that in the principal places manufacturing companies do not pay this tax.

Manufacturing corporations very generally ascribe the pre-eminence of our Commonwealth in large part to our tax policy. It is, of course, impossible to accurately determine how much of our position is due to this factor, and how much to natural advantages. It is unquestionable, however, that the imposition of a tax would tend not to attract, if not to drive away, industries, and when neighboring States offer exemption our position on taxation might turn the scale in many instances with regard to new industries, if it did not drive away those already here. Even the imposition of a small tax, so small as to be very little burden, would deprive the Commonwealth of the advertisement given by complete exemption, especially among those who do not seek details. Those of our cities and towns which are bidding for these industries insist that the laying of even a small tax would create fear of future increase. "Pennsylvania does not tax manufacturers," they claim has been the advertisement which has attracted many, and people of other States seeking to develop their own cities are appealing to the lawmaking bodies to make their States likewise attractive.

The manufacturer is the pioneer of new communities in the older States. Farming and trade centers have long since been located by reason of the character of the soil or the existence of natural routes of travel. The growth of new places depends on the manufacturer. Each new industry adds to the community a number of substantial wage-earners, and to supply their necessities, merchants and other business men must be drawn in. The farmer likewise finds in the dependents of manufacturing industries his principal customers. The imposition of a tax sufficient to yield any substantial revenue would also be unfair to those struggling industries which have already located among us. The policy of the State has continued so long, (since 1885), and is so well known that it amounts to almost a contract with such corporations.

Your Committee, in its report of 1911, recommended the imposition of a tax upon the capital stock of manufacturing corporations of one mill, thinking that this gradual beginning would not be appreciably felt, and at that time it was considered that the Federal Tax would not be so burdensome that the imposition of a small State tax would be serious. The protest from all parts of the Commonwealth, and not alone from the corporations affected, were such that the Legislature did not adopt the recommendation, and the hearings and arguments before your Committee in the last two years, together with the general agitation affecting corporations and the vigirous efforts being made all over the Commonwealth to secure the location of manufacturers within their borders have convinced them that it would not be wise to lay such a tax at the present time.

Were a start to be made anew, however, your Committee feels that a tax could be borne by some manufacturing corporations. To exempt "infant industires" and small and struggling concerns, and corporations which make a small rate of profit in proportion to the capital involved, or to tax such corporations at a lower rate than other more prosperous and financially sound concerns, seems to your Committee a wise policy. A discussion of this principal is contained elsewhere in this report in discussing the mercantile license tax.

In view of the likelihood of securing the privilege of laying graded and progressive taxes in the near future, your Committee thinks that this matter of taxing manufacturing corporations might well be delayed until that time. The tax if laid can then be so adjusted that it will fall principally on the more prosperous concerns.

Laundry companies are manufacturers in effect and should be exempt. They are so classed by the Census Bureau and the New York tax laws. They re-make a useless article into one almost new, like those who work over scrap of various kinds; and their labor cost—sixty per cent. of all expenses —is much greater than most manufacturers.

The Act of May 12, 1911 (P. L., 287), amended the Act of 1901 regulating the affairs of cities of the second class (Pittsburgh and Scranton) so as to exempt machinery from the general provision authorizing the taxation of all property, real and personal. This is not fair to the manufacturing communities surrounding these two cities. All should be treated alike, and it would seem better that all should be exempt.

INHERITANCE TAXES.

The report of 1911 recommended a direct inheritance tax of one per cent. and presented a draft of an Act which combined such a tax with the existing collateral inheritance tax of five per cent. The Act also contained a provision for reciprocity between the States in matters of inheritance taxation, which is new to Pennsylvania, but is the law of New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont, West Virginia and Kansas, and is in line with the most modern thought,

Inheritance taxes may be laid on the ground that the decedent was domiciled in the State or on the ground that the actual situs of the property is in the State. As a result, certain property is often taxed in one State on one ground and in another State on the other. This results in double taxation, and while double taxation is not repugnant to any constitutional provision, it is in practice most unjust. It is perhaps not so unfair when its operation is so certain that allowance can be made for it, but it is certainly unfair when it depends upon the accidental combination of domicile in one place and situs in another. A recognition in Pennsylvania of the laying of inheritance taxes by reason of property being actually found in this Commonwealth is illustrated in the cases of Lewis's Estate, 203 Pa., 211 (criticised in Schoenberger's Estate, 221 Pa., 112), and Singer vs. Trust Co., 24 Superior Ct., 270. Accordingly, it was provided in the draft act that in assessing inheritance taxes here, credit should be given for taxes paid upon the same property in another State, in cases where the decedent was domiciled in this Commonwealth. In cases where the property is in this Commonwealth, and the decedent domiciled elsewhere, the tax is only imposed here to the extent of its excess over the tax imposed in that other State, provided a like exemption is made by the laws of that other State in favor of our citizens.

This law was not enacted, and because of the very important action of the Legislature in another respect, your Committee does not again urge its enactment at this time. The subject should be held over until the constitutional amendment with respect to graded and progressive taxes is adopted or defeated, so that any change which may be made in the law can be made to cover the whole field.

GRADED TAXES.

In investigating the subject of inheritance taxes your Committee found that the practice was everywhere growing of taxing such property by graded or progressive rates; that is to say, of advancing the rate as the value of the estate or bequest or other thing taxed advances. Of the same nature, and dependent upon the same principles, is the practice of entirely exempting small estates, or other units of value from such taxation. In considering other subjects of taxation, your Committee found it desirable that small holdings should be exempted; as, for example, in proposing to tax bank deposits on time, bearing interest, as to which objection was made that it discouraged small savings by those who were seeking to acquire a home.

Pennsylvania in 1897 attempted to tax direct inheritances in this way by exempting estates under $5,000. It was decided in Cope's Estate, 191 Pa., 1, that this violated the constitutional provision requiring uniformity in taxation. Accordingly, your Committee in 1911 recommended an amendment to the Constitution which would permit the laying of graded or progressive taxes in all fields of taxation, as well as in cases of inheritance. This resolution was adopted by the Legislature of 1911 (P. L., 1167), and is as follows:

A Joint Resolution, proposing an amendment to Section one of Article Nine of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, relating to taxation.

Section 1. Be it resolved, etc., That the following is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof.

Section 2. Amend Section 1 of Article 9 of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which reads as follows:

"All taxes shall be uniform, upon the same class of subjects, within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and shall be levied and collected under general laws; but the General Assembly may, by general laws, exempt from taxation public property used for public purposes, actual places of religious worship, places of burial not used or held for private or corporate profit, and institutions of purely public charity," so as to read as follows:

All taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and shall be levied and collected under general laws, and the subjects of taxation may be classified for the purpose of laying graded or progressive taxes, but the General Assembly may by general laws, exempt from taxationpublic property used for public purposes, actual places of religious worship, places of burial not used or held for private or corporate profit, and institutions of purely public charity.

An Act should be passed directing that the amendment be submitted to the people at the elections of November, 1913.

As this resolution will come before the present Legislature for action, and as your Committee earnestly urges its adoption, it will be desirable to state here some of the considerations in its favor.

The income taxes and inheritance taxes of England, and other countries of Europe, and of all of the provinces of Canada, are graduated in their rates. The first State of the Union to apply such a principle was Ohio (where, however, it was declared unconstitutional), and it has now spread, so that progressive inheritance taxes are in force in the following States and dependencies:

Arkansas,	New York,
California,	North Carolina,
Colorado,	Oklahoma,
Delaware,	Oregon,
Idaho,	Porto Rico,
Illinois,	South Dakota,
Kansas,	Tennessee,
Maine,	Texas,
Massachusetts,	Washington,
Minnesota,	West Virginia,
Nebraska,	Wisconsin.

Of these the State of Tennessee has such rates for direct heirs only, and the following States have such rates for collateral heirs only:

Arkansas,	Oklahoma,
Colorado,	Oregon,
Delaware,	South Carolina,
Nebraska,	Texas,
North Carolina.	Washington.

The principal argument in favor of a graded tax is that it causes the burden of the tax to fall upon those best able to bear it. It also puts the burden more heavily upon those who draw more heavily upon the benefits conferred by Government. It is acknowledged that the rich man calls more often upon the aid of the law in his protection, or in the assertion of his rights, than does the poor man in proportion to their respective wealth. The beneficial effect of such a tax upon the keeping down of swollen fortunes, both when applied as an income tax and as an inheritance tax, is obvious. In inheritance taxes, especially, graduation tends to reduce the accumulation of large fortunes by devolution at death upon those who have not earned them, and who, by reason of youth and inexperience, are often least able to wisely care for and expend them. It is, therefore, the opinion of the leading economists that this principle of graduation is more properly applicable to inheritance taxes than to any other branch of taxation. Mr. Edwin R. A. Seligman, Professor of Political Economy and Finance in Columbia University, a leading authority on taxation, and a member of the New York State Commission of 1906, fully discusses this question in his work on "Progressive Taxation," pages 213 and 215, with the conclusion, "That the theory of progression is more applicable to the Inheritance Tax than to any other part of the fiscal system; and that * * * some scale of progression is both desirable and practicable."

Mr. Max West, in his work on the Inheritance Tax, at pages 221 and following, points out that a progressive tax was recommended by John Stuart Mill; that there is great danger to business and society in the inheritance of fortunes by inexperienced young men; that there is no reason why the right of inheritance should be unlimited; that taxation during the lifetime of a man falls more heavily upon the poor than upon the rich, particularly by reason of the fact that during life the large fortune more easily escapes taxation than the small fortune, and the Inheritance Tax compensates in some measure for the inequalities thus occasioned. The most forceful argument is that "The sacrifice involved in paying a proportional tax is less for the wealthy than for the poor."

Since the report of your Committee in 1911, the States of Kansas, Maine and Oklahoma have entered the field of progressive taxation of inheritances, and Wisconsin of income, both individual and corporate. It is characteristic of Oklahoma—embracing each reform with excess of ardor—that her rates advance to the point where they are confiscatory of the whole estate when a value of one million dollars is reached. The validity of this has not yet been passed upon.

California, by an Act of 1911, has increased the rate of taxes to twenty-five per cent. where an estate of over $500,000 passes to remote relatives and strangers in blood.

The principal of graduation has been sustained by the United States Supreme Court as not being repugnant to the Fourteenth Amendment, in the case of Magoun vs. Trust and Savings Bank, 170 U. S., 283 (1898). The same result has been reached in many of the States which have provisions in their constitutions requiring uniformity of taxation. With constitutional authority thus granted to grade the tax, the rate may vary according to the nearness or remoteness of the relationship of the beneficiary and may increase for the whole estate as the whole value of the estate increases, or may increase only for the excess of the value of the estate over the value fixed for the next preceding class. The latter is the fairest method, but the former is not unusual and not repugnant to constitutional principles. The most highly developed instance of a progressive tax reached is contained in the Wisconsin Income Tax Law of 1911. This divides net incomes into classes of which the first is $1,000, taxed at one per cent., and which increase by steps of $1,000 in the value of the estate and one-quarter of one per cent. in the rate, until $12,000 of value and six per cent. of tax is reached, the increased tax being laid in each case only on the excess over the previous class.

Rather than disturb the system of Inheritance Taxation piecemeal, we think it would be wiser to await the adoption of this constitutional amendment—if it be adopted—before entering into such subjects as the grading of the tax according to the degree of relationship—which may be done now, as witness the exemption of direct inheritances; the adoption of reciprocal provisions as above outlined; the attempt to tax residents of a foreign country at a higher rate than our own citizens (which is valid in the absence of treaty restrictions); and the attempt to tax residents of other States at a higher rate than residents of this State (which is probably invalid under the provision of the Constitution of the United States giving to citizens of other States the same privileges and immunities as are given to citizens of our State); and such advanced attempts to tax personal property which has its situs in the State, as the law requiring a representative of the State to be present whenever a safe deposit vault within the State is opened after the death of the late owner.

EXEMPTION OF BEQUESTS TO CHARITY.

A reform, however, which should be immediately put in force and become a permanent policy of the State, is the exemption from the inheritance tax of bequests to our own charities. When with one hand we pay out such large amounts of State money to charities, why should we with the other hand snatch a small amount of tax from the gift by an individual? There is no reason, however, for extending this exemption for the benefit of charities abroad. As charities are almost invariably incorporated, and as corporations are not citizens within the meaning of the Constitution of the United States, and foreign corporations are not therefore entitled to the rights of domestic corporations, the discrimination would be valid. (Board of Education vs. Illinois, 203 U. S., 553.) The exemption would not offend our own Constitution if confined to "institutions of purely public charity." (Art. 9, Sec. 1.) A draft of an Act to accomplish this purpose will be found as follows:

(Mr. Alter does not concur in this recommendation.)

An Act to exempt from the payment of inheritance taxes bequests and devices to institutions of purely public charity.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter all bequests and devises to institutions of purely public charity shall be exempt from liability for inheritance taxes: Provided, That this shall not apply to institutions incorporated under the laws of any other State or country.

*The exemption in the States marked with an asterisk has been construed to apply to the estate as a whole rather than to individual shares.

a Connecticut—For non-residents, exemption varies according to portion within the State.

b Iowa taxes non-resident aliens 10-20%.

c Louisiana exempts property that bore its just portion of taxes during owner's life.

d North Carolina—Exempts husband or wife.

e Oklahoma—The tax increases progressively, so that a literal construction would result in confiscation of all in excess of certain amounts in large estates.

f Oregon—Exempts entire estate if less than $10,000; direct, $500 to $5,000 collateral.

INCREASE OF PRESENT TAXES.

In one direction an increase can easily be made in existing taxes, which can then be applied justly toward the meeting of an item of expenditure directly related thereto. This is the AUTOMOBILE LICENSE TAX.

The report of 1911 recommended the increase of the license taxes on automobiles from five, ten and fifteen dollars to twenty-five, fifty and seventy-five dollars respectively, but as the Legislature did not adopt this recommendation, presumably because coisidered excessive, your Committee now recommends a less increase.

Attention was then called to the fact that at the old rates a revenue of $391,010 was derived from these licenses alone, and that at the proposed new rate a revenue of $1,954,550 would be had, assuming that the same number of vehicles was registered. What this increase in number is likely to be may be judged from the fact that the number of vehicles registered, and the amount of license fees paid for the year 1912, is as follows:

Classification.	Number.	Rate.	Amount.
Vehicles less than 20 horse power	13,670	$5 00	$68,350
Vehicles, 20 horse power, but less than 50 horse power	43,571	10 00	435,710
Vehicles, 50 horse power or more	980	15 00	14,700
Total	58,221	.....	$518,760
In addition there was received:
Dealers' registrations	3,555	$5 00	$17,775
Motor cycle registrations	7,298	2 00	14,596
Chauffeurs' licenses	20,534	2 00	41,068
Special juvenile licenses	701	2 00	1,402
Transfer fees	2,681	1 00	2,681
Duplicate fees	1,420	1 00	1,420
Postage	.....	.....	21 19
Grand total	.....	.....	$597,723 19

The figures for 1911 are as follows:

Classification.	Number.	Rate.	Amount.
Vehicles less than 20 horse power	14,357	$5 00	$71,785 00
Vehicles, 20 horse power, but less than 50 horse power	28,210	10 00	282,100 00
Vehicles, 50 horse power or more	715	15 00	10,725 00
Total	43,282	.....	$364,610 00
In addition there was received:
Dealers' registrations	4,034	$5 00	$20,170 00
Motor cycle registrations	4,826	2 00	9,652 00
Chauffeurs' licenses	16,176	2 00	32,352 00
Special juvenile licenses	875	2 00	1,750 00
Transfer fees, etc.	.....	.....	989 50
Grand total	.....	.....	$429,523 50

The increase in revenue thus shown is gratifying. But with the demand for the improvement of highways, largely the result of the greatly increased use of automobiles, there is no reason why this source of income should not be drawn upon still more. The present law provides that the automobile license fees shall be used for the improvement of the roads, as do the laws of New Jersey, Massachusetts and Connecticut, all of which States prescribe rates in excess of our present maximums. This tax can be collected with absolute certainty. The automobile is a luxury which can easily bear the increased tax, and if the amount realized was expended in the improvement of the roads, the owners of the automobiles would be so benefited that they would doubtless cheerfully pay it. At the same time it would be a great relief to local communities which are put to additional expense in maintaining road surfaces injuriously affected by automobile traffic.

It is proposed to adopt a constitutional amendment giving the Commonwealth power to borrow money to improve the highways, and, in the opinion of your Committee, this is highly desirable. It has been urged, and we recognize that, except in extraordinary instances, current expenditures should be made out of current revenues. If the automobile license fees and receipts from other taxes increase the revenue enough for the improvement of the highways, it would not be necessary to make use of the constitutional amendment, if adopted, except to accomplish the improvements years before they could be had by the normal tax increase. The demand for highway betterment is too strong to await delay. The people need the roads, and it is but fair that the cost of construction, which will last for many years, should be distributed over such a period. If the State debt is created, however, the automobile license fees should provide a revenue for the interest and sinking fund of these highway bonds. The burden of these improvements should not be laid upon the taxpayers of the various localities. They have already done their part in the original laying out of the roads, and should not be called upon to meet the increased expenses of construction and maintenance made necessary, in a large part, by the tremendous growth in the use of these modern conveyances which heretofore have been looked upon as luxuries, but which are rapidly becoming necessities. The roads are highways, open for and used by all of the people of the Commonwealth, and they should be so considered and cared for. There is a country-wide movement for improvement of roads, and Congress is expected to appropriate many millions for this purpose to be divided among the States in proportion to the improvement done by the States, so that, as the share of this Commonwealth will depend upon our efforts to help ourselves, we should do our utmost to accomplish the greatest possible results. Accordingly, we recommend the increase in the automobile license fees as a part of the scheme of highway improvement.

In view of the refusal of the last Legislature to increase all licens fees, your Committee recommend an increase for business automobiles used primarily for conveyance of goods. The fee should be $25 for those having a capacity of five tons or less, and $50 for those having a greater capacity. Their weight and solid tires wear the roads more than any other vehicle and they should be classified by themselves. The Act to accomplish this will be found in this report.

The resolution of the Legislature of 1911 looking toward an amendment of the Constitution in reaspect to highway bonds is found at page 1162 of the Pamphlet Laws of that year, and is as follows:

A Joint Resolution proposing an amendment to Article 9, Section 4, of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, authorizing the State to issue bonds to the amount of fifty millions of dollars for the improvement of the highways of the Commonwealth.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:

That Section 4, of Article 9, which reads as follows:

"Section 4. No debt shall be created by or on behalf of the State, except to supply causal deficiencies of revenue, repel invasion, suppress insurrection, defend the State in war, or to pay existing debt; and the debt created to supply deficiency in revenue shall never exceed, in the aggregate at any one time, one million of dollars," be amended so as to read as follows:

Section 4. No debt shall be created by or on behalf of the State, except to supply casual deficiencies of revenue, repel invasion, suppress insurrection, defend the State in war, or to pay existing debt; and the debt created to supply deficiencies in revenue shall never exceed, in the aggregate at any one time, one million of dollars: Provided, however, That the General Assembly, irrespective of any debt, may authorize the State to issue bonds to the amount of fifty millions dollars for the purpose of improving and rebuilding the highways of the Commonwealth."

This is in effect the recommendation of your Committee in its previous report, as found at page 130, where a resolution was proposed to amend the Constitution, using the words "construct and improve its public highways" in place of the words "improving and rebuilding the highways of the Commonwealth," and making other changes in the arrangement of the section. The resolution as adopted also fixes a limit of $50,000,000 in the amount of such bonds, which was not part of the recommendation of your Committee.

While there is no reason apparent for the change in the form of the resolution, it fulfills the purpose of your Committee, and we earnestly urge that it be again adopted so that it may be submitted to the people. With this power in their hands, and provided with revenue to meet the obligations, the Legislature will have power to adopt either method as the public need may from time to time demand.

An Act to amend Section 2 of An Act entitled "An Act relating to motor-vehicles: regulating their speed upon the public streets and highways of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; providing for their registration, and the licensing of operators, by the State Highway Department; establishing the rights of motor-vehicles upon the public highways, with relation to other vehicles; regulating the service of process and of proceedings in actions for damages arising therefrom; prescribing the penalties for violations of the provisions of this act, and providing for the disposition of fines imposed thereunder," approved April 27, 1909.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That Section 2 of an Act entitled "An Act relating to motor-vehicles: regulating their speed upon the public streets and highways of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, providing for their registration, and the licensing of operators, by the State Highway Department; establishing the rights of motor-vehicles upon the public highways, with relation to other vehicles; regulating the service of process and of proceedings in actions for damages arising therefrom; prescribing the penalties for violations of the provisions of this Act, and providing for the disposition of fines imposed thereunder." Approved April 27, 1909, which reads as follows:

"Section 2. Application for the registration of motor-vehicles shall be made to the State Highway Department, or to a lawful agent appointed by the Highway Commissioner. The application shall contain the name, place or residence, and correct post-office address of the owner; with a brief description of the motor-vehicle, stating the name of the maker, the manufacturer's number, the character of the motor power, and the rated horse-power. The said application shall be made upon a blank provided for the purpose by the State Highway Department. It shall be signed by the owner, and be verified by oath or affirmation. Upon receipt of the application, and a fee of five dollars ($5.00) for motor-vehicles of less than twenty horse-power, ten dollars ($10.00) for motor-vehicles of twenty horse-power or more and less than fifty horse-power, and fifteen dollars $(15.00) for motor-vehicles of fifty horse-power or over, or in the case of a motor-cycle, two dollars ($2.00), the State Highway Department shall register the said motor-vehicle or motor-cycle in a book to be kept for that purpose; and shall issue to the owner a registration certificate, and two (2) number tags having thereon the registration number, the figures of which shall be not less than five (5) inches in height, the maker's number of the car, the abbreviated name of the State, and the year: Provided, however, That non-residents of this Commonwealth shall be exempt for a period of ten (10) days from the provisions of this section, if they have complied with the requirements of the State in which they reside, and display upon their motor-vehicle number-tags that indicate the State by which they are issued and their register number: Provided further, That this privilege shall not apply to residents of States which do not extend similar privileges to residents of this Commonwealth: Provided further, That motor-cycles under this Act, in lieu of the specific form of tag or tags as required herein, shall be required to have painted or attached on the rear mud-guard of such motor-cycle the registration number, in letters and figures of not less than three inches in height and not less than three-eighths of an inch in width, which shall be displayed in some conspicuous color or design other than that of which the said motor-cycle is painted; but no metal sign shall be required in order that the said letters and figures can be plainly readable. The manner or numbering said motor-cycles shall be regarded as a compliance with the terms of this Act, as though a tag or tags had actually been furnished and supplied by the said Highway Department. Any neglect or failure to carry out the terms or provisions of this section as to numbers shall be construed and regarded as a violation of this Act, with the same force and effect as though the provisions herein mentioned in regard to tag or tags had been violated.

"Applicants for registration or license who reside outside of this State shall, in addition to the above requirements, designate in their application a resident of this State as their authorized agent upon whom process may be served," be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 2. Application for the registration of motor-vehicles shall be made to the State Highway Department, or to a lawful agent appointed by the Highway Commissioner. The application shall contain the name, place of residence, and correct post-office address of the owner; with a brief description of the motor-vehicle, stating the name of the maker, the manufacturer's number, the character of the motive power, and the rated horse-power, and whether the vehicle is adapted to be used primarily for the conveyance of goods. The said application shall be made upon a blank provided for the purpose by the State Highway Department. It shall be signed by the owner, and be verified by oath or affirmation. Upon receipt of the application, and a fee of five dollars ($5.00) for motor-vehicles of less than twenty horse-power, ten dollars ($10.00) for motor-vehicles of twenty horse-power or more and less than fifty horse-power, and fifteen dollars ($15.00) for motor-vehicles of fifty horse-power or over, or in the case of a motor-cycle, two dollars ($2.00), the State Highway Department shall register the said motor-vehicle or motor-cycle in a book to be kept for that purpose and shall issue to the owner a registration certificate, and two (2) number tags having thereon the registration number, the figures of which shall be not less than five (5) inches in height, the maker's number of the car, the abbreviated name of the State, and year: Provided, however, That non-residents of this Commonwealth shall be exempt for a period of ten (10) days from the provisions of this section, if they have complied with the requirements of the tSate in which they reside, and display upon their motor-vehicle number-tags that indicate the State by which they are issued and their registry number: Provided further, that this privilege shall not apply to residents of States which do not extend similar privileges to residents of this Commonwealth: Provided further, That motor-cycles under this Act, in lieu of the specific form of tag or tags as required herein, shall be required to have painted or attached on the rear mud-guard of such motor-cycles the registration number, in letters and figures of not less than three inches in height and not less than three-eighths of an inch in width, which shall be displayed in some conspicuous color or design other than that of which the said motor-cycle is painted; but no metal sign shall be required in order that the said letters and figures can be plainly readable. The manner of numbering said motor-cycles snall be regarded as a compliance with the terms of this Act, as though a tag or tags had actually been furnished and supplied by the State Highway Department. Any neglect or failure to carry out the terms or provisions of this section as to numbers shall be construed and regarded as a violation of this Act, with the same force and effect as though the provisions herein mentioned in regard to tag or tags had been violated.

Applicants for registration or license who reside outside of this State shall, in addition to the above requirements, designate in their application a resident of this State as their authorized agent upon whom process may be served.

Provided further, That in case of motor-vehicles adapted to be used primarily for the conveyance of goods, the registration certificate shall state that it is issued for such a vehicle, and the number tags issued for and to be borne by such vehicle shall have thereon the word "truck;" and the fee to be paid on application for registration of such vehicles shall be twenty-five dollars ($25.00) for vehicles having a carrying capacity of (5) tons or less, and fifty dollars ($50.00) for all others.

(D) COLLECTION OF REVENUE.

The modern tendency is to centralize, so far as possible, both the assessment and collection of revenue, even going so far as to require the principal revenue to be collected by the State and then to be returned, in whole or in part, to the localities which need it. The advantage is in the efficiency which comes from the experience of the permanent officials of a State Department, the superior quality of the men thus secured to supervise, and above all the freedom from local influence upon assessors who depend for their office upon the neighbors whom they have to assess. Various problems are solved in this way.

One of the most serious is the question as to how far the property and franchises of public service corporations should be taxed in the localities where they are situated. California has had this problem in a very serious form. The railroads have by far the greatest amount of trackage in counties with few inhabitants. In the mountains, where there is little population, are situated enormous water power plants, which send electricity to the towns hundreds of miles away. These tracks and plants should be taxed in proportion to their real value, but the benefit should go to the population in the large centres which they really serve. In 1911, therefore, a State system of taxing public utilities was adopted and local taxation entirely lifted.

The same problem exists in Pennsylvania, in a less aggravated form. The right of way, depots, wires etc., of railroads, telegraph companies, and the like, so far as they are an integral part of the plant, and necessary for the operation of the franchise, are exempted from local taxes. This is not by reason of any express provision, but by virtue of the settled construction of the law with respect to capital stock tax and gross receipts tax, through which these assets are in fact reached, though the real estate of private corporations paying capital stock tax is not so exempted. In Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh however, by various special acts, certain real estate has been subjected to such taxation. The right of way of railroads and similar property extending through many communities and valuable only as a whole could not properly, under any system, be subject to the varying estimates in piecemeal of local bodies. The same applies to telegraph lines, etc.

The argument in favor of the present exemptions is that a railroad depot, for example, has practically no value, apart from the value of land, except in connection with the tracks. Indeed, it may be a real burden to the land. It is, therefore, difficult to value a depot structure as a piece of local real estate. But it partakes of the benefits of the local government, and the taxing authorities look upon it with the desire to make it share the expense of local government. A system by which the special exemptions for Philadelphia and Pittsburgh could be done away, and such property all over the Commonwealth taxed by a central authority as a whole, and the proceeds of the tax then returned to the locality would be the proper solution. The return to the locality would not be proportioned to the part of the property there situated, but to the necessities of the community. This could be done by taking the ratio of assessed value in each county and returning to the county its proper proportions as thus determined, on the principle that the necessities for revenue will probably vary in proportion to the value of property generally in the county. This would be an incentive to the local authorities to place property in their districts at full value, because the sum received from the State would increase with the increase in that value. It is the method now used by New Jersey and West Virginia, and is earnestly and ably advocated by the State Grange.

When such a system is put into operation the problem at once arises—on what basis should the vast and varied property of a railroad system be valued as a whole? Shall it be on the basis of original cost, or of the present cost of duplication, or on a fair inventory value, made up as a compromise between all the factors obtainable? For railroad properties are not bought and sold, so as to have a market value like ordinary real estate. Attempts at a "physical valuation" of railroads by other States have consumed a long period of time and large sums of money. In the end the valuation fixed was only an estimate, affected by the prepossessions and abilities of the tax commissioners as well as their fairness.

As a substitute for this unsatisfactory method a recognized authority, Mr. Allen Ripley Foote, has proposed a tax on gross receipts at a flat rate with a differential varying according to the success of operation as shown by the ratio of gross receipts to operating expenses. This would have the advantage of doing away with the uncertainties and inequalities of property valuation. The tax would be easy to ascertain from the company's records, and would cost no time or money to collect. Authority should be given to adopt as the basis of compensation the figures reported to and approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission in determining what part of the revenue of an inter-State system shall be ascribed to business done within the State. It would not conflict with constitutional provisions because it is only an extension of our present system of exempting such property from local taxation. Other States meet with difficulties from the requirement that all property of all classes shall be taxed at a uniform ad valorem rate, while we are able to tax different classes in different ways according to the needs and difficulties of the special case.

A centralized system, however, except as the personal property tax, and the taxing of premiums of foreign fire insurance companies, collected locally and paid into the State Treasury, is again returned to the counties, is so at variance with the long settled practice of the Commonwealth and with a complicated system of local assessors and collectors, and various local taxes, that it is not only a task of great difficulty to construct and substitute it at once, but it would be difficult to so put it into practical operation. The report of your Committee for 1911 suggested that a beginning might be made in the City of Philadelphia where the germ of such a system already existed by the reason of an appointed board of revision of taxes, which in turn appointed the assessors, and thus constituted a body of officials superior on the whole in efficiency to such officers throughout the State elected only for short terms. The same system was put in operation in Pittsburgh in 1905. No recommendation, however, was made, but an Act was reported to accomplish the purpose, but it was not adopted. On further reflection, your Committee is so strongly of opinion that the proper step forward lies in this direction, and that a beginning should be made, not by way of experiment, but as an illustration, and for the accumulation of experience, that they do now strongly recommended such a system to be applied to some one or more counties, and will, if the Legislature desires, draft an Act to this end.

Upon the experience accumulated by this system methods could be developed which would gradually extend over the entire Commonwealth. At the same time, the Department of the Auditor General, if adequately equipped to handle this system, and to perform its other work as a central taxing authority, which is now required by law, would soon be in a position to assume the burden of a much greater State wide taxation, and eventually to hand over the work to a permanent State Tax Commission.

County officials and the Pennsylvania State Grange have urged that the real estate of railroads is part of the assets of the companies upon which capital stock tax is assessed, and which earn the gross receipts out of which another tax is collected. Therefore, it is said, part of these taxes should be returned to the counties. The difficulty in determining what part of these taxes comes from real estate grows out of the part played by many other factors than the value of assets in both these taxes, such an indebtedness, market value of stock, cost of operation and the like. A more practical way would be to return to the counties part of the improved tax on corporate loans, elsewhere proposed, which will come largely from the railroads.

PERMANENT STATE TAX COMMISSIONS.

The number of these commissions and their varying powers over local assessments and assessors appear by the following compilation:

The State tax commissions, or commissioners, assess, in the first instance, some public utilities or other classes of property in Connecticut, Indiana, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New York, Oregon, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

They equalize or review, or may, on appeal, equalize or review local assessments in Alabama, Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

They have power to order or make reassessments when necessary in Alabama, Minnesota, New Jersey, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

They have power to examine books of firms and corporations, or to require them to report information relating to their financial affairs in Alabama, Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, North Carolina, Oregon, Texas, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

They have general supervision over the assessment and taxation of property in the State, in Alabama, Kansas, Minnesota, North Carolina, Oregon, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

They confer with, aid or direct local assessors in Alabama, Indiana, Kansas, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

They visit the several towns or counties of the State to observe the manner in which the tax laws are administered, in Alabama, Connecticut, Indiana, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Texas, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

They enforce laws and penalties relating to assessments and taxation in Alabama, Indiana, Kansas, Massachusetts, Minnesota, North Carolina, Oregon, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming.

They have power to summon or subpoena witnesses to testify before them or to administer oathes in Alabama, Connecticut, Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Texas, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

They prescribe books, blanks or forms for the use of taxing officers in Alabama, Connecticut, Indiana, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Oregon, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

They have power to assess or order assessed property that has escaped assessment in previous years, in Michigan, North Carolina, West Virginia and Wyoming.

They devise a uniform system of keeping accounts for towns, cities and counties in Kansas, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

Colorado and North Dakota also have Tax Commissions recently organized.

It will be seen that the powers refer not merely to the equalization of property assessment so necessary where there is a constitutional imposition of the uniform property tax lest one county escape its share of the common burden by underassessment; but also in many cases quite a general supervision and power of direction over methods, individual evasions, appeals and the like. In Kansas they may even remove the local assessors. The Tax Commission of this State and those of Minnesota and Wisconsin are esteemed by the authorities to be the best organized of any.

AUDITOR GENERAL.

Attention was called in the previous report to the fact that the personnel of the Auditor General's Office is insufficient to do the work now required of him by law. Only one corporation tax clerk, with the assistance of the chief clerk and clerical assistants, is provided for the whole matter of assessment of corporation taxes, which, for the year ending November 30, 1911, amounted to $16,650,753.42.

In such a system, the bulk of the work done is that in the office, making up statements from the returns furnished by corporations. The investigation of the truth of the facts so stated outside of the office is a physical impossibility, and tax dodging is not insurmountably difficult to corporation officials with sufficiently small consciences. This statement is not intended as a reflection upon the corporations of Pennsylvania as a whole, but there has been sufficient of evasion and attempted evasion in justify the criticism.

By an existing law, (Act of 1905, P. L. 186), the Auditor General is charged with extensive powers in the supervision of the collection of personal property tax by local assessors and county commissioners, and the investigation of facts connected herewith. Without clerks to do the work, however, it cannot be done, and for lack of appropriation to pay their salaries there are no clerks. The work, therefore, has not been done, and, though the law has been on the Statute Book for so many years, and the lack of funds has been called specifically to the attention of the Legislature—it was so called in the report of your Committee for 1911—no appropriation has yet been made.

Your Committee recommended an Act providing for five additional clerks in the office of the Auditor General. The Legislature passed an Act reorganizing and largely adding to the Auditor General's force. It went beyond your Committee's recommendation, in that it provided for traveling auditors to investigate the property of corporations upon the ground with power to administer oaths. The Governor vetoed the Act because he was "not convinced that the increases authorized under the provisions of this bill are justified."

Your Committee renews its recommendations that there should be sufficient addition of efficient clerks to act under the direction of the Corporation Clerk in assessing of corporation taxes. The compensation of the Corporation Clerk, (now $3,000 and inadequate), and the assistant clerks should be proportionate to the importance of the positions and the services required.

Another subject to be committed to the Department so organized would be the collection and distribution of the tax on anthracite coal, elsewhere recommended herein.

The Legislature of 1911 enacted in substance certain of the acts recommended by your Committee with respect to the collection of revenue as above pointed out.

But other statutes which your Committee thought of equal importance were not put in force. They, therefore, repeat them here, with notes explaining the purpose in view, and earnestly recommend the enactment of the same into law.

Your Committee in its report of 1911, at page 202, in commenting upon the lack of facilities in the Auditor General's office to make investigations in the field of the value of corporate assets, and the consequent lack of means of checking the accuracy of the reports of corporations, called attention particularly to a case of abuse with regard to the building of The Girard Trust Company of Philadelphia. This cost $1,500,000, which was paid out of surplus and charged off the books entirely, and was not reported to the Auditor General as an asset, and, accordingly, was not included in estimating the tax. In consequence of the public attention thus called, a capital stock tax was assessed against The Girard Trust Company for the year 1911 in which the value of this building was included, and upon appeal to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County, the assessment was sustained, resulting in the gain of $9,706.56 to the Commonwealth. Other like cases probably exist.

PERSONAL PROPERTY TAX.

There was presented to your Committee a petition signed by many citizens, objecting to the present four mills tax upon mortgages and moneyed investments. It repeats the familiar strictures upon the evasion of the personal property tax which are contained in the report of every tax commission, to which rule your Committee, in its report of 1911, was not an exception. The attack is made, however, upon that part of the tax as to the collection of which the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania has been a conspicuous success rather than a failure, to wit, the tax on mortgages. It is quite true, as elsewhere pointed out, that other moneyed investments do escape taxation. But mortgages have to be recorded and are reported to the assessors by the Recorder of Deeds. The proposed reform is the introduction of a recording tax; that is to say, a tax laid upon the mortgage once and for all when it is recorded, to be collected by the Recorder of Deeds. This system is in force in the States of Michigan, Minnesota and New York, among others. It has the great advantage of simplicity and certainty. It has a disadvantage, however, that while mortgage loans are always made for a limited period of years, they often run on for many years before they are collected, without the execution or recording of extension agreements. In practice, therefore, the collection of the tax would be much more unequal than under the present system. The same tax would be collected on a mortgage which had an actual life of three years as upon one which was not satisfied for ten or more. A readjustment of the whole theory of the tax on mortgages would be a hardship upon existing loans of this character, and your Committee sees no good reason for changing it at this time.

So far, however, as Pennsylvania clings to the personal property tax in vogue in other States by attempting to tax other moneyed investments, such as bank deposits and money loaned on general security and not evidenced by anything of record, she undoubtedly suffers the same failure as do other States, as the bulk of these is not taxed. The amount of such deposits is about $7,500,000.

The reason for this failure is that the deposits are not returned by the owner, and the banks are not compelled to make any return. They could, of course, be required to make a return, as the corporations do for the purpose of loan tax, and these returns could be used to check the returns of the individuals, or, much more simply, could be used as the basis of assessing a tax which the bank could deduct from the interest paid the depositor, as is done with corporate loans. This was the system provided by the Act of April 30, 1864, (P. L. 218), which first put in force the present method, and applied, by its terms, to interest paid to depositors, as well as bondholders. Several objections are made to this, however. What is really the most weighty objection is that it would be effective and would result in the collection of the tax. This would be a hardship upon the depositor who would be required to pay a four-mills rate on an investment bringing him only from two to three per cent., or, in the case of the savings institutions, a little more. The flat rate of four mills for all interest-bearing investments is really unjust as applied to those who have a low interest rate, and actually results in a lack of uniformity of taxation, which has never been challenged in the courts. If this tax was really collected and the hardship felt, doubtless the question would have been raised. While we do not wish to be taken as assenting to any evasion of taxes, it does seem to your Committee that the present tax in theory laid on the interest-bearing bank deposits is such a hardship that any present change toward more efficient collection is inadvisable. When we have the power to lay graded taxes, so that the small deposit can be exempted entirely and smiliar adjustments made, it will be proper to resort more vigorously to this subject for revenue.

Another reason for not prosecuting this inquisition too closely is, that it is extremely doubtful whether national banks and postal savings banks could be compelled to make report. It may be done with the aid of an Act of Congress, as is now the case in regard to the capital stock of national banks. Until such an Act of Congress is put in force the tax would drive deposits away from State banks into the national banks.

CORPORATE LOAN TAX.

Another class of moneyed investment is also taxed with fair success. These are the loans of corporations held by residents of the State. The treasurer of the corporation is made the agent of the State in assessing and collecting the tax, and it is not returned by the holder to the local assessors. The abuse arises, however, out of the inability to tax such loans when held by non-residents. The Supreme Court of the United States has held that where the tax is laid upon the creditor who holds the security, it cannot be laid upon a non-resident, because he is not within the jurisdiction of the State, and the truasurer of the corporation cannot lawfully deduct the tax from the interest due. In the case of non-registered bonds, the treasurer of the corporation can only form an approximation of those which are held by non-residents. In returning to the Auditor General the tax upon those which are held by residents, it is safe to say that the officials of the corporation err, if at all, upon the safe side. As a result, many bonds which should properly be taxable escape.

Another class which is not taxable consists of the bonds of domestic corporations held by other domestic corporations which pay a capital stock tax. The difficulty of ascertaining what proportion of bonds is so held is the same as in the case of foreign-held bonds, and the same under appraisement of the tax doubtless exists.

The largest class which it is intended to tax, but which escapes taxation, is the bonds of foreign corporations held by residents of Pennsylvania. The individuals are required to return these to the local assessors, but there is no means of checking the accuracy of the return. It is true that foreign corporations which do business in Pennsylvania so as to be actually within our reach can be compelled, like domestic corporations, to collect the tax from residents of Pennsylvania if the corporation actually pays the tax in Pennsylvania (New York, Lake Erie, etc., R. R. Co. vs. Pennsylvania, 153 U. S., 628). Attempt is made to enforce such a collection, but it seems to your Committee that it is awkward and an unfair discrimination to collect a tax from those corporations only which happen to have their fiscal agent in Pennsylvania. Beyond the present method with regard to these corporations your Committee has nothing to suggest, by reason of the inability to bring them further within our reach than is already done. In fact, for the sake of equality, it would be better to drop the whole practice. It produces confusion between the duty of the corporation to return the bonds for tax to the State authorities and the duty of the individual to return them to the local assessors. The individual cannot, in many cases, know whether the corporation is returning or not, and doubtless many individuals who have an easy conscience avail themselves of the difficulty without making too close inquiries to avoid returning the bonds for taxation themselves, just as they do in the case of bonds of foreign corporations which are issued tax free, as elsewhere noted.

It is estimated by the Auditor General that, owing to these exemptions, intended and otherwise, but ten per cent. of the loans of domestic corporations are taxed. Of those exempt, forty-five per cent, are obligations held by trust companies, national banks, State banks that do not pay the four mills tax on or before March 1st, corporations liable to capital stock tax, corporations exempt by law from the payment of the four mills tax, to wit: Building and loan associations, savings fund institutions under the Act of 1909, benevolent and similar societies under the Act of 1911, purely charitable institutions, religious institutions and loans upon which no interest has been paid during the year. All of these, so far as issued by corporations, would then be taxed. At the same time the change advised in the taxing of loans held by savings funds would still be necessary to reach money loaned to individuals. The Auditor General also estimates that twenty per cent. escape taxation because held by non-residents, and twenty-five to thirty per cent. because the treasurers of corporations report that they are unable to locate the holders. As the tax for 1911 on the loans of corporations actually collected was $2,079,523.93, an enormous increase may be achieved in this way.

As to bonds issued by domestic corporations, a method exists for bringing within our reach the bonds of such corporations held by non-residents, as well as the bonds held by residents, which, in practice, are not actually taxed. This is by placing the tax frankly upon the debtor corporation. Strive as we may to prevent by statute the shifting of tax on money at interest from the creditor to the debtor, the fact remains that the debtor pays it; the creditor simply adds the tax to the rate of interest, and will not lend his money unless he gets such rate. If he does not get it, he will invest his money elsewhere where it will not be so taxed. The existence in our large cities of the rate of 5.4 per cent. illustrates this. So, with our corporations the very wide existence of the practice by which the corporation agrees to pay the tax and promises a rate of interest which it pays without deduction to resident and non-resident alike, indicates that the tax really falls upon the corporation borrowing. In fact, in practice the rate of interest actually paid is reduced by the amount of the tax upon the belief that the corporation has to pay the tax, and then when it comes to pay it, a more liberal allowance is made for bonds held by non-residents than the facts justify. The result is an unintended gain to the corporations.

Why not, therefore, in the case of corporate loans, place the tax in theory where it falls in practice; that is, upon the corporation? Domestic corporations would then have to return for taxation all their loans. The amount realized would be greatly increased, and if the Auditor General was equipped with a sufficient force, he could easily check the amount returned by an inspection of the books of the corporation. No reasonable complaint of this tax can be made. Of the tax on loans collected in 1910, $2,238,845.72, the steam railroads paid $1,035,689.69, and, in view of the small amount of taxes paid by these railroads in Pennsylvania, as compared with the tax payments to other States, there would seem to be at least no ground of complaint from them, and no reason has been given to your Committee why such a tax would be a harmful burden to other corporations. An Act to accomplish this end is submitted herewith.

If this change is not made at least the present system should be strengthened by requiring the treasurers of corporations to report in greater detail their efforts to locate the residences of bondholders. An Act tending to that end is recommended, which will be found in this report.

PROCEDURE OF COLLECTION.

Probably the greatest abuse which now exists is the loose method of appeal to the Dauphin County Court from the settlement of amounts for taxes by the Auditor General and State Treasurer. The proper practice should undoubtedly be that the court may reconsider the action of the Auditor General in order that a judicial opinion may be had on questions of law and fact. For that reason there should be a real presentation to the Auditor General of the details of all the facts relied upon in each case, and the appeal should state specifically the matters appealed from. But the present practice is that reports are made to the Auditor General in the most general way, stating conclusions and not details, and that the appeal from his settlement is taken generally without assigning reasons. On the hearing in the court, the matter is gone into as if it were an original proceeding, without any reference to what has taken place before the Auditor General. In most cases nothing whatever has taken place before the Auditor General. For lack of a record of this kind, and particularly for lack of a record of the details upon which each corporation makes its return, and the failure to present those details to the Auditor General, many instances of tax evasion occur. One of the most frequent, undoubtedly, is the case of a corporation holding the stock of another corporation. The holding company claims exemption from capital stock taxed upon so much of its capital stock as is invested in the stock of another corporation, on the ground that that corporation is liable to capital stock tax, and exemption is allowed. The subsidiary company then claims exemption on the ground that its stock is all held by another company, and enters into the value of the capital stock of that company, and, therefore has already been taxed, and exemption is again allowed. For lack of a record of these facts there are no means of comparing the assessments of the two companies. Indeed, there is not anything in the Auditor General's office to show the names of the two companies, so that attention is not called to the relation of the two. If the Act previously recommended and printed herein were enacted, the details would have to be given which would put in the hands of the Auditor General the means of thwarting this evasion.

That any corporation should object to giving these details to the taxing officers, or to stating the grounds of their appeal, seems incredible. And yet at the appearance of these acts before the Legislature in 1911, corporations all over the State became aroused and decended upon Harrisburg with protests. It is still more incredible, though true, that the Legislature of 1911 gave heed to these protests, and failed to pass this legislation, which would have put many hundreds of thousands of dollars in the State Treasury and have done away with a most shameful evasion of taxes.

Your Committee recommends the strict enforcement of our tax laws, and officials should see to it that commissions, interest and other proper charges are collected unless some overwhelming reason to the contrary appears. It frequently happens that corporations have the use of their money during years of delay on appeal, and yet no interest is collected from them. The laws are of little use unless enforced, and no amount of good legislation can provide revenue if there is improper laxity in the executive offices.

An Act to provide revenue by taxation.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That all obligations for money borrowed, issued by any corporation of this Commonwealth, are hereby declared to be a separate class of property for purposes of taxation, and an annual tax of four mills upon each dollar of par value of such obligations is hereby laid, to be paid by the corporation. It shall be the duty of the treasurer of every such corporation, during the month of January of each year, to assess the said tax upon the par value of all such obligations for the previous calendar year, and to report the same to the Auditor General, and it shall be the duty of the Auditor General and the State Treasurer to settle accounts for the said tax as other accounts for State taxes are now settled. Said report shall be under oath, and for every failure to make report or to make payment of the said tax within sixty days after notice of the settlement of an account for the same, a penalty of ten per centum shall be added to the said tax. The Treasurer shall be entitled to a compensation of one per cent. of the amount paid.

Section 2. The tax laid by this Act is upon the debtor and not upon the holder of the obligation; but the said obligations in the hands of the holder shall be exempt from all other taxation now provided by law.

Section 3. The word "corporation" as used in this Act shall include all corporations, joint stock companies, partnerships, limited and partnership associations, organized under the laws of this Commonwealth, for profit and not for profit, and for whatever purpose organized.

Section 4. If any treasurer of a corporation shall fail to make the report to the Auditor General required by this Act he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or imprisonment not exceeding six months, or either, or both, at the discretion of the court.

NOTE.

This method of laying the tax has a precedent in the fourth section of the Act of March 21, 1873, P. L. 46, which, however, was repealed by the Act of April 24, 1874, P. L. 72.

The first instance of the taxation of corporation loans in a different way from other loans, was the Act of April 30, 1864, P. L. 218, later superseded by the Act of May 1, 1868, P. L. 108. Under these two acts the decision above referred to was rendered by the Supreme Court of the United States, declaring that bonds held by non-residents were not taxable (State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall., 300).

After having been wholly abolished by the above mentioned Act of 1874, the tax was re-established by the Acts of June 7, 1879, P. L., 120, and June 10, 1881, P. L., 99. Both of these were declared unconstitutional on the ground that they provided no machinery to assess the tax. Thereupon, the Act of June 30, 1885, P. L. 193, was enacted, under which Act and its amendments the tax is now collected. Under all these Acts the corporation was but the agent for collection and deducted the tax from the interest as paid to the bondholder.

Under the present law, of course, as in the proposed new law, the obligations are free from further tax in the hands of the holder.

An Act regulating reports for the purposes of Taxation by Corporations.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter it shall be the duty of each treasurer of any corporation required by law to make a return for tax on loans to the Auditor General of this Commonwealth, to report on oath specifically and in detail the facts showing the kind and degree of his efforts to ascertain the residence of the holders of the scrip, bonds, certificates or other evidences of indebtedness issued by said corporation in order that it may affirmatively appear in his return that he has used the utmost diligence to ascertain said residence, and that the manner in which he has discharged the duty imposed by law to ascertain the amount of the indebtedness of such corporation owned by residents of this Commonwealth shall affirmatively appear in his return.

Section 2. No report of any such corporation not containing such information as is herein provided shall be received or filed by the Auditor General.

An Act regulating appeals from tax settlements of the fiscal officers of the Commonwealth.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., In every appeal from a tax settlement of the fiscal officers of the Commonwealth an affidavit of the parties appellant, or some one of them, or one of their chief officers or of their agent or attorney, shall be filed that said appeal is not taken for the purpose of delay, but because appellants believe they have suffered injustice by the settlement from which they appeal. Said affidavit may be made before anyone authorized to administer oaths.

Section 2. On any appeal from a tax settlement of the fiscal officers of the Commonwealth no matter shall be subject to review or correction that was not brought to the attention of said officers in the reports or affidavits relating thereto, filed with said fiscal officers by said parties appellant.

An Act regulating reports for the purposes of taxation by corporations, joint stock associations and limited partnerships, any part of the capital stock or indebtedness of which is not taxable under the laws of this Commonwealth.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter it shall be the duty of the President, Chairman or Treasurer of any corporation, joint stock association or limited partnership required by law to make a report in writing to the Auditor General, and any part of the capital stock or indebtedness of which is not taxable under the laws of this Commonwealth, to add to said reports statements, under oath, setting forth in full the data on which exemptions from taxation under the laws of this Commonwealth are claimed, and otherwise to state specifically, under oath, all information necessary to determine the amount of exemption to which such corporation, joint stock association and limited partnership is entitled, and, in the case of companies operating partly in other States, and taxed on a mileage basis, to so state specifically the total mileage of said companies, as well as the mileage wholly within Pennsylvania, in order that the tax may be prorated according to such mileage.

Section 2. No report of any such corporation, joint stock association or limited partnership not containing such information as is herein provided shall be received or filed by the Auditor General.

An Act to provide for the assessment and collection of taxes on personal property.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That all taxes on personal property for the year 1911 and every year thereafter may be recovered by the Commonwealth by an action of assumpsit in any Court having jurisdiction, in addition to any other manner provided by law.

Section 2. Such actions shall be conducted under the direction of the Auditor General, and for that purpose he may employ one or more counsel at a reasonable compensation to be fixed by him.

Section 3. In all cases where no assessment for personal property tax shall have been made against a person or persons, corporation, limited partnerships or joint stock association, liable therefor for any year, and in all cases where any false return or returns of such taxes shall have been made by any person or persons, corporation, limited partnership or joint stock association liable therefor, and no revision of such return shall have been made by any officer charged by law with such revision, the Auditor General may at any time within twenty-one years thereafter, make a return or revised and corrected estimated return thereof and proceed to the collection of the taxes as required by law.

NOTE.

This is designated to meet such glaring cases as those of which one came to light in the case of Schmuck vs. Hartman, 222 Pa., 190. In that case a taxable for the years from 1876 to 1884 made no return of personal property for taxation and from 1885 to 1907 returned amounts increasing from $4080 to $6000. At his death, by reason of the information disclosed by the inventory of his estate, the County Commissioners assessed taxes against him upon money at interest on mortgage in the State of Ohio, increasing from $30,000 in 1876 to $727,020 in 1907. The Court held that there was no authority of law to make an assessment for personal property tax in any year except that in which the liability arose, and that as liability to pay taxes does not arise from a contractual obligation there could be no action at law for them unless specially allowed. This reaffirmed the decision in Williamson's Estate, 153 Pa., 508, where a taxable made no return and was assessed a tax and penalty upon $67,500. The inventory of his estate at his death showed $2,500,000.

Obeying the principal of law that there should be an end to litigation, however, it is provided that where the taxing officers do make a revision of the return—presumably after investigation—the matter shall not be again reopened. The remedy in such cases lies only with the fidelity of the taxing officers.

ESCHEATS.

The report of 1911, under this heading, called attention to the large amount of money and other property which must remain the custody of banks and trust companies, saving institutions and safe deposit companies, which has been unclaimed by the rightful owners owing to death and disappearance, and the lack of knowledge on the part of those settling the estate of the existence of this property. A resume of existing laws on this subject and an explanation of their inadequacy by reason of the lack of penal provisions will be found in the notes to a proposed new law.

Very little money is paid into the State Treasury by savings institutions under this head. In the year 1911, $1,926.23 were so paid; in the year 1910, $2,415.85, and in the year 1909, $1,704.12. This was paid by savings institutions under the Act of April 17, 1872, with regard to unclaimed deposits. There must be very much more than this in these institutions, and in banks generally. There must also be a large amount of securities long unclaimed in safe deposit vaults.

The Act has been carefully drawn, and we feel that its provisions will get revenue for the Comonwealth and will also do away with the injustice of having this unclaimed property fall into the ownership of the institutions which have no claim whatever upon them. If provided with proper machinery by means of compulsory reports from the institutions, and an adequate staff of investigators, the Auditor General could, in connection with the general work of the office, do all that is necessary in discovering and recovering these moneys and securities.

The Legislature by the Act of May 11, 1911, P. L. 281, altered the law of escheats by changing the commission of the escheator from five to fifteen per cent., and reducing the reward of the informant from one-third to one-quarter. The Legislature also, by the same act, made the reward of the informant payable not merely in cases where a person was shown to have died without kindred, but also to cases where escheat occurred "by reason of any other fact." Prior to this act no reward to an informant was payable unless a specific person was shown to have died intestate, without heirs or known kindred. In the other cases of escheat, as where property was shown by the account of a trustee to be without any known owner for seven years, and particularly in the case just referred to where property has been over looked, and it should be paid into the State Treasury, merely by reason of the failure of the true owner to claim it, there was no provision for a reward. The reason for this is the great opportunity for cullusion which may lead the officers of institutions to put outsiders in the way of getting information as to property which should escheat, and to divide the reward with them.

Under the law as it now stands—although no absolute proof of specific cases have been brought to the attention of your Committee—the forty per cent. of the sum escheated which goes to the escheator and the informant together, is a great temptation to disclose to the State officials in the way indicaed the sums which should be reported by the institution itself in the due course of its annual reports to the Auditor General, without thought of reward to any one. Your Committee recommends the passage of a more complete and stringent Act, and a draft will be found in this report.

Section 8 of this Act should prevent the payment of any fee to an informant in these cases. At the same time the general language of the Act of 1911 will be effective to cover such cases of escheat, exclusive of deposits in banks and the like as may not come within the language of the previous escheat acts.

Your Committee also recommends the passage of an act to cover the gap in the law disclosed by the decision in Bousquet's Estate, 206 Pa., 534. In that case an escheat was attempted under the description of property of which the owner has "been unknown for a period of seven years." The owner had been missing for more than twenty years, and the Court held that he was not unknown, but that it was his whereabouts which were unknown. The proposed act directs an escheat where property remains in the hands of a trustee or other person for more than seven years without a demand being made for the same by the rightful owner. It saves the rights of the heirs of the late owner by providing that claim might be made at the audit of account of the trustee by the person rightfully entitled. In such case the heirs would claim the property by applying the well known legal doctrine of the presumption of death of a man who has been absent from his domicile and unheard of for seven years. The existing law also provides amply for reclaiming property which has escheated and has been paid into the State Treasury, if the true heirs appear and prove their ownership within a limited time.

The Legislature of 1911, in the Act previously mentioned (P. L., 281), provided, with a great deal of verbiage, for the escheat of the accretions and profits of trust property as well as the property itself, "which property or estate is or shall be without a lawful owner." The first part of this provision seems unnecessary, as the accretions from profits would follow the ownership of the corpus of the fund. The last part does no harm, though it would be easier of administration if the act provided a definite test by which the lack of a lawful owner might be ascertained. Such a test is contained in the act drafted by your Committee.

An Act providing for the report to the Auditor General and escheat to the Commonwealth under certain conditions of deposit of money; deposits of money, stocks, bonds, notes, papers and other securities and all other valuables of the same or any other kind for safe keeping; and stocks and dividends, and the principal and interest of bonds, notes, certificates and of all and any other kinds of indebtedness of corporations, limited partnerships and partnership associations; and providing for the enforcement of the same.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That every bank, savings institution, trust company, safe deposit company and every person, firm and corporation receiving deposits of money, shall in the month of January in every year hereafter file with the Auditor General a report under oath of all deposits of money with the interest and profits accrued thereon which have not been increased or diminished or credited with interest in the pass book at the request of the depositor within seven years last preceding such report. Such report shall show the amount of such deposit of money, and the name and address of the depositor.

Section 2. Every person, firm and corporation in this Commonwealth receiving deposits of money, stocks, bonds, notes, papers and other securities or other valuables of the same or any other kind for safe keeping, shall in the month of January in every year hereafter file with the Auditor General a report under oath of all such deposits to which access has not been actually had by the owner or owners thereof within seven years last preceding such report. Such report shall give the names and addresses of the depositors, and the nature and amount of the deposit, if known.

Section 3. Every corporation, limited partnership and partnership association organized under the laws of this Commonwealth shall, in the month of January in every year hereafter, file with the Auditor General a report, under the oath of one of its executive officers having personal knowledge thereof, of the names and addresses of all stockholders to whom a dividend or dividends shall have benn declared and who have not claimed the same for seven years next preceding, together with the amount of such dividend and the kind and number of shares on which the same shall have been declared; and also the names and addresses of all holders of bonds, notes, certificates and of all and any other kinds of indebtedness of said corporations, limited partnerships and partnership associations who shall not have claimed for seven years next preceding the principal or interest due on the same, together with the amount of such interest and of the principal of such bonds, notes, certificates and other kinds of indebtedness. Should the names and addresses of said stockholders, holders of such bonds, notes, certificates and other kinds of indebtedness be unknown to the executive officers of any such corporation, limited partnership or partnership association, a report shall nevertheless be filed as hereinbefore provided setting forth the amount and nature thereof and all other information in the possession of such corporation, limited partnership or partnership association concerning said stocks, bonds, notes, certificates and other kinds of indebtedness.

Section 4. Such reports shall be preserved by the Auditor General in his office for public inspection, and he shall keep for public inspection an index of the names of all persons so reported to him, the amount and nature of the property involved, and the person or corporation reporting it.

Section 5. When any such deposit of money or unclaimed dividend or interest or principal of any bonds, notes, certificates and all or any other kinds of indebtedness of such corporations, limited partnerships and partnership associations shall have been so reported to the Auditor General for seven successive years, it shall, upon demand by him, be paid to the State Treasurer for the use of the State, together with the interest and profits accrued thereon by the person, firm or corporation making such report; an da report of such payment shall be made to the Auditor General and be entered by him in said index.

Section 6. At any time within twenty-one years after such payment of a deposit of money, dividend, or interest or principal of any such bonds, notes, certificates, or other kinds of indebtedness of such corporations, limited partnerships and partnership association to the State Treasurer, the persons who would have been the lawful owners of such deposit, dividend, or interest or principal of any such bonds, notes, certificates or other kinds of indebtedness, had it not been so paid, or their legal representatives, shall receive the same out of the State Treasury out of moneys otherwise unappropriated, upon the warrant of the Auditor General on the State Treasurer, upon the production to the Auditor General of Satisfactory proof of such ownership.

Section 7. When any such unclaimed stocks of said corporations, limited partnerships and partnership associations or any such deposit of money, stocks, bonds, notes, papers, other securities or other valuables of the same or any other kind for safe keeping, shall have been so reported to the Auditor General for seven successive years, the Auditor General shall thereupon appoint an escheator to conduct proceedings for the escheat of the same in the manner provided by law.

Section 8. No fee shall be paid to any informant for information leading to the escheat of any property which shall have been theretofore reported at any time under this Act.

Section 9. The failure to make any report required by this Act shall subject the person, firm, corporation, limited partnership or partnership association so failing to a penalty of fifty dollars a day for each day such failure continues, to be recovered by the Commonwealth. The failure to pay to the State Treasurer any such deposit of money or dividend or interest or principal of any bond, note, certificate, or all or any other kind of indebtedness of such corporation, limited partnership or partnership association upon demand shall render the person, firm, corporation, limited partnership or partnership association so refusing liable to an action by the Commonwealth to recover such deposit with interest at 12 per centum per annum.

Section 10. Nothing in this Act shall be construed to prevent the escheat of property to the Commonwealth in the way otherwise provided by law for lack of next of kin or a known owner.

Section 11. All the Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act be, and the same are, hereby repealed.

Section 12. The following Acts and parts of Acts be, and the same are, hereby repealed:

An Act entitled "An Act requiring banks and other corporations to give notice of unclaimed dividends, deposits and balances in certain cases. Approved March 6, 1847. (Pamphlet Laws, 222.)

Section 52 of an Act entitled "An Act regulating banks." Approved April 16, 1850. (Pamphlet Laws, 477.)

Sections 2 and 3 of an Act entitled "An Act relating to unclaimed deposits in savings banks, and transfer of stock." Approved April 17, 1872. (Pamphlet Laws, 62.)

An Act entitled "An Act relating to the return of moneys escheated to the Commonwealth." Approved June 4, 1885. (Pamphlet Laws, 73.)

An Act entitled "An Act to amend the first section of an Act entitled 'An Act reltaing to the return of moneys escheated to the Commonwealth,' approved the fourth day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five, extending the same to certain other cases of escheat." Approved June 25, 1895. (Pamphlet Laws, 283.)

NOTE.

Existing laws practically cover only bank deposits. They are as follows:

Act of March 6, 1847 (P. L., 222), applying to banks, savings institutions, loan companies and insurance companies, which declare dividends or profits among the stockholders and requiring publication in the newspapers of dividends unclaimed for three years, and not increased or diminished or receiving interest within three years. The penalty is personal liability by the cashier to the owner, with 12 per cent. interest. Three years after the first publication the dividend shall escheat to the Commonwealth and the owner may claim it at any time thereafter. There is no further penalty for failure to publish and no penalty at all for failure to pay to the Commonwealth.

Act of April 16, 1850 (P. L., 477), requires the cashier of every bank to forward to the Auditor General a list of dividends and deposits unclaimed and not increased or diminished for three years. There is no penalty.

Act of April 17, 1872 (P. L., 62), requires a savings fund, savings institution or savings bank to pay to the State Treasurer deposits not demanded for thirty years, and premits the real owner to recover it from the State Treasury after that time by action in the Courts. There is no penalty for failure to make report, but small sums are paid.

The laws of other States are not very complete on this subject. The primary object seems to be publicity for the benefit of the owner or next of kin. New York, for example, has elaborate provisions for report to the Banking Commissioner and the indexing of reports, as well as for publication. Maine and New Jersey, as well as New York, require newspaper advertising. None of these three provide for escheat to the State. Maine and Massachusetts only escheat deposits remaining unclaimed in the hands of receivers of a bank. Ohio has much the most complete system, providing for annual reports to the Probate Judge, which are recorded for public inspection; and after eight years the deposits are paid to the County Treasurer and may be reclaimed at any time on proof of ownership.

Sufficient publicity will be provided by the public reports in the office of the Auditor General duly indexed, to which all persons settling estates will naturally resort to look for unclaimed deposits. This, and the right to recover with a long period of limitation on the right, abundantly protect the depositors, and the State should have the benefit of money not so claimed.

An Act to amend Sections two and three of an act entitled "An Act defining and regulating escheats in cases where property is without a lawful owner, and providing for more convenient proceedings relative to the same," approved the second day of May, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine; extending the same to other cases of escheat.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That the second section of an Act entitled "An Act defining and regulating escheats in cases where property is without a lawful owner, and providing for more convenient proceedings relative to the same," approved the second day of May, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine, which reads as follows:

"Whensoever any money, estate or effects, shall have been or shall hereafter be paid into or deposited in the custody of any Court of this Commonwealth, or shall be in the custody of any depository, or of any receiver or other officer of said Court and the rightful owner or owners thereof shall have been or shall be unknown for the space of seven years, the same shall escheat to the Commonwealth, subject to all legal demands on the same," be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

Whensoever any money, estate, or effects shall have been or shall hereafter be paid into or deposited in the custody of any Court of this Commonwealth, or shall be in the custody of any depository or of any receiver or other officer of said Court, and the rightful owner or owners thereof shall have been or shall be unknown for the space of seven years, or shall have made no demand therefor for the space of seven years, the same shall escheat to the Commonwealth, subject to all legal demands on the same.

Section 2. That the third section of the said Act which reads as follows:

"Whensoever any trustee or other person is or shall be seized of any property or estate, real or personal, in a fiduciary capacity, and shall file an account of the same in any Court in this Commonwealth, and whensoever it shall appear that the cestui que trust or beneficial owner of said property or effects, or any part thereof has been unknown for a period of seven years, and still remains unknown, then, and in such case, so much of said property or effects as belonged to said unknown cestui que trust, or beneficial owner, shall escheat to the Commonwealth, subject to all legal demands on the same," be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

It shall be the duty of every trustee, guardian, committee, executor, administrator, assignee, or other person acting in a fiduciary capacity, who shall be seized or possessed of any property or estate, real or personal, of which the cestui que trust or beneficial owner shall have been unknown to him for a period of even years, and still remains unknown, or has made no demand for said property or effects for a period of seven years, to file an account thereof in the proper Coprt, and so much of said property or effects as belonged to said cestui que trust or beneficial owner, and is not claimed at the audit of said account, shall escheat to the Commonwealth, subject to all legal demands on the same.

(E) RELATION OF STATE TO COUNTIES WITH REGARD TO REVENUE.

In line with the modern tendency, it seems best to your Committee that at least some of the increased revenue needed locally should come from the Commonwealth, either by giving up part of its present revenue or by laying new taxes for that purpose.

This has been the history of the personal property tax in Pennsylvania. At first laid by the Act of March 25, 1831, P. L., 206, then abolished, and revived by the Act of April 29, 1844, P. L., 486, it was entirely a State tax. Continued by various acts, notably the Act of June 7, 1879, P. L., 120, which was a codification of previous laws, the practice grew up of reimbursing the counties for the expense of collection and remitting uncollectable taxes, etc. When the Act of June 1, 1889, P. L., 420 (which, with its amendments, is the present existing authority), was enacted, an allowance of one-third of the tax was made to the counties in commutation of these payments. So attractive was this that the next Legislature, by the Act of June 8, 1891, P. L., 229, increased the amount to three-fourths.

The one-fourth of the personal property tax now retained by the Commonwealth amounted, in 1911, to $1,186,425.46, and the amounts received by the counties are shown in the following table. This gift could so readily be made under the present system by the mere alteration of a word or two in present legislation that your Committee looks upon it as the proper place to begin, and recommends that it be done. In the same way it is elsewhere, in this report, proposed to return the mercantile license and similar taxes to the counties.

It has been suggested that to return all of this tax to the counties would destory its character as a State tax, and hence also destroy the power of the State to levy it. Three-fourths is now returned to the counties under the palpable fiction of compensation for collecting it. And half of the tax on premiums of foreign fire insurance companies is paid to municipalities without any such excuse (Act of April 20, 1905, P. L. 229). No question has been raised as to this, and if it is valid for part it should be valid for all. In view of the proposal to raise more local revenue by State taxation, it might be well to furnish an opportunity for a test case in this way before going further. Your Committee believes that the tax would be sustained.

EXEMPTION OF MUNICIPAL AND SCHOOL BONDS.

A part of the State revenue which might be spared, and which it would be sound economically to spare, is the State tax on bonds of municipalities and school districts. This tax is collected like that on corporate loans by the treasurers of counties, cities, boroughs and school districts, (as to the latter of which see Act of May 11, 1911, P. L. 236), and paid to the State. Nominally laid on the bondholder, it is really paid by the county, etc., as pointed out with regard to the personal property tax generally.

There is no good reason why one part of the Government should derive any of its revenue by taxing another part, especially when the part so taxed is admittedly in need of all revenue available, and the other has, or can, easily and fairly, obtain all that is necessary. These bonds should be exempt for the same reason that public buildings are exempt, and that it is proposed to exempt bequests to domestic charities. Though long a part of our system, it is a proper part to change to provide needed local revenue. Accordingly, the draft of an act is printed in this report.

It is proposed by the Mayor of Philadelphia that the personal property tax—three-fourths of which is now returned to the county, and which is assessed and collected by local officials acting nominally only as State agent—should be made in theory, as it is in fact, a county tax. The purpose is to increase the assessed value of property taxable for local purposes and so increase the borrowing capacity. This seems plausible until we realize that it is of no avail to increase the assessed value of property by a fiction, unless we also increase the rate of taxation to provide for interest and sinking fund. Either this tax or the real estate taxes would have to be increased. And putting the assessment and rate of tax in the hands of the localities would result in the worst forms of tax dodging. Philadelphians now live in Montgomery and adjoining counties in great numbers who are leniently treated as to personal property taxes by the assessors there. If each county had it in its power to exempt its residents, there would be competition for wealthy men and fictitious residences in much greater numbers than now, when the exemption is tacit only and not authorized by law.

Another request from local officials is that a part of the gross receipts tax on public service corporations be returned to the cities and counties to compensate for the exemption of their real estate. The inequality of local taxation on these companies will be, in large part, corrected by the Act elsewhere proposed, with regard to corporate loan tax. In the absence of figures showing what part of the value of the whole railroad, for example, belongs to each county, it would not be possible to make any fair division on this basis. Such figures could not be obtained without a physical valuation which would involve the State in an extravagant expense wholly disproportionate to the benefit attained, and ineffective to secure reliable results. The relations of Pennsylvania to the corporations as respects taxation can be otherwise, and at much less cost to both, adjusted satisfactorily to both parties.

An Act to repeal Section 42 of an Act entitled "An Act to reduce the State debt and to incorporate the Pennsylvania Canal and Railroad Company," approved April 29, 1844, (P. L., 501), and the fourth section of an Act entitled "An Act imposing additional taxes for State Purposes, and to abolish the Revenue Board," approved April 30, 1864, (P. L., 218), and An Act entitled "An Act amending Section 4 of an act entitled 'An Act imposing additional taxes for State purposes, and to abolish the Revenue Board,' approved the 30th day of April, A. D. 1864, by requiring the Treasurer of each school district and chief officer of each incorporated district to make report under oath to the Auditor General of the amount of scrip, bonds or certificates of indebtedness outstanding in their respective districts," approved May 11, 1911, (P. L. 236); and exempting from taxation the scrip, bonds and certificates of indebtedness of counties, cities, incorporated districts, school districts, boroughs, and other municipal corporations.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That Section 42 of an Act entitled "An Act to reduce the State debt, and to incorporate the Pennsylvania Canal and Railroad Company," approved April 29, 1844, and Section 4 of an Act entitled "An Act imposing additional taxes for State purposes, and to abolish the Revenue Board," approved April 30, 1864, and an Act entitled "An Act amending Section 4 of an Act entitled 'An Act imposing additional taxes for State purposes, and to abolish the Revenue Board,' approved the 30th day of April, A. D. 1864, by requiring the Treasurer of each school distict and chief officer of each incorporated district to make report under oath to the Auditor General of the amount of scrip, bonds or certificates or indebtedness outstanding in their respective districts," approved May 11, 1911, be and the same are hereby repealed.

Section 2. The scrip, bonds and certificates of indebtedness issued by counties, cities, incorporated districts, school districts, boroughs, and other municipal corporations, are hereby declared to be a separate class of property for purposes of taxation, and are hereby exempted from all taxes now laid upon them by law.

An Act to further amend Section 16 of An Act entitled "A Further Supplement to an act entitled 'An Act to provide revenue by taxation,' approved the seventh day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine," approved the first day of June, 1889.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That Section 16 of an Act entitled "A further supplement of an Act entitled 'An Act to provide revenue by taxation,' approved the 7th day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine," approved the first day of June, 1889, which, as heretofore amended, reads as follows:

"Section 16. That for the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, and annually thereafter, three-fourths of the net amount of tax based on the return of property subject to taxation for State purposes, required to be made to and accepted by the State Board of Revenue Commissioners annually by county commissioners and the board of revision of taxes in cities co-extensive with counties, that is collected and paid into the State Treasury by a county or city co-extensive with a county, shall be returned by the State Treasurer to such county or city co-extensive with a county, for its own use in payment of the expenses incurred by it in the assessment and collection of said tax: Provided, That in consideration of the return to counties and cities co-extensive with counties of the tax as aforesaid, no claim shall be made upon or allowed by the Commonwealth for abatements, tax collectors' commissions, extraordinary expenses, uncollectible taxes or for keeping a record of judgments and mortgages," be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

Section 16. That for the year one thousand nine hundred and thirteen, and annually thereafter, the whole of the net amount of tax based on the return of property subject to taxation for State purposes, required to be made to and accepted by the State Board of Revenue Commissioners annually, by County Commissioners and the Board of Revision of Taxes in cities co-extensive with counties, that is collected and paid into the State Treasury by a county or city co-extensive with a county, shall be returned by the State Treasurer to such county or city co-extensive with a county, for its own use: Provided, That no claim shall be made upon or allowed by the Commonwealth for abatements, commissions, expenses, uncollectible taxes, or for keeping a record of judgments and mortgages, or for any deduction or expenses of any kind whatsoever.

TAX ON ANTHRACITE COAL.

Upon the occasion of your Committee's visit to the anthracite coal regions, many requests came to it, as upon the previous similar occasion, for change in the method of taxing anthracite coal lands, and for the laying of a tax upon the coal itself as it comes out of the ground. The present method of taxing coal lands is to assess them like other real estate at a valuation which is arrived at as closely as may be, but is often the subject of long litigation. A fair voluation for the surface rights in land is easy to arrive at, and to equalize among the taxpayers. But coal under the surface must be assessed "sight unseen." Both in cases where the coal is owned separately from the surface, which often happens, and where it must be valued together with the surface, the absence of accurate knowledge, especially in virgin tracts, makes any decision a mere choice between guesses. The value of the coal, of course, depends not merely on quality and the amount of bone and slate in addition to coal, but upon the thickness of the vein, accessibility, the existence of "faults" and other like conditions. The nature of the litigation may be found in such a case as that of the Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Coal Company's assessment, 225 Pa. 272, where the Court condemned as improper the method of valuing of coal by the "foot acre" method, whereby all coal was valued according to a unit one foot thick and an acre in area without regard to special conditions in each case.

It was also said that anthracite coal should bear a somewhat greater burden than other real estate. The industry is more hazardous than any other, more hazardous even than the mining of bituminous coal. In 1910 there were in Pennsylvania 618 fatal and 3,526 non-fatal accidents in the production of 70, 236,350 tons of anthracite coal, to 531 fatal and 3,005 non-fatal accidents in the production of 118,313,525 tons of bituminous coal. In 1911 there were 550 fatal and 4,114 non-fatal accidents in the production of 75,416,691 tons of anthracite coal, and 501 fatal and 3,703 non-fatal accidents in the production of 146,407,356 tons of bituminous coal. The yearly average in the anthracite mines up to 1907 shows deaths of 573, leaving 322 widows and 770 orphans, and for the bituminous mines, 475, leaving 252 widows and 546 orphans. To care for the persons affected by these accidents, institutions have been specially located in the anthracite regions.

The anthracite coal is fast going. The year 1907, owing to special conditions, was the year of maximum production, and, while the pace thus set has been nearly maintained since that time, it will probably never be exceeded and must soon decrease. The re-working of the old culm banks and the dredging of the coal from the bed of the Susquehanna river is an indication of the state of economy to which we have arrived. The following table indicates what is being done:

STATISTICS OF ANTRACITE PRODUCTION, 1906-1910.

It is urged that before the coal is exhausted it should be made to yield a revenue both to the Commonwealth and to the localities, which would leave behind a monument to the industry in the form of improved public facilities of every kind—parks, schools and the like, which it will be more difficult, if at all possible, to establish when the revenue from coal is not available. The whole Commonwealth should partake of the benefit by expending some of the revenue upon the State roads. Both Commonwealth and localities should receive revenue from the coal to meet the cost of the care of the injured and dependent.

It is estimated that eighty per cent. of this anthracite coal is sold to consumers outside of Pennsylvania.

We assume that a small tax, (2 1-2 per cent, ad valorem, or about five cents per ton), would not be added to the cost to the consumer in Pennsylvania even if so added to those outside. Such a distinction to our own people would not be an unjust discrimination against those of other States, as it is generally conceded by those who know that in all industrial activities those nearest to the natural resources should be so favored, and such a distinction to the users here, that is, a perference in cost of such a natural resource, would be an inducement to the location of manufacturers in this Commonwealth.

Michigan had a similar tax for several years upon her mineral products, and discontinued it probably for the reason that they became competitive, such as oil, gas, etc., here. Minnesota levied such a tax until declared in violation of her constitution requiring all property to be taxed at the same rate. Michigan taxed coal one-half cent a ton, iron ore, one cent a ton, and copper, of which she had a monoply, seventy-five cents a ton.

As long as the autonomy of States exists in this country, "self preservation" will be to each of them, as it is to individuals, "a primary law of nature," and it behooves us, especially in this extravagant age, to "stop, look and listen," before we attempt to ignore warnings which should be heeded by all who would have our Commonwealth not only maintain her present high position, but keep pace in the onward march of Nations and States. To do this we should make the most of our resources, and those, (such as anthracite coal), which are hastening to an end, should be carefully husbanded. A proper economic solution of our anthracite condition would be to capitalize the taxes, so that when the coal is exhausted there would exist a fund, the income of which would be available for future needs. But such a plan would increase present taxes to such an extent in the anthracite counties as to be beyond hope of present approval.

Your Committee has endeavored to devise a system by which the Commonwealth would lay and collect a tax on anthracite coal when prepared for market, the tax to be assessed at the beginning of a year for coal prepared for market the year preceding, a proper proportion thereof, say, one-half, to be returned to the localities whence the coal had been taken. This system would provide that for the purposes of all local taxation the coal underlying any lands should not be considered in arriving at the value of the land, but would not effect the local systems of county, city, borough and township taxes, in which the land would be valued with reference only to surface uses.

As part of this contemplated plan, coal produced with the washery and dredge from the river would be included with the other anthracite coal for tax.

The sum returned by the Commonwealth to each county was to be apportioned between the county government and the several city, borough and township governments, in the proportion that each part bore to the whole in population. This, on the basis of the production of 1910 of 75,433,246 tons, valued at $160,275,302, a tax of five per cent. ad valorem would yield $8,013,765.10, and one-half thereof, or $4,006,882.55, would be divided among the counties approximately as follows:

Counties.	Tons.	Returned to Counties.
Carbon	2,802,855	$149,590 28
Columbia	845,348	42,740 08
Dauphin	791,243	42,740 08
Lackawanna	19,566,365	1,041,789 47
Luzerne	28,547,803	1,522,615 37
Northumberland	5,713,269	304,523 07
Schuylkill	15,944,174	849,459 10
Sullivan	564,962	26,712 55
Susquehanna	565,394	26,712 55
River dredges	91,833	.....
Total	75,433,246	$4,006,882 55

Assuming that the payments to the several counties would equal, as a whole, the loss of local taxes on the underlying coal, a present insurmountable difficulty is met in the inability to equaitably distribute these sums among the several local governments in each county, for several reasons.

For instance, in many colleries the coal prepared for market is drawn from the workings in more than one township, or from land partly in a township and partly in a borough, and the coal mined from the different localities is frequently passed through the breaker and intermingled, which would make it very difficult, if not impossible, to justly apportion the "prepared" coal.

Again, as the State tax, under the plan here discussed, would exempt coal land, (except for surface uses), from local tax for schools and roads, which are now thereby supported, it is most important that any new system should not do harm to these two most important of the local activities.

Take, for instance, West Mahanoy Township in Schuylkill County. In this township the City of Philadelphia, trustee, (Girard Estate), is assessed on the seated list with coal land valued at $843,892, and at the rate of twenty-five mills, (the highest allowed by law), this property would yield for school purposes $21,097.30, and, at ten mills, $8,428.92, for road purposes. The same land, under the plan here discussed, with the value of coal locally exempted, would be worth, (for surface uses), not more than five dollars an acre, and the 1,672 acres would be assessed at $8,360. This would yield a maximum school tax, at twenty-five mills, of $209, and a rad tax, at ten mills, of $83.60. But it might be argued that in this township, in 1911, 1,447,363 tons were prepared for market, (though a considerable portion of coal came from outside), and at a value of three dollars per ton, (this is fifty cents per ton above mine prices), and at the rate of five per cent. per ton, would have yielded a tax of $217,104. Of this amount, one-half, or $108,552, would have been returned to the County of Schuylkill for distribution, as above suggested, and the share of West Mahanoy Township would have been sufficient to equal its loss because of the land tax limitation to surface uses only. But the fact is, that the county's population is, say, 207,894, and the township's 5,230. The latter's share would have been but $2,730.80, which with the $292.60, the local tax of the land surface, would total $3,023.40, as against $29,537.22, now available under the present system.

The exclusion of coal land not being mined from such a system would, to a certain extent, lessen this discrepancy of revenue, but to just what extent your Committee has not definite knowledge. Such exclusion would probably develop Constitutional objection because of the discrimination between coal land being mined and that not so operated.

A better basis of apportionment than poplation has not been suggested.

Another objection to the adoption of the system under discussion is that the localities would not receive their share of the tax until, at the earliest, the year following the preparation for market, and if there were appeals from the valuations of the State officers, longer delay would occur.

The localities now recive the taxes during the year and at the times needed, and a delay of months would be ruinous.

By the "School Code" in second, third and fourth class townships, the fiscal year begins the first Monday of July, and the assessments are made in April and May and the schools open September 1st. Taxes are laid accordingly and are sure. Whereas under a State tax and local exemption system school officials would be involved in doubt as to amounts, and when they would receive them, until months after they were actually needed.

Under all these circumstances your Committee does not deem it wise to attempt to supplant the present system of taxation in these anthracite counties, but for the reasons given in the Report of 1911 and herein, recommends that a tax of two and one-half per centum of the value of all anthracite coal, when prepared for market, be laid, and that one-half thereof be returned by the Commonwealth to the several counties in which it is so prepared. This money so returned should be used for permanent improvements, parks, roads, etc., as hereinbefore mentioned. A draft of an Act imposing the tax is herewith submitted.

We might add that, although objection is made to the present local systems, or lack of system, of anthracite coal land valuations, no substitute has been submitted to your Committee, and repeated requests to those interested have resulted in little less than confusion of ideas thereabout. A satisfactory scheme for State taxation and local exemption of coal land that would do justice to the Commonwealth and its subdivisions from which the coal comes, should be possible, but it can be accomplished only by the co-operation of all interested therein, and your Committee hopes that earnest effort will be made to that end.

As pointed out in the previous report of your Committee, the like suggestions made with regard to bituminous coal are not so easily complied with. We have a monopoly of anthracite coal, and it must be taken from us by those who consume it. Bituminous coal is produced in many other States, and a tax upon it would not be passed on to the consumer. The price would be regulated still by competition with other States where no such tax is laid, and it would be, in effect, merely an increase of the tax on land.

A conference between these States would be beneficial to all concerned, and your Committee repeats its recommendation of 1911, that an invitation be extended to them to meet delegates appointed by the Governor of Pennsylvania to discuss the subject, the expenses of the delegates to be provided for in the general appropriation bill. As above mentioned, the Legislature adopted a joint resolution to that end, (June 19, 1911, P. L. 1044), and your Committee urges the Governor to comply therewith. Until some concerted action is had between the States producing bituminous coal, oil and gas, and especially between those adjoining the Commonwealth, we do not think it wise to lay a special tax upon any of these products.

An Act laying a State tax on anthracite coal and providing for the collection of the same.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter every ton of anthracite coal of the weight of two thousand two hundred and forty pounds avoirdupois prepared for market in this Commonwealth snall be subject to a State tax of two and one-half per centum of the value thereof when prepared for market, to be settled and collected as provided by law for other State taxes.

Section 2. Every operator of an anthracite coal mine or mines in this Commonwealth shall report to the Auditor General in the month of January in each year hereafter the number of such tons of anthracite coal mined by such operator within the calendar year next preceding, and the value thereof at the mouth of the mine. Such report shall be in writing under the oath of the operator if an individual, or of one of them if more than one individual, or of a principal executive officer if a corporation, limited partnership or joint stock associa-tion.

Section 3. If any such operator shall fail to furnish such report within the time required, it shall be the duty of the accounting officers of the Commonwealth to add 10 per centum to the tax for each and every year for which such report was not so furnished, which precentage shall be settled and collected with the said tax in the usual manner of settling accounts and collecting such taxes; and if any individual operator or the officers of an operator being a corporation, limited partnership, or joint stock association, or any of them, shall intentionally fail to make such report, he or they shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine of five hundred dollars and undergo an imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both or either, at the discretion of the Court.

Section 4. If the Auditor General or State Treasurer is not satisfied with the report so made, they are hereby authorized and empowered to make an estimate of the number of tons mined by the operator and to settle an account on the basis of such estimate for the taxes, penalties and interest due the Commonwealth thereon, with the right to the operator dissatisfied with any settlement so made to appeal therefrom in the manner provided by law; and if no such report is made the Auditor General and State Treasurer shall make an estimate and settle an account as aforesaid, from which settlement there shall be a right of appeal in the manner provided by law.

Section 5. Each county shall receive from the State Treasurer for its own use one-half of the amount of the said tax collected from operators in said county.

NOTE.

The classification of anthracite coal as destinguished from bituminous coal has been sanctioned by long existing legislation with reference to the different modes of inspection of bituminous and anthracite mines and the classification sustained in the case of Durkin vs. Kingston Coal Co., 171 Pa. 193.

By an Act of 1864, P. L. 218, a tonnage tax of 2 cents was put on the products of mines. This was amended by an Act of the same year, P. L. 988, continued by an Act of 1868,

P. L. 108, and finally abolished by an Act of 1874, P. L. 68. The later Act substituted a tax on the number of tons of coal mined or purchased by companies engaged in the mining or purchasing and selling of coal at the rate of 3 cents per ton. This was sustained as a tax on franchises or privileges of the company and the classification of these companies separately for purposes of taxation was approved in the case of Kittanning Coal Company vs. Commonwealth, 79 Pa. 103.

By the Act of 1879, P. L. 112, the tax was abolished as of July 1, 1881. It was held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States as to interstate tonnage by the case of Philadelphia & Reading R. R. Co. vs. Penna., 15 Wall, 232.

The method of report and settlement of the tax is based on the method with regard to capital stock tax of corporations.

INCOME TAX AMENDMENT TO U. S. CONSTITUTION.

Your Committee, in its last report, recommended that the proposed Federal Income Tax Amendment be not approved by this Commonwealth. This recommendation was followed. Your Committee is still of opinion that this change in the relation between the States and the Federal Government is unwise, and that it would be unwise for Pennsylvania to lend her approval to it, because, as one of the wealthy States, she would bear far more than her proper share of the burden. There are forty-eight States, and the approval of thirty-six is therefore required. Thirty-three have ratified the amendment, and so notified the Secretary of State, to wit: Alabama, Arkansas, Arizona, California, Colorado, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Washington and Wisconsin. Louisiana has ratified the plan, but has not yet sent in the official notice. Connecticut, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Utah have acted adversely. Delaware, Florida, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia and Wyoming have not acted at all. Notwithstanding the fact that only two States more are needed, and the certainty that they will be found among the ten just named, makes it idle for Pennsylvania to say "Aye" or "No" to the proposition, and though such States as Illinois, New York and Ohio, which share with Pennsylvania and Massachusetts the great bulk of the wealth of the country, and which will pay the greater part of the tax, have approved it, yet your Committee recommend that the Legislature, as a matter of principle, should refuse to ratify this amendment.

That this Commonwealth should join in authorizing Congress to pass laws taking vast sums of money from our citizens to be expended in other States from which our people can derive no special benefit, and none at all, save so indirectly as to be practically unappreciable, is beyond reason, unless it be a reason that wealthy States should pay for the upbuild of those less fortunate, no matter how remote. If taxes could be limited to the needs of the country's defence, there would be no opposition, but to turn our people over to Congress to impose such taxes, and for such purposes as it may see fit, in this age of general demand for all kinds of expenditures under the guise of "progress," and in the face of the needs of our Commonwealth, herein referred to, is little short of reckless and foolish. There is an abundance of subjects from which all necessary Federal revenues can be had, without the encroachment upon those which properly belong to the States.

(Mr. Alter does not concur in this recommendation.)

STATE CENSUS.

A census by the State, especially in departments relating to taxation, would be of substantial benefit. Your Committee has been hampered at every turn by the lack of proper statistics with regard to both subjects, taxed and not taxed. It is difficult without such figures to give to the subject that close consideration and treatment which is so necessary to the doing of exact justice to all classes of our people.

We should have full knowledge of all subjects upon which a tax could be properly levied, so that the burden can be fairly and equally distributed.

Massachusetts takes a census every tenth year, midway between those taken by the United States. The machinery of her census bureau is made use of by the United States, and the compensation paid for it defrays a large part of the cost. If we had such a permanent bureau its work, even in years when a census was not being taken by the Federal Government, would be valuable to all the State Departments, and your Committee strongly recommend it.

PRINTING OF TESTIMONY TAKEN BEFORE COMMITTEE.

By reason of the insufficiency of the appropriation at the disposal of your Committee, they were unable to have printed the testimony taken before them. This was done last year. As many of the suggestions adopted by your Committee were given in the course of this testimony, and as the members of the Legislature will desire to have in full the suggestions and arguments of the advocates of those measures, we deem it desirable that this testimony shall be printed for the use of the members of the Legislature. The cost will amount to about one thousand dollars, and we recommend that an appropriation be made for that purpose as soon as possible.

A tabulation of the figures in this report will show that an increased State expenditure is recommended, which will probably exceed the revenue to be provided by new taxes which are recommended, unless the radical change in the method of taxing corporate loans is made and the new tax comes up to expectations. Your Committee feels, however, that these needs can certainly be met if the adoption of improved methods of collection accompanies the imposition of a few new taxes. The revenue of the State is increasing each year from the present taxes. As better enforcement of the law produces greater equality it will also produce greater revenue. Indeed, the proposed new method of taxing corporate loans is but a more efficient method of collection and not a new tax, and the discussion of it has naturally come under that head in this report.

Automobile license fees should take care of the highway construction and improvement, or at least of the interest and sinking fund on bonds. The limited increase now recommended, in view of the refusal of the last Legislature to impose larger fees, will hardly achieve this. But the tax on anthracite coal will also yield considerable revenue, which should be applied to permanent State and local works, either roads or institutions, so that when it decreases and is finally exhausted, as it must some day be, the loss of it as revenue and maintenance may not be felt.

It is so much the earnest hope of your Committee that this State will soon be in a position to lay the most modern and equitable form of tax in all directions, to wit, the graded or progressive tax, that they have foreborne, as this report will show, to recommend changes in many directions where changes would otherwise be advisable, until the time when this method will be available. Those readers who have come this far will recall that in discussing the taxation of moneys at interest in banks, and merchants and manufacturing companies, as well as in the great field of inheritance tax, this principle has seemed necessary to be applied to reach a just result. The direct inheritance tax alone would go a long way toward providing all the additional revenue necessary for all schools and highways and all the institutions recommended from all sides, and the imposition of it would never be harmfully felt by the citizens. However, it could be graded and reasonable exemption allowed in those estates where there are widows and children and other dependents upon the inheritance for their support.

The whole of the reform to be made can be summed up in the thought of greater equality of the burden of our present taxes, to be accomplished by a centralization of the authority to assess and collect them and the power to grade them according to the ability to pay.

Your Committee recommends that a Legislative Committee be constituted to continue its investigations upon the subjects heretofore considered, but not concluded, and especially with reference to the preparation of laws based upon the Constitutional amendment providing for graded or progressive taxes, which, it is believed, will be approved by Your Honorable Bodies and ratified by the people, before the meeting of the next General Assembly in 1915, and for the consideration of subjects kindred to those heretofore treated, and the preparation of acts thereabout.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES P. McNICHOL,
WILLIAM H. KEYSER,
WILLIAM C. SPROUL,
JAMES F. WOODWARD,
MILTON W. SHREVE,
GEORGE E. ALTER.

APPENDIX.

PRESENT LEGISLATION.

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 1.

Corporations may be formed under the provisions of this Act by the voluntary association of five or more persons for the purpose and in the manner mentioned herein —[here follows a statement that when so formed each corporation shall have certain powers, which are enumerated. In the proposed statute the corporate powers are put in a separate part. See Part III, Sections].

ACT OF APRIL 23, 1903, P. L. 272, SECTION 1.

Hereafter corporations for profit * * * may be formed * * * by the voluntary association of three or more persons, and the charter of an intended corporation must be subscribed by two or more persons, one of whom at least must be a citizen of this Commonwealth. * * *

The Act of 1874, Section 7, classified the purposes for which corporations could be formed into twenty classes, finally extended to twenty-five classes by Act of June 10, 1893, P. L. 435. Each class is treated in a separate clause. Clause 18, by Act of July 9, 1901, P. L. 624, concludes as follows: "and also including companies for the transaction of any lawful business not otherwise specially provided for by Act of Assembly: Provided, however, That no corporation shall be chartered under this amendment with the authority to transact more than one kind of business, which must be set forth in the charter."

The businesses otherwise specially provided for are railroading, banking, and insurance. All public service corporations not specially provided for are incorporated under the Act of 1874 and its amendments, though in many cases provisions affecting the formation, organization, and the conduct of particular kinds of public service corporations exist.

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 3.

The charter of the intended corporation * * * shall set forth:

1. The name of the corporation.
2. The purpose for which it is formed.
3. The place or places where its business is to be transacted.
4. The term for which it is to exist.
5. The names and residences of the subscribers, and the number of shares subscribed by each.
6. The number of its directors and the names and residences of those who are chosen directors for the first year.
7. The amount of its capital stock, * * * and the number and par value of the shares into which it is divided.

ACT OF 1893, JUNE 8, P. L. 355, SECTION 1.

(This Act by implication assumes that the principal office must be within the State. It provides a method for changing the location of such office and concludes: "nothing in this Act, however, shall authorize the location of the principal office * * * outside the limits of this Commonwealth."

ACT OF 1874, SUPRA, SECTION 38, CLAUSE 7.

(This clause provides that corporations incorporated for the manufacture of iron or steel, or both, or any other metal, or any article of commerce from wood or metal, "may have an office at any place without the State, at which the by-laws of the corporation may authorize the same [at which] meetings of stockholders and directors may me held, and any business of the corporation transacted, but it shall also keep an office within the county in which its principal business in this State is transacted, and an officer of the company there upon whom service of process may be made.")

ACT OF 1874, SUPRA, SECTION 4.

The charter for incorporations named in this Act may be made perpetual, or may be limited in time by their own provisions. * * *

ACT OF 1899, MAY 9, P. L. 180, SECTION 1, AMENDING ACT OF 1874, SUPRA, SECTION 11.

* * * The capital stock of every such corporation that has or requires a capital stock shall consist of not more than one million dollars [there is an exeception in re certain public service corporations] and shall be divided into shares of not more than one hundred dollars each. * * *

ACT OF 1874, SUPRA, SECTION 39, CLAUSE 1.

That every such corporation [corporations, incorporated under Clause 18 of Section 2] may have a capital stock not exceeding five million dollars. * * *

ACT OF 1876, APRIL 17, P. L. 30, SECTION 9.

The capital stock of corporations for the purchase and sale of real estate, or for holding, leasing and selling real estate, and for maintaining or erecting and maintaining walls and banks for the protection of low lying lands shall consist in the aggregate at no time of more than six hundred thousand dollars, to be divided into shares of fifty dollars each. * * *

(As far as the above recited Acts limiting the amount of capital apply to increase of capital subsequent to organization, they are repealed by the Act of 1905, April 22, P. L. 280, Section 1. See Note 1 to Section 3 (e) of suggested business corporation Act.)

ACT OF 1876, APRIL 17, P. L. 30, SECTION 4, AMENDING ACT OF 1874, SUPRA, SECTION 17.

* * * Every such corporation may provide for the issue of deferred stock, in payment for such real or personal estate or mineral rights, and if so provided, it shall be expressely stated in the charter filed or in a certificate to be made and recorded, or in the acceptance of this statute, to be filed by any corporation accepting its provisions, with the amount of such deferred stock, and the consideration of the same, and the terms on which the same shall be issued. * * *

ACT OF 1901, APRIL 19, P. L. 80, SECTION 1.

That in all corporations heretofore or hereafter incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth * * * the board of directors may consist of any number of persons not less than three.

ACT OF 1874, SUPRA, SECTION 3.

The certificate for a corporation embraced within the second class, named in the foregoing section, shall set forth all that is hereinbefore required to be set forth * * * [an exception is made in the case of building and loan corporations, which associations are not included within the suggested Act] shall also state that ten per centum of the capital stock thereof has been paid in cash to the treasurer of the intended corporation, and the name and residence of such treasurer shall be therein given. The same shall be acknowledged by at least three of the subscribers thereto, before the recorder of deeds in the county in which the chief operations are to be carried on, or in which the principal office is situated, and they shall also make and subscribe on oatn or affirmation before him, to be endorsed on the said certificate, that the statements therein are true.

ACT OF 1903, APRIL 23, P. L. 272, SECTION 1.

Hereafter, corporations for profit embraced within corporations of the second class defined in Section 2 [Act 1874] * * * may be formed under the provisions of said Act, by the voluntary association of three or more persons, and the charter of an intended corporation must be subscribed by two or more persons, one of whom at least must be a citizen of this Commonwealth.

ACT OF 1891, APRIL 15, P. L. 18, SECTION 1.

That from and after the passage hereof, certificates of association or articles of incorporation may be acknowledged and sworn to before a notary public of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in the same manner, and with like force and effect, as though acknowledged and sworn to before the recorder of deeds in the proper county.

ACT OF 1911, JUNE 1, P. L. 540, SECTION 1.

That hereafter all certificates of association and articles of incorporation may be acknowledged and sworn to before any justice of the peace of this Commonwealth, in the same manner and with like force and effect as though acknowledged and sworn to before the recorder of deeds of the proper county or a notary public of this Commonwealth.

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 3.

Notice of the intention to apply for any such charter shall be inserted in two newspapers of general circulation, printed in the proper county, for three weeks, setting forth briefly the character and object of the corporation to be formed and the intention to make application therefor.

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 3.

The said certificate, accompanied with proof of publication of notice as hereinbefore provided, shall then be produced to the Governor of this Commonwealth, who shall examine the same. If he find it to be in proper form and within the purposes named in the second class specified in the foregoing section, he shall approve thereof and endorse his approval thereon, and direct letters patent to issue in the usual form, incorporating the subscribers and their associates and successors into a body politic and corporate, in deed and in law by the name chosen, and the said certificate shall be recorded in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, in a book to be by him kept for that purpose, and he shall forthwith furnish the Auditor General with an abstract therefrom showing the name, location, amount of capital stock, and name and address of treasurer of such corporation. The said original certificate, with all of its endorsements, shall then be recorded in the office for the recording of deeds in and for the county where the chief operations are to be carried on, and from thenceforth the subscribers thereto, and their associates and successors, shall be a corporation for the purposes and upon the terms named in the said charter. Certified copies of both the records thereof and of the charters of the incorporations named in the first class specified in the foregoing section, shall be compentent evidence for all purposes in the courts of this Commonwealth. The Secretary of the Commonwealth shall charge and receive a fee of five dollars on every affidavit relating to a corporation filed or recorded in his office.

ACT OF 1903, APRIL 22, P. L. 251, SECTION 1.

(This Act provides a method by which a corporation may change its name. On filing the application for a change of name with the Secretary of the Commonwealth, the Act provides that the Secretary of the Commonwealth shall examine the records in his office, and if he finds that the name desired by said corporation does not conflict with the name of any corporation appearing upon said records, he shall require the said certificate to be recorded, and shall issue to the said corporation a certificate under the hand and seal of his office, granting to said corporation use of the said new corporation title.)

ACT OF 1899, MAY 3, P. L. 189.

All corporations hereafter created under any general or special law of this Commonwealth * * * shall pay to the State Treasurer, for the use of the Commonwealth, a bonus of one-third of one per centum of the amount of capital stock which said company is authorized to have, and a like bonus on any subsequent authorized increase thereof, and a like bonus shall be paid by all such corporations heretofore incorporated upon any increase of their capital stock hereafter authorized. * * *

ACT OF 1901, FEB. 9, P. L. 3, SECTION 3.

* * * Upon the actual increase of the capital stock or indebtedness of such corporation, made pursuant thereto, it shall be the duty of the president or treasurer of such corporation, within thirty days thereafter, to make a return to the Secretary of the Commonwealth, under oath, of the amount of increase actually made, and concurrently therewith such corporation shall pay to the State Tresurer, for the use of the Commonwealth, such bonus on the actual increase shown by said return as shall then be prescribed by law. * * *

See Act of 1874, April 29, P. L. 73, Section 3, as set forth in Section 3, supra.

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 1.

Corporations may be formed * * * and when so formed, each of them by virtue of its existence as such shall have the following powers unless otherwise especially provided:

First: To have succession by its corporation name for a period limited by its charter, and when no period is limited thereby, or by this Act, prepetually subject to the power of the General Assembly, under the Constitution of this Commonwealth.

Second: To maintain and defend judicial proceedings.

Third: To make and use a common seal and alter the same at pleasure.

Fourth: To hold, purchase and transfer such real and personal property as the purposes of the corporation require, not exceeding the amount limited by its charter or by law.

Fifth: To appoint and remove such subordinate officers and agents as the business of the corporation requires, to allow for a suitable compensation.

Sixth: To make by-laws not inconsistent with law for the management of its property, the regulation of its affairs and the transfer of its stock.

Seventh: To enter into any obligation necessary in the transaction of its ordinary affairs.

IBID, SECTION 39, CLAUSE 7.

Such corporation (companies incorporated under the provisions of this Act for the carrying on of any mechanical, mining, quarrying, manufacturing or other business, as provided in Clause 18 of the second class, in Section 2 threof) may, in its corporate name, take, hold and convey such real and personal estate as is necessary for the purpose of its organization, may carry on its business, or so much thereof as is convenient, beyond the limits of the Commonwealth, and may there hold any real or personal estate necessary for conducting the same.

ACT OF 1887, MAY 24, P. L. 188, AMENDING ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 38.

Provides that iron or steel companies shall not at any one time have more than 10,000 acres of land in the Commonwealth, including leased land, except companies organized to manufacture iron with charcoal, which said companies may hold timber lands not exceeding the quantity that will be required to furnish wood for charcoal for the purposes of said companies, and said lands may be located in not exceeding four contiguous counties.

(This Act limits real estate of corporations for the purchase and sale of real estate, or for holding, leasing and selling real estate, and for maintaining or erecting and maintaining of walls or banks for the protection of low lying lands when the real estate is situated in cities or boroughs to an amount not exceeding 500 acres, and outside of such cities or boroughs to an amount not exceeding 10,000 acres; "but any number of the acres desired may be protected from encroachment by water.")

ACT OF 1883, JUNE 13, P. L. 122.
AMENDMENT OF CHARTER.

When any corporation * * * shall desire to improve, amend, or alter the article and conditions of the charter or instrument upon which said corporation is formed and established, it shall and may be lawful for such corporation to apply to the Governor of this Commonwealth for such improvement, amendment or alteration in the manner provided in this Act.

The corporation desiring such improvement, amendment or alteration, shall give notice of the intention to apply therefor, in two newspapers of general circulation, printed in the county wherein the principal office or place of business of said corporation is located, once a week for three weeks, setting forth briefly the character and objects of the desired improvements, amendments or alterations, and the intention to make application therefor.

The said corporation shall prepare a certificate, under its corporate seal, setting forth the character and objects of the proposed improvement, amendment or alteration of their charter, or the instrument upon which the said corporation is formed or established; also that all reports required by the Auditor General of the Commonwealth have been filed, and that all taxes due the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania have been paid, acknowledged by the president and secretary of said corporation before the recorder of deeds in the county wherein such corporation has its principal office or place of business; which certificate, together with proof of publication of notice, as provided in Section 2 of the supplement of an Act of which this is an amendment, shall then be produced to the Governor of the Commonwealth, who shall examine the same, and if he find it to be in proper form, and that such improvements, amendments or alterations are or will be lawful and beneficial, and not injurious to the community, and are in accord with the purpose of the charter, and that all reports required by the Auditor General of the Commonwealth have been duly filed, and that all taxes due the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania have been paid, he shall approve thereof and endorse his approval thereon, and direct letters patent to issue, in the usual form, reciting the said improvements, amendments or alteration; and the said certificate shall then be recorded in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and, with all its endorsements, shall then be recorded in the office for the recording of deeds in and for the proper county, where the principal office or place of business of said corporation is located; and from thenceforth the same shall be deemed and taken to be a part of the charter or instrument upon which said corporation so formed or established, to all intents and purposes, as if the same had originally been made a part thereof. (There is a proviso in relation to water companies.)

SECTION 4.

Nothing in this Act contained shall be constructed * * * to authorize the right of eminent domain to be given to any corporation by amendment of its charter, nor to permit any change in the objects or purposes of such corporation as shown by its original charter.

ACT OF 1903, APRIL 22, P. L. 251, SECTION 1. CHANGE OF NAME.

It shall be lawful for any corporation of this Commonwealth, heretofore or hereafter created by any general or special law, to change its corporate title by resolution of its Board of Directors, adopted by a two-thirds vote thereof, approved at any annual meeting or special meeting duly called of the stockholders by a two-thirds vote thereof. Upon such approval by the stockholders, it shall be the duty of the president of said corporation, to file in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, a certificate, under the seal of the company, setting forth the resolution adopted by the board of directors and approved by the stockholders, the date of the adoption of such resolution by the board of directors and the date of its approval by the stockholders, the date of the original incorporation of the company, the Act of Assembly under which the said corporation was created, the name under which the said corporation was originally incorporated, and all subsequent changes therein, and the name which the corporation desires to adopt. The Secretary of the Commonwealth shall examine the records in his office, and if he find that the name desired by such corporation does not conflict with the name of any corporation appearing upon said records, he shall require the said certificate to be recorded, and shall issue to the said corporation a certificate, under his hand and the seal of his office, granting to said corporation the use of said new corporation title. The Secretary of the Commonwealth shall, upon the issuing of any such certificate, require the same to be recorded in a book kept for that purpose, and certify the said change in the corporate title to the Auditor General of this Commonwealth: Provided, That any corporation, required to record the original certificate of incorporation in the office for the recording of deeds, shall, before being entitled to use the new corporate title record in the office for the recording of deeds, where the original certificate of incorporation was recorded, the said certificate granted by the Secretary of the Commonwealth authorizing the use of the new corporate title. * * *

ACT OF 1893, JUNE 8, P. L. 355, SECTION 1. CHANGE OF PRINCIPAL OFFICE.

It shall be lawful for any corporation of this State, now existing or hereafter created, to change the location of its principal office, the place of its annual and other meetings of stockholders, or the time for holding such annual meetings, or either or all, by resolution of its board of directors, adopted by a two-thirds vote thereof, approved at any annual meeting or special meeting duly called of the stockholders by a two-thirds vote thereof. Upon such approval of the stockholders, it shall be the duty of the president of such corporation to file in both the offices of the Secretary of the Commonwealth and the Auditor General of this Commonwealth, a report, under the seal of the company, specifying the change or changes so made. Nothing in this Act, however, shall authorize the location of the principal office of the holding of the annual or other meetings of stockholders outside of the limits of this Commonwealth.

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 40.
RE-CHARTER.

Corporations created by or under the laws of this State, embraced within either of the classes named in Section 2 of this Act, the charters whereof are about to expire by lapse of time from their own limitation, may be rechartered, or the charter thereof renewed, under the provisions of this Act, by preparing, having approved and recorded, the certificate named in this section for the class of corporation of which the same is one, in addition to the requirements provided in this Act for a new corporation; the certificate for a re-charter shall state the fact that it is a renewal of the former charter, naming the corporation and the date of its first charter. It shall also be accompanied with a certificate, under the seal of the corporation, showing the consent of at least a majority in interest of such corporation to such re-charter. It shall also state the financial condition of the said corporation at the date of such certificate, showing capital stock paid in, funded debt, floating debt, estimated value of property and cash assets, if any. It shall expressly accept the provisions of the Constitution of this State and of this Act, expressly surrender all privileges conferred upon such corporation by its original charter that are not enjoyed by corporations of its class under this Act or general laws of this Commonwealth. * * * From the date of letters patent * * * the said re-chartered corporation shall be and exist as a new corporation under the provisions of this Act and of its said renewed charter; and all of the rights, privileges, powers, immunities, lands, property and assets, of whatever kind or character the same may be, possessed and owned by the said original corporation, shall rest in and be owned and enjoyed by the said re-chartered corporation, as fully and with like effect as if its original charter had not expired, save as herein and by said certificate expressely stated otherwise; and all suits, claims and demands by said corporations in existence at the date of such re-charter, shall and may be sued, prosecuted and collected under the laws governing the said corporation prior to its re-charter, and all claims and demands of every nature and character in existence at said re-charter, may be collected from and off the said re-chartered corporation as fully and with like effect as if no change had taken place.

CONSTITUTION OF PENNA., ARTICLE 16, SECTION 7.

Article 16, Section 7, of the Constitution of the State provides: "The stock and indebtedness of corporations shall not be increased except in pursuance of general law nor without the consent of the presons holding the larger amount in value of the stock first obtained, at a meeting to be held, after sixty days' notice, given in pursuance of law."

ACT OF 1901, FEB. 9, P. L. 3, SECTION 1, AS AMENDED 1905, APRIL 22, P. L. 280, SECTION 1.

(The entire Act is printed in this place, though as far as it relates to increase of indebtedness it has to do with the subject matter of Section 17 of the suggested Act.)

INCREASE OF CAPITAL STOCK OR INDEBTEDNESS.

The capital stock or indebtedness, or both, of any corporation created by general or special law may, with the consent of the persons or bodies corporate holding the larger amount in the value of its stock, be increased to such an amount in the aggregate of each, without regard to the amount of the other, and regardless of any limitation upon the amount of either, prescribed in any general or special law regulating any such corporations, as it shall deem necessary to accomplish and carry on and enlarge the business and purposes of such corporation. Such increase of either may be made at once or from time to time, as the majority in interest of the stockholders shall determine, as aforesaid; and upon the authorizing of any such increase of indebtedness by the stockholders of such corporation, in the manner hereinafter provided, it shall be lawful for such corporation to secure the payment of principal or interest, or both, of all or any part of such indebtedness, by mortgage, deed of trust, or other pledge of conveyance by way of security, of all or any part of its real and personal property, rights, privileges, and franchises, and in such manner and upon such terms as its board of directors may determine.

SECTION 2.

That any corporation desirous of increasing its capital stock or indebtedness, or both, as authorized by this Act, shall, by resolution of its board of directors, adopted by a majority of the entire number thereof, declare such purpose, and thereupon by resolution, similarly adopted, direct that the question of such proposed increase shall be submitted to the stockholders of such corporation for their consent; either

(A). At any prescribed regular annual meeting or adjournment thereof, the notice whereof, stating, inter alia, that such subject would be considered thereat, shall have been published once a week for sixty days prior to such meeting in at least one newspaper published in the county, city, or borough wherein the chief office or place of business of the corporation is situate. At said meeting the question shall be submitted to the stockholders, and it shall be the duty of the president and secretary of said meeting, by such agencies or methods as to them may seem meet, to ascertain whether the persons and bodies corporate holding the larger amount in value of the stock of said corporation shall have consented to such increase, and upon being so satisfied to certify in duplicate the fact, under oath duly adminsitered: Provided, That should a stock vote be duly demanded at said meeting, it shall be the duty of the president and secretary in ascertainment of the fact of the consent, to cause such vote to be taken at the same time and place, by the same persons and in the same manner, as the vote for directors or managers of such corporation shall be taken; or

(B). At a special meeting of the stockholders, notice of the time, place and object of which shall have been published once a week for sixty days prior to said meeting in at least one newspaper published in the county, city, or borough wherein such office or place of business is situated. At such meeting thus called, or any adjournment thereof, an election of the stockholders shall be taken for or against such increase, which shall be conducted by three judges, stockholders of such corporation, appointed by the board of directors, to hold said election, and if one or more of said judges be absent the judge or judges present shall appoint a judge or judges who shall act in the place of the judge or judges absent; and said judges shall respectively take and subscribe at oath or affirmation before an officer authorized by law to administer the same, well and truly and according to law to conduct such election to the best of their ability; and the said judges shall decide upon the qualifications of voters, and when the election is closed count the number of shares voted for and against such increase, and declare whether the persons and bodies corporate holding the larger amount of the stock of such corporation have consented to such an increase or refused to consent thereto, and shall make out duplicate returns of said election, stating the number of shares of stock that voted for such increase and the number that voted against such increase, and subscribe and deliver the same to one of the chief officers of said company. Each ballot shall have endorsed thereon the number of shares thereby represented, but no share or shares transferred within sixty days shall entitle the holder or holders thereof to vote at such election or meeting; nor shall any proxy be received or entitle the holder to vote unless the same shall bear date and have been executed within four months next preceding such election or meeting; and it shall be the duty of such corporation to furnish the judges at said meeting with a statement of the amount of its capital stock, with the names of the persons or bodies corporate holding the same, and number of shares by each respectively held which statement shall be signed by one of the chief officers of such corporation, with an affidavit thereto annexed that the same is true and correct to the best of his knowledge and belief.

SECTION 3.

That is shall be the duty of such corporation, if consent is given to such increase, to file in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, within thirty days after such election, one of the copies of the certificates of the president and secretary of the annual meeting, or one of the copies of the return of such election at the special meeting hereinbefore provided for, with a copy of the resolution and notice calling the same thereto annexed; and thereafter the increase may be made at such time or times as shall be determined by the directors.

Upon the actual increase of the capital stock or indebtedness of such corporation, made pursuant thereto, it shall be the duty of the president or treasurer of such corporation, within thirty days thereafter, to make a return to the Secretary of the Commonwealth, under oath, of the amount of such increase actually made, and concurrently therewith such corporation shall pay to the State Treasurer for the use of the Commonwealth, such bonus on the actual increase shown by said return as shall then be prescribed by law. In case of neglect or omission to make said return, such corporation shall be subject to a penalty of five thousand dollars, in addition to the bonus, which penalty shall be collected on an account settled by the Auditor General and State Treasurer as accounts for taxes due the Commonwealth are settled and collected; and the Secretary of the Commonwealth shall cause said return to be recorded in a book for that purpose and furnish a copy of the same to the Auditor General.

SECTION 4.

Nothing in this Act contained shall be construed as compelling resort to the process herein provided in the case of indebtedness contracted in the usual course of corporation business. * * *

ACT OF 1893, JUNE 8, P. L. 351, SECTION 1. (AS AMENDED BY ACT OF 1905, APRIL 22, P. L. 264, SECTION 1.)
REDUCTION OF CAPITAL STOCK.

The capital stock of any corporation created by general or special law, may be reduced, from time to time, by the consent of the persons or bodies corporate holding the larger amount in value of stock of such corporation: Provided, That such reduction shall not be below the minimum amount of capital stock required by law for the formation of corporations formed for similar purposes.

SECTION 2.

That any corporation desirous of reducing its capital stock as provided by this Act shall, by a resolution of its board of directors, call a meeting of its stockholders therefor, which meeting shall be held in its chief office or place of business in this Commonwealth, and notice of the time, place and object of said meeting shall be published once a week for sixty days prior to such meeting in at least one newspaper published in the county, city or borough wherein such office or place of business is situate.

SECTION 3.

At the meeting called pursuant to the second section of this Act, an election of the stockholders of such corporation shall be taken for or against such reduction, which shall be conducted by three judges, stockholders of said corporation, appointed by the board of directors to hold said election, and if one or more of said judges be absent, the judge or judges present shall appoint a judge or judges who shall act in the place of the judge or judges absent, and who shall respectively take and subscribe an oath or affirmation before an officer authorized by law to administer the same well and truly and according to law, to conduct such elections to the best of their ability, and the said judges shall decide upon the qualification of voters, and when the election is closed, count the number of shares voted for and against such reduction, and declare whether the persons or bodies corporate holding the larger amount of the stock of such corporation have consented to such reduction or refused to consent thereto, and shall make out duplicate returns of said election, stating the number of shares of stock that voted for such reduction and the number that voted against such reduction, and subscribe and deliver the same to one of the chief officers of said company.

SECTION 4.

Each ballot shall have endorsed thereon the number of shares thereby represented, but no share or shares transferred within sixty days shall entitle the holder or holders thereof to vote at such election or meeting, nor shall any proxy be received or entitle the holder to vote unless the same shall bear date and have been executed within three months next preceding such election or meeting, and it shall be the duty of such corporations to furnish the judges at said meeting with a statement of the amount of its capital stock with the name of persons or bodies corporate holding the same, and number of shares by each respectively held, which statement shall be signed by one of the chief officers of such corporation with an affidavit thereto annexed that the same is true and correct to the best of his knowledge and belief.

SECTION 5.

That is shall be the duty of such corporation, if consent is given to such reduction, to file in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, within thirty days after such election or meeting, one of the copies of the return of such election provided for by the third section of this Act, with a copy of the resolution and notice calling the same thereto annexed, and upon the reduction of the capital stock of such corporation made pursuant thereto, it shall be the duty of the president or treasurer of such corporation, within thirty days thereafter, to make a return to the Secretary of the Commonwealth, under oath, of the amount of such reduction, and in case of neglect or omission so to do such corporation shall be subject to a penalty of five thousand dollars, which penalty shall be collected on an account settled by the Auditor General and State Treasurer as accounts for taxes due the Commonwealth are settled and collected, and the Secretary of the Commonwealth shall cause said return to be recorded in a book kept for that purpose and furnish a certified copy of the same to the Auditor General.

ACT OF 1901, JULY 2, P. L. 606, SECTION 1. CHANGE OF PAR VALUE.

It shall be lawful for any corporation, organized under the laws of this State, to change the par value or face value of the shares into which its capital stock is divided. Such change shall be authorized by a vote of a majority of the stockholders of any such company, present in person or proxy at any annual meeting, or any special meeting duly called for that purpose. Such change of the par value of the capital stock shall not be taken to increase or diminish, or change in any way, the total aggregate par value of the capital stock which said company may be authorized to issue or may have issued, but only to change the number of shares into which the same may be divided.

SECTION 2.

In case the stockholders, so present at such meeting, shall vote to increase or diminish the par value of the shares of the capital stock of the company as above provided, it shall be the duty of the proper officers of the company to file a certificate of the fact in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, under the seal of the corporation, and thereupon the proper officers of such corporation shall issue to the stockholders the proper number of shares of the capital stock of the new par value, upon the surrender of such outstanding shares by the respective holders and the cancellation thereof.

For Act of 1893, June 8, P. L. 351, Section 5, in regard to the return upon a reduction of capital stock, see Present Legislation, Section 11, supra.

Act of 1901, February 9, P. L. 3, Section 3, in regard to return upon increase of capital stock, see Present Legislation, Section 11, supra.

ACT OF 1868, MARCH 31, P. L. 50, SECTION 1.

It shall and may be lawful for any and all companies incorporated and organized under the laws of this Commonwealth * * * to invest the surplus or other funds or earnings of such companies * * * in the purchase from holders thereof any of the shares of the capital stock of the respective company. * * *

ACT OF 1901, JULY 2, P. L. 603, SECTION 1.

Hereafter, any corporation organized for profit, created by general or special laws, may purchase, hold, sell, assign, transfer, mortgage, pledge, or otherwise dispose of the shares of the capital stock of, or any bonds, securities or evidences of indebtedness created by, any other corporation or corporations of this State or any other State, and while the owner of said stock may exercise all the rights, powers and privileges of ownership, including the right to vote thereon.

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 39, CLAUSE 12.

Any such corporation (Clause 18, Corporations) may, from time to time, acquire and dispose of real estate, and may construct, have or otherwise dispose of dwellings and other buildings; but no power to sell or release the real estate of such corporation shall be exercised by the directors thereof, unless such power be expressly given in the certificates originally filed, without the consent of a majority of the stock in value consenting and agreeing to such sale or lease before making the same, which consent shall be obtained at a meeting of the stockholders to be held for that purpose, of which meeting thirty days' notice shall be given in one of the newspapers of the proper county, and such consent shall be evidenced only by the written signatures of said stockholders.

ACT OF 1905, MARCH 24, P. L. 56, SECTION 1.

* * * It shall and may be lawful for any corporation organized under the provisions of this Act either for the purpose of carrying on some manufacturing business, or for the supply of water, or for the manufacture or supplying of light, to subscribe for, take, purchase, hold and dispose of the bonds or stock in any company of the same character incorporated under the provision of this Act or its supplements, or guarantee the payment of said bonds and the interest thereon, or either principal or interest, or to enter into contracts for the use or lease of the corporate property, real, personal or mixed, of such company, upon such terms as may be agreed upon with the company or companies owning the same, to run, use, and operate such property in accordance with such contract or lease.

ACT OF 1893, MAY 11, P. L. 42, SECTION 1.

From and after the passage of this Act corporations organized for profit under the laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, may, out of the earnings of said corporations, grant allowances or pensions to employees for faithful and long continued service, who have in such service become old, infirm or disabled: Provided, That the provisions of this Act shall not apply to any director or officer of any such company or corporation.

CONSTITUTION OF PENNA., ARTICLE 16, SECTION 7.

(Prohibition against the issue of bonds except for money, labor done, or money or property actually received, and the increase in bonded indebtedness except in pursuance of general law and with the consent of the persons holding the larger amount in value of the stock obtained, at a meeting to be held after sixty days' notice.)

ACT OF 1905, APRIL 22, P. L. 280, AMENDING ACT OF 1901, FEB. 9, P. L. 3, SECTION 1.

(This Act provides that any corporation, with the consent of those holding the larger amount in value of stock, may increase its indebtedness to such an amount "as it shall deem necessary to accomplish and carry on and enlarge the business and purposes of such corporation." It also provides that the increase may be made at once or from time to time, and upon the authorizing of any such increase of indebtedness it may secure the payment of the principal or interest or both, by mortgage, deed of trust or other pledge or conveyance, of all its real and personal property, rights, privileges and franchises. See Present Legislation, Section 11, supra.)

ACT OF 1874, MAY 15, P. L. 186, SECTION 1.

It shall and may be lawful for any corporation existing by or under the authority of any law of this Commonwealth, which shall have mortgaged any part of its estate, corporate property and franchises, for the security of all or any portion of its bonded indebtedness, to mortgage its remaining estate, corporate property and franchises, or any part of the same, as a further and additional security for the same bonded indebtedness: Provided, however, that no lien then existing upon such remaining estate, property and franchises, shall be thereby impaired or affected.

ACT OF 1873, FEB. 17, P. L. 35.

(This Act makes it lawful for corporations to execute and deliver mortgages on real estate to secure the payment of their notes, bills and other negotiable paper.)

(This Act authorizes mining and manufacturing companies to make bonds and mortgages and use them as collateral on which to obtain discounts from banks or individuals.)

ACT OF 1878, APRIL 17, P. L. 22, SECTION 1.

(This Act authorizes exhibition companies to mortgage their real and personal property and franchises, to secure the payment of any indebtedness or evidences of indebtedness.)

ACT OF 1889, MAY 21, P. L. 257, SECTION 1. (AMENDING ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 13.)

It shall be lawful for all corporations to borrow money or secure any indebtedness created by them, by issuing bonds, with or without coupons attached thereto, and to secure the same by a mortgage or mortgages to be given and executed to a trustee or trustees, for the use of the bondholders, upon their real estate and machinery or on their real estate alone, to an amount not exceeding one-half of the capital stock of the corporation paid in, at a rate of interest not exceeding six per centum; (here follows a special proviso in relation to certain public service corporations, followed by a proviso that the section shall not apply to a corporation which has by statute a right to give a high rate of interest and to mortgage its property for a greater amount.)

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 39, CLAUSE 6.

The whole amount of the debts which any such company (Clause 18, corporations) at any time owes, shall not exceed the amount of its capital stock actually paid in, unless such debt be for unpaid purchase money for land bought, which debt shall only be a lien upon and collectible from said land; and in case of any excess, the directors, under whose administration it occurs, shall be jointly and severally liable to the extent of such excess for all the debts of the company then existing, and for all that are contracted, so long as they respectively continue in office, and until the debts are reduced to the amount of the capital stock: Provided, That any of the directors who are absent at the time of contracting any debts, contrary to the foregoing provisions, or who object thereto, may exempt themselves from liability by forthwith giving notice of the facts to the stockholders at a meeting which they may call for that purpose; (the rest of the section deals with the liability for making false returns.)

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 38, CLAUSE 2.

Eevery such corporation (iron or steel companies) may make and issue bonds, with or without coupons attached, bearing interest not exceeding six per centum per annum, and sell, exchange or otherwise dispose of the same, upon such terms and conditions as they may deem advisable, and such bonds, and the interest thereon, may be secured by a mortgage or mortgages upon the corporate franchises, real and leasehold estate: Provided, That they shall not issue bonds for a greater sum than three times the amount of capital stock paid in.

ACT OF 1876, APRIL 17, P. L. 30, SECTION 10. AMENDING ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 36.

(This section provides that companies "for holding, leasing and selling real estate, or for the establishment and maintenance of a school or boarding house, or opera and market house, hotel and drove yard, or both * * * may borrow money, in the manner provided in Section 13 of this Act (see the amendment of Section 13, by the Act of 1889, supra), to an amount equal to the capital stock of the company paid in, and secure the same by mortgage upon the said lots, buildings and fixtures and appurtenances. The lots referred to are "all the buildings, lots of land, premises, appurtenances necessary to the successful maintenance and carrying on of the business.")

ACT OF 1849, APRIL 21, P. L. 673, SECTION 1.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That from and after the passage of this Act it shall not be lawful for any corporation within this Commonwealth, directly or indirectly, either by itself or through any agent or agents, individual or individuals, to make, issue, re-issue, pay out or circulate, or cause to be issued, re-issued, put out or circulated, any certificate, check, order or due bill, or acknowledgment of indebtedness of and description for any purpose whatever, payable or redeemable in any goods, property or effects, or payable or redeemable in anything except in gold and silver, and that any violation of the provisions of this Act shall be held and deemed to be a forfeiture of the charter of any company so offending, and any private citizen may by quo warranto proceed according to law, to have such forfeiture declared: Provided, That this Act shall not be construed to authorize any corporation or individual, not expressly authorized by existing law, to issue any note, bill, check or certificate whatever, in the nature or similitude of a bank note, and intended for circulation; and that all laws inconsistent with this Act be, and the same are hereby repealed: And provided further, That this section shall not be construed so as to prevent any corporation from drawing orders in the ordinary course of business, not intended for circulation, or in payment of interest, and that such orders shall not be negotiable.

* * * The stock of every corporation created under the provisions of this statute (Act of 1874) shall be deemed personal property. * * *

ACT OF 1876, APRIL 17, P. L. 30, SECTION 4. (AMENDING ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 17.)

* * * No such corporation shall issue either bonds or stock except for money, labor done or money or property actually received, and all fictitious increase of stock or indebtedness in any form shall be void * * * (except for the words "in any form" this Act is identical with the Constitution of the State, Article 16, Section 7).

ACT OF 1905, MARCH 24, P. L. 56, SECTION 1. (AMENDING PRIOR ACTS.)

* * * No note or obligation given by a stockholder, whether secured by pledge or otherwise, shall be considered as a payment of any part of the capital stock.

ACT OF 1876, APRIL 17, P. L. 30, SECTION 4. (AMENDING ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 4.)

Every corporation created under the provisions of this Act or accepting its provisions, may take such real and personal estate, mineral rights, patent rights and other property as is necessary for its purposes of its organization and business, and issue stock to the amount of the value thereof, in payment thereof, and the stock so issued shall be declared and taken to be full paid stock, and not liable to any further calls or assessments; and in the charter and the certificates and statements to be made by the subscribers and officers of the corporations, such stock shall not be stated or certified as having been issued for cash paid into the company, but shall be stated or certified in this respect according to the fact.

It shall be lawful for any corporation (corporations organized for the building of ships, vessels and boats, and carriage of persons and property thereon) increasing its capital under the provisions of this Act, to take such real and personal estate, mineral rights and patent rights and other property as is necessary for the purposes of its organization and business, in payment for subscriptions to the stock so issued, and the stock so issued, after payment made of the full par value thereof, shall be declared and be full paid stock, not liable to any further calls or assessments, and the holders of stock so full paid shall not be liable in their individual capacity for any of the debts of the corporation, except for debts due laborers, mechanics or clerks, for services rendered while in the employ of the corporation, and in that case for no period exceeding six months.

See Constitution, Article 16, Section 7, and Act of 1876, April 17th, P. L. 30, Section 4, as set forth under Section 20, supra.

ACT OF 1889, MAY 9, P. L. 180, SECTION 1. (AMENDING ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 11.)

* * * All subscriptions to the capital stock shall be paid in such installments and at such times as the directors may require. * * *

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 39, CLAUSE 3.

The president and directors, with the treasurer, and clerk of such company (Clause 18, corporations) shall, after the payment of the last installments of the capital stock, make a certificate stating the amount of the capital so fixed and paid in, which certificate shall be signed and sworn to by the president, treasurer, clerk and the majority of directors, and they shall cause the same to be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds for said county.

* * * If default be made in any payment (assessment on shares) the person or persons in default shall be liable to pay, in addition to the amount so called for and unpaid, at the rate of one-half of one per centum per month for the delay of such payment, and the directors may cause suit to be brought for the recovery of the amount due, together with the penalty of one-half of one per centum per month as aforesaid, or the directors may cause the stock to be sold in the manner provided in Clause 2 of Section 39 of this Act. (Act of 1874, infra.)

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 9, P. L. 73, SECTION 39, CLAUSE 2.

Every such corporation (in the Act of 1874 this only applied to Clause 18, corporations, but by the Act of 1889, May 9, 180, supra, the provision is extended so as to apply to all corporations). If the proprietor of any share neglect to pay a sum duly assessed thereon, for the space of thirty days after the time appointed for payment, the treasurer of the company may sell by public auction a sufficient number of the shares to pay all assessments then due, with necessary incidental charges thereon. The treasurer shall give notice of the time and place appointed for such sale and of the sum on each share, by advertising the same three weeks successively before the sale in some newspaper published in said county; and a deed of the shares so sold made by the treasurer and acknowledged before a justice of the peace, and recorded by the clerk, who shall transfer said shares to the purchaser, who shall be entitled to a certificate therefor.

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 16.

Every corporation created under the provisions of this Act, or accepting its provisions, may, with the consent of the majority in interest of its stockholders, obtained at a meeting to be called for that purpose, of which public notice shall be given during thirty days in a newspaper of the proper county, issue preferred stock of the corporation, the holders of which preferred stock shall be entitled to receive such dividends thereon as the board of directors of such corporation may prescribe, payable only out of the net earnings of the corporation.

ACT OF 1873, APRIL 28, P. L. 79.

(This amends the Act of 1872, April 3, P. L. 77. The Act of 1872 was repealed by the Act of 1874, supra. Whether, in view of that repeal, this Act is in force, may be considered doubtful.)

Any company authorized by the Act to which this is a supplement, to issue preferred stock, may issue the same in different classes, to be distinguished in such manner as the directors of such company may prescribe; and they may give to the various classes such order of preference in the payment of the dividends, or in the rate of dividends thereon, or in the redemption of the principal thereof, as may be approved by the holders of a majority of the stock of the company; and the company shall have the right to redeem its preferred stock upon such terms as shall be prescribed in the issue thereof; and it may specifically appropriate for the payment of the dividends upon any class of stock, or for the redemption of the principal thereof, the revenues from any specific department of its business or the proceeds of any specified portions of its assets or property: Provided, That no injustice shall thereby be done to the existing rights of any other stockholder or creditors of the company.

ACT OF 1876, APRIL 17, P. L. 30, SECTION 4. (AMENDING ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 17.)

Every such corporation (all business corporations created under Act of 1874) may provide for the issue of deferred stock in payment for such real or personal estate or mineral rights, and if so provided, it shall be expressly stated in the charter filed or in a certificate to be made and recorded, or in the acceptance of this statute, to be filed by any corporation accepting its provisions, with the amount of such deferred stock, and the consideration of the same, and the terms on which the same shall be issued; and the said stock may be made to await payments of dividends thereon until out of the net earnings at least five per centum has been declared and paid upon the other full paid stock of the corporation.

Every such corporation (Clause 18, Corporations) * * * may by a vote of three-fourths of the general stockholders, at a meeting duly called for the purpose, issue two kinds of stock, namely: general stock and special stock; the special stock shall at no time exceed two-fifths of the actual capital of the corporation and shall be subject to redemption at par after a fixed time to be stated in the certificates. Holders of such special stock shall be entitled to receive and the corporation shall be bound to pay thereon, a fixed or half-yearly sum or dividend to be expressed in the certificates, not exceeding four per centum, and they shall in no event be liable for the debts of the corporation beyond their stock.

IBID., CLAUSE 10.

* * * When special stock is created by any corporation under this Act, the general stockholders shall be liable for all debts and contracts until the special stock is fully redeemed.

ACT OF 1895, APRIL 24, P. L. 258.

Any stockholder of any company incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth, shall be entitled to receive a certificate of the number of shares standing to his, her, or their credit on the books of the corporation, which certificates shall be signed by the president or first vice-president or other officer designated by the board of directors, countersigned by the treasurer, and sealed with the common seal of the corporation. * * *

ACT OF 1895, March 24, P. L. 56, SECTION 1. (AMENDING PRIOR ACTS.)

* * * No share shall be transferred until all previous calls thereon shall have been fully paid in, or shall have been declared forfeited for the non-payment of calls thereon.

ACT OF 1911, MAY 5, P. L. 126, SECTION 15.

There shall be no lien in favor of a corporation upon the shares represented by a certificate issued by such corporation, and there shall be no restriction upon the transfer of shares so represented, by virtue of any by-law of such corporation, or otherwise, unless the right of a corporation to such lien or other restriction is stated upon the certificate.

* * * Each certificate or evidence of stock ownership shall be transferable on such books at the pleasure of the holder, in person or by attorney, duly authorized as the by-laws may prescribe, subject, however, to all payments due or to become due thereon, and the assignee or party to whom the same shall be so transferred shall be a member of said corporation, and have and enjoy all the immunities, privileges, franchises, and be subject to all the liabilities, conditions, and penalties incident thereto, in the same manner as the original subscriber or holder would have been. * * *

ACT OF 1911, MAY 5, P. L. 126, SECTION 3.

Nothing in this Act shall be construed as forbidding a corporation—

(a) To recognize the exclusive right of a person registered on its books as the owner of shares to receive dividends, and to vote as such owner, or

(b) To hold liable for calls and assessments a person registered on its books as the owner of shares.

ACT OF 1847, MARCH 6, P. L. 222, SECTION 1.

* * * Each of the banks, savings institutions, loan companies and insurance companies, and each and every other of the companies, institutions or associations incorporated by or under any law of this Commonwealth, and legally authorized to declare and make dividends of profits amongst the stockholders thereof, shall, in the month of December of the present year, and annually thereafter, cause to be published, for four successive weeks, in one or more public newspapers, having the largest circulation, printed in the city or county in which such bank, savings institution, loan company, insurance company, or other company, institution or association may be located, or in which its principal office or place of business may be situated, a true and accurate statement, verified by the oath or affirmation of the cashier or treasurer thereof, of all dividends or profits declared on its capital stock, which at the date of such settlement, shall have remained unclaimed by the person, co-partnership or corporation authorized to receive the same, for the period of three years then next preceding; which said statement shall set forth the names, and, if known, the residence and business of the persons, co-partnerships or corporations in whose favor said dividends or profits may have been declared, the amount of such dividends or profits, and the number of shares in the capital stock upon which the same had accrued.

1847, MARCH 6, P. L. 222, SECTION 4.

At the expiration of three years after the first publication of any particular dividends or profits, balance or deposit, with the interest that has accrued thereon, as provided for by the first and second sections of this Act, such dividend or profit, balance or deposit, with the interest that has accrued, if not demanded within that time by the rightful owner or owners thereof, or their legal representatives, shall escheat to the Commonwealth, and shall be paid into the treasury thereof without discount or deduction, for commissions, fees or expenses of any description by the cashier, treasurer or other proper officer of said bank, savings institution, loan company, insurance company, saving fund society or other company, institution or association, in which dividend or profit, balance or deposit shall have remained without being demanded as aforesaid, or without being increased or diminished for the length of time aforesaid; and the said bank, savings institution, loan company, insurance company, saving fund society, or other company, institution, or association, as the case may be, shall thereupon be discharged from any obligation or liability to pay over such dividend or profit, balance or deposit, or interest thereon, to the owner or owners thereof, that the said owner or owners, or their legal representatives, upon application to the State Treasurer, for the time being and producing satisfactory proof to that officer of his, her or their right to such dividend or profit, balance or deposit, with the interest thereon, paid into the treasury as aforesaid, or any part thereof, shall receive from the Commonwealth the amount he, she or they shall be found legally or equitably entitled to: Provided, That the expense of the publication or publications required by this Act shall be paid out of such dividend or profit, balance or deposit so published.

ACT OF 1893, P. L. 355, SECTION 1.

It shall be lawful for any corporation of this State, now existing or hereafter created, to change * * * the place of its annual and other meetings of the stockholders, or the time for holding such annual meetings, or either or all, by resolution of its board of directors, adopted by a two-thirds vote thereof, approved at any annual meeting or special meeting duly called of the stockholders, by a two-thirds vote thereof. Upon such approval of the stockholders, it shall be the duty of the president of such corporation to file in both the offices of the Secretary of the Commonwealth and the Auditor General of the Commonwealth, a report, under the seal of the company specifying the change or changes so made. Nothing in this Act, however, shall authorize the holding of the annual or other meetings of the stockholders outside the limits of this Commonwealth. (It is not certain whether this Act repeals the Act of 1865, November 27, P. L. (1866) 1228, which provides "in all cases where any company has been incorporated, under the laws of this State, and a majority of the directors, corporators or stockholders thereof, are citizens of any other State, said corporation may be organized and all the meetings of such corporators, directors or stockholders held in such place, whether in this State, or elsewhere, as such majority may, from time to time appoint: Provided, however, That the annual election, for officers of such corporation, shall be held in the State of Pennsylvania at such time and place and upon such notice, by publication, in the newspapers of this State, as the by-laws of such corporation may from time to time determine.)

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 6.

This Act is identical with the suggested section.

ACT OF 1876, APRIL 25, P. L. 47.

* * * All elections for directors or trustees shall be by ballot, and every share of stock shall entitle the holder thereof to one vote, in person or by proxy, to be exercised as provided in this section.

ACT OF 1889, MAY 9, P. L. 180, SECTION 1. (AMENDING ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 11.)

* * * No stockholder shall be entitled to vote at any election, or at any meeting of stockholders, on whose share or shares any installments or arrearages may have been due and unpaid for the period of thirty days immediately preceding such election or meeting.

ACT OF 1893, MAY 26, P. L. 141, SECTION 1. (AMENDING ACT OF 1889, MAY 7, P. L. 102.)

The certificate of stock and transfer books, or either, of any corporation of this Commonwealth, shall be prima facie evidence of the right of the person named therein to vote thereon as the owner either in person or by proxy. If, however, objection is taken by an actual stockholder at the time the ballot is tendered, accompanied by a written statement under oath that the person in whose name the stock stands on such certificate, or transfer books, and who is offering to vote thereon, either in person of by proxy, is not the owner thereof, either in his own right or as active trustee with the character of his trusteeship disclosed on the face of such certificate, or transfer books, in connection with his name, it shall be the duty of the judges of election to inquire and determine summarily whether the facts are as represented in such statement, and if so, the vote or votes so tendered shall be rejected. * * *

ACT OF 1867, APRIL 15, P. L. 81.

From and after the passage of this Act no stockholder shall be allowed to cast his vote for the election of any officer or officers of any oil or other mining company, incorporated by the laws of this Commonwealth, unless such stockholders shall produce his certificate of stock, with power of attorney, properly stamped, or such other satisfactory evidence that he, she, or they, are bona fidely the owners of such stock to be so voted, as the secretary and other officers of the said company may require.

ACT OF 1901, FEB. 9, P. L. 3, SECTION 2 (B).

* * * Each ballot shall have endorsed thereon the number of shares threby represented, but no share or shares transferred within sixty days shall entitle the holder or holders thereof to vote at such election or meeting. * * *

ACT OF 1893, MAY 26, P. L. 141, SECTION 3.

As between the pledgor and pledgee of capital stock pledged to secure a specific loan with a fixed period or periods of maturity, the right to vote shall be determined as follows: First: By the written agreement of the pledgor and pledgee. Second: In all other instances the pledgor shall be held to be the owner and entitled to the right to vote.

ACT OF 1905, MARCH 16, P. L. 42, SECTION 1.

From and after the passage of this Act, executors, administrators, guardians, and trustees, whether created by last will and testament or by decree of the proper court, shall have the same right and power, either in person or by proxy, at all corporate meetings, to vote any and all shares of stock, by them held in such judiciary capacity, in any corporation in this Commonwealth, or organized under the laws of the same, as the deceased, or legal owner thereof, had in his lifetime or during his legal ownership thereof. And where such stock is certified or stands on the books of such corporation in the name of, or has passed by the operation of law or by vitrue of any last will and testament to, more than two of such executors, administrators, guardians, or trustees, and dispute shall have arisen among them, the said shares of stock shall be voted by a majority of such executors, administrators, guardians, or trustees, and in such manner and for such purposes as such majority shall authorize, direct or desire the same to be voted.

ACT OF 1876, APRIL 25, P. L. 47. (SUPPLEMENTARY TO THE ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73.)

In all elections for directors, managers, or trustees of any corporation, created under the provisions of this statuate, or accepting its provisions, each members or stockholder or other person having a right to vote may cast the whole number of his votes for one candidate, or distribute them among two or more candidates as he may prefer, that is to say; if the said member or stockholder or other person having a right to vote own one share of stock or has one vote, or is entitled to one vote for each of six directors by virtue thereof, he may give one vote to each of said six directors or six votes for any one thereof, or a less number of votes for a less number of directors whatever may be the actual number to be elected, and in this manner may distribute or cumulate his votes as he may see fit * * *

ACT OF 1903, MARCH 5, P. L. 14, SECTION 1.

Stockholders of all corporations of this Commonwealth, wherever residing, who shall be entitled to vote at any corporate meeting or election thereof, shall have and be possessed of all the right and power to vote thereat by proxy duly executed by the stockholders either with or without notarial or other acknowledgment, but properly attested by the signature of a witness, and that one person may be constituted and act as proxy for any number of stockholders: Provided, however, That proxies dated more than two months prior to any such meeting or election shall not confer the right to vote thereat.

ACT OF 1903, MARCH 24, P. L. 50.

Whenever a stock vote is duly demanded or required, on any subject submitted to the stockholders of any corporation of this Commonwealth for their action, at any annual or special meeting, such vote may be taken at and certified to such meeting, or any adjournment thereof; or, if the annual election for directors shall, under the provisions of the charter or laws governing such corporation, be held at a time which shall be within thirty days after the annual or special meeting at which such subject shall be submitted to the stockholders, then the vote on such subject may be taken at the same time and place, by the same persons, and in the same manner as the vote for directors or managers of such corporation shall be taken; or, if under the provisions of the charter or laws governing such corporations, the annual election for directors or managers thereof shall not be held at a time which shall be within thirty days after the meeting at which such subject shall be submitted to the stockholders, then the stock vote upon such subject may be taken at any time within thirty days after such meeting, by three judges to be appointed, and at a time and place to be designated by the stockholders at said meeting, and the result of the vote shall be certified by the judges under oath or affirmation, and their certificates shall be filed with the secretary of the corporation.

ACT OF 1901, FEB. 9, P. L. 3, SECTION 2 (B).

* * * At such meeting thus called [a meeting to increase the capital stock] or any adjournment thereof, an election of the stockholders shall be taken for or against such increase, which shall be conducted by three judges, stockholders of such corporation, appointed by the board of directors to hold said election, and if one or more of said judges be absent the judge or judges present shall appoint a judge or judges who shall act in the place of the judge or judges absent; and said judges shall respectively take and subscribe an oath or affirmation before an officer authorized by law to administer the same, well and truly according to law to conduct such election to the best of their ability.

No person acting as judge or officer holding an election for any corporation, shall enter on the duties of his office or appointment until he shall take and subscribe an oath or affirmation before a judge, alderman, justice of the peace, or other person qualified by law to administer oaths, that he will discharge the duties of his office or appointment with fidelity, that he will not receive any vote but such as he verily believes to be legal; and if any such judge or officer shall, knowingly and willfully, violate his oath or affirmation, he shall be subject to all the penalties imposed by law upon the officers of the general election of this Commonwealth violating their duties, and shall be proceeded against in like manner, and with like effect; and if any election as aforesaid, be held without the person holding the same having first taken an oath or affirmation, as aforesaid, or be invalid for any other reason, such election shall be set aside in the manner now provided by law, and a new election ordered by the court of common pleas of the proper county, upon petition of not less than five stockholders supported by proof satisfactory to said court.

ACT OF 1891, P. L. 61. (AMENDING SECTION 5 OF THE ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73.)

The by-laws of every corporation created under the provisions of this statute, or accepting the same, shall be deemed and taken to be its law, subordinate to this statute, the charter of the same, the Constitution and laws of this Commonwealth, and the Constitution of the United States. They shall be made by the stockholders or members of the corporation at a general meeting called for that purpose, unless the charter prescribes another body or a different mode. They shall prescribe the time and place of meeting of the corporation, the powers and duties of its officials, and such other matters as may be pertinent and necessary for the business to be transacted, and may contain penalties for the breach thereof not exceeding twenty dollars.

Existing statutory law does not deal with this liability.

ACT OF 1876, APRIL 17, P. L. 30, SECTION 3. (AMENDING ACT OF 1879, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 14.)

The stockholders in each of said corporations (all corporations formed under the Act of 1874) shall be liable, in their individual capacity, to the amount of stock held by each of them, for all work or labor done to carry on the operations of each of said corporations. * * *

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 39, CLAUSE 11.

The stockholders of any and all corporations under this Act, shall be personally liable for all sums of money due to laborers, clerks and operatives for services rendered within six months before demand made upon the corporation, and its neglect and refusal to make payment; and when judgment is obtained against any corporation for wages or labor due to an amount not exceeding $200 said corporation shall not be entitled to stay of execution. (This section in spite of the general wording of the clause applies apparently only to Clause 18, Corporations.)

ACT OF 1889, APRIL 17, P. L. 37, SECTION 2. (APPLIES ONLY TO SHIPBUILDING CORPORATIONS.)

* * * And the holders of stock so full paid shall not be liable in their individual capacity for any debts of the corporation, except for debts due laborers, mechanics or clerks for services rendered while in the employ of the corporation, and in that case for no period exceeding six months.

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 38, CLAUSE 8.

(Iron and steel corporations.)

The stockholders of every company incorporated for the purposes named in this section shall only be individually liable for debts due to the laborers, mechanics or clerks, for services and in that case for no period exceeding six months.

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 15.

In any action or bill in equity brought to enforce any liability under the provisions of this Act (this includes liability of stockholders to laborers, clerks, etc.) the plaintiff may include as defendants any one or more of the stockholders of such corporation claimed to be liable therefor; and if judgment be given in favor of the plaintiff for his claim, or any part thereof, and any one or more of the stockholders so made defendants, shall be found to be liable, judgment shall be given against him or them. The execution upon such judgment shall be first levied on the property of such corporation, if to be found in the county where the chief business of the corporation is carried on, and in case such property, sufficient to satisfy the same, cannot be found in said county, the deficiency, or so much thereof as the stockholder or stockholders, defendants in such judgment, shall be liable to pay, shall be collected of the property of such stockholder or stockholders; on the payment of any judgment as aforesaid, or any part thereof, by one or more stockholders, the stockholder or stockholders so paying the same shall be entitled to have such judgment, or so much thereof as may have been paid by him or them, assigned to him or them for his or their benefit, with power to enforce the same in manner aforesaid; first against the company, and in case the amount so paid by him or them, shall not be collected of the property of the corporation, then ratably against the other solvent stockholders, if any such there be, originally liable for the claim on which such judgment was obtained; but no stockholder shall be personally liable for payment of any debt contracted by any such corporation, unless suit for the collection of the same shall be brought against any such stockholder or stockholders within six months after such debt shall have become due.

ACT OF 1901, APRIL 19, P. L. 80, SECTION 1.

In all corporations heretofore or hereafter incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth * * * the board of directors may consist of any number of persons not less than three. The number of directors may be increased or diminished from time to time by the stockholders of any such corporations, at any regular annual meeting or any special meeting called for that purpose, of which notice shall be given as required by the by-laws, and it shall be lawful for any such corporation, by its by-laws, to authorize the board of directors to increase or decrease the number of directors from time to time without the vote of the stockholders.

ACT OF 1887, MAY 31, P. L. 281, SECTION 2.

(This Act covers the same ground as the Act of 1901, April 19, P. L. 80, but it contains an additional proviso which is not included in the later Act, and may therefore be in force. The proviso is as follows:

"At least one-third of the directors of every corporation shall be and remain, during their term of service, residents of the State of Pennsylvania.")

ACT OF 1891, MAY 14, P. L. 61. (AMENDING ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 5.)

* * * The business of every corporation created hereunder, or accepting the same, shall be managed and conducted by a president, a board of directors or trustees, a secretary or clerk, a treasurer and such other officers, agents and factors as the corporation authorizes for that purpose, * * * the directors or trustees shall be chosen annually by the stockholders and members, at the time fixed by the by-laws, and shall hold their office until others are chosen and quilified in their stead; the manner of such choice and of the choice or appointment of all other agents and officers of the company shall be prescribed by the by-laws. * * *

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 9.

In case of the death, removal or resignation of the president or any of the directors, treasurer or other officer of any such company, the remaining directors may supply the vacancy thus created until the next election.

ACT OF 1887, JUNE 27, P. L. 411, SECTION 1.

Whenever the stockholders of any corporation incorporated under the Act of April 29, 1874, or any other law of this Commonwealth, shall, at a meeting called for the purpose, decide by a vote of those present, either in person or by proxy, to elect a portion of their directors for a term or terms longer than one year, it may and shall be lawful for such corporation, at the next ensuing election to divide the directors or managers which are to be chosen, into two, three, or four classes, and to elect the first class to serve for the term of one year, and the second, third or fourth for two, three or four years, respectively, and at all ensuing elections of said corporations, the stockholders shall only elect the number of directors necessary to take the place of those whose term of office shall then expire, and such directors shall be elected for the longest term for which any class may have been elected as hereinbefore provided.

ACT OF 1865, NOV. 27, P. L. (1866) 1228, SECTION 1.

In all cases where any company has been incorporated, under the laws of this State, and a majority of the directors * * * thereof, are citizens of any other State, * * * all the meeting of such * * * directors (may be) held in such place, whether in this State or elsewhere, as such majority may, from time to time appoint. * * *

ACT OF 1830, FEB. 6, P. L. 42, SECTION 2.

It shall be competent for the trustees, directors or managers of any corporation, heretofore or hereafter established by the laws of this Commonwealth, or for the stockholders therein, at their general meetings, to alter the times and places fixed by law for the meeting of said trustees, managers, directors or stockholders, full notice of such intended alteration having been given at the previous meeting of such trustees, directors, managers or stockholders: Provided, That no such alteration shall be made in the time of the meeting of said trustees, managers, or directors, but with the consent of two-thirds of their number, or in the time of meeting of the said stockholders, but with the consent of two-thirds of convened at a general meeting.

ACT OF 1891, MAY 14, P. L. 61, SECTION 1. (AMENDING ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 5.)

* * * A majority of the whole number of such directors or trustees shall be necessary to constitute a quorum.

ACT OF 1891, MAY 14, P. L. 61, SECTION 1. (AMENDING ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 5.)

The business of every corporation created hereunder, or accepting the same, shall be managed and conducted by a president, a board of directors or trustees, a secretary or clerk, a treasurer, and such other officers, agents and factors as the corporation authorizes for that purpose, and nothing in any law contained shall prevent or be construed to prohibit the vice-president, treasurer, solicitor or other officer of any corporation, organized or existing under this Act, from being a director of such company and receiving at the same time such compensation for his services as such officer as the board of directors of such company may direct, * * * the manner of such choice [of director] and of the choice or appointment of all other agents and officers of the company shall be prescribed by the by-laws. The number of directors or trustees shall not be less than three; one of them shall be chosen president by the directors, or by the members of the corporation, as the by-laws shall direct. * * * The secretary or clerk shall be sworn and shall record all the votes of the corporation and the minutes of its transactions in a book to be kept for that purpose. The treasurer shall give bond in such sum and with such sureties as shall be required by the by-laws for the faithful discharge of his duties, and he shall keep the moneys of the corporation in a separate book account to his credit as treasurer, and if he shall neglect or refuse so to do, he shall be liable to a penalty of fifty dollars for every day he shall fail to do so, to be recovered at the suit of any informant, in an action or debt.

ACT OF 1869, APRIL 17, P. L. 71, SECTION 2.

[This section, applying only to mining and manufacturing companies, contains the same provision as that in the Act of May 14, 1891, P. L. 61, supra, in respect to the duty of the treasurer to keep the money of the corporation in a separate bank account, and the penalty for not doing so, and in addition it contains the following provision, which may still be in force as applying to the drectors of such companies: "Every director of any such corporation who shall consent to such breach of duty, or, having knowledge thereof, shall not enter his protest on the minutes of the company, shall be liable to the same penalty, to be recovered in like manner."]

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 9.

In case of the death, removal, or recignation of the president, * * * treasurer or other officer of such company, the remaining directors may supply the vacancy thus created until the next election.

ACT OF 1891, MAY 20, P. L. 101, SECTION 1.

It shall be lawful for any vice-president, treasurer or other salaried officer of any * * * business corporation to hereafter serve, or to have heretofore concurrently served such corporation as a director thereof, when lawfully elected to said position.

ACT OF 1849, APRIL 7, P. L. 563, SECTION 24.

It shall be the duty of the directors of every such company [manufacturing corporation] to cause a book to be kept by the treasurer or secretary thereof, at the office or principal place of business of the company, which shall contain the names of all persons, alphabetically arranged, who are, or who shall within one year, have been stockholders of such company, showing their places of residence, the number of the shares of the stock held by them, respectively, and the time when they respectively became the owners thereof, and the amount paid on such shares, and the total amount of capital stock paid in; which book shall at the end of the year be carefully preserved in the office of the company for future reference, and shall, during the usual business hours of the day, on every business day, be open for the inspection of all persons who may desire to inspect the same, and any and every person shall have the right to make extracts from such book; * * * and if any such company shall neglect or refuse to keep such book, or to make or cause to be made any proper entry therein, or shall, on application made to any director or officer thereof, neglect or refuse to exhibit the same, or to allow extracts to be taken therefrom, as hereinbefore required, such company shall forfeit and pay to the party aggrieved fifty dollars for each and every day it shall so neglect or refuse as aforesaid, recoverable by said party as in other cases of claims against such company.

ACT OF 1869, APRIL 17, P. L. 71, SECTION 1.

[This extends the Act of 1849 supra, to "all manufacturing or mining companies now or hereafter incorporated under any special or general law of this Commonwealth."]

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 39, CLAUSE 6.

* * * If any certificate made, or any statement or notice given by the officers of a company, under the provisions of this Act, is false in any material representation, all the officers who signed the same, knowing it to be false, shall be jointly and severally liable for all debts of the company contracted while they were officers or stockholders thereof.

IBID., CLAUSE 5.

If the directors of any company declare any dividend when the company is insolvent, or the payment of which would render it insolvent, they shall be jointly and severally liable for all the debts of the company then existing, and for all thereafter contracted, so long as they respectively continue in office: Provided, That the amount for which they shall be liable shall not exceed the amount of such dividend, and if any of the directors are absent at the time of making the dividend or object thereto, at said time, and file their objections, in writing, with the clerk of the company, they shall be exempted from such liability.

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 39, CLAUSE 8.

Every such corporation (Clause 18, Corporations) shall annually, in September, make, and the president, treasurer and majority of the directors, shall sign, swear to and deposit with the recorder of deeds of such county, a certificate stating the amount of capital stock paid in, the names and numbers of shares held by each stockholder, the amount invested in real estate and in personal estate, the amount of property owned, and debts due to the corporation, on the first day of August next preceding the date of such certificates, and the amount, as nearly as can be ascertained, of existing demands against the corporation at the date of the certificate.

IBID., SECTION 38, CLAUSE 3.

The president and directors of every such corporation (iron or steel companies) shall annually lay before the stockholders a full and complete statement of the business and affairs of the corporation for the preceding year; and it shall also be their duty to make report to the Auditor General, at such time and in such form as is or may be prescribed by law, of the operations of the corporation, to the end that he may ascertain the amount of tax due by said corporation to the Commonwealth, and such report shall be verified by oaths or affirmations of the president and treasurer of such corporation; and any such corporation which shall neglect or refuse to report to the Auditor General, according to law, shall be liable to a penalty of five hundred dollars, for the use of the Commonwealth, to be sued for and recovered as debts of like amount are or may be by law recoverable.

ACT OF 1874, MAY 11, P. L. 135, SECTION 4.

* * * It shall be his (the Secretary of Internal Affairs) especial duty to exercise a watchful supervision over * * * business corporations of the State, and to see that they confine themselves strictly within their corporate limits; and in any case, any citizen or citizens shall charge, under oath, any corporation with transcending its corporate functions or infringing upon the rights of individual citizens, said secretary shall carefully investigate such charges and may require from said corporation a special report, as enjoined in the Constitution of the State; and in case he believes the charges are just, and the matter complained of is beyond the ordinary province of individual redress, he shall certify his opinion to the Attorney General of the State, whose duty it shall be, by an appropriate legal remedy, to redress the same by a proceeding in the courts, at the expense of the State. * * *

ACT OF 1911, JUNE 20, P. L. 1092.

Whenever material, rolling stock, or property, whether located wholly or partly within this State, and franchises, or all or any part of such material, rolling-stock, property and franchises, of any gas, water, coal, iron, steel, lumber, oil, or mining or manufacturing, transporation or telegraph company, or any railroad, canal, turnpike, bridge, or plank road, or of any corporation created by or under any law of this State, or of this State and any other State or States, shall be sold and conveyed, under and by virtue of any process or decree of any court of this State or of the United States, or under or by virtue of a power of sale contained in any mortgage or deed of trust, without any process or decree of court in the premises, the person or persons for or on whose account such material, rolling-stock, property, and franchises, * * * so sold and conveyed, may be purchased, shall be and they are hereby constituted a body politic and corporate, and shall be vested with all the rigtht, title, interest, property, possession, claims, and demand, in law and equity, of, in and to such material, rolling-stock, property or franchise, so sold and conveyed, * * * with the appurtenances, and with all the rights, powers, immunities, privileges, and franchises of the corporation as whose the same may have been sold, and which may have been granted to or conferred thereupon by any Act or Acts of Assembly whatsoever, in force at the time of such sale or conveyance, and subject to all the restrictions imposed upon such corporations by any such Act or Acts, except so far as the same are modified hereby, or have been by any amendments or supplements thereto or modifications thereof; and with all the rights, powers, immunities, privileges, and franchises granted to or conferred by Acts now existing upon corporations of a similar kind, and subject to all restrictions imposed by statute, except as subsequently modified, or modified hereby.

ACT OF 1911, JUNE 20, P. L. 1092.

* * * The person or persons purchasing, for or on whose account any such material, rolling-stock, property and franchises * * * may have been purchased, shall meet, within thirty days after the conveyance thereof shall be delivered —public notice of the time and place of such meeting having been given, at least once a week for two weeks, in at least one newspaper published in the city or county in which such sale may have been held—and organize said new corporation by electing a board of directors, consisting of not less than five nor more than fifteen [to continue in office until the first Monday succeeding such meeting, when, and annually thereafter on the said day, a like election for directors shall be held, the directors so elected to serve for one year and until their successors are elected, unless the directors shall be divided into not more than four classes, in which case the term of office of one class shall expire on each first Monday of May thereafter] and shall adopt a corporate name and common seal, determine the amount of the capital stock thereof without being restricted to the amount theretofore issued by the corporation whose property and franchises had been sold. Not in excess, however, of the aggregate amount of the copital stock authorized to be issued by the corporation whose property and franchises had been sold, together with the amount of the bonded indebtedness of such corporation outstanding at the time of the sale, and of any receiver's certificate or other receiver's indebtedness necessary to be paid, and the amount that will represent all further moneys contributed to such new or reorganized corporation. The said stock thus issued by the said new corporation may consist wholly of common stock, or partly of common stock and partly of preferred stock, and the whole, or any part thereof, may be issued as fully paid stock, in payment, or part payment, for the property so purchased. Said new corporation shall have power and authority to make and issue certificates therefor, in shares of not more than one hundred dollars each, and may at any time thereafter create and issue preferred stock to such an amount and on such terms as such corporation may deem necessary; and, from time to time, may issue bonds to any amount, and may secure the same by one or more mortgages upon the real and personal property and corporate rights and franchises, or either, or any part or parts thereof. * * *

ACT OF 1878, MAY 25, P. L. 145, SECTION 2.

It shall be the duty of such new corporation, within one calendar month after its organization, to make a certificate thereof, under its common seal, attested by the signature of its president, specifying the date of its organization, the name so adopted, the amount of capital stock, and the names of its president and directors, and transmit the said certificate to the Secretary of State, at Harrisburg, to be filed in his office and there remain of record; and a certified copy of such certificate, so filed, shall be evidence of the corporate existence of said new corporation.

ACT OF 1909, MAY 3, P. L. 408, SECTION 1.

It shall be lawful for any corporation, now or hereafter organized under the provisions of any general or special Act of Assembly authorizing the formtaion of any corporation or corporations, to merge its corporate rights, franchises, powers and privileges with and into those of any other corporation or corporations, transacting the same of a similar line of business, so that by virtue of this Act such corporations may consolidate and so that all the property, rights, franchises and privileges then by law vested in either or such corporations so merged, shall be transferred to and vested in the corporation into which such merger shall be made; * * * [Several provisos follow, relating to public service corporations which are not included within the scope of the suggested Act.]

ACT OF 1909, MAY 3, P. L. 408, SECTION 2.

Said merger or consolidation shall be made under the conditions, provisions and restrictions, and with the powers herein set forth, to wit:

First. The directors of each corporation shall enter into a joint agreement, under the corporate seal of each corporation, for the merger and consolidation of said corporations; prescribing the terms and conditions thereof, the mode of carrying the same into effect, the name of the new corporation, the number and names of the directors and other officers thereof, and who shall be the first directors and officers, and their places of residence, the number of shares of the capital stock, the amount or par value of each share, and the manner of converting the capital stock of each of said corporations into the stock of the new corporation, and how and when directors and officers shall be chosen, with such other details as they shall deem necessary to perfect the said consolidation and merger; but said agreement shall not be effective unless the same shall be approved by the stockholders of said corporations in the manner hereinafter provided.

Second. Said agreement shall be submitted to the stockholders of each of said corporations at separate special meetings or at any annual meeting, of the time, place and object of which respective meetings due notice shall be given by publication, once a week for two consecutive weeks, before said respective meetings, in at least one newspaper in the county or in each of the counties in which the principal office of said respective corporations shall be situate—excepting in the case of the merger or consolidation of certain corporations which, upon their original incorporation, are required by the Constitution to publish notice of intention to incorporate for a longer period than two weeks, in which case notice by publication shall be as required by the Constitution—and at said meetings the said agreement of the directors shall be considered, and a vote of the stockholders in person, or by proxy, shall be taken, by ballot, for the adoption or rejection of the same, each share of stock entitling the holder thereof to one vote; and if a majority in amount of the entire capital stock of each of said corporations shall vote in favor of said agreement, merger and consolidation, then that fact shall be certified by the secretary of each corporation, under the corporate seal thereof, and said certificates, together with the said agreement, or a copy thereof, shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, who shall forthwith present the same to the Governor for his approval, and when approved by the Governor the said agreement shall be deemed and taken to be the act of consolidation of said corporations.

ACT OF 1909, MAY 3, P. L. 408, SECTION 3.

Upon the filing of said certificates and agreement, or copy of the agreement, in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and upon the issuing of new letters patent thereon by the Governor, the said merger shall be deemed to have taken place, and the said corporations to be one corporation under the name adopted in and by said agreement, possessing all the rights, privileges and franchises theretofore vested in each of them, and all the estate and property, real and personal, and rights of action of each of said corporations, shall be deemed and taken to be transferred to and vested in the said new corporation without any further act or deed: Provided, That all rights of creditors and all liens upon the property of each of said corporations shall continue unimpaired, and the respective constituent corporations may be deemed to be in existence to preserve the same; and all debts, duties and liabilities of each of said constituent corporations shall thenceforth attach to the said new corporation, and may be enforced against it to the same extent and by the same process as if said debts, duties and liabilities had been contracted by it. But such merger and consolidation shall not be complete, and no such consolidated corporation shall do any business of any kind, until it shall have first obtained from the Governor of the Commonwealth new letters patent, and shall have paid to the State Treasurer a bonus as prescribed by law upon all its capital stock in excess of the amount of capital stock of the several corporations so consolidating, upon which the bonus required by law has been theretofore paid: And provided further, That new letters patent shall not be issued by the Governor of the Commonwealth until each and every corporation entering into and forming the consolidated corporation shall have filed with the Secretary of the Commonwealth a certificate from the Auditor General of the Commonwealth, setting forth that all reports required by the Auditor General of the Commonwealth have been duly filed to the date of the proposed merger, and that all taxes due the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania have been paid, up to and including said date.

[See present legislation, Section 55.]

ACT OF 1909, MAY 3, P. L. 408, SECTION 4.

A certified copy of said certificate and agreement, or copy of agreement, so to be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, shall be evidence of the lawful holding and action of such meetings, and of the merger and consolidation of said corporations.

[See present legislation under Section 55.]

If any stockholder or stockholders of any corporation, which shall become a party to an agreement of merger and consolidation hereunder, shall be dissatisfied with or object to such consolidation, and shall have voted against the same at the stockholders' meeting, it shall and may be lawful for any such stockholder or stockholders, within thirty days after the adoption of said agreement of merger and consolidation by the stockholders, as herein provided, and upon reasonable notice to said corporation, to apply by petition to any court of common pleas of the county in which the chief office of such corporation may be situate, or to a judge of said court in vacation, if no such court sits during said period, to appoint three disinterested persons to estimate and appraise the damages, if any, done to such stockholder or stockholders by said consolidation. Upon such petition, it shall be the duty of said court or judge to make such appointment; and the award of the persons so appointed, or of a majority of them, when confirmed by the said court, shall be final and conclusive; and the persons so appointed shall also appraise the share or shares of said stockholders, in the said corporations, at the full market value thereof, without regard to any appreciation or depreciation in consequence of the said consolidation; which appraisement, when confirmed by the said court, shall be final and conclusive; and the said corporation may, at its election, either pay to the said stockholder or stockholders the amount of damages so found and awarded, if any, or the value of the stock so ascertained; and upon the payment of the value of the stock, as aforesaid, the said stockholder or stockholders shall transfer the stock so held by them to the said corporation, to be disposed of by the directors thereof or to be retained for the benefit of the other stockholders; and in case the value of said stock, as aforesaid, shall not be so paid within thirty days after the said award shall have been confirmed by the said court, the damages so found and confirmed shall be a judgment against said corporation, and may be collected as other judgments in said court are by law recoverable.

(The Act of 1901, May 29, P. L. 349, amended by the Act of 1905, March 31, P. L. 95, was enacted as a supplement to the Act of 1874, April 29, P. L. 73, and provides for the merger and consolidation of a corporation with any other corporation, not restricting such consolidation to a corporation transacting the same or a similar kind of business. In practically all other particulars the Act is the same as the later Act of 1909, supra. The Act of 1909 does not expressly repeal the Act of 1901, and it may therefore be in force.)

ACT OF 1856, APRIL 9, P. L. 293.

It shall be lawful for any court of common pleas of the proper county to hear the petition of any corporation under the seal thereof, by and with the consent of a majority of a meeting of the corporators, duly convened, praying for permission to surrender any power contained in its charter, or for the dissolution of such corporation; and if such court shall be satisfied that the prayer of such petition may be granted without prejudice to the public welfare, or the interests of the corporators, the court may enter a decree in accordance with the prayer of the petition, whereupon such power shall cease or such corporation be dissolved. * * *

ACT OF 1874, APRIL 29, P. L. 73, SECTION 39, CLAUSE 10.

* * * The court of common pleas of the proper county shall have the same power to dissolve such corporation (Clause 18, Corporations) upon petitions filed under the corporate seal, which it now has with regard to other corporations. * * *

ACT OF 1889, JUNE 1, P. L. 420, SECTION 32.

No corporation * * * made taxable by this Act, shall hereafter be dissolved by the decree of any court of common pleas, nor shall any judicial sale be valid, or a distribution of the proceeds thereof be made, until all taxes due the Commonwealth have been fully paid into the State Treasury, and a certificate of the Auditor General, State Treasurer and Attorney General to this effect filed in the proper court, with the proceedings for dissolution or sale.

ACT OF 1883, JUNE 13, P. L. 122, SECTION 5.

Any corporation of the second class, created under the provisions of the Act to which this is a supplement, or any of its supplements, that shall not, within two years from the date of its letters patent, proceed in good faith to organize and to do the things contemplated by its charter, and have paid up at least one-fourth of its capital stock, shall be held and deemed to have forfeited its charter, and the Attorney General shall, on the application of any citizen, take the proper legal steps to forfeit and vacate its said charter. * * *

If any company incorporated under this Act, or any of its supplements, shall not proceed in good faith to carry on its work and construct or acquire its necessary buildings, structures, property or improvements within the space of two years from the date of its letters patent, and shall not within the space of five years thereafter complete the same, the rights and privileges thereby granted to said corporation shall revert to the Commonwealth: Provided, however, That it shall be lawful for any such corporation, who shall have proceeded in good faith as aforesaid, at any time before the expiration of the said period of five years, or of any extension thereof, to apply to the court of common pleas in and for the county in which said corporation shall have its principal office for an extension of such time as herein provided. Such application shall be made upon a petition, under the common seal of such corporation, and verified by its president or other presiding officer, setting out the grounds of the application, and that the same is made pursuant to a resolution of the board of directors of said company at a meeting called for that purpose, a duly certified copy of which resolution shall be annexed to said petition. Thereupon it shall be the duty of such court to set down said petition for hearing before it upon some day to be fixed by said court, and to direct that notice of such petition shall be given by publication or otherwise, as the court shall direct. Upon the day so fixed, or upon such subsequent day or days as the matter may be adjourned to, said court shall proceed to a hearing of said petition and it being made to appear to said court that the order of notice herein provided for has been complied with, said court may, by order, adjudge and direct that the time of such corporation to complete its necessary buildings, structures, property, or improvements, shall be extended for a period not exceeding five years beyond the time fixed by law for the completion thereof, and thereupon, upon filing a duly certified copy of such order in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, the time of such corporation to complete its necessary buildings, structures, property or improvements shall be extended as provided in such order: Provided further, That when said buildings, structures, property or improvements are wholly within one county, said application shall be made to the court of common pleas in and for said county.

(Act of 1903, March 27, P. L. 79, Section 1, and Act of 1870, April 1, P. L. 45; Section 1 relates to the dissolution of corporations incorporated prior to the passage of the respective Acts under particular circumstances. These Acts are not cited for repeal. See infra.)

ACT OF 1856, APRIL 9, P. L. 293, SECTION 1.

* * * The decree (of Dissolution) of the said court (see this section as set forth under Present Legislation in Section 61, supra) shall not go into effect until a certified copy thereof be filed and recorded in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

ACT OF 1907, MAY 23, P. L. 204. (AMENDING THE ACT OF 1881, MAY 21, SECTION 1.)

All corporations for mining, manufacturing or trading purposes, whether created by general or special Acts of Assembly, whose charters may have expired, or which may have been dissolved or may hereafter be dissolved by any judicial decree, may bring suits and maintain and defend suits already brought, for the protection and possession of their property, and the collection of debts and obligations owing to or by them, and sell, convey and dispose of their property, and make a title therefor, as fully and effectively as if their charters had not expired or such decree had not been made; and the officers last elected, or the survivors of them, shall be officers to represent said corporation, for such purposes, and if no officers survive, the stockholders may elect officers under their by-laws: Provided, That this Act shall be construed only so as to enable said corporations to realize and divide their assets and wind up their affairs, and not to transact new business.

ACT OF 1872, APRIL 4, P. L. 46, SECTION 1.

Whenever any corporation, incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth, shall have been dissolved by judgment of ouster, upon proceedings of quo warranto in any court of competent jurisdiction, all the estate, both real and personal, of which such corporations are in any way seized or possessed, shall pass to and vest in the persons who at the time of such dissolution are the officers of such corporation, in trust to hold the same for the benefit of the stockholders and creditors of the corporation.

ACT OF 1891, APRIL 15, P. L. 15, SECTION 1. (AMENDING ACT OF 1885, JUNE 25, SECTION 1.)

Whenever it has occurred or shall happen that any corporation has been or shall be dissolved, whether by decree of court, expiration of time, or otherwise, owning land or other real estate within this Commonwealth, it shall and may be lawful for the court of common pleas of the county wherein the real estate is, or shall be located, upon the petition of any one or more of the shareholders or corporators, or their legal representatives, and personal notice to and service upon all known parties in interest, whose places of residence are known, and such further notice, by advertisement, to others interested, as the court may direct, if no reasonable and sufficient cause be shown to the contrary, to authorize the sale of such real estate, in fee simple, at either public or private sale, upon such terms as the court may designate, by a trustee to be appointed for that purpose, which trustee, before making such sale, shall give security for the faithful application of the proceeds of such sale according to law, to be approved by the court, in double the probable value of the land to be sold, and the proceeds of such sale shall be distributed by the party making the same, as part of the effects of the defunct corporation, to creditors or shareholders, as the said court may adjudge them to be entitled, and if said corporation had made sale of real estate and had not conveyed the same, such court may decree conveyance in specific execution of such contract in manner aforesaid.

ACT OF 1893, APRIL 26, P. L. 26, SECTION 1.

Whenever any corporation incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth shall be dissolved by judgment of ouster upon proceedings of quo warranto in any court of competent jurisdiction, the said court, or in vacation any of the law judges thereof, shall have power to appoint a receiver, who shall have all the powers of a receiver appointed by a court of chancery to take possession of all the estate, both real and personal thereof, and make distribution of the assets among the persons entitled to receive the same according to law. The powers of such receiver may continue as long as the court deems necessary for said purposes, and he shall be held to supersede an assignee of the corporation in possession.

SUGGESTED ACT.

Second draft of a proposed "Act to provide for the incorporation, regulation, and dissolution of certain business corporations" prepared by the joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to consider and report upon a revision of the corporation and revenue laws of the Commonwealth.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

Those portions of the proposed Act which appear in brackets indicate a change in or an addition to the present statute law.

Over 11,000 copies of the first draft were published and distributed throughout the State. Public hearings were held by the Committee at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Erie and Scranton. A large number of suggestions were received, and as a result a number of changes in substance and form have been made in the present draft. Attention is called to each change in the notes.

PART I.

INCORPORATION.

INCORPORATORS.

Section 1. Any three or more natural* persons of full age, one of whom shall be a citizen of Pennsylvania,† may form a corporation under the provisions of this Act.

*A corporation is not such a person as may be an incorporator; see Hall Association of Washington Camp, 26 Pa. C. C. 206 (1901); Central Railroad of N. J. vs. P. R. R. Company, 31 N. J. Eq. 475.

†It is suggested that the requirement that one shall be a citizen of the State be omitted. The tendency of State statutes is to do away with requirements in respect to citizenship and residency of incorporators. Thirty-six States and territories have no such requirements.

PURPOSES FOR WHICH CORPORATION MAY BE FORMED.

Section 2. A corporation may be formed for any lawful business purpose [or purposes]* except that of

(a) The rendering or furnishing, or offer to render or furnish, for public use, of the following service or supplies:

I. The transportation or carriage of persons or property, or both, between points within this Commonwealth, by means of or facilitated by, canals, railroads and railways by whatsoever power operated, by cable lines, traction lines, stage lines, express lines, special car lines, baggage lines, freight and through freight lines, forwarding lines, pipe lines, by log booms or dams, incline planes, turnpike roads, plank roads, boulevards, bridges, tunnels, ferries, vessels or steamships, or by any other form of, or facility in connection with any form of, common carriage of persons or property.

*The change is in accordance with the legislation in the majority of the States, the argument in its favor being, that, while it is clear that a public service business should not be combined with a purely private business, no satisfactory reason has been perceived why persons engaged in a purely private business should be obliged to confine themselves to one purpose. For the protection of their creditors each purpose should be clearly set forth, and this is required in Section 3.

II. The operation, management and control of all docks, wharves, piers, quays, dry-docks, lighters, towing vessels, stations, storage warehouses, grain, and other elevators, ventilating, refrigerating and heating systems or equipment, the provision of food and drink for passengers, and the feeding and watering and care of live stock, in connection with such transportation between points within this Commonwealth, as well as the operation of all other conveniences, appliances, facilities or epuipment utilized in connection with or appertaining to, such transportation or carriage of persons or property, whether the service be common carriage or merely in facilitation of common carriage.

III. The transmission of intelligence between points within this Commonwealth, by electricity or by means of telephone lines or telegraph lines, with or without wires, or by any other method or system of communication, including the operation of all conveniences, appliances, instrumentalities, facilities, or equipment utilized in connection therewith or appertaining thereto.

IV. The collection, production, generation, manufacture, storage, untilization, sale and distribution within this Commonwealth, of natural and artificial gas, electricity, water, steam, air, vapor, or energy for light, heat, power, fuel, refrigeration or other use, in any form or by any method whatsoever, and the operation of all conveniences, appliances, facilities or equipment utilized in connection therewith, or appertaining thereto.

V. The collection, diversion, storage, utilization, sale and distribution within this Commonwealth, other than for the purpose of sale in bottles, barrels, vats, or similar receptacles, of water for any municipal, domestic, irrigation, reclamation, or manufacturing use, and the operation of all conveniences, appliances, facilities, or equipment utilized in connection therewith or appertaining thereto.

VI. The furnishing within this Commonwealth of sewers or sewage disposal facilities or equipment.

VII. Any other public service business.

(b) Insurance.

(c) Building and loan, banking, or any other business intended to derive profit from the loan and use of money.

(d) Any business which shall need to condemn lands or occupy highways.*

*The object of this suggested statute is to provide a complete statute dealing with the formation, organization, and dissolution of business corporations. It is intended to exclude from the operation of the statute all public service corporations or other corporations requiring special regulations. It may well be that many public service corporations could, with advantage, be incorporated under the suggested statute and then be subjected to special additional regulations. This, however, can only be determined by a careful study of the whole problem of public service corporations, their regulation, and the existing provisions of our statutory law. Therefore, at present, the suggested statute merely repeals the Act of 1874 and its amendments as far as they relate to corporations which can be organized under the provisions of this section. See Repealing Clause, Section 69.

The change in the section as it appeared in the first draft has been to enumerate more specifically the purposes excepted from this Act, particularly with reference to public service. Subsection (a), with the exception of Clause VII, is the same as the definition of "Public Service" in the tentative draft of "A Public Service Commission Law."

In this draft title insurance has been included among the exceptions, as title insurance corporations have the power to receive deposits, i. e., to derive profit from the loan and use of money.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION.

Section 3. (1). The incorporators shall prepare articles of incorporation which shall state:

(a). The name of the proposed corporation [with 'corporation,' 'incorporated,' or 'inc.' as the last word].*

*Kentucky and Virginia have provisions similar to that suggested. Alabama, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Kansas, Maryland, Minnesota, Missouri, Nevada, North Carolina, and Ohio require "corporation," "company," "association," or a similar word to appear in the name; while Massachusetts and Rhode Island require that the name shall be such as to distinguish a corporation from a partnership.

(b). The purpose [or purposes] for which it is to be formed; [if more than one purpose, each to be stated separately].*

*See Note 3 to Section 2, supra.

(c). The location of its principal office, which shall be in this State.*

*The clause, it is submitted, represents the practical interpretation of the present law.

Existing statutes appear to confuse two distinct things, the principal office and the place where the business of the corporation is transacted. The words "principal office" properly designate the place where the corporate functions are exercised—where the books of the corporation, especially the stock transfer books, are kept. The principal office is a place where the company can be served with process. The place where the company transacts business, i. e., carries on the buying and selling, the mining or manufacturing, or the other business for which it was incorporated, may also be the principal office, but this is not necessarily so. The distinction between office and place of business is pointed out in In re Enterprise Mutual Beneficial Association, 10 Phila. 380 (1875).

The Act of 1874 requires the certificate to state "the place or places where its business is to be transacted." The practical interpretation of the secretary's office makes this provision as if it had required "the place of the principal office." The rules of the office of the secretary, governing applications for letters patent, state that "the designated place of business of the corporation is where the corporate functions are to be exercised, and only one office can be named as such."

The clause as suggested not only carries out the practical interpretation of the secretary's office, but, it is submitted, that inasmuch as it expresses the following principles, its provisions are sound:

1. The location of the principal office should be on a public record for the use and protection of the State, the stockholders and the creditors.

2. A corporation should not be organized under the laws of the State when those who organize it intend regularly to hold directors' and stockholders' meetings and keep all their books beyond the jurisdiction of the State.

3. The place or places where the business, as distinguished from the corporate functions, is carried on, need not be inside the State. There is no reason why a corporation should not carry on business outside the State of its creation, if the State in which it transacts its business concurs.

4. Every change in the place or places where the business is transacted should not require a change in the articles of incorporation, unless the incorporators, in designating the purpose for which the corporation is formed, choose to limit the carrying on of the business to a particular place. Therefore, the incorporators should not be required to state in the articles the place or places where at first they intend to carry on the business, because nothing should be required to be set forth in the articles which there is no reason why the members of the corporation should not be allowed to change without being required to place the change on a public record.

(d). The period of duration, which may be perpetual.

(e) The amount of its capital stock [which shall not be less than five thousand dollars]* and the number and par value of the shares into which it is to be divided.†

*Present legislation limits the maximum amount of the original capital stock; but immediately after organization the capital stock may, by amendment, be indefinitely increased. The Act of 1905, April 22, P. L. 280, Section 1, amending the Act of 1901, Feb. 9, P. L. 3, provides: "That the capital stock, or indebtedness, or both, of any corporation created by general or special law may, with the consent of the persons or bodies corporate holding the larger amount in value of stock, be increased to such an amount in the aggregate of each, without regard to the amount of the other, and regardless of any limitation upon the amount of either, prescribed in any general or special law regulating any such corporation, as it shall deem necessary to accomplish and carry on and enlarge the business and purposes of such corporation. Such increase of either may be made at once or from time to time, as the majority in interest of the stockholders shall determine."

It is submitted that the policy expressed in the Acts of 1901 and 1905 is correct, provided the capitalization is bona fide. Large aggregations of capital, at least when they obtain monopoly of an industry, unquestionably need regulation, but it does not follow that therefore they are in themselves an evil to be prohibited.

Under present legislation, as mentioned above, the capital stock may, after organization, be increased indefinitely. The actual issue of the shares constituting the increase may be made from time to time as the directors may think fit, and the bonus is paid upon the amount of the actual issue only.

The provision that no corporation should be incorporated for less than $5,000 is in accordance with the present practice of the executive department. It is submitted that the practice is sound, and should be incorporated into our statute law.

The following limitations as to the minimum capital stock exists in other States: Alabama ($2,000), Connecticut ($2,000), Delaware ($2,000), Louisiana ($3,000), Maine ($1,000), Massachusetts ($1,000), Michigan ($1,000), Minnesota ($10,000 except in case of manufacturing or mechanical companies, for which there does not seem to be any limit), Missouri ($2,000), Nevada ($2,000), New Hampshire ($1,000), New Jersey ($2,000), New Mexico ($3,000), Vermont ($500). Four States besides Pennsylvania limit the maximum capital stock: Michigan ($25,000,000), Missouri ($50,000,000), New Hampshire ($5,000,000), and Vermont ($1,000,000). Maryland limits the capital stock of mining corporations to $3,000,000.

†Present legislation limits the maximum par value of shares to $100, but no reason is perceived why this should be retained. It appears to be a matter which may well be left to the discretion of the incorporators. In thirty-six States and territories the par value may be any amount.

(f). [If there are to be two or more classes of shares, the amount and description of each, with a statement of the terms, conditions, and preferences (which shall conform to the provisions of sections 24 and 25)] on which they are to be issued.*

*Present legislation requires a statement such as that here suggested in case the corporation issues deferred stock, but where the stock of the corporation when organized is divided into common and preferred stock, no such requirement exists. It is submitted that the rule in the case of the deferred stock should also apply to other classes of stock. The statutes of twenty-nine States and territories contain a provision similar to that suggested, and in at least two other States the usual practice, if the capital stock is to be classified, is to provide for a statement of that fact in the articles of incorporation.

(g). The names and addresses of the incorporators and the number of shares subscribed by each.

(h). The number of directors, which shall not be less than three, and the names and post office addresses of those chosen to serve as directors prior to the organization meeting.*

*This clause expresses the present law. Directors need not be stockholders nor incorporators. Coe vs. Leckrone Coke Co., 30 Pa. C. C. 113 (1904); Corporate Directors, 7 Pa. C. C. 178 (1890). The case of Com. vs. Helms, 8 Pa. C. C. 410 (1890) decided that the Act of 1874 merely required that the first directors be named, but that it was not necessary that they should serve for one year, and that the purpose of the present law was to have dennite persons to manage the affairs of the corporation until by-laws could be adopted and the corporation organized. The Court therefore held that at the first annual election as fixed by the by-laws, new directors could be elected, although the original directors had not served for a full year.

The term "organization meeting" is explained in Section 8 and note.

(i). The name and address of the treasurer, and a statement that ten percentum of the capital stock has been paid in cash to such treasurer.

(2.) The articles of incorporation shall be signed by [each of the incorporators]* and acknowledged by at least two before the Recorder of Deeds of the county in which the principal office of the corporation is to be located, or before any notary public or justice of the peace of this Commonwealth, [or before any person of any other State or country before whom a deed may be acknowledged for record in Pennsylvania.]† The two incorporators acknowledging the articles shall at the same time make and subscribe an oath or affirmation, to be endorsed on said articles, that the statements contained therein are true [and that the payment of the ten percentum of the capital stock has been made in good faith and not by way of loan or upon any promise, understanding, or agreement that the same shall be returned, but that it is the intent of the incorporators that the sum so paid shall be retained and treated as part of the capital stock of the corporation.]‡ The articles shall thereupon be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth.‖

*Present legislation requires only two of the incorporators to sign. It is submitted that a person's name should not be used as an incorporator on a public record, unless he signs the articles of incorporation, which is the original from which the record is made. Again, present legislation uses apparently interchangeably the words "incorporators" and "subscribers." The word "subscriber" in this connection is unfortunate, as it might be construed to mean a subscriber to the articles, but not to the capital stock. In this Act. Section 67, dealing with definitions, defines the word "incorporator" as a person who subscribes both to the articles and the capital stock, thus requiring an incorporator to be a subscriber to the capital stock.

†The addition is made to permit acknowledgment outside of Pennsylvania.

‡These words are used to prevent existing abuses well known to the profession.

‖Present legislation apparently requires the publication of notice of the intention to apply for a charter before the filing of the articles in the office of the Secretary of State, but the present practice of that office is to require the articles to be on file during the period of publication. This practice, it is submitted, represents sound policy, if it is desired to retain the present provision in regard to publication (see Section 4 and note).

NOTICE THAT A CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION HAS BEEN APPLIED FOR.

Section 4. [Notice of the fact that a certificate of incorporation has been applied for] shall be inserted in at least one newspaper of general circulation, printed in the county in which the principal office of the corporation is to be located, and in the legal journal, if any, designated by rule of court in said county for the publication of legal notices,* for three weeks, setting forth the character and object of the corporation to be formed.†

*The first draft has been changed so as to require publication in one newspaper of general circulation, and in a legal journal, if one has been designated by rule of court for publication of legal notices.

†If this section is to be retained, for reasons stated in note 15 to Section 3 (2), supra, the words in brackets should be included.

It is, however, submitted that there is much to be said in favor of omitting the requirement for publication. The requirement is an inheritance from the time when incorporation was a special act conferring a special privilege. At present, when any three or more citizens of the State have a right to obtain the privilege of conducting their business in corporate form, there would appear to be no special reason for publication of the notice of intention to apply.

Only nine States and territories require such publication, namely: Arizona, Florida, Georgia, Iowa, Minnesota, Misssissippi, Nebraska, New Mexico and Wyoming.

CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION.

Section 5. (1). The Secretary of the Commonwealth shall examine the articles of incorporation, and if he shall find that the provisions of this Act have been complied with, and that the bonus subscribed in Section 7 has been paid, he shall endorse his approval thereon, and the articles, together with proof of publication of the notice as hereinbefore provided, shall be submitted to the Governor, who, if he shall be satisfied that the provisions of this Act have been complied with, shall endorse his approval on the said articles, and direct a certificate of incorporation to be issued.* [Provided, however, that no such certificate shall be issued if the name of the proposed corporation is identical with, or so nearly resembles as to be calculated to deceive, that of any other corporation formed under the laws of this Commonwealth or authorized to do business within this Commonwealth.]†

*The only change from the present law here suggested is the formal requirement that the Secretary, as well as the Governor, must be convinced that the things done by the persons applying for incorporation entitle them under the Act to be incorporated. This change, however, expresses present practice in other States. In fact, only two other State. Altoona Gas Co. vs. Gas Co. of Altoona, 17 Pa. C. C. submitted to and approved by the Governor.

†Under present legislation, the corporation is not permitted to change its name to a name conflicting with that of the name of any corporation on the records. In practice, an application for incorporation would be refused if the name conflicted with the name of an existing domestic corporation or foreign corporation authorized to do business in the State. Altoona Gas Co. vs. Gas Co. of Altoona, 17 Pa. C. C. 662 (1896); Bradley Fertilizer Co., 19 Pa. C. C. 241 (1897); Bradley Fertilizer Co. of Phila., 6 D. R. 424 (1897); see generally P. & L. Digest of Decisions, Vol. 3, column 4797, et seq.

Thirty States have a provision prohibiting similarity of names, and twelve of these States extend the prohibition to the names of foreign corporations authorized to do business in the State.

(2). The certificate of incorporation together with the articles of incorporation shall be recorded in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth in a book to be kept by him for that purpose, and he shall forthwith furnish to the Auditor General an abstract therefrom showing the name, location of principal office, amount of capital stock, and the name and address of the treasurer of such corporation.

TIME WHEN INCORPORATION IS COMPLETED.

Section 6. (1). [Upon the issuance of the certificate of incorporation the incorporators and their associates and successors shall be a corporation.]*

*Under present law, the incorporation is not complete until the certificate and endorsements are recorded with the recorder of deeds of the proper county. This requirement has resulted in litigation upon the validity of acts done after the letters patent have issued, but before they have been recorder. See Pinkerton vs. Traction Co., 193 Pa. 229 (1899); Guckert vs. Hacke, 159 Pa. 303 (1893); Bank vs. Crowell, 177 Pa. 313 (1896). It has also necessitated the passage from time to time of acts validating, upon proper recording, acts of corporations done after the issuance of letters patent, but before recording. See for example, Act of 1911, March 15, P. L. 17, Section 1. The sub-section suggested removes the cause of the litigation referred to and does away with the necessity of continually passing validating acts. In this Act, recording with the Recorder of Deeds is required, but it is made a condition precedent not to the incorporation, but to the commencement of business, and personal liability is imposed on the directors and officers if they carry on the business before recording. See infra, Section 9.

(2). The certificate of incorporation, or a copy thereof, duly certified by the Secretary of the Commonwealth, shall be [conclusive]* evidence of due incorporation.

*There are two methods of treating the probative force of certificates of incorporation (letters patent). The certificate may be regarded merely as prima facie evidence of incorporation, or it may be regarded as conclusive evidence, in spite of any irregularity in the steps taken to procure the certificate. The inconvenience and injustice resulting from permitting those who have dealt for and with the corporation to allege that it has not been properly incorporated has led the courts, even where the certificate is only prima facie evidence of incorporation, to assert the doctrine that the validity of the certificate cannot be collaterally attacked. Where this doctrine is carried out to its full effect, it results practically in the State being the only party that can go behind the certificate. In this Act, the Secretary of the Commonwealth is required to satisfy himself in regard to the regularity of the application before presenting it to the Governor. The Governor need not issue the certificate unless he also is satisfied that all the requirements of law have been fulfilled. It is submitted that it simplifies the law to make the certificate conclusive evidence of incorporation. If false statements are made in the articles, the charter is subject to be forfeited. (See Section 60, infra.) In suggesting this change in the present law the Act follows the law of Massachusetts and of England.

BONUS.

Section 7. At the time of filing the articles of incorporation the incorporators shall pay to the State Treasurer, for the use of the Commonwealth, a fee or bonus of one-third of one per centum upon the amount of capital stock specified in the articles of incorporation. In the event of a subsequent increase in the amount of capital stock, a like bonus on such actual increase shall be paid as prescribed in Section 12.*

*Many lawyers have suggested that the bonus be decreased in amount, declaring that a large bonus drives prospective incorporators from the State.

PART II.

ORGANIZATION.

ORGANIZATION MEETING.

Section 8. (1). [The first or organization meeting of every corporation shall be held in this State. A notice, signed by a majority of the directors, designating the time, place and purpose of the meeting, shall be given at least seven days prior to the time fixed for such meeting; Provided, that if all the stockholders shall, in writing, waive the notice and fix a time and place for the meeting, no notice shall be required.

(2). At such meeting the stockholders shall organize by the adoption of by-laws (unless the power to make by-laws is vested in the board of directors by the articles of incorporation) and by the election of directors, who shall hold office until the annual meeting provided for in the by-laws.]*

*The present law has no specific provision concerning the organization meeting. As it is customary and practically necessary to hold such a meeting before the commencement of business, it is submitted that it is better to provide specifically that the meeting shall be held. Twenty-seven States expressly provide for an organization meeting. Of these, five require such organization to take place before incorporation, and five require it before the commencement of business, while the statutes in the other States apparently contemplate the holding of the meeting before the transaction of business.

The second sub-section modifies the present law to some extent by requiring the directors to be elected at the first meeting. Under present law the by-laws fix the time for election of directors and a majority of the stockholders may insist upon an election on the date appointed, even though the directors named in the articles of incorporation have not served for one year. Com. vs. Helms, 8 Pa. P. C. 410 (1890). See note 11, Section 3 (1h).

RESTRICTIONS IN THE COMMENCEMENT OF BUSINESS.

Section 9. (1). No corporation shall commence business or exercise any borrowing powers until:

(a). [The organization meeting, as prescribed in Section 8, shall have been held.]

(b). [Fifty per centum of the amount of capital stock specified in the articles of incorporation shall have been subscribed.]*

*There is no provision in the present law requiring that any definite amount of capital stock shall be subscribed before the corporation begins business, though the requirement that ten per cent. must be paid in prior to incorporation indirectly requires that at least that amount must be subscribed prior to beginning business. It is submitted that the provisions requiring ten per cent. of the capital to be paid in cash before incorporation does not afford sufficient protection to creditors. The clause requiring fifty per cent. to be subscribed before the commencement of business is inserted for consideration. A few lawyers have even suggested that the entire capital should be subscribed before the charter is granted.

The following is a summary of the provisions of those States whose statutes deal with the subject.

Before incorporation:

Alabama—Payment of 25 per cent.
District of Columbia—Subscription of all, payment of 10 per cent.
Illinois—Subscription of all, payment of 50 per cent.
Michigan—Subscription of 50 per cent., payment of 10 per cent.
Missouri—Subscription of all, payment of 50 per cent.
South Carolina—Subscription of 50 per cent., payment of 20 per cent.
Texas—Subscription of all, payment of 50 per cent.
Utah—Payment of 10 per cent.

Before transaction of business:

Connecticut—Payment of $1,000.
Delaware—Payment of $1,000.
Florida—Payment of 10 per cent.
Georgia—Payment of 10 per cent.
Kansas—Payment of 20 per cent.
Kentucky—Subscription of 50 per cent.
Nebraska—Subscription of 10 per cent. (manufacturing corporations).
Nevada—Payment of $1,000.
New Jersey—Payment of $1,000.
New Mexico—Payment of $2,000.
New York—Payment of $500.
Ohio—Subscription of 10 per cent.
Oregon—Subscription of 50 per cent.
Vermont—Payment of 25 per cent.
Washington—Subscription of all.
Wisconsin—Subscription of 50 per cent., payment of 10 per cent.

(c). The certificate of incorporation and the articles of incorporation shall have been recorded in the office of the Recorder of Deeds in and for the county where the principal office of the corporation is located.*

*A change is made so as to require the original certificate and articles to be recorded, and not a copy thereof.

(d). [A report, signed and sworn to by the majority of the directors, stating that the aforesaid conditions have been complied with shall have been filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth.]*

*If the above restrictions on the commencement of business are proper, the Secretary should have some formal record that they have been complied with.

(2). If any corporation shall commence business before such report shall have been filed, the directors, except those dissenting therefrom, who shall have caused their dissent to be entered upon the minutes of the directors at the time, or who, being absent, shall have caused their dissent therefrom to be so entered upon learning of such action, shall be jointly and severally liable for all debts of the corporation incurred or entered into before such report shall be filed.*

*The method by which a dissenting director can exempt himself from liability is taken from the Act of April 17 (1869), P. L. 71, Section 2, relating to liability of directors of certain corporations who know that the treasurer is mixing the funds of the corporation with his own funds.

PART III.

CORPORATE POWERS.

GENERAL POWERS.

Section 10. Every corporation shall have power:

(a). To have succession by its corporate name for the period limited by its articles of incorporation, and when no period is limited thereby, perpetually, subject to the power of the General Assembly under the Constitution of this State.*

*This is the present law, except that the words "or by this Act," after the words "and when no period is limited thereby," are omitted as unnecessary.

(b). To maintain and defend judicial proceedings.

(c). To make and use a comon seal and alter the same at pleasure.

(d). To take, hold and convey such real and personal property as the purpose of the corporation requires.*

*An examination of the statutes under the present law shows that all corporations incorporated under clause 18 can hold such real property as the purpose of the corporation requires. Companies for the purchase and sale of real estate are at present limited in respect to the amount of real property which they can hold, as are also corporations included within the provisions of Section 3 of the Act of 1874.

(e). To appoint and remove such subordinate officers and agents as the business of the corporation requires, and to allow them suitable compensation.

(f). To enter into any obligation necessary to the transaction of its ordinary affairs.

(g). To carry on its corporate business, or so much thereof as is convenient, beyond the limits of this State.*

*These are practically all common law powers. The power to make by-laws is omitted from this section, because it is specifically provided for in Section 37. Present legislation expressly grants the right given in clause (g) to clause 18 corporations, but makes no provision in regard to other corporations.

POWER TO AMEND ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION.

Section 11. (1). Any corporation may, as prescribed in this section, change its name, its period of duration, [change, reduce or add to the purpose or purposes for which it was incorporated],* or otherwise amend its articles of incorporation: Provided, That the articles of amendment shall contain only such provision as it would be lawful and proper to insert in original articles of incorporation made at the time of making such amendment.

*This is a change in the present law. Under the broad powers of amendment provided for in most States, the purpose may be changed. Twenty-four States expressly authorize such a change, while in seventeen others the power of amendment is so broad that in most cases it includes a change in the purpose. Only six States, including Pennsylvania, expressly prohibit it. The statutes of Massachusetts and Indiana contain provisions for the purchase of the stock of a dissenting stockholder. The difficulty of this provision is that it involves the employment of the capital stock of the corporation in the purchase of its own shares, thus tending to injure creditors.

The power to reduce the purposes is expressly given in this draft.

(2). The proposed amendment shall be adopted by a majority of the entire number of the board of directors, and submitted to a vote of the stockholders at any regular annual meeting or special meeting, notice that such amendment would be considered thereat having been given at least thirty days before such meeting: Provided, That if it is proposed to amend the articles so as to authorize an an increase or reduction of the amount of the capital stock of a corporation, notice shall be given at least sixty days before such meeting.

(3). If at such meeting a majority in interest of the stockholders shall vote for such amendment, articles of amendment shall be prepared setting forth such amendment and containing a statement that they have been regularly adopted as prescribed: [Provided, That if it is proposed to change or add to the purpose or purposes, it shall be necessary for two-thirds in interest of the stockholders to vote for such amendment.]

(4). The articles of amendment shall be signed by a majority of the directors and acknowledged by at least two of the subscribers before any person authorized by this Act to take acknowledgment of original articles of incorporation. The two directors acknowledging the articles of amendment shall at the same time make and subscribe an oath or affirmation, to be endorsed on the said articles of amendment, that the statements contained therein are true.

(5). The articles of amendment [together with the written assent, in person or by proxy, of a majority in interest of the stockholders, or, in the case of a change in or addition to the purpose or purposes, of two-thirds in interest of the stockholders]* shall thereupon be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, who shall examine the same and if he shall find that the provisions of this Act have been complied with, he shall issue a certificate of amendment, unless such proposed amendment increasese the period of duration of the corporation, or changes or adds to the purpose or purposes of the corporation, in which case the Secretary shall endorse his approval on the articles of amendment and submit them to the Governor, who, if he is satisfied that the provisions of this Act have been complied with, shall endorse his approval thereon and direct a certificate of amendment to issue.

*The provision requiring the stockholders to give written assent in person or by proxy, is taken from the New Jersey statute, Acts of 1896, April 21, Session Laws 277, Section 27.

At present a change in name requires a vote of two-thirds of the stockholders in interest. Under this sub-section, a majority in interest would be sufficient.

The Act of 1883, June 13, P. L. 122, and its amendment, the Act of 1905, March 3, P. L. 93 (see present legislation), requires the application to be made to the Governor, and letters patent to be issued by him, following in this respect the method of original incorporation. An examination of present legislation, however, will show that amendments involving a change of name, increase and decrease of capital stock, change of par value of shares, and change of principal office, can all be effected without the action of the Governor. On the other hand, re-chartering, or increasing the period of duration of a corporation, requires the action of the Governor. The sub-section as drawn, therefore, carries out the spirit of the present law, that all important changes should be passed on by the Governor. The requirement that the Secretary shall issue a certificate of amendment for all other changes, and therefore for changes involving increase and decrease of capital stock, change in par value of stock, change of name, and location of principal office, is in addition to the requirements of the present law.

Publication of amendments is required in the Act of 1883, supra, in regard to amendments generally, but is not provided for in the statutes which deal with specific changes. (See present legislation.)

It should be noted that no bonus is required to be paid if the period of duration is extended. This also appears to be a change in the present law. As in the original articles the period may be made perpetual, no reason is perceived why the bonus should be repaid for an extension.

(6). The amendment shall take effect upon the issuance of the certificate of amendment. Such certificate of amendment, or copy thereof, duly certified by the Secretary of of the Commonwealth, shall be [conclusive]* evidence of such amendment.

*See Note 20, Section 6 (2), supra.

(7). The certificate of amendment, together with the articles of amendment, shall be recorded in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth in a book kept by him for that purpose, and he shall forthwith certify the said change or amendment to the Auditor General.

(8). The certificate of amendment and the artcles of amendment shall be recorded in the office of the Recorder of Deeds in which the certificate of incorporation and the original articles of corporation were recorded. [The Recorder of Deeds, upon the recording of the said certificate of amendment, shall issue a certificate that the same has been recorded, and the said certificate, signed by the Recorder, shall be filed by the corporation in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth. If the certificate of the Recorder of Deeds shall not be filed in the office of the Secretary within thirty days after the date of the issuance of the certificate of amendment, the Secretary shall give notice, in writing, to the corporation of the default. If the corporation shall fail to comply with the requirements of this sub-section within ten days after the receipt of such notice, it shall be subject to a penalty of one hundred dollars a day for each day thereafter during which the default shall continue, to be recovered in an action brought by the Attorney General on behalf of the Commonwealth.]*

*The Act of 1883, June 13, P. L. 122 (see present legislation regarding general amendments), and also the Act of 1903, April 22, P. L. 251, Section 1, regarding change of name, require recording in the office of the recorder of deeds before the amendment takes effect. If recording in the office of the recorder of deeds is required for the protection of creditors and others in the case of original corporation, it seems unquestionable that such recording should also be required in the case of amendments to the charter.

The suggested sub-section follows the requirements of this Act in making the action of the Secretary in issuing the certificate the point of time at which the amendment takes effect. See Note 19, Section 6 (1), supra.

The provision for a penalty for non-recording is new. It follows the principle adopted throughout this Act in prescribing specific penalties for violation of any important provision, the penalty being stated immediately after the provision.

A change is made in this draft so as to require the artices of amendement to be recorded, and not a copy thereof.

ACTUAL INCREASE OR REDUCTION OF CAPITAL STOCK —RETURN AND BONUS.

Section 12. (1). If the articles of incorporation of any corporation shall be amended as prescribed in section 11 of this Act, so as to authorize an increase of a reduction in the amount of the capital stock, the increase or reduction may be made thereafter at such time or times as shall be determined by the directors, [but nothing in this Act shall be held to permit the reduction of the capital stock of the corporation to an amount less than the total indebtedness of the corporation, or to permit the distribution of the capital of the corporation among its stockholders without the payment or consent of its creditors, or to relieve the owners of any stock from any liability].*

*The proviso is new to our statutory law. The last two provisions unquestionably express the common law. It is suggested that the reduction of the capital stock of the corporation to an amount less than the total indebtedness of the corporation should also be prohibited. The prohibition is embodied in the statutes of eleven States. In twenty-two other States there are various provisions designed to protect creditors, as, for example, that a reduction of the capital stock shall not prejudice or impair the rights of creditors. In Delaware there can be no reduction until all the debts of the corporation are either secured or discharged.

(2). Upon any actual increase or reduction, it shall be the duty of the president or treasurer of such corporation, within thirty days thereafter, to make return to the Secretary of the Commonwealth, under oath, of the amount of such increase or reduction actually made, and concurrently therewith, if the capital stock shall have been increased, such corporation shall pay to the State Treasurer, for the use of the Commonwealth, a bonus of one-third of the one per centum on the amount of the actual increase. The Secretary of the Commonwealth shall cause such return to be recorded in a book kept by him for that purpose, and shall furnish a copy of the same to the Auditor General.

(3). In case of neglect or omission to make said return, such corporation shall be subject to a penalty of $5,000 in addition to the bonus, which penalty shall be collected on an account settled by the Auditor General and the State Treasurer, as accounts for taxes due the Commonwealth are settled and collected.

POWER TO HOLD ITS OWN SHARES.

Section 13. (1). No corporation shall have the power to purchase or otherwise acquire directly or indirectly any share or shares of its own capital stock except:

(a). [When the par value of the share or shares so purchased or otherwise acquired shall have been paid in full] and the consideration for such share or shares shall be paid out of the surplus or net profits of the corporation; or

(b). When such share or shares shall have been forfeited for non-payment of calls or assessments as prescribed in Section 23; or

(c). When such share or shares shall have been purchased from a dissenting stockholder as prescribed in Section 57.*

*At present, in this State, a corporation can invest in its own stock. Dock vs. Schlicter Cordage Co., 167 Pa. 370 (1895); but not when the corporation is insolvent, Columbian Bank's Estate, 147 Pa. 422 (1892); see also the provisions of the Act of 1868 under Present Legislation.

The statutes of a majority of the States have no express provision upon this subject. In Rhode Island and West Virginia the power is granted, and also in Connecticut, if three-fourths of the stockholders approve; in Delaware, Oklahoma, North and South Dakota, the surplus may be used to purchase the stock of the corporation. In Connecticut, Kentucky and New York, power is given to corporations to take their own stock to prevent loss upon debts previously contracted. In Wyoming, a corporation is prohibited from investing in its own stock.

It is submitted that prima facie such an investment is wrong. It reduces, at least temporarily, the capital stock, which is the fund on which creditors rely for payment. On the other hand, there would appear to be no reason why the corporation should not invest its surplus in its stock, except where the stock is not full paid, in which latter case, to the extent to which it is not full paid, the fund in which the creditors rely is diminished as long as the stock is held by the corporation. The present section is drafted to express this view of the law.

[(2). If any corporation, in violation of the provisions of this section, shall purchase or otherwise acquire any share or shares of its own capital stock, whose par value shall not have been paid in full, or if the consideration for such share or shares shall be paid out of the capital stock, the directors under whose administration it occurs, except those dissenting thereto, who shall have filed their objections with the secretary of the corporation at the time, or who, being absent, shall have so filed their objections upon learning of such action, shall be jointly and severally liable to the corporation, (a) where the par value shall not have been paid in full, for an amount equal to the amount remaining unpaid on said share or shares, unless said share or shares shall have been reissued to a bona fide purchaser; and also (b) where the consideration for such share or shares shall have been paid out of the capital stock, for an amount equal to the amount of the capital stock so withdrawn, except that if the said share or shares shall have been resold the amount for which the directors shall be liable shall be reduced by the amount actually paid for such share or shares by the purchaser.

If the directors shall refuse or neglect, for sixty days after such share or shares shall have become the property of the corporation, to bring action in the name of the corporation to enforce the said liability, any director, or any stockholder, or any judgment creditor of the corporation, may maintain such action in the name and on behalf of the corporation.]*

*If part of the capital stock is employed in the purchase of shares of the corporation's own stock, the protection to creditors is lessened to the extent of the amount so employed. In such case, it is submitted that there should be an immediate liability imposed on those who have wrongfully expended the capital, to replace the amount so expended, instead of compelling creditors to wait until the insolvency of the company, when the directors responsible for the act may no longer be connected with the company and may be difficult to reach. Where the corporation, even with its surplus, purchases stock not full paid, to protect fully the creditors of the company, the directors should be required to pay at once to the corporation the amount unpaid on the stock. The liability of the directors under this section, it will be noted, is terminated or reduced whenever the stock is resold to a bona fide purchaser. If the sale does not take place until after the directors have been subjected to the liability, the loss falls on the directors. This, it is submitted, is as it should be, because the act of the directors in authorizing the purchase of the stock was wrongful, and at the time the liability was enforced their act had impaired the capital of the corporation. The fact that subsequently a circumstance has occurred which would restore the capital of the company, even though the directors had not been made to restore it, does not give the directors any equity.

[(3). Shares of the capital stock of a corporation, belonging legally or equitably to such corporation, shall not be voted upon, directly or indirectly.]*

*This expresses the common law.

[(4). Nothing in this section shall be held to prevent a corporation from acquiring any fully paid shares of its own capital stock by way of gift or bequest, or from receiving any share or shares of its own stock in satisfaction of a debt due the corporation which cannot be collected in any other manner.]

POWER TO HOLD SHARES AND BONDS OF OTHER CORPORATIONS.

Section 14. (1). Any corporation may purchase, hold, sell, assign, transfer, mortgage, pledge, or otherwise dispose of the shares of the capital stock of, or any bonds, securities, or evidences of indebtedness created by, any other corporation or corporations of this Commonwealth, and while the owner of the said stock may exercise all the rights, powers and privileges of ownership, including the right to vote thereon: [Provided, That such corporation shall at no one time be possessed of the legal or equitable title to more than twenty per centum of the total number of shares then issued and outstanding of the capital stock of any one other corporation.]*

*The limitation contained in this section, if adopted, would produce an important change in the present law. It would prohibit what is known as the "pyramid" and other forms of purchase for control. At the same time, the limitation, in view of the large number of corporations whose stock may be purchased, in no wise curtails the ability of the corporation to make purchases for the purpose of investment.

(2). [If any corporation shall at any one time be possessed of the legal or equitable title to more than twenty percentum of the shares, then issued and outstanding, of the capital stock of any other corporation, any stockholder of the corporation holding such stock, or any stockholder of the corporation whose stock is so held, may maintain a suit in equity to enjoin the said corporation from exercising the right to vote on the said stock in excess of the twenty per centum, or from exercising any other rights, powers and privileges of ownership thereon, and to enforce the sale thereof.]

POWER TO LEASE ENTIRE CORPORATION PROPERTY.

Section 15. Any corporation may, with the consent of a majority in interest of its stockholders, obtained at any regular annual meeting or special meeting duly called, lease its corporate business, in whole or in part, together with the property incident thereto, to, or enter into contracts for the use or lease of the corporate business, in whole or in part, together with the property incident thereto, of, any other corporation formed for the same purpose or purposes, upon such terms as may be agreed upon with the said corporation. The corporation so leasing may use and operate such property in accordance with the contract or lease, and may guarantee the payment of the bonds, and the interest thereon, of the corporation whose property is so leased.*

*The section is intended to cover the case in which the corporation desires to take over, by way of lease, the business, or a part of the business, of another corporation, or to part, by way of a lease, with its own business, or a portion of its business, to another corporation. It has nothing to do and is believed to be so worded that it does not cover the ordinary case of the lease of specific property which the corporation does not desire to sell and for which it has no present use.

The present legislation seems on the whole to have the same object, but that object is affected, so far as clause 18 corporations are concerned, by the provision that every lease of the real property of such corporations shall be submitted to a vote of the stockholders.

POWER TO GRANT PENSIONS.

Section 16. Any corporation may grant allowances or pensions to employees for faithful and long continued services, who have, in such service, become old, infirm or disabled: Provided, That the provisions of this section shall not apply to any director of any such corporation who is not an officer.*

*Words "or officer" omitted from this draft, as no reason is perceived why an officer should not be pensioned.

BONDED INDEBTEDNESS.

Section 17. Any corporation may be authorized to issue bonds or to increase its bonded indebtedness, and may secure the same by mortgage on all or any part of its property or franchises, or both, by the same method as an increase in capital stock is authorized under the provisions of Section 11. When any such issue or increase is authorized the actual issue or increase may be made thereafter at such time or times as shall be determined by the directors; provided, however, that nothing in this section shall be held to compel a resort to the process herein provided in the case of indebtedness contracted in the usual course of the corporation business.*

*The suggested section is confined to bonded indebtedness, which, it is submitted, is the only subject in regard to the creation of indebtedness which requires legislative regulation. This section deals with the method of creating and increasing bonded indebtedness. The method prescribed for increasing stock is followed, authority being first secured from the Secretary of the Commonwealth after the approval of the stockholders, and the actual issue or increase being made at such time or times as directors shall thereafter determine.

Present legislation, though not in terms confined to bonded indebtedness, has been practically so interpreted by the courts. The constitutional provision cited under Present Legislation, which prohibits the increase of indebtedness except with the consent of a majority of the stockholders, obtained at a meeting held after sixty days' notice, has been held not to apply to indebtedness created in the ordinary course of business, Manhattan vs. Phalan, 128 Pa. 110 (1889); Powell vs. Blair, 133 Pa. 550 (1890); Quaker City National Bank vs. Gilkeson, 18 Pa. C. C. 557 (1896). It has also been held that this provision does not apply to mortgages executed to creditors in exchange for other securities, Ahl vs. Rhoades, 84 Pa. 319 (1877), or to mortgages given to raise funds for the purpose of paying off incumbrances, in order to protect a debt due to the corporation, Lewis vs. Jeffries, 86 Pa. 340 (1877), or to secure debts incurred in the purchase or improvement of the property. An issue of bonds, however, is within the constitutional prohibition. Maas vs. Penna., &c., Co., 1 Mona. 497 (1889).

Words "subject to the limitation prescribed in Section 18" are omitted in this draft because Section 18 is taken out.

In the first tentative draft, Section 18, a limitation was imposed on bonded indebtedness secured by mortgage or lien on all or any part of the property or franchises of the company, the provision being that the bonded indebtedness so secured could not be greater than the amount of the paid in capital stock. This provision has been omitted from the present draft because further investigation has convinced the Committee that it is unwise to interfere to such an extent with the business management of the corporation.

The present law really imposes no restriction. The mortgage securing the first issue of bonds is limited to one-half of the amount of the capital stock paid in, but thereafter the indebtedness may be increased indefinitely and the mortgage securing the same may be for any amount.

The limitation on the amount of indebtedness which a corporation may incur, as provided in the statutes of the various States, is as follows: In Illinois and Wyoming, the directors are liable if the indebtedness exceeds the amount of the capital stock; in Kansas, Ohio, and Texas, the power to borrow money is limited by the amount of the capital stock; in North and South Dakota and Oklahoma, the indebtedness must not exceed the subscribed capital stock; in Rhode Island, it must not exceed the paid in capital stock, while in Tennessee, the directors are liable if it exceeds the paid in capital stock; in Arizona, Iowa, and Nebraska, the indebtedness must not exceed two-thirds of the capital stock, and in Vermont, two-thirds of the paid in capital stock; in Missouri, the bonded indebtedness is limited to the amount of the capital stock, and in Washington, to ten times the amount of the capital stock; in New Hampshire, the indebtedness must not exceed one-half of the value of the corporate property.

BANKING POWERS PROHIBITED.

Section 18. No corporation shall by any implication or construction be deemed to possess the power to carry on the business of discounting bills, notes, or other evidences of debt, or of receiving deposits, or of buying and selling bills of exchange, nor shall it issue any bill, note, check or other evidence of debt for circulation as money.*

*The section as drafted is intended to express in more concise language the present law.

PART IV.

CAPITAL STOCK AND BONDS.

CHARACTER AND PAYMENT.

Section 19. (1). Shares of the capital stock shall be deemed personal property.

(2). No corporation shall issue either bonds or stock except for money, labor done, or money or property actually received, and all fictitious increase of stock or indebtedness in any form shall be void.

(3). No note or obligation given by a stockholder, whether secured by pledge or otherwise, shall be considered as a payment of any part of the capital stock.

ISSUE OF SHARES OR BONDS FOR PROPERTY.

Section 20. (1). [If it is proposed to issue any shares or bonds in consideration for property to be purchased or otherwise acquired by the corporation, a certificate signed and sworn to by a majority of the directors and filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth shall contain a statement setting forth:

(a). If tangible property is to be purchased or otherwise acquired, its location, quality and description, and the number and par value of the shares or the number and value of the bonds to be issued therefor, and if intangible property is to be purchased or acquired, a full description thereof and the number and par value of the shares or the number and value of the bonds to be issued therefor.

(b). The names and post office addresses of the owners of said property, and which of them, if any, are incorporators, officers, directors or stockholders of the corporation.

(c). If the owners of said property, or any of them, are incorporators, or, if after incorporation, officers, directors or stockholders of the corporation, a statement of the prices paid or agreed to be paid by them for the property so to be sold or transferred to the corporation, and copies of all contracts by which the said owners acquired the ownership to said property or the control thereof.]

(2). [It shall thereupon be the duty of the Secretary of the Commonwealth to appoint two or more appraisers, who shall personally examine the said property and estimate the fair cash value thereof, and report such estimated valuation to the Secretary in a statement signed and sworn to by each appraiser. The Secretary shall fix the compensation of such appraisers, which shall be paid by the corporation.]

(3). [The Secretary of the Commonwealth shall then issue a certificate specifying the valuation of the property as appraised, or such other valuation as may be approved by him, and in no case shall the total par value of the shares or the value of the bonds issued therefor exceed such approved valuation. The valuation as approved shall be conclusive against all persons.]

(4). Shares so issued in consideration for the said property shall be deemed to be fully paid, but in all statements and reports of the corporation they shall be stated or reported as issued for property, and not as issued for money.

(5). [If any corporation shall issue any shares or any bonds for property in violation of the provisions of this section such issue shall be void, and a decree of cancellation shall be entered in an action brought by the Attorney General on behalf of the Commonwealth, and any property received for the said shares or bonds, or its equivalent in value, shall be returned to the former owner or owners theeof, subject, however, in the case of an illegal issue of stock, to the prior payment of all creditors who have extended credit to the corporation on the faith of such issue. The directors under whose administration such illegal issue of stock is made, except those dissenting thereto, who shall have filed their objections with the secretary of the corporation at the time, or who, being absent, shall have so filed their objections upon learning of such action, shall be jointly and severally liable to any creditor for any loss or damage caused by such issue.]*

*The suggested section changes the law of the State. At present stock or bonds may be issued for property, though the property may be greatly overvalued, without any resulting liability, no matter how great the loss to creditors, if the creditors fail to prove fraud. There is no method of preventing intentional overvaluation. The suggested section reflects the idea that it is better to prevent, if possible, overvaluation, than imposed liability for harm resulting from overvaluation. It is submitted that the only practical method of doing this is to provide for an official investigation and appraisement of the property before the stock or bonds are issued. When the official investigation is had, it is only proper that it should be conclusive, even though an error may have been made by the appraisers. This is provided for in sub-section 3.

If the section is adopted, it is not likely that anyone will issue stock or bonds for property without complying with its provisions. Sub-section 5, therefore, is not as important as it would be if sub-section 3 did not provide that the valuation as approved should be conclusive against all persons. Sub-section 5 is drawn on the theory that the issue of stock or bonds in violation of the section is a wholly unauthorized issue. There is, therefore, no liability on the person who has contributed the property to make up the difference, if any, between the actual value and the value of stock which he has received. On the other hand, he has been a party to a transaction, which has perhaps caused the company to announce that it has capital stock paid in to a certain amount, which assertion is false. The holder of the unauthorized issue of stock, therefore, should not, it is submitted, be allowed to obtain the property which he has transferred to the company, or its equivalent in value, until all the creditors of the corporation who have extended credit to the company on the faith of the stock being full paid shall have been satisfied.

The part of sub-section 5 declaring the issue void is taken from the Iowa statute. The Iowa statute, as well as the proposed Federal Incorporation Act (H. R. 20142, Sixty-first Congress, Section 2), provide for official investigation similar to this section. The English and Continental statutes provide for an elaborate investigation by the shareholders. It is submitted that such an investigation, while it protects shareholders, does not protect creditors or subsequent purchasers of stocks or bonds.

In the first tentative draft expressions of opinion as to the advisability of the provisions of this section were especially solicited. The Committee has received a number of communications condemning the method prescribed in this section, the main objections being the delay and the administrative machinery involved.

The Committee believes that these objections have great force, at least until the question of the organization of a department competent to administer the provisions is carefully investigated. If the Act is to go into force at once the Committee would recommend that sub-section 1 be so altered as to require the certificate to be signed and sworn to by all the directors, that an affidavit of at least a majority of the directors that they have personally examined the property, and that the value fixed is, in their judgment, fair and reasonable, be endorsed on the certificate; that sub-sections 2 and 3 be omitted, and sub-section IV be changed to read as follows: "Shares so issued in consideration for the said property shall, in all statements and reports of the corporation, be stated or reported as issued for property and not as issued for money."

ISSUE OF SHARES OR BONDS FOR LABOR.

Section 21. (1). If it is proposed to issue any shares or bonds in consideration for labor done or services performed for the corporation, a certificate, signed and sworn to by a majority of the directors and filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, shall contain a statement setting forth:

(a). A specific description of the nature of such labor or services, and the number and par value of the shares, or the number and value of the bonds to be issued therefor.

(b). The name and post office address of the persons to whom such shares or bonds are to be issued, and which of them, if any, are incorporators, officers, directors or stockholders of the corporation.

(2). It shall thereupon be the duty of the Secretary of the Commonwealth to make such investigation as he shall deem necessary, and to issue a certificate specifying the valuation of the labor or services as approved by him, and in no case shall the total par value of the shares, or the value of the bonds, issued therefor, exceed such approved valuation. The valuation as approved shall be conclusive against all persons.

(3). Shares so issued in consideration for the said labor or services shall be deemed to be fully paid, but in all statements and reports of the corporation they shall be stated or reported as issued for labor or services and not as issued for money.

(4). If any corporation shall issue any shares or any bonds in consideration for labor done or services performed in violation of the provisions of this section, such issue shall be void, and a decree of cancellation shall be entered in an action brought by the Attorney General on behalf of the Commonwealth, and the value of such labor or services shall constitute a claim against the corporation, subject, however, in the case of an illegal issue of stock, to the prior payment of all creditors who have extended credit to the corporation on the faith of such issue. The directors under whose administration such illegal issue of stock is made, except those dissenting thereto, who shall have caused their dissent to be filed with the secretary of the corporation at the time, or who being absent, shall have caused their dissent to be so filed upon learning of such action, shall be jointly and severally liable to any creditor for any loss or damage caused by such issue.*

*See note to Section 20. A great majority of States allow the issue of stock for labor or services. It is not permitted in the District of Columbia, Kansas, New Jersey, New Mexico, Oregon, Tennessee, and apparently not in Connecticut.

If the Act is to go into force at once, the same changes are suggested as recommended in the concluding part of the note to Section 20, supra.

ASSESSMENTS ON SHARES.

Section 22. All subscriptions to the capital stock shall be paid in such installments and at such times as the directors may require.*

*The section as approved expresess the present law, except that it does not embody the provisions of the Act of 1874 in relation to clause 18 corporations, requiring a certificate to be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds when the last installment is paid. The use of this provision is not manifest, in view of the reports which are required to be made to the Secretary of the Commonwealth. See section 47, infra. If it is desirable to retain the provision it should apply to every payment made on capital stock.

DEFAULT IN PAYMENT.

Section 23. (1). If the owner of any share or shares shall fail to pay any assessment due thereon, he shall be liable to pay in addition to the amount due and unpaid, at the rate of one-half of one percentum per month for the delay of such payment, and the directors may cause suit to be brought for the recovery of the amount due and unpaid, together with the penalty of one-half of one percentum per month as aforesaid, or they may direct a sale as herein provided.

(2). If the owner of any shares shall for thirty days after the time appointed for payment, fail to pay any assessment due thereon, the board of directors may direct the treasurer of the corporation to sell at public auction a sufficient number of shares of such delinquent owner to pay all assessments then due from him with necessary and incidental charges thereon. [The treasurer shall give notice of the time and place appointed for such sale, and of the amount due on each share to such delinquent owner personally, or by mail directed to him at his address as it appears on the books of the corporation, at least three weeks before the time appointed for the sale.]* The treasurer shall also advertise such notice three weeks successively bofore the day appointed for the sale in some newspaper published in the county in which the sale is to take place. The treasurer shall transfer the shares sold to the purchaser, who shall be entitled to a certificate therefor.

*This requirement for private notice is in addition to the requirements of the present law. It is submitted that if a person's property is to be sold, and the person selling it—the corporation—has his address on its books, a written notice of the sale should be given to the person whose property interest is to be affected.

(3). [If a sufficient amount shall not be paid at such sale to pay all assessments due, with necessary and incidental charges, the treasurer may refuse to sell the shares, and the board of directors may declare them to be forfeited to the corporation, together with all previous payments thereon. The said shares, if forfeited, may be reissued, or subscriptions therefor may be received, as in the case of shares not issued or subscribed for; but as long as the said shares remain the property of the corporation, the previous owner thereof shall, notwithstanding the forfeiture, remain liable to the creditors of the corporation for an amount equal to the amount unpaid on the said shares in the same manner as if he were still the owner thereof.]*

*Forfeiture of the stock and all previous payments thereon is added to provide for a case in which the stock cannot be sold for a sufficient amount. The same provision appears in the statutes of Delaware, Massachusetts, Maryland, Virginia and Kentucky. In six other States and the District of Columbia, the stock and all previous payments thereon may be forfeited at once for non-payment, no provision being made for sale.

If forfeiture is to be added to the present rights of the company, the provision in sub-section 3—that as long as the shares remain the property of the corporation the previous owner thereof shall be liable to the creditors—seems necessary to protect forfeiture from being used by the corporation in collusion with the stockholder, to enable the stockholder to avoid his liability. The provision does not appear in any American statute but is practically embodied in the English Companies Act, being one of the provisions in the fixed by-laws appended to that Act, which are binding unless further by-laws are adopted and registered.

PREFERRED STOCK.

Section 24. (1). Any corporation may be authorized to issue preferred stock by so providing in its articles of incorporation. If it is proposed to issue preferred stock after incorporation, the provisions of sections 11 and 12 in relation to an increase of capital stock shall be followed.

(2). Holders of such preferred stock shall be entitled to receive such dividends thereon as the articles of incorporation or articles of amendment thereof may provide, or, in the absence of any provision in said articles, as the board of directors may prescribe at the time of the issuance of such stock, but such dividends shall be payable only out of the net earnings of the corporation.*

*The section as submitted follows the Act of 1874, section 16 (see Present Legislation), except that the power of the board of directors to fix the dividends, which is unlimited in the section referred to, is limited in the suggested section by any provision in respect to the rate and character of the dividend which may be in the original articles or in an amendment thereto. Again, it is provided in the suggested section that the classes of stock, with their preferences, shall be stated in the articles of incorporation or in an amendment. See note 10, section 3 (f).

If the Act of 1873, April 28, P. L. 79, section 1 (see Present Legislation) is still in force, it is submitted that its provisions are wholly unnecessary, because, if the right to issue preferred stock is in the articles of incorporation or an amendment thereto, the terms under which the stock may be issued, provided the dividends are paid out of net earnings and not out of capital, are purely a matter of contract.

DEFERRED STOCK.

Section 25. Any corporation may, by so providing in its articles of incorporation, be authorized to issue deferred stock in payment for property, subject to the provisions of section 20; if after incorporation, the issuance of such deferred stock shall be authorized by the same method as the issuance of preferred stock may be authorized under section 24. The holders of such deferred stock may be made to await payments of dividends thereon until out of the net earnings such dividends shall have been declared and paid upon the other stock of the corporation as the articles of incorporation or the articles of amendment may provide, or, in the absence of such provision, as the directors may prescribe at the time of the issuance of such stock.*

*It will be noted that the provision in regard to special stock (see Present Legislation) is omitted. The provision for special stock, as it appears in the Act of 1874, creates a class of stockholders who have a right, on the payment of the creditors of the corporation, to demand that the remaining property of the corporation be devoted to payment to them of the principal on their investment, together with interest. They therefore practically become deferred creditors with power to vote. There would appear to be nothing useful in the provision which cannot be obtained by a contract among the stockholders.

CERTIFICATE OF STOCK.

Section 26. (1). Each stockholders shall be entitled to receive a certificate, signed by the president or vice president or other officer designated by the board of directors, countersigned by the treasurer and sealed with the common seal of the corporation, certifying the number and class of shares owned by him and the par value thereof. [If the shares represented by the certificate are not full paid, such certificate shall have printed or stamped upon its face, in enlarged letters and different colored ink from that used in the body of the certificate, the words "not full paid."]*

*The suggested provisions in relation to stock that is not full paid are beyond the provisions of the present law.

In Connecticut, Iowa, and New Hampshire, no certificate can be issued until the shares are full paid. In five other States, California, Massachusetts, Nevada, North Dakota, and West Virginia, the certificates must show the amount paid on the shares.

In England under the Companies Act, a different certificate is issued prior to full payment than that issued upon full payment. This follows the Continental system, which in general distinguishes between the certificate which is issued before full payment, and that issued on full payment. Stock paid in full can, as a rule, on the Continent, only be transferred in the books of the company, while the holder of full paid stock can have a certificate, transfer of which by delivery transfers the title to the shares.

(2). [If any certificate representing shares not full paid shall be issued without having the words "not full paid" printed or stamped upon it as aforesaid, all directors, officers or agent or agents of the corporation responsible therefore shall be jointly and severally liable to the corporation for an amount equal to the amount remaining unpaid on the shares represented by the certificate so issued. If a majority of the directors shall refuse or neglect, for sixty days after the issuance of said certificate, to bring action in the name of the corporation to enforce the said liability, any director or any stockholder or any judgment creditor of the corporation may maintain such action in the name and on the behalf of the corporation.*

*By making the directors immediately liable the creditors have a method by which the proper contribution to the capital can be enforced, without altering the present law which protects those who have purchased the stock on the market in ignorance that it was not full paid.

TRANSFER OF SHARES ON WHICH ASSESSMENTS ARE UNPAID.

Section 27. No shares of the capital stock shall be transferable until all previous assessments or calls thereon shall have been fully paid: Provided, That this section shall have no effect unless a copy of it shall have been written or printed upon the certificate by which the said shares are represented.*

*The suggested section follows the present law. The Act of 1911, referred to under Present Legislation, is the Uniform Transfer of Stock Act. The Act here suggested in no wise alters or amends the Transfer of Stock Act.

EFFECT OF TRANSFER OF SHARES ON LIABILITY.

Section 28. (1). [If a copy of Section 27 shall not have been written or printed on the certificate of stock, the transfer of such certificate shall not relieve the transferor from liability to the corporation for any calls or assessments due and payable on the shares represented thereby prior to the date of the said transfer.]*

*This sub-section expresses the common law.

(2). [The transfer of any shares shall remain liable for the amount, if any, remaining unpaid on such shares, for the period of one year from the registration of such transfer on the books of the company, under the conditions set forth in Section 38 of this Act: Provided, That the liability of such transferor shall be secondary to that of the person to whom he shall have transferred the said shares.]*

*The common law rule, which is the law of this State, is that the transferor remains liable until a transfer on the books of the company. The Uniform Transfer of Stock Act (May 5, 1911, P. L. 126) does not affect this rule of the common law. [See Section 3 (b) of Uniform Transfer of Stock Act, under Present Legislation.] It is probable that the Uniform Transfer of Stock Act does make the transferree also directly liable to the company after the indorsement and transfer of the certificate and before transfer on the books, as such indorsement and delivery of the certificate vests the legal title to the stock in the transferee. The suggested subsection follows the English Companies Act in holding the transferor liable secondarily for one year after transfer. It is based on the theory that where the holder of stock which is not fully paid desires to transfer it, it is impractical to go into questions of the transferee's financial condition at the time of the transfer, and that therefore the transferor should be placed in the position of an insurer of the solvency of the transferee, but that this liability as insurer should have a definite limitation of time. To put the matter in another way, the sub-section is a compromise between the practical necessity of protecting the creditors of the corporation and the desirability of making marketable stock which is not fully paid.

The following is a tabulated statement of existing statutory provisions in the different States affecting the liability of the transferor for unpaid subscriptions after transfer of the stock.

California—Statutory liability [double liability] is not released by the transfer.

Illinois—Transferor is ilable jointly with the transferee.

Georgia—Transferor is secondarily liable if the corporation fails within six months after the transfer.

Massachusetts—Original subscriber is secondarily liable.

Oregon—If the sale is voluntary, the "seller is liable to existing creditors . . . unless the same be duly paid by such purchaser."

Tennessee—The subscriber is not relieved from liability "unless his transferee has paid up all or any of the balance due on said original subscription."

Wisconsin—The corporation may discharge the transferor from liability and accept that of the transferee, but the transferor shall be liable "to the then creditors, and those who become such within six months, or to any receiver or assignee for their use."

Idaho—Transferor is liable as to the debts incurred while he was a stockholder.

Mississippi—Accord with Idaho, except that the liability continues only for one year after the transfer.

New York—Accord with Idaho, except that there is no liability for a debt not payable within two years, nor unless action is brought within two years after the debt is due.

Maine—The original subscriber is liable for debts contracted during his ownership, but proceedings to obtain judgment against the corporation must be commenced during his ownership, or within one year after transfer.

Nevada and West Virginia—There can be no transfer without the consent of the directors, unless security is given for the amount remaining unpaid on the shares.

South Carolina—The by-laws may give the corporation a lien on stock "for such sum as the stockholder is or may be indebted" on his subscription to stock.

(3). The transferee of any shares shall be a stockholder, and shall be primarily liable for the amount, if any, remaining unpaid on the shares so transferred, under the conditions set forth in section 39 of this Act: Provided, That the said transferee shall not be liable for any calls or assessments which shall have been due and paybale prior to the date of the said transfer: And provided further, That notwithstanding the provisions of this section, any corporation

(a). May recognize the execlusive right of a person registered on its books as the owner of shares to receive dividends, and to vote as such owner, or

(b). May hold liable for calls and assessments a person registered on its books as the owner of shares.*

*The Uniform Transfer of Stock Act (May 5, 1911, P. L. 126) provides that title to shares can only be transferred by delivery of the certificate properly endorsed or by delivery of the certificate and a separate document containing a written assignment. Transfer on the books does not effect a transfer of title to the shares. The words "transferor" and "transferee" in this section should be read in the light of the Uniform Transfer of Stock Act. It has been thought unnecessary to suggest the re-adoption of that Act as a part of this Act. It has, however, been necessary to place in this Act certain sections which may appear to be repetiions of certain sections of the Stock Transfer Act, but which, in reality, are necessary to complete this Act and make it consistent with that Act. Thus Section 3 of the Transfer of Stock Act provides that "nothing in this Act shall be construed as forbidding a corporation to recognize," &c., while sub-section 3, supra, as suggested, affirmatively gives these rights to the corporation.

UNCLAIMED DIVIDENDS.

Section 29. (1). Every corporation shall, annually, in the month of December, cause to be published for four successive weeks in one or more newspapers published in the county in which the principal office of such corporation is located, a true and accurate statement, verified by the treasurer thereof, of all dividends declared on its capital stock which, at the date of such publication, shall have remained unclaimed for a period of three years next preceding by the persons authorized to receive the same. The said statement shall set forth the names, and if known, the residence and business of the persons authorized to receive the said dividends, the amount of the dividends and the number of shares of capital stock upon which the same has accrued. The expenses of the publication shall be paid out of the dividend so published.

(2). At the expiration of three years after the first publication of any particular dividend, such dividend, with the interest that shall have accrued thereon, if not demended within that time by the rightful owner or owners thereof, or their legal representatives, shall escheat to the State, and shall be paid into the treasury without discount or reduction for commissions, fees or expenses of any description, except the expenses of publication by such corporation. The said corporation shall thereupon be discharged from any obligation or liability to pay over such dividend to the owner or owners thereof.

(3). Such owner or owners upon application to the State Treasurer, and upon producing satisfactory proof to that officer of his, her, or their right to such dividends, with the accrued interest thereon, or any part thereof, shall receive from the State the amount he, she or they shall be found legally or equitably entitled to.

PART V.

STOCKHOLDERS.

ANNUAL STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

Section 30. A regular meeting of the stockholders of every corporation shall be held annually within this Commonwealth as such time and place as shall be prescribed in the by-laws. The meeting shall be held upon such notice as the by-laws shall provide; in the absence of such provision, upon ten days' notice. No notice of the time, place or purpose of any regular or special meeting of the stockholders shall be required if every stockholder shall waive such notice by a writing filed with the records of the meeting.*

*This section in general is believed to represent the present law. Even if the Act of 1865 is still in force, the meeting at which there is an election for directors must be held within the State.

Should the section be adopted, while the by-laws would, as at present, prescribe the notice to be given, it is submitted that it is better to indicate exactly the length of time before the meeting when the notice must be given, in the absence of any such provision in the by-laws. The provision in regard to waiving notice expresses the common law.

SPECIAL MEETINGS OF STOCKHOLDERS.

Section 31. [Special meetings of the stockholders of any corporation may be called by the president or by the board of directors, and shall be called by the secretary of the corporation, upon the application, stating the time and place of such meeting, of one or more stockholders, who hold at least one-tenth in interest of the capital stock. Notice of the time, place and purpose of all special meetings shall be given at least ten days before the date appointed for such meeting.]*

*There is no provision in the present statutory law with reference to special meetings. That some provision should exist seems manifest. The statutes of twenty-four States contain such provisions: Alabama, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Utah, Virginia, West Virginia.

Twenty-three of these provide for the calling of such meeting by stockholders if the proper officers refuse. In ten, application must be made by shareholders to a justice of the peace, who issues a warrant. Expressions in regard to the desirability of this provision are requested. It is omitted from the section as drafted because of the belief that the right to mandamus the secretary to call such a meeting when the holders of the requisite part in interest of the capital stock make the proper application, is adequate.

QUORUM.

Section 32. Every corporation may determine by its by-laws what number of stockholders shall attend, either in person or by proxy, or what number of shares or amount of interest shall be represented at any meeting, to constitute a quorum; if the quorum is not so determined, a majority in interest of the stockholders shall constitute a quorum.

RIGHT TO VOTE.

Section 33. (1). Each stockholder, except as hereinafter provided, shall at every stockholders' meeting be entitled to one vote, in person or by proxy, for each share of the capital stock, whether preferred or otherwise, held by him.

(2). No stockholder shall be entitled to vote at any meeting of the stockholders, on whose share or shares any calls or assessments shall have been due and unpaid for the period of thirty days immediately preceding the meeting.

(3). [At all meetings of the stockholders, the stock-books shall be conclusive evidence of the right of the person named therein as the owner of shares to vote thereon]*: Provided,

(a). That as between the pledgor and pledgee of shares of the capital stock, the pledgor shall have the right to vote thereon, unless the written agreement between the pledgor and pledgee expressly empowers the pledgor to vote on the said shares;

(b). That executors, administrators, guardians and trustees, whether created by last will and testament or by decree of the proper court, shall have the same right and power, at all corporate meetings, to vote on any shares of stock held by them in such fiduciary capacity, as the decedent or legal owner thereof had in his lifetime or during his legal ownership thereof. If any shares are so held by more than two such executors, administrators, guardians or trustees, the right to vote on the said shares shall be vested in a majority of such executors, administrators, guardians or trustees.

*This sub-section changes the present law in that it makes the stock books conclusive evidence of the right of a person named therein to vote. In view of the fact that the Uniform Stock Transfer Act vests the legal title in the transferee of the certificate, it is important to have it finally determined whether the certificate or the stock book shall control in respect to the right to vote. As the holder of the certificate can always have the stock transferred on the books, and as, for the protection of the corporation, it has been given the right to treat the holder of record as the person entitled to vote [see section 28, supra, and also the Uniform Stock Transfer Act, May 5, 1911, P. L. 126, Section 3] it is submitted that the stock books should be made conclusive evidence of the persons entitled to vote.

(4). Nothing herein shall be held to prevent a corporation from prescribing in its by-laws a period, not exceeding thirty days immediately preceding any regular annual meeting of the stockholders, during which the books of the corporation may be declared closed, and no transfer of stock made thereon.

CUMULATIVE VOTING AT ELECTIONS FOR DIRECTORS.

Section 34. All elections for directors shall be by ballot and each stockholder shall be entitled to as many votes as shall equal the number of shares held by him, multiplied by the number of directors to be elected, and he may cast all such votes for a single director, or may distribute them among the number to be voted for, or any two or more of them, as he may see fit.

PROXIES.

Section 35. Each stockholder of a corporation who shall be entitled to vote at any corporate meeting thereof shall have the right to vote thereat by proxy, duly executed by the said stockholder, either with or without notarial or other acknowledgment, but properly attested by the signature of one witness: Provided, however, that proxies dated more than two months prior to any corporate meeting shall not confer the right to vote thereat.*

*This section expresses the present law. There would seem to be no real necessity for sub-section 2. The provision in Present Legislation that one person may be constituted and act as proxy for any number has been omitted as unnecessary.

PROCEDURE WHEN STOCK VOTE REQUIRED OR DEMANDED.

Section 36. (1). In all elections for directors and in all other cases where a stock vote is duly required or demanded on any subject submitted to the stockholders of any corporation at any annual or special meeting, the said stock vote shall be taken by three judges appointed by the directors. If one or more of said judges be absent the judge or judges present shall appoint a judge or judges who shall act in the place of the judge or judges absent. If the directors shall fail to appoint such judges, they shall be elected by the stockholders at the said meeting.* The said judges shall respectively take and subscribe an oath or affirmation before an officer authorized by law to administer the same, that they will conduct such election or stock vote well and truly according to law. If any such judge shall, knowingly and willfully, violate his oath or affirmation, he shall be subject to all the penalties imposed by law upon the officers of the general election of this Commonwealth who violate their duties, and shall be proceeded against in like manner and with like effect. The result of the election or stock vote shall be certified by the judges under oath or affirmation, and their certificate shall be filed with the secretary of the corporation.

*This sentence is added to the section as it appeared in the first draft to provide for election of judges by stockholders in default of appointment by the directors.

(2). If any election for director or officer shall be invalid for any reason, such election shall be set aside in the manner now provided by law, and a new election ordered by the Court of Common Pleas of the county in which said election shall have been held, upon the petition of not less than five stockholders, supported by proof satisfactory to the court.

BY-LAWS.

Section 37. (1). The by-laws of a corporation shall prescribe the time and place of corporate meetings, the powers and duties of the corporate officials, and such other matters as may be pertinent and necessary for the business to be transacted. The by-laws may contain penalties for the breach thereof, not exceeding twenty dollars.

(2). The power to make and alter by-laws shall be in the stockholders, but any corporation may in its articles of incorporation or in articles of amendment thereto confer that power upon the directors. By-laws made by the directors under the power so conferred may be altered or repealed by the stockholders.

(3). The by-laws of every corporation shall be deemed and taken to be its law, subordinate to its articles of incorporation, this statute, the Constitution and laws of this Commonwealth, and the Constitution of the United States.*

*The difference between the section as suggested and the present law is of form rather than substance. In the present law there is no specific declaration that by-laws made by the directors may be altered by the stockholders. Subsection 2, as worded, is taken from the New Jersey Act.

LIABILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS FOR UNPAID SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Section 38. (1). [If the assets of any corporation shall be insufficient to satisfy the claims of its creditors, each stockholder shall be liable to pay on each share held by him the sum, if any, necessary to complete the amount of the par value of such share, or such proportion of that sum as shall be required to satisfy the said claims.]*

*The requirement is substantially the requirement of the New Jersey and Delaware statutes.

(2). [For the purpose of determining those who shall be subject to the aforesaid liability, the term "stockholder" shall include not only the holder in fact of shares as represented by the stock certificate, but also any person who may be registered on the books of the company as the owner of shares. A person who shall have been so registered on the books of the corporation within a period of one year shall be subject to the same liability to the extent prescribed in Section 28.]*

*This sub-section becomes necessary because of the Uniform Transfer of the Stock Act (Act of 1911, May 5, P. L. 126), the holder in fact as represented by the certificate of stock not necessarily appearing upon the books.

See also note to section 28 (2), supra.

(3). [Nothing in this section shall be construed as making liable a person who in good faith shall have purchased shares represented by a certificate not marked "not full paid," in ignorance of the fact that such shares have not been fully paid. But any person who shall have purchased shares represented by a certificate marked "not full paid" shall not be relieved from liability for the full amount in fact unpaid on such shares by any representations which may have been made by any director, officer or agent of the corporation prior to or at the time of the said purchase.]*

*The first part of this sub-section, of course, represents the present law. Finletter vs. Appleton, 195 Pa. 349 (1900). The last provision is perhaps a change in the present law. It is submitted, however, that a person who purchases stock with knowledge that it is not full paid should be liable to creditors for the full amount in fact unpaid on the shares, regardless of any representations which may have been made by the corporate officers as to the amount remaining unpaid. Full protection would thus be given to creditors, and the purchaser would have an action against the person who made the false representation.

(4). [The liability prescribed in this section shall be enforced only by a receiver appointed by a court of equity upon a bill brought by any creditor or creditors or by any stockholder or stockholders: Provided, That nothing herein shall prevent a judgment creditor of the corporation from attaching, as other debts due the corporation may be attached, any debt due for calls or assessments duly made by the directors.*

*Under the present law there is considerable confusion as to the proper method of enforcing liability for unpaid subscriptions. It has been stated that the proper method is a bill in equity brought against the corporation and the stockholders by a judgment creditor on behalf of all other creditors who may join. Lane's Appeal, 105 Pa. 49 (1884); but for a case in which all the creditors were not joined as plaintiff, nor all the delinquent stockholders made defendants, see Cornell's Appeal, 114 Pa. 153 (1886). It is submitted that the remedy of the creditors should be clear and definite, and that the only proper method when the corporation has insufficient property to meet its liabilities is to give to the creditors the right to have a receiver appointed, who, under the supervision of the court, can proceed against the stockholders and distribute the funds ratably among the creditors.

The word "judgment" is omitted from the third line of sub-section (4) in this draft in order to give any creditor the right to have a receiver appointed.

INDIVIDUAL LIABILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS FOR WORK AND LABOR.

Section 39. (1). The stockholders of every corporation shall be personally liable for all sums of money due to laborers, clerks and operatives, for services rendered within six months before demand made upon the corporation, and its neglect or refusal to make payment, which liability shall be enforced as herein provided.

(2). No stockholder shall be personally liable as aforesaid unless suit for the collection of the debt due to such laborer, clerk or operative shall be brought against such stockholder within six months after such debt shall have become due.

(3). In any action or bill of equity brought against the corporation to enforce any liability due to any laborer, clerk or operative, the plaintiff may include as defendants any one or more of the stockholders of such corporation claimed to be liable therefor, and if judgment be given in favor of the plaintiff for his claim, or any part thereof, and any one or more of the stockholders so made defendants, shall be found to be liable judgment shall be given against him or them.

(4). The execution upon such judgment shall be first levied on the property of such corporation, if to be found in the county where the principal office of the corporation shall be located, and in case such property, sufficient to satisfy the same, cannot be found in such county, the deficiency, or so much thereof as the stockholder or stockholders, defendants in such judgment, shall be liable to pay, shall be collected from the property of such stockholder or stockholders.

(5). On the payment of any judgment as aforesaid, or any part thereof, by one or more stockholders, the stockholder or stockholders so paying the same shall be entitled to have such judgment, or so much thereof as may have been paid by him or them, assigned to him or them for his or their benefit, with power to enforce the same in the manner aforesaid, first against the corporation, and in case the amount so paid by him or them shall not be collected from the property of the corporation, then ratably against the other solvent stockholders, if any, originally liable for the claim on which such judgment was obtained.*

*This section expresses the present law as applied to clause 18 corporations. The liability must be enforced in the manner prescribed in the statute. Katch vs. Coal Company, 19 Pa. Sup. 476 (1902). The tendency of modern legislation is to do away with all liability on stockholders except the common law liability for unpaid subscriptions. The statutes of ten States contain a similar provision.

PART VI.

DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS.

DIRECTORS.

Section 40. The business of every corporation shall be managed by a board of not less than three directors, one-third of whom shall be and remain, during their terms of office, residents of this Commonwealth. The directors shall be elected at the organization meeting and annually thereafter, except as hereinafter provided in section 42, and shall hold office until their successors are respectively chosen and qualified.

(2). In case of the death, removal or resignation of any of the directors, the remaining directors may supply the vacancy thus created until the next election.

(3). It shall not be necessary for any corporation to amend its articles of incorporation in order to change the number of its directors, but such number may be increased or diminished from time to time by a vote of a majority in interest of the stockholders of the corporation at any regular annual meeting or at any special meeting duly called. Any corporation may, by its by-laws, authorize the board of directors to increase or diminish the number of directors from time to time without a vote of the stockholders.

CLASSES OF DIRECTORS.

Section 41. If, at the organization meeting, or at any regular annual meeting or special meeting duly called, a majority of the stockholders present, either in person or by proxy, shall vote to elect a portion of the directors of any such corporation for a term or terms longer than one year, it shall be lawful for the corporation, at the election, if any, held at such meeting or at the next election, to divide the directors into two, three or four classes, and for the stockholders to elect the first class to serve for the term of one year, and the second, third and fourth to serve for two, three and four years respectively. At each subsequent election of such corporation the stockholders shall only elect the number of directors necessary to take the place of those whose term of office shall then expire, and such directors shall be elected for the longest term for which any class may have been elected as hereinbefore provided.

DIRECTORS' MEETINGS.

Section 42. Unless otherwise prescribed in the by-laws the meetings of the directors of any corporation may be held in such place, whether in this State or elsewhere, as the majority of the directors may from time to time appoint.*

*Under the present statutory law directors' meetings can be held outside the State when a majority of the directors are not citizens of the State. There is no direct provision in the present law requiring the directors' meetings to be held within the State where a majority are citizens. There would appear to be no reason why the directors should not meet at that place, whether inside the State or out, which is most convenient to the majority.

(2). At all meetings a majority of the whole number of such directors shall be necessary to constitute a quorum.

OFFICERS.

Section 43. (1). The board of directors shall appoint a president, a secretary and a treasurer, and may appoint one or more vice-presidents and such other officers as may be necessary: Provided, however, that the by-laws may provide for the election of the president by the stockholders.*

*This sub-section probably modifies the present law by taking from the stockholders the right to provide in the by-laws that the officers, other than the president, may be elected by the stockholders.

(2). The president shall be a member of the board of directors. In case of his death, removal or resignation, if he shall have been elected by the stockholders, the board of directors may supply the vacancy thus created until the next election.

(3). The secretary shall be sworn and shall record all the votes of the corporation and the minutes of its transactions in a book to be kept for that purpose.

(4). The treasurer shall give bond for the faithful discharge of his duties in such sum and with such sureties as shall be required by the by-laws. He shall keep the money of the corporation in a separate bank account to his credit as treasurer. For each day during which he shall refuse or neglect to keep such separate bank account, he shall be liable to a penalty of fifty dollars, to be recovered at the suit of any informant in an action at law, and every director who, knowing the treasurer's neglect or refusal, shall not at the time file his protest with the secretary of the corporation, shall be liable to the same penalty as that imposed on the treasurer.*

*This sub-section expresses the present law, except that under the present law the penalty imposed on directors, if imposed at all, is confined to mining and manufacturing corporations.

(5). It shall be lawful for any vice-president, the treasurer, solicitor or other officer of a corporation to serve as a director of such corporation, if duly elected, and to receive at the same time such compensation for his services as officer as the board of directors may direct.*

*The section is changed in this draft so as to permit the appointment of more than one vice-president.

STOCK-BOOK INSPECTION.

Section 44. (1). It shall be the duty of the directors of every corporation to cause a stock-book to be kept by the treasurer or secretary thereof, at the principal office of the corporation, which shall contain an alphabetical list of the names of all persons who are or shall within one year have been stockholders of such corporation, showing their places of residence, the class and number of shares held by them respectively, the time when they respectively became the owners thereof, and the amount paid thereon, and also the total amount of the capital stock paid in.

(2). The said stock-book shall, during the usual business hours of the day, on every business day, be open for the inspection of any stockholder or judgment creditor of the corporation or the duly authorized agent of either, and any such person shall have the right to make extracts from such books. Old stock books shall be carefully preserved in the principal office of the company for future reference.

(3). For any refusal to allow the said stock-book to be inspected, or extracts be taken therefrom, by any person authorized to inspect the same or to take such extracts, the secretary or treasurer, as the case may be, to whose custody the books shall have been committed, shall be liable to a penalty of fifty dollars for each day he shall so refuse, to be recovered by such aggrieved person in an action of law.*

*This section expresses the present law, except that the present law is confined to manufacturing and mining corporations.

LIABILITY FOR FALSE STATEMENTS AND ILLEGAL DIVIDENDS.

Section 45. In addition to the liabilities imposed upon the directors and officers by the various sections of this Act:

(a). If any certificate, statement, notice or report, made as required, shall be false in any material representation, the directors and officers who shall have signed the same, knowing it to be false [or which, with reasonable care, could have been known to be false] shall be jointly and severally liable to the creditors of the corporation for any loss or damage arising therefrom.*

*The present law makes the directors of clause 18 corporations, who have signed false certificates, liable for all the debts contracted during their term of office. The suggested provision follows the common law liability. Opinions as to the advisability of the change are solicited. The change proceeds on the theory that except in exceptional cases a private person should only be allowed to recover from another private person when he has sustained damage, and then only to the amount of the damage. Criminal liability for false reports, statements, etc., in regard to the corporation, as it exists under the present statutory law, is not covered by this Act and therefore, if this Act were adopted, would remain unaffected.

(b). If the directors of any corporation shall declare any dividend when the corporation is insolvent, or the payment of which renders it insolvent, the said directors, except those dissenting thereto, who shall have filed objections with the secretary of the corporation at the time, or who, being absent, shall have so filed their objections upon learning of such action, shall be jointly and severally liable to the corporation for an amount equal to the amount of such dividend. If the directors shall refuse or neglect, for sixty days after the declaration of such dividend, to bring action in the name of the corporation to enforce the said liability, any director who shall have filed his objections as aforesaid, or any stockholder, or any judgment creditor of the corporation, may maintain such action in the name and on behalf of the corporation.*

*Liability for illegal dividends appears in the present law relating to clause 18 corporations. As there expressed it is a liability to the creditors, to the extent of that dividend, for all debts then existing contracted during the term of office of the directors responsible. In this section the liability is made a liability to the corporation, enforcible in the name of the corporation by any judgment creditor, stockholder, or objecting director. The reasons for this form of liability have been expressed in the note to section 13 (2), supra.

(c). If any certificate, articles, or report filed with the Secretary of the Commonwealth or with the Auditor General shall be false in any material representation, the directors, officers, or other persons who shall have signed the same, knowing it to be false, or which, with reasonable care, could have been known to be false, shall each be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction in the proper court, be subject to a fine of not less than five hundred dollars nor more than five thousand dollars, or to imprisonment for not less than one nor more than three years, or to both, in the discretion of the court. This liability shall be in addition to the liabilty, if any, imposed by clause (a) of this section.*

*This clause did not appear in the first draft. In the first draft the charter of the corporation was subject to be forfeited for such false reports, etc. It was deemed better to impose a penalty on the persons responsible rather than to punish innocent stockholders by forfeiting the charater.

PART VII.

REPORTS. OFFICIAL INVESTIGATION.

ANNUAL REPORT.

Section 46. (1). Every corporation shall, annually, in January, file in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth a report of its condition on the thirty-first day of December next preceding the date of such report, which report shall be made on such form, if any, as may be prescribed by the secretary.* The report shall be signed and sworn to by the president, the treasurer and a majority of the board of directors, and shall set forth:

(a). The amount of its authorized capital stock, the proportion actually issued, the amount paid thereon, and the character of such payment, whether in cash, property or labor.

(b). A statement of the assets and liability of the corporation.

(c). The name of, and number of shares held by, each stockholder.

(d). The names and post office addresses of the directors and officers.†

*The time for making the report is fixed so as to be in harmony with the report of the Committee recommending January as the month for filing reports to the Auditor General.

†The present legislation requires reports to the Auditor General for purposes of taxation. This should not, it is submitted, be part of a general incorporation act, and would not be affected in any way by the adoption of this section.

The present legislation requires that clause 18 corporations file an annual report with the recorder of deeds and that iron or steel corporations make a statement or report to the stockholders annually. The suggested sub-section, in relation to the matters to be included in the report, follows the present requirement for the report to be filed in the office of the recorder of deeds by clause 18 corporations, except that this suggested sub-section requires a description of the character of the payments made to the capital stock, and the names and post office addresses of the directors and officers. The result of the adoption of the sub-section would be that in a public office—the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth—there would exist complete reports from all the corporations incorporated under the Act.

(2). [If any report shall not be made as herein prescribed, any judgment creditor or any person who is extending credit to the company or any stockholder may make a request, in writing, to the directors and officers to file such report, and if it shall not be filed within thirty days after the receipt of such written request, the directors and officers responsible for such default shall be jointly and severally liable in an action at law to each person so making such request, for the payment of fifty dollars for each day thereafter during which such default shall continue.]

[(3). Furthermore, if any report shall not be filed in September, as provided, the Secretary of the Commonwealth shall give notice, in writing, of the default to such corporation. If the corporation omits to file such report within thirty days after the receipt of such notice, it shall forfeit to the Commonwealth not less than five nor more than ten dollars for each day for fifteen days after the expiration of the said thirty days, and not less than ten nor more than two hundred dollars for each day thereafter during which such default continues, or any other sum, not greater than the maximum penalty for forfeiture, which the court may deem just and equitable. If any corporation shall fail for two successive years to file its annual report, the omission shall be cause for the forfeiture of its charter.]*

*If it is desirable, from the standpoint of the creditors and stockholders, and from the standpoint of the Commonwealth itself, that regular and annual reports of all corporations shall be filed in a public office, it seems necessary that a penalty for non-compliance should be imposed upon the directors and officers responsible, not only in favor of stockholders and creditors as prescribed in sub-section 2, but in favor of the Commonwealth itself as prescribed in sub-section 3.

(4). A copy of the report required in sub-section (1) of this section shall, annually, in January, be filed in the office of the Auditor-General.

REPORTS, OFFICIAL INVESTIGATION.

Section 47. (1). [The Secretary of the Commonwealth shall have power to call for special reports from any corporation, whenever, in his judgment, the same are necessary in order to a secure a full and complete knowledge of the condition of any such corporation.]

(2). [In addition, the affairs and condition of any corporation, may at any time be investigated by the Secretary of the Commonwealth, or by any person duly appointed by him for that purpose. For the purpose of such investigation all necessary oaths may be administered to the directors, officers and stockholders of any such corporation, and they may be examined on oath in relation to the affairs and conditions thereof, and the Secretary, or any person duly appointed by him for that purpose, may examine the safes, books, papers and documents belonging to such corporation or pertaining to its affairs, and condition, and may compel the production of all keys, papers and documents by summary process, to be issued on application to any judge of any court of Common Pleas under such rules and regulation as the court may prescribe.]*

*The statutes of seven States, California, Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota and Wisconsin, contain provisions for investigation by the legislature, or a committee of the legislature, the powers granted being similar to those conferred upon the Secretary in the suggested section. It is submitted that the legislature can pass Acts at any time if it wishes to make special investigation. The section as drawn is based on the principle that an executive officer of the Commonwealth should be permanently charged with the duty of making investigations, whenever in his judgment it is necessary for the Commonwealth to have complete information in regard to the condition of the corporation.

PART VIII.

REORGANIZATION.

CERTAIN PURCHASERS OF PROPERTY AND FRANCHISES TO BE A CORPORATION.

Section 48. (1). Whenever the entire property, whether located wholly or partly in this State, and the franchises of any corporation formed under the laws of this Commonwealth, or of this Commonwealth and any other State or States, or any part of the said property and franchises of any such corporation, shall be sold under and by virtue of any process of any court of this Commonwealth, or of the United States, or under or by virtue of a power of sale contained in any mortgage or deed of trust without any process or decree of court in the premises, the persons for or on whose account the said property and franchises may be purchased shall be and are hereby constituted a corporation.

(2). The said corporation shall be vested with all the right, title, interest, property, possession, claims and demands, in law and equity, of, in and to the property so sold and conveyed, with the appurtenances, and with all the rights, powers, immunities, privileges and franchises of the corporation by whom the said property and franchises shall have been owned at the time of the sale.

ORGANIZATION MEETING.

Section 49. (1). The person or persons for or on whose account the said property and franchises may have been purchased, shall hold an organization meeting, within thirty days after the conveyance thereof shall have been delivered, notice of the time and place of such meeting having been given, once a week for two weeks in at least one newspaper published in the city or county in which the said sale may have been held.

(2). At such meeting the said purchasers shall organize by the adoption of a corporate name and seal, and by the election of directors, and shall determine the amount of capital stock of the said corporation, the number of shares into which it is to be divided, and the par value of each share. The amount of the capital stock shall not exceed the aggregate amount of the capital stock authorized to be issued by the corporation whose property and franchises shall have been sold, together with the amount of the bonded indebtedness of such corporation outstanding at the time of the sale, and of any receiver's certificate or other receiver's indebtedness necessary to be paid, and the amount that will represent all further money contributed to such new or reorganized corporation. The said stock may consist wholly of common stock, or partly of common stock and partly of preferred stock, and the whole or any part thereof may be issued as fully paid stock in payment or part payment for the property and franchises so purchased.

(3). Except as hereinbefore or hereinafter modified, the said corporation shall be subject in all respects to the provisions of this Act: Provided, That nothing herein shall be held to require the payment of any bonus upon the amount of the capital stock of the said corporation.*

*In the present Act, the directors of the new corporation are to be not less than five nor more than fifteen. In the suggested section, on the other hand, the number of directors is governed by the same limitations as in the case of any other corporation.

CERTIFICATE TO BE FILED AFTER ORGANIZATION.

Section 50. (1). The said corporation shall, within one month after its organization meeting, file in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth a certificate under its corporate seal and attested by the signature of its president and a majority of its directors, specifying the date of its organization and all such information as is required to be set forth in originol articles of incorporation. Such certificate shall be recorded in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth in a book to be kept by him for tsat purpose, and shall then be returned to the corporation.

(2). Such certificate shall be recorded in the office of the Recorder of Deeds in and for the county in which the principal office of the corporation is located. Failure so to record shall subject the directors to the same penalty as is prescribed in section 10, in the case of failure to record the certificate of incorporation.*

*The section is changed in this draft to require recording of the original certificate.

(3). A copy of such certificate, duly certified by the Secretary of the Commonwealth, shall be conclusive evidence of the corporate existence of the said corporation.*

*This section is substantially the same as the present legislation, except the provisions which have been inserted to maintain consistency with the earlier sections of this Act dealing with incorporations and organizations.

PART IX.

CONSOLIDATION.

WHAT CORPORATIONS MAY CONSOLIDATE.

Section 51. Any corporation may, as hereinafter provided, consolidate with any other corporation or corporations transacting the same, or a similar kind of business.*

*The existing statute speaks of consolidation and merger, but the Act taken as a whole apparently intends to provide only for the creation of a new corporation as the result of the consolidation of two existing corporations. Merger properly defined is the absorption of one corporation into another existing corporation. In this Act, therefore, the word "merger" is omitted, as it is the intent substantially to re-enact the present legislation.

JOINT AGREEMENT BY DIRECTORS.

Section 52. The directors of each corporation shall enter into a joint agreement, under the corporate seal of each corporation, prescribing:

(a). The terms and conditions of the said consolidation, and the mode of carrying the same into effect.

(b). Such matters as are required to be set forth in original articles of incorporation.

(c). The manner of converting the capital stock of each of the said corporations into the capital stock of the new corporation.

(d). Such other details as the said directors shall deem necessary to perfect the said consolidation.

[Provided, that nothing herein shall permit the said consolidated corporation to issue paid up capital stock in exchange for the capital stock of the corporations so consolidating to an amount greater than the aggregate amount of the paid up capital stock of such corporations.]*

* The section expresses present legislation with the exception of the proviso, the purpose of which is to prevent overcapitalization by the issuance of new stock in exchange for the old stock in excess of the value received by the new corporation.

APPROVAL OF STOCKHOLDERS.

Section 53. The said agreement shall be submitted to the stockholders of each of the said corporations at separate special meetings, or at any annual meetings, a notice designating the time, place and purpose of which shall be given at least two weeks successively, once a week, next preceding the time appointed for the said respective meetings. A vote of the stockholders shall be taken by ballot, and if a majority in interest of the stockholders of each corporation shall vote in favor of the said agreement, the fact that a majority of the stockholders of his corporation have so voted shall be certified by the secretary of each corporation, under the corporate seal thereof.

FILING OF NECESSARY PAPERS AND PAYMENT OF BONUS.

Section 54. (1). The certificates of the secretaries provided for in Section 53, together with the agreement of consolidation, shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

(2). At the same time a bonus as prescribed in section 7 shall be paid to the State Treasurer upon the amount of the capital stock of the new corporation in excess of the amount of capital stock of the several corporations so consolidating upon which the said bonus shall have been theretofore paid.

(3). Each of the corporations so consolidating shall also file in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth a certificate from the Auditor General, setting forth that all reports required by the Auditor General up to the date of the proposed consolidation have been duly filed, and that all taxes due the Commonwealth have been paid, up to and including said date.

ISSUANCE OF CERTIFICATE OF CONSOLIDATION.

Section 55. (1). It shall thereupon be the duty of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, if he shall find that the provisions of this Act have been complied with, to endorse his approval on the agreement of consolidation, and to submit the same, together with the certificates of the secretaries of each corporation, to the Governor, who, if he shall also be satisfied that the provisions of this Act have been complied with, shall endorse his approval on the agreement and direct a certificate of consolidation to issue.

(2). Upon the issuance of the certificate of consolidation, the said consolidation shall be deemed to have taken place, and the said certificate of consolidation, or a copy thereof, duly certified by the Secretary of the Commonwealth, shall be [conclusive] evidence of the said consolidation and of the corporate existence of the consolidated corporation.

(3). [The certificate of consolidation shall be recorded in the office of the Recorder of Deeds in and for the county in which the principal office of the new corporation is located. Failure so to record shall subject the directors to the same liability as prescribed in section 10, in the case of a failure to record the certificate of incorporation.]

EFFECT OF CONSOLIDATION.

Section 56. (1). Upon the issuance of the certificate of consolidation the consolidated corporation shall possess all the rights, privileges and franchises theretofore vested in each of the corporations so consolidating, and all the property, real and personal, and rights of action of each of said corporations shall be deemed and taken to be transferred to and vested in the said new corporation without any further act or deed.

(2). All debts, duties and liabilities of each of the said corporations shall thenceforth attach to the new corporation, and may be enforced against it to the same extent and by the same process as if said debts, duties and liabilities had been contracted by it: Provided, That all rights of creditors and liens upon the property of each of the said corporations shall continue unimpaired, and the respective constituent corporations may be deemed to be in existence to preserve the same.

RIGHTS OF DISSENTING STOCKHOLDERS.

Section 57. (1). If any stockholder or stockholders of any corporation which shall become a party to an agreement of consolidation hereunder, shall have voted against such agreement at the stockholders' meeting, such stockholder or stockholders may, within thirty days after the issuance of the certificate of consolidation, and upon reasonable notice to the said consoidated corporation, apply, by petition, to any Court of Common Pleas of the county in which the principal office of the said consolidated corporation is located, or to a law judge of said court in vacation, if no such court sits during that period, to appoint three disinterested persons to appraise the share or shares of such stockholder or stockholders in the corporation or corporations so consolidating.*

* Under present legislation the damages suffered by the dissenting stockholder, as well as the value of his shares, are appraised, and the corporation has the option of paying such damages, if any, or of paying the value of the shares. The suggested section proceeds on the theory that a dissenting stockholder has the right to be paid the value of his shares rather than be compelled to continue a member of the consolidated corporation, with a right to receive only the damages, if any, which he has suffered from the consolidation.

(2). Upon such petition it shall be the duty of said court or judge to make such appointment. The persons so appointed shall appraise the share or shares of said stockholders at the full market value thereof, without regard to any appreciation or depreciation in consequence of the said consolidation; and such appraisement, when confirmed by the said court or judge, shall be final and conclusive.

(3). Upon the payment by the consolidated corporation of the value of the share or shares as so ascertained, the stockholder or stockholders shall transfer the share or shares so held to the consolidated corporation, which may reissue such share or shares or receive subscriptions therefor, as in the case of stock not issued or subscribed for. [If not sold for the par value or subscribed for within six months after the transfer to the corporation, the said share or shares shall be cancelled and deducted from the amount of the capital stock.]*

* The provision in respect to cancellation in case the shares are not resold within six months is taken from that part of the New York statute which deals with the forfeiture of stock for non-payment of assessments. Its purpose here is to protect future creditors of the consolidated corporation.

(4). If the value of the share or shares, ascertained as aforesaid, shall not be paid within thirty days after the appraisement shall have been confirmed by the said court or judge, the amount of such appraisement so confirmed shall be a judgment against the consolidated corporation and may be collected as other judgments in said courts are by law recoverable.

PART X.

DISSOLUTION.

DISSOLUTION DEFINED.

Section 58. [The dissolution of a corporation is the cessation of the right to carry on, as distinguished from the right to wind up, the business of the corporation.]

VOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION.

Section 59. (1). [Whenever a majority of the entire number of the board of directors of any corporation shall deem it advisable that the corporation shall be dissolved and shall pass a resolution to that effect, a meeting of the stockholders shall be called to take action upon the same. A notice, designating the time, place and purpose of such meeting shall be given at least four weeks successively, once a week, next preceding the time appointed for such meeting.]

(2). [If at such meeting two-thirds in interest of all the stockholders shall signify, in writing, their consent that a dissolution shall take place, such consent, together with a list of the names and residences of the directors, signed and sworn to by the president, secretary, and a majority of the board of directors, shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth. At the same time, there shall be filed in the same office a certificate from the Auditor General, setting forth that all taxes due the Commonwealth have been paid, up to and including the date of the proposed dissolution.]

(3). [The Secretary of the Commonwealth, upon being satisfied by due proof that the requirements aforesaid have been complied with, shall issue a certificate that such consent has been filed. The board of directors shall thereupon cause such certificate to be published four weeks successively, at least once a week, in a newspaper published in the county in which the principal office of the corporation is located and in the legal journal, if any, designated by rule of court in said county for the publication of legal notices.

(4). Upon the filing, in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, of an affidavit that the said certificate has been so published, the Secretary shall issue a certificate of dissolution, whereupon the corporation shall be dissolved, and the board of directors shall proceed to wind up its affairs as hereinafter provided. The certificate of dissolution, or a copy thereof, duly certified by the Secretary, shall be conclusive evidence of such dissolution.]*

* Twenty-six States authorize voluntary dissolution without recourse to the courts. The method here proposed is that in force in New Jersey, except that in New Jersey dissolution takes effect upon the filing of an affidavit of publication. The requirement in the suggested section that the Secretary issue a certificate and carries out the general policy of this Act to require official investigation of the fact whether the requirements of the Act necessary to produce a certain effect have been complied with, and then the issuance of a certificate which is conclusive evidence of that compliance.

VOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION OR FORFEITURE.

Section 60. (1). The charter of any corporation shall be subject to be forfeited, and the Attorney General shall take the proper legal steps to have such corporation dissolved and its charter forfeited, if it

(a). Shall not, within two years from the date of its incorporation, proceed in good faith to organize and commence business, or

(b). Shall not, within two years from the date of its incorporation, have paid up at least one-fourth of its capital stock, or

(c). [Shall have failed, for two successive years, to file the annual report required by Section 46], or

(d). Shall violate the provisions of the Act of Congress of July second, one thousand eight hundred and ninety, entitled "An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," or any amendment or supplement thereto, or* (e). Shall do, suffer, or omit to do any act, matter or thing whereby a forfeiture shall by law be created.

*A violation of the Sherman Anti-trust Act as a ground for forfeiture did not appear in the first draft.
Forfeiture because of false statements in reports to the Secretary of the Commonwealth has been omitted. (See note 8 to Section 45, supra.)

(2). A certified copy of every decree or judgment dissolving a corporation shall be forthwith filed by the clerk of the court in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

EFFECT OF DISSOLUTION.

Section 61. Every corporation after dissolution, whether by expiration of its charter, by forfeiture, or otherwise, shall be continued a body corporate for the purpose of suing and being sued and maintaining suits already brought, and of enabling its affairs to be wound up, its property to be conveyed and disposed of and its assets to be collected and distributed, but not for the purpose of continuing the business for which it was incorporated.

DIRECTORS TO WIND UP AFFAIRS.

Section 62. Upon any dissolution the directors at the time of such dissolution shall proceed to wind up the affairs of the corporation, unless a receiver shall have been appointed by the court. The terms of such directors shall not expire at the expiration of the term for which they shall have been elected. If any vacancy shall occur in the board of directors after dissolution, such vacancy shall be filled by appointment of the remaining directors.

APPOINTMENT OF RECEIVER.

Section 63. (1). Upon the dissolution in any manner of any corporation, a court of equity, or in vacation any judge thereof, shall have power to appoint a receiver to take charge of and wind up the affairs of such corporation, who shall be held to supersede the directors of the corporation or any assignee in possession.

(2). [Such receiver shall have power to maintain and defend suits in the name of the corporation, to carry on the business of the corporation so far as may be necessary for the beneficial winding up thereof, to sell and convey its property, to enforce the liability of stockholders prescribed in section 38, and the liability of directors prescribed in sections 9, 13, 26, 45, 46 (2), 50 (2) and 55 (3), and to do all other acts necessary or proper to wind up the affairs of the corporation. The said court of equity shall have jurisdiction of all questions arising after the appointmnet of the receiver and may make such orders and decrees thereon as justice and equity shall require. The powers of the receiver may be continued as long as the court deems necessary for said purposes.]

INSOLVENCY.

Section 64. (1). [Whenever any corporation shall become insolvent, any creditor or any stockholder thereof may by bill apply to a court of equity for the apopintment of a receiver to take charge of and wind up the affairs of such corporation. Such receiver, if appointed, shall have all the powers and be subject to all the duties of a receiver appointed upon or after the dissolution of a corporation.]*

* The section is changed by omitting the word "judgment" so as to give any creditor a right to apply for the appointment of a receiver upon the insolvency of a corporation.

(2). [Whenever such receiver shall have been appointed and it shall afterwards appear that the debts of the corporation have been paid or provided for, and that there remains, or can be obtained by further contributions, sufficient capital to enable it to resume its business, the said court of equity may, in its discretion, a proper case being shown, dismiss the receiver, and thereafter the corporation may resume control of its property, franchises, rights, and effects as fully as if such receiver had never been appointed; or the court may, in its discretion, make a decree dissolving the corporation and directing the receiver to wind up the affairs of the corporation.]*

* This section is taken substantially from the New Jersey Act. By the common law of this State it appears that a receiver can be appointed on insolvency. Cowan vs. Plate Glass Company, 184 Pa. 1; Gehr vs. Iron Company, 174 Pa. 430. The change introduced by the suggested section is to make insolvency a ground for dissolution, if, in the opinion of the Court, the company should be dissolved.

PART XI.

SUPPLEMENTARY.

METHOD OF GIVING NOTICE.

Section 65. In all cases in which notice is required to be given by the provisions of this Act to the stockholders of any corporation, such notice shall be given, unless otherwise specifically prescribed, by publication in at least one newspaper published in the county in which the principal office of the corporation is located.

EXTENT TO WHICH ACT IS APPLICABLE TO EXISTING CORPORATIONS.

Section 66. Every corporation now in existence whose purpose is included within the purposes for which a corporation may be formed under this Act, which shall have been formed under or have accepted the provisions of the Act approved April 29, 1874, entitled "An Act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of certain corporations," or any amendment or supplement thereto, shall, from and after the passage of this Act, be subject to its provisions in respect to the future government and regulation of such corporation: Provided,

(a). That nothing in this Act shall permit a change in the purpose for which such corporation was formed without the unanimous consent of its stockholders.

(b). That sections 13 and 14 shall not apply to shares held by a corporation at the time of the taking effect of this Act.

(c). That section 38 (2) shall not be held to impose liability on stockholders in respect to shares owned by them prior to the taking effect of this Act.

DEFINITIONS.

Section 67. In this Act, unless the context or subject matter otherwise requires—

"Incorporators" means those subscribers to a share or shares of the capital stock who associate to form the corporation.

"Corporation" means a corporation formed under the provisions of this Act or subject thereto.

"Person" includes individuals, partnerships, corporations and other associations.

ACTS REPEALED.

Section 68. All Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, be and the same are hereby repealed in so far as their provisions are applicable to corporations formed under this Act or subject to its provisions: Provided, That any Acts or parts of Acts relating to the transfer of certificates of stock shall remain in effect as far as they apply to certificates issued prior to the taking effect of the Act approved the fifteenth day of May, one thousand nine hundred and eleven, entitled "An Act to make uniform the law of transfer of shares of stock in corporations."*

NAME OF ACT.

Section 69. This Act may be cited as the Business Corporation Act.

WHEN ACT TAKES EFFECT.

Section 70. This Act shall take effect on the day of , one thousand nine hundred and .

SHARES WITHOUT A PAR VALUE.

There has been some agitation in recent years in favor of eliminating the par value of shares of stock, upon the theory that a share of stock represents only a certain fractional part of the assets of the corporation, and that the fixed par value bears no necessary relation to the value of that fractional part. Such being the case, it is contended that the retention of a certain dollar mark upon the face of the certificate of stock not only is of no essential importance, but tends to establish a fictitious value in the minds of owners and prospective purchasers. It is also claimed that the power to issue stock without a par value is of particular advantage in the case of consolidation and reorganization.

The plan received the approval of the New York State Bar Association, and a recent amendment to the laws of New York has given to corporations the power to issue this type of shares. (New York Laws of 1912, Chapter 351.)

On the other hand, it has been objected that the creation of shares without par value will permit inflation by making it easy to issue an excessive number of shares, and will be apt to lead to complications in the established law.

The par value, it is argued, is simply a convenient fraction into which the share capital has been divided, and only the most ignorant will assume the par value must necessarily be its real value.

While extremely doubtful as to its advisability, it has been thought fit to present for consideration sections embodying provisions for the issuance of such shares, and expressions of opinion in regard to the incorporation of them into the proposed revision of the corporation laws of the State are earnestly solicited. In general, the amendment to the New York laws have been followed, with a few changes which appeared advisable. If adopted, the sections should perhaps be inserted at the end of Part IV, dealing with capital stock and bonds.

Section A. [Issuance of shares without par value.] (1) Upon the formation of any corporation, provision may be made for the issuance of the shares of stock of such corporation, other than preferred stock having a preference as to principal, without any par value, by stating in the articles of incorporation:

(a) The number of shares that may be issued by the corporation, and if any such shares be preferred stock, the preferences thereof. If such preferred stock, or any part thereof, shall have a preference as to principal, the articles shall state the amount of such preferred stock having such preference and the amount of each share thereof.

(b) The amount of capital with which the corporation will carry on business, which amount shall not be less than the amount of preferred stock with a preference as to principal, and in addition thereto a sum equivalent to at least five dollars for every share authorized to be issued other than such preferred stock; but in no event shall the amount of such capital be less than five thousand dollars.

(2) Such statements in the articles of incorporation shall be in lieu of the statements required in sub-section 1, clauses (e) and (f) of section 3 of this Act.

(3) Upon the reorganization of any corporation or upon the consolidation of two or more corporations, provision may be made for the issuance of shares without par value as hereinbefore provided by making the same statements in the certificate to be filed after reorganization or in the agreement of consolidation.

Section B. [Shares to be equal.] Each share of stock without par value shall be equal to every other share of stock, subject to the preferences given to the preferred stock (if any) authorized to be issued.

Section C. [Certificate of stock.] (1) Every certificate representing shares without par value shall have written or printed plainly upon its face the number of shares which it represents, the number of shares which the corporation is authorized to issue, and the amount of capital stock, if any, which is represented by preferred shares having a preference as to principal. No such certificate shall express any par value of such shares.

(2) The certificates representing preferred shares having a preference as to principal shall state the amount of such preference, and may state any other rights or preferences given to the holders of such shares.

Section D. [Consideration for shares without par value.] (1) The authorized shares without par value may from time to time be issued and sold for such consideration as may be prescribed in the articles of incorporation or in articles of amendment thereto, or as may from time to time be fixed by the board of directors and approved by a majority in interest of the stockholders at any annual or special meeting duly called.

(2) If it is proposed to issue any shares without par value in consideration for property or for labor or services, such issue shall be authorized as prescribed in sections 21 and 22, but prior to the filing of the certificate in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, as therein provided, the number of shares to be issued in consideration for the property or for the labor or services shall be approved by a majority in interest of the stockholders at any regular annual meeting or special meeting duly called, and the said certificate shall state that such approval has been duly obtained.

(3) Any and all shares so issued and sold shall be deemed fully paid and non-assessable, and the holder of any such shares shall not be liable to the corporation or to its creditors in respect thereof.

Section E. [Restrictions on the commencement of business.] (1) No corporation formed as provided in section A with the power to issue shares without par value shall commence business or incur any debts until the amount of capital specified in its articles of incorporation as the amount with which it will carry on business shall have been fully paid in money, in property, or in labor or services. But nothing herein shall be held to exempt any corporation from the payment of 10 per centum of its capital stock in cash as prescribed in section 3 of this Act.

(2) If any corporation shall increase the amount of capital specified in its articles of incorporation as the amount with which it will carry on business, the amount of the indebtedness of such corporation then existing shall not be increased until the amount of such increase of the capital shall have been fully paid as aforesaid.

(3) If any debts be incurred by any corporation in violation of the provisions of this section, the directors of the corporation, except those dissenting thereto, who shall have filed their dissent with the secretary of the corporation at the time, or who, being absent, shall have so filed their dissent upon learning of such action, shall be jointly and severally liable for any such debt.

Section F. [Increase or reduction of number of shares or of capital.] (1) Any corporation formed as provided in section A with the power to issue shares without par value may amend its articles of incorporation so as to increase or reduce the number of shares which it may issue, or so as to increase or reduce the amount of its specified capital, by the same method as prescribed in section 11 of this Act for the increase or reduction of the capital stock of a corporation; but such amendment shall conform to the provisions of section A.

(2) If any such corporation shall amend its articles of incorporation so as to increase or reduce the number of shares which it may issue, notice shall within two weeks thereafter be given to each holder of shares without par value, either personally or by mail directed to him at his address as it appears upon the stock books of the corporation, directing such stockholder to return his certificate to the corporation to have the number of shares as increased or reduced written or printed thereon. Such notice shall at the same time be published at least once a week for two weeks in a newspaper published in the county in which the principal office of the corporation is located. Upon the return of any certificate the proper officer of the corporation shall cause to be written or printed plainly thereon the number of shares, as increased or reduced, which the corporation is authorized to issue.

Section G. [Amount of capital stock and of shares within meaning of other laws.] For the purpose of any rule of law or of any statutory provision (other than the foregoing sections A, B, C, D, E, F) relating to the amount of the capital stock of a corporation or the amount of par value of its shares, the aggregate amount of the capital stock of any such corporation formed pursuant to section A shall be deemed to be the amount specified in the articles of incorporation or articles of amendment thereof, the certificate to be filed after reorganization, or the agreement of consolidation, as the amount of capital with which the corporation will carry on business; the amount of the par value of each share of preferred stock having a preference as to principal shall be deemed to be the amount thereof so specified in such articles, amended articles, certificate, or agreement; and the amount of par value of each other share shall be deemed to be an aliquot part of the aggregate capital so specified in excess of the specified amount (if any) of the preferred stock authorized to be issued with a preference as to principal.

PROCEEDINGS.

OF

THE JOINT COMMITTEE OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA, TO CONSIDER AND REPORT UPON A REVISION OF THE CORPORATION AND REVENUE LAWS OF THE COMMONWEALTH, AT PUBLIC MEETINGS HELD IN PHILADELPHIA, PITTSBURGH, ERIE AND SCRANTON.

Philadelphia, Nov. 12, 1912.

Meeting of the Committee held in Room 496, City Hall, Philadelphia, at 11 o'clock A. M.

Present: James P. McNichol, Chairman; George E. Alter, James F. Woodward, William H. Keyser, Milton W. Shreve; Francis Shunk Brown, Esq., Counsel; Harold M. Irons, Associate Counsel.

The Chairman: This Committee will kindly come to order. Gentlemen, this committee was continued by joint resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, for the purpose of continuing its investigations into the general corporation and tax laws of the State. The information gleaned today from the gentlemen present will be utilized by the members of this Committee, and its counsel, for the purpose of having laws passed in the session of the coming Legislature, as far as in their power possible, for the correction of the conditions complained about in all sections of the Commonwealth. The Chief Counsel of the Committee is Mr. Brown, and I will ask if he has anything to say.

Mr. Brown: Mr. Chairman, members of the Committee and gentlemen: Before we commence, I think it would be well that some short statement be made of the purpose for which this committee was established, and in a general way communicate to those present, and through them for the benefit of all with whom they may come in contact, the general character of the work which the committee has thus far performed. Probably a better way to bring it before them would be by reading a letter, about fifty thousand copies of which were sent out by this committee to every interest in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, not only to the interests which are represented by the returns of the Auditor General of the Commonwealth, but to all lawyers, judges, newspapers, in fact everybody who, by any possibility, could have any interest in the subject within the jurisdiction of the Committee. This letter was sent out on March 28th, 1912:

Dear Sir:

The Legislature of Pennsylvania, on May 23, 1911, (P. L. 1150), adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the concurrent resolution approved May 13, 1909, entitled, 'A concurrent resolution providing for the appointment of a joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives to consider and report upon a Revision of the laws of this Commonwealth relating to corporations and to revenue; for the employment of counsel and other necessary officers and employes, and giving it authority to compel the attendance of persons and the production of books and papers,' be, and the same is hereby extended as follows: That the present President pro tempore of the Senate shall appoint three senators, and the present speaker of the House of Representatives shall appoint three of its members, which shall constitute a joint commtitee, whose duty it shall be to consider the laws of this Commonwealth, relating to corporations and to revenue and the practical working thereof, and to report to the General Assembly in 1913 whatever changes may be deemed necessary therein, together with the draft of an act or acts of Assembly to accomplish said changes, and together with such recommendations as may be deemed necessary relative to the administration of existing laws or as to the apportionment of said suggested act or acts. Said Committee shall have power to elect its own chairman, to sit after the adjournment of the Legislature, to employ legal counsel and such other officers and employes as may be needed to enable it to properly perform its duties as aforesaid; but its expenditures shall be limited to the amount provided therefor in the general appropriation bill to be passed at this session of the Legislature, and shall be paid out of the State Treasury upon vouchers signed by the Chairman of said committee. Said committee shall also have power to issue subpoenas, signed by its chairman, requiring the attendance of persons and the production of books and papers, as in its judgment will assist in the performance of its duties as aforesaid."

The committee is collecting data upon the formation, regulation and taxation of corporations and the appropriation of State Revenue for all purposes, in this State, in all of the United States, by the Federal government, and by other nations. These subjects are being specially discussed and legislated upon at the present time throughout the world.

The Committee desires the co-operation of all interested in these subjects and requests your opinion as to any defects in the present laws of the Commonwealth, relating to the formation, regulation and taxation of corporations, associations, partnerships or individuals, the exemption of them or any of them from taxation, the appropriation of the Revenue of the State, and any changes therein which you may think necessary.

You will notice that the Resolution requires a report to be made to the Legislature in 1913 and we therefore request an early reply, as it is important that all suggestions be received for consideration prior to the public meetings which the Committee may hold. We should be glad to have from you the names and addresses of any persons whom you may know who are specially qualified to give to the Committee information or assistance in the consideration of these most important subjects.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) JAMES F. WOODWARD,
Secretary.

Please reply to

FRANCIS SHUNK BROWN, Counsel.

To the letters thus sent out, hundreds of replies have been received by the Committee, discussing the subject of revenue and corporation law, showing that there has been a very substantial interest taken by the different representatives of the several activities of the Commonwealth. Every interest that could possibly be reacehd has been communicated with for the purpose of obtaining their views. We have received replies from all parts of the world as to the subject of taxation; indeed, we have received replies in languages which have not as yet been translated, and the Committee would be grateful to have them translated.

This Committee, which was continued, reported to the last Legislature of 1911, thousands of copies of which report were distributed throughout the Commonwealth. We made many recommendations relating to methods of collecting revenue, apportionment and distribution, and everything connected with the subject. The Legislature adopted many of the recommendations of the Committee and they were passed into laws. These recommendations which were not adopted were referred back to the Committee, to give the people in this Commonwealth a further opportunity to consider and discuss,—such as taxing manufacturing corporations; the subject of appropriations to institutions not under State Control; whether or not their portion of the State revenue should be passed back to the counties, or whether or not the revenue collected by the counties should be kept by them, excepting the one-fourth to be sent to the State. Many of these recommendations, I think, have been adopted; the others have been referred back to this Committee. These meetings are for the purpose of giving the people a further opportunity to consider and discuss these subjects.

I would like to say that there has been so many requests to speak, and coming from such varied interests, that I have endeavored, so as not to appear to be unfair, to single out those who desire to speak upon the one subject. The Committee has received a communication from Dr. Lawrence Flick, relative to the appropriation of State money for tubercular purposes. The Committee will be pleased to hear him.

DR. FLICK:

Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee: The State of Pennsylvania has been one of the most liberal States in the union in its expenditure of money for the crusade against tuberculosis. It, perhaps, has not been the wisest in the mode of expenditure, or use of the resources at its hands for the conduct of this work, and it is with a view of trying to illustrate a more economical method of doing the work of this crusade, that I appear before you. In order that this matter may be clearly understood, I wish to say that it is an accepted fact throughout the scientific world that the contagious period of tuberculosis, and which needs to be controlled, is the terminal period. In other words, tuberculosis is not contagious in all its stages; it is only when the case comes to be what we call the open ulcerative case, or advanced consumption. This is contagious enough to need public control and supervision. This, I say, has been accepted throughout the world, so that everything in this subject has been given scientific study, and the conclusion has been reached that the proper thing to do is to isolate in hospitals near the homes of these poor people all dying consumptives for at least the three last months of their lives, or possibly the four last months. I wish to call your attention to this fact, namely, that during a period of twenty years in any country where preventative measures were introduced, the number of new cases for every year numbered the same as the number of deaths, showing that the only time in which there is any great danger, is during the terminal, or dying period.

We have in Pennsylvania about ten thousand deaths per year from tuberculosis; of these about eight thousand are consumptive,—that is, the very acute form of tuberculosis. We therefore have possibly eight thousand people a year dying, who, during the dying period,—during the last three or four months of their livse, are almost as certain as two and two make four to implant a new case. Therefore, if we are going to stamp out tuberculosis, we must get control of these eight thousand people during the four last months of their lives, and all we may do for the walking cases don't amount to one per cent. in value for preventative methods. You can give to charity, but as a State, we have no right to go into charity or philanthropy, when we are bound to protect the lives of all by giving toward prevention. This State has no right to appropriate a dollar for this purpose, which dollar should be appropriated for the protection of those who are not implanted with tuberculosis.

We have in Pennsylvania, according to the official reports about five thousand vacant beds in our general hospitals every day of the year. This is an astounding fact, but it is true if our official reports are true. In 1907, according to the official report, it was four thousand; in 1910, four thousand five hundred; and I am convinced that in 1912 there will be at least five thousand vacant beds in our hospitals for every day of the year. We have invested in these beds at least a thousand dollars per bed, and appropriate, according to the official report, two thousand dollars per bed. So, we have idle in Pennsylvania a vast sum of money. These hospitals are located in the exact places where we could properly care for our poor consumptives, if we want to do anything to maintain them in these beds. Unfortunately, there has been such an unwarranted scare about tuberculosis that most men have lost their senses on this subject. The consequence is that our hospitals close their doors to consumptives.

There is absolutely no reason why a consumptive should not be safely maintained in any general hospital, provided certain things are done which any hospital can resort to without any expense. Two years ago, those of us who were interested in this subject, asked the State to appropriate seven dollars a week a hospital, which would throw open their doors to these cases. I then believed that the hospitals themselves, possibly, would have enough charity to make up the difference between seven dollars and what it would cost to maintain such a patient. The Legislature declined to make such an appropriation, and principally because the hospitals were unwilling to take such patents at seven dollars a week. It would cost ten dollars a week to maintain such a patient, and I believed if the State would appropriate seven dollars a week, per head, that many hospitals would do their share.

I think, since the State has appropriated such vast sums of money,—two millions of dollars,—a year, for the maintenance of our general hospitals, outside of our insane asylums and outside of the money appropriated to the Department of Health for the care of consumptives,—since such a sum is appropriated, I think it would be only fair that the State should couple that appropriation with an appropriation to the hospitals which ask State aid, and make the appropriation for the care of advanced consumptives.

The money which has been appropriated in the last five years for tuberculosis work would have gone a long ways for use in this manner towards settling the tuberculosis problem in Pennsylvania. The State has given, in the last five years, nearly six millions of dollars to the Department of Health for tuberculosis work. Nearly all that money has been used for walking cases, in dispensary and sanitoriums, and practically none used for dying cases. Since I have been able to get the statistics for seven months, ending in December, 1909, I find the State cared for forty-three dying consumptives. I have tried to get the data for the year 1911, and I find that out of eight thousand deaths of contagious consumption, about one thousand were cared for in hospitals and institutions; and out of that one thousand I am pretty sure the Philadelphia General Hospital took care of six hundred and fifty. The balance were cared for in institutions either in Pennsylvania or adjoining Philadelphia. We, therefore, have done about one-ninth of the work we should do, and that work has been done almost entirely without the fabulous sums appropriated by the State for these cases.

Now, I hold that if the Legislature really wishes to stamp out tuberculosis, and will do it along scientific lines and lines laid down all over the world, it will be successful if it makes an appropriation providing for every advanced consumptive who can be cared for near his own home. Since we have the beds and have invested in these beds a very large sum of money,—I find we have thirty millions of dollars invested in the hospitals of Pennsylvania, and we spend six millions a year for the maintenance of these hospitals, exclusive of what we spend for the insane and exclusive of what we spend for the Pennsylvania Hospital and the Philadelphia General Hospital (from the statistics in the general report of the State Board of Charities),—we have this vast sum of money invested, and the solution of the problem is very easy if we take the common sense way and do it. I hold that the legislature is responsible for the expenditure of its money for these cases and should spend it along lines which science have laid down. I would ask you gentlemen to go into this subject thoroughly. Don't allow yourselves to be turned away from the main point by the flaring work of caring for the walking consumptives. All we can do for walking consumptives is to stamp out the disease. The walking case is not sufficiently contagious to be a serious danger, and until we have done all we can do at the end in which the disease is caused, and until we have isolated every dying consumptive in Pennsylvania, we have no business as a Commonwealth to extend charity along the lines which we have been doing. The last three months is the stage that should be provided for. If we are practical, as we are in our own business, we will get at the danger where it is the greatest. When we have done that, if we still think there is danger in the walking cases, then let us do for them. But we have the very best scientific evidence, showing that the danger is in the dying period. I just want to give you one more thing for your information: Wherever, throughout the world, in the last thirty years, there has been any work done against tuberculosis, there has been no reduction in the death rate. Now in the Philadelphia General Hospital we have a marked reduction in the death rate. For this year, we will probably have a reduction of three hundred in the gross number, and we have a greater number in reduction than perhaps any city in the United States; and it is because our general hospital has four hundred beds for dying cases. We take care of a large number of advanced consumption cases every year.

By Mr. Brown:

Q. Aren't the beds in the Philadelphia General Hospital for that purpose?

A. They are not.

Q. If they are not, how could they be made available for the purpose?

A. Always the same situation. In Philadelphia we are so restricted with money that we are taking care of four hundred beds with one hundred and twenty thousand dollars a year, and as you gentlemen know better than I do, we are probably contributing three-fifths of the money which goes into the State crusade; out of the million dollars spent every year, we probably contribute three-fifths of it. In our own city we have the limited amount of one hundred and twenty thousand dollars, and if we had more money we could take care of our problem,—if they would give us the money that goes to the State to use in the City.

Q. Are there any other hospitals in the city that take care of the advanced cases?

A. White Haven.

Q. I am speaking of the general hospitals.

A. I don't know—

Q. Don't the Jewish Hospital, as a rule?

A. Yes, and I am glad to say the Episcopal Hospital has shown a good example in opening their doors to advanced cases. It was the first one to take the stand.

Q. Why don't they all open their doors?

A. Through the alarming statements, many of them emanating from the State Board itself the people have been so frightened that they are all afraid. When you approach the Board of Managers of a hospital they say the doctors are afraid of tuberculosis. You go to the doctors and they say the Board of Managers are afraid. There are always disadvantages to that undue fear. I have mentioned the Department of Health, and I think they are responsible for a great deal of this, for they have been stamping every piece of mail that goes out. What could frighten people more about the disease than to get a letter from Mont Alto marked "disinfected"? There is absolutely no scientific ground for these untrue statements. The danger of contagion from tuberculosis is so slight that you must live on the most intimate terms in the same enclosure with a patient in order to get it. It is a whole lot more difficult to get tuberculosis than we have any idea. They talk about getting it from a letter from Mont Alto, or from cows which get into the swamps in the neighborhood of the sanitarium and get tuberculosis, or because they swish their tails around, or get tuberculosis on their udders in the water that comes from the sewage plant. When statements like that are published the people get crazy. They are absolutely untrue. I hold that the State of Pennsylvania should not spend money in such folly. If we are going to spend money, let us give the people scientific protection, and not set people crazy about ideas which have no scientific foundation.

Q. Then your recommendation is that the State do not appropriate to the department, but to the individual hospital?

A. That would be the most practical idea.

Q. And no money be appropriated to the department for any purpose?

A. Oh, no.

Q. For any tuberculosis purposes?

A. I think the State made a very serious blunder when it saddled the tuberculosis crusade on the Department of Health. It is not for the Department of Health. Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Ohio and different other States have recognized that there is a scientific development which requires special handling and they have appointed scientific men to do the work.

By a member of the Committee:

Q. You know why that was done, Doctor. You refused to accept an appropriation for White Haven, unless—?

A. That is historically incorrect. White Haven withdrew their State appropriation for a very different reason. The people who are doing the work in White Haven and in other places have a definite program and that is to provide for dying cases as soon as possible. When it was found that the State was determined to take this war up I said to the gentlemen who were associated with me that in order to give the State a fair opportunity it was proper for us to withdraw, and if the State was going to make liberal appropriations for the pauper classes, it would be better for us to confine ourselves to the working classes. We did not withdraw because there was any figure mentioned, but because we thought and felt that we could work out our problem better by dealing with the working classes only and giving them a cost of maintenance as low as possible to make it and use the balance of our public charity to make up the difference. We wanted to give the State Department of Health a clear field for that class of work. White Haven has every reason to be grateful to the State for the work and have always felt so. There was a certain work that we had laid out. You are aware in the State of Pennsylvania when you get an appropriation for maintenance you are compelled to use your own resources before you can use that money for maintenance. We were so badly crippled that we were two hundred thousand dollars in debt and would have gone bankrupt. It was impossible for us to keep up the betterment of our establishment and use our money which came to us from charity for maintenance.

MR. BROWN:

When I knew that Doctor Flick would be here to present a talk, I took the liberty of inviting Doctor Dixon. Dr. Dixon is present and will have something to say.

DR. SAMUEL G. DIXON:

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Commission: Dr. Flick seems to forget that in 1896 he wrote an article for the State Board of Health. He advocated teaching the public, (which the State Department of Health is doing) in regard to tuberculosis, and the establishment of well equipped hospitals in the mountains for the treatment of the disease. The State Department of Health is doing exactly what he advocated at that time.

I mention that because it is the last subject of which he spoke, in speaking of the contagious periods.

The most contagious period is the intermediate period, between the incipient and the advanced stage; and every laboratory man and every man who knows anything about tuberculosis from a scientific standpoint knows that is the dangerous period,—the ambulating case which has well-fed micro-organisms and throws out infection here and there, meeting hundreds of people in its path.

The advanced case is a different infection. The micro-organisms that break down the lung are not tubercle bacilli, but are a variety that interfere with the tubercle bacilli; and these micro-organisms taken from the lungs in the advanced stage are harder to grow under artificial mediums than those taken from the lungs in incipient cases, where they are well fed, in a normal environment. But, notwithstanding all this important information and the information of scientific men, the State today, at Mont Alto, has more than one-half of its patients advanced cases. Yet there are no places in Pennsylvania, other than the few mentioned by Dr. Flick, that are taking care of the advanced cases. Today, we are about finishing a hospital at Cresson with some of this money that Dr. Flick says is being spent for maintenance (whereas it is being spent for hospitals for advanced cases) where we will take three hundred and eighty-six patients by the middle of December. We have closed a contract for one at Hamburg where we will have even a greater census than that.

I have here a statement that shows that the hospitals in Pennsylvania today cost per capita, every day, $1.87. White Haven, Dr. Flick's hospital, costs $1.30. The State Department of Health has one at Mont Alto that costs $1.15. It is not down to its minimum cost. It is a new hospital. Various changes are going to reduce its cost greatly. Today, it is conducting that hospital for less money than any tuberculosis hospital in the country.

On this question of general hospitals. Tuberculosis is transmitted from one to the other by the transmission of these micro-organisms. Therefore, we cannot permit the transmitting of these organisms. We take every precaution at Mont Alto, for we do not know whether it is one or transmitting of these organisms. We take every precautive that infects the unsound person. We take these precautions (and we are criticised for it) because we are ignorant as to how many tubercle bacilli it takes to infect a healthy person.

The Chairman: Will you pardon me, Doctor? Don't you suppose you have answered Dr. Flick? We would be glad to have the advantage of your experience and views in the next legislature. We would be glad to have your paper and also that of Dr. Flick, giving authorities and also as to what has been done and is being done in other parts of the country. We would be glad to have the views of both of you gentlemen.

(Dr. Dixon and Dr. Flick both agreed to submit papers.)

Mr. Brown: Mr. Chairman, Mr. C. Stuart Patterson is present to speak in opposition to the proposed income tax.

C. STUART PATTERSON, ESQ.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee: I thank you and Mr. Brown for having asked me to come here before you today. I am not a volunteer. I came here at the invitation of Mr. Brown.

In the first place, before I come to the subject of income tax, if you will kindly pardon me, I wish to say one word. As a citizen of Pennsylvania, I have been more than gratified by the forcible and ample statement which my friend, Mr. Brown, made with regard to the work the committee has been doing, and has done, in accumulating information to be used as a basis for recommendation of legislation. If more public work in this country was done in the admirably thorough way in which you are doing that work, it is certain that we would have better legislation than we have been having in the past.

Now, coming to the income tax. There is one fundamental objection to an income tax as a means of rasing revenue, and that is simply this: That it would essentially impose an inequality of burden, because the conscientious man who answers fully pays a larger tax than the man who does not answer fully and frankly. For that reason it is the concensus of all economic authorities that an income tax should not be levied as a means of rasing revenue, but that it should be reserved for a mere public emergency. Now, the great growth and prosperity of this country is due more largely to this one circumstance than to any other. The men who formed this government had the wisdom to say that while it was essential to have one general government for all national purposes, it was equally essential that there should be one local government for local purposes; and it is just as true today as it was when the Constitution was made. Anybody should be able to see that legislative regulations which may be wise for Maine are not necessarily wise in Louisiana, and that legislative requirements which are advantageous to Louisiana are not necessarily advantageous to Pennsylvania. Therefore, we must save our State government. Now, you cannot have a government unless you have the power of taxation, and therefore, taxation must be divided between the national and the State government. During the whole period of our existence, with the exception of two temporary departures from it, incomes have been reserved for State taxation, and not for national taxation. And if you give up to the national government that power of taxing incomes which is exercised today in a very moderate and in the very wisest way in the State of Pennsylvania, and which may have to be exercised in a much larger and much more thorough way in the future, I ask you, where are you going to get the revenue which the State needs today and the larger revenue which the State is going to need in the future? It is very probable that the State of Pennsylvania to go on the record just as Governor Hughes in the States which have been silent will come in; but I don't care whether they do or not, I don't want to see the State of Pennsylvania advocate it. I want the State of Pennsylvania to go on the record just as Governor Hughes in the State of New York has put New York on the record; and I hope this committee, in its wisdom, will recommend that the State of Pennsylvania refuses to consent to the amendment.

Mr. Brown: I may say for the information of the gentlemen present that the States which have approved this amendment are the States which have paid little or nothing toward the taxes of the Federal government. The States which rejected it are Connecticut, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Utah; and those who have taken no action are Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio. From these States the bulk of the federal income tax has come. The amendment must be approved by thirty-six, or three-fourths of the States; thirty-three have already approved this amendment. The approval of three more makes it a law. The bulk of the income tax was paid by those who have thus far refused to approve the amendment. New York paid one-third of the tax, the States of New York and Pennsylvania paid one-half of the tax, and the eastern States and Middle States paid eight-tenths of the federal tax.

Mr. Brown: Mr. Chairman, I notice Doctor Strawbridge is in the room, and possibly he desires to say something.

DR. GEORGE STRAWBRIDGE:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Commission: I am sixty-eight years old,—the 18th of last October. I have been forty-three years in practice and am still at it. I have been connected with four of the leading Seminaries in this city for a great many years. I have a large acquaintance among doctors of this city and State. I appear here, not for myself at all, but I want to plead for the doctors of this city and this State who are all going into bankruptcy except a very few highly specialized appointees of our hospitals. All the rest are going into bankruptcy. The average number of doctors in this country is about one to every five hundred. In England it is about one to every eight hundred; in France, one to every twelve hundred; in Germany, about one to every fifteen hundred; and in Russia, from one to every two thousand. Here, we are about one to every five hundred. My friend, Dr. William Henning, who a great many of you perhaps, remember, wrote an essay in which he stated that the average earnings of the medical profession in the United States was less than six hundred dollars. That was written fully twenty-five years ago. It is much less today. I should guess the average earnings today is four hundred dollars. What is to be done for the medical fraternity? If you ask me why the doctors are in such a pitiable condition, I would very easily tell you that it is due to the State money, —the very money these gentlemen pay to the State is used again to ruin them. There are too many doctors and too many hospitals. Of course, the more the doctors, the less the practice each one can get, and the more the hospitals the less the visiting doctors can get of it. It all drifts into the hospitals. It now comes to a question,—"Why are there so many doctors and so many hospitals?" It is due to State money. If the State money were not given to the medical schools and hospitals, you would not have this enormous overgrowth of your department,—so to speak. Here in this city, a city of about one million six hundred thousand persons, there are six medical schools. I don't think that could be said, with perhaps the exception of London, of any other city in the world. London has a medical school attached to the hospital. If you ask me what is the very first university in the world and the very first medical school in the world, why of course there is no doubt it is the University of Berlin. It has fifteen thousand students in it. There are over two thousand Americans this minute studying in Berlin; it is the one real first-class University.

Now coming back again, we have a city here of over a million and a half of people, and we should have things a great deal better than they are. I think anybody who goes abroad and sees how things are done abroad, can see lots of ways by which we can be enormously improved.

In regard to the doctors, the plan is to consolidate the six medical schools. We should have one, and that school should be developed to be the very best and brighter.

In regard to the hospitals, I say trust the hospitals to the beneficence of the human race. Rich people want an outlet for their money so that before they go to heaven, they want to leave some friends behind them, and you will generally find the hospital is the favorite method. Some give to churches. I think there is quite enough money to support the hospitals, as they should be supported from the rich people. Here we are taking perhaps a million dollars every year, that is given to hospitals and medical schools in this State. Think what you can do with that million dollars! What you could do with the streets?—lavatories all over the State, where people could go decently to any one. Think of all the good that could come of it. If I remember correctly there are five thousand vacant beds in the hospitals, and that is what I would like to reach. I was here last year and I said the same thing, but it didn't have any effect, and I don't suppose it will have any again, but I think it should.

Mr. Brown: Your idea is, that the poor should be taken care of by private donations?

Dr. Strawbridge: Yes.

Mr. Brown: If the State appropriation was withdrawn, would they take care of themselves?

Dr. Strawbridge: The Presbyterian Hospital and the Pennsylvania Hospital seem to live on private subscriptions.

Mr. Brown: Aren't they supported by subscriptions of people of this community, and aren't these hospitals limited? Isn't it a fact that the Episcopal and Baptist are better able to take care of their hospitals than some other denominations?

Dr. Strawbridge: The Methodist takes care of theirs, and the Catholics,—yes.

Mr. Brown: The Catholics get a large number of the poor, and the Hebrews, the same.

Dr. Strawbridge: Yes, I should have the thing carefully and rigidly scrutinized. The fact that there are five thousand vacant beds, show that it should be. On the question of the proportion taken care of by the Hebrew and Catholic hospitals in the appropriation made by the State Legislature to charitable institutions, each of these two denominations get within twenty-five per cent. of the whole proportion. Seventy-five per cent goes to the denominations you refer to,—Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, etc.

Mr. Brown: A very large percentage of the patients go to the Hebrew and the Catholic institutions.

Mr. Woodward: I presume Doctor Flick gets his information in regards to the number of vacant beds from the report of the State Board of Charities, which is taken for a certain given period each year, and at that particular time it is possible there may be that many beds, still there may be a certain time when these beds are all occupied.

Dr. Strawbridge: The fact remains that everything drifts into the hospitals.

Mr. McNichol: I think the whole trouble with the municipal hospitals comes from the doctors themselves. They get together and come down and ask for a hospital.

Dr. Strawbridge: If the state didn't give them money they couldn't go on.

Mr. McNichol: We would be glad to have you come up there to the Legislature and show us how this argument will work out.

Dr. Strawbridge: The minute the appropriation stops, they stop.

Mr. McNichol: It is simply a question of difference of opinion between medical men.

Dr. Strawbridge: I would take the money I see going to the hospitals and spend it in improvements in this State which are beneficial to the largest number of people. I would put in Pennsylvania fifty lavatories in this city,—

Mr. Brown: You complain about the elimination of the doctors from participating in hospital work?

Dr. Strawbridge: I complain that we have no work left for them to do.

Mr. Brown: If these hospitals were supported by private contributions, wouldn't it be the same condition?

Dr. Strawbridge: You wouldn't have that enormous practice to develop.

Mr. McNichol: Don't you think the high ideal that the general public have in regard to the prevention and eradication of disease throughout the municipalities of the Commonwealth, would drive doctors out of business?

Dr. Strawbridge: They would all be compelled to get out, that way.

Mr. McNichol: I hear several doctors complaining about the elimination of typhoid fever as hurting their business.

Dr. Strawbridge: If you go to the hospitals, you see thousands of people coming there. It is a perfect sight. If you would take that money and make a donation to the doctors, that would be a proper use.

Mr. McNichol: What about the law?

Dr. Strawbridge: Contribute the State money.

GEORGE W. NORRIS, (Director of the Department of Wharves, Docks and Ferries).

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Commission: I only want to say a word, as I have been asked by the Mayor to say on his behalf, he having had to leave.

The City Council of Philadelphia recently adopted a joint resolution creating a committee including four members of Council, two Department heads, five citizens of Philadelphia and an expert in financial affairs. The purposes of the Committee is to consider and report upon a revision of the finances of the City of Philadelphia. That Committee has organized, and is now conducting a study of the subject which necessarily includes the relation of State and municipal finance and taxation. The Committee has not yet reached a point, where it is possible for it to lay before this Commission its views on any of the subjects this Commission has to consider, but it is pushing this work and fully expects to have certain legislation which it will request the Legislature to adopt next winter bearing on the question of municipal and State taxation, and that Committee would like very much to appear and present its views to this Commission, either orally or in print before this Commission makes its report to the Legislature. But I would, at this time, like to put one thought in your minds, gentlemen,—one recommendation. I would say also, that when the views of the Committee are presented, I presume they will be presented through the Law Department of the City. What I am saying now, is simply an informal and explanatory statement. I would like to leave this one thought in your minds, in the meantime: That it is almost certain that the City will ask the State to make some readjustment of the matter of personal taxes on stocks, bonds, mortgages, and money at interest. Under the present system that money is collected by the city for the State, and is sent in full to the State, I believe, and then three-fourths of it returned to the city. The city, I think, will ask that the whole of that personal property tax be allowed to go into the revenue of the City of Philadelphia, if the State cannot see its way clear to give up twenty-five per cent. of the tax which it now holds, that it can at least allow the city to collect the tax as a municipal tax, sending one-fourth of it to the State.

Mr. Brown: Where would the advantage to the City of Philadelphia be?

Mr. Norris: The advantage would be, that if the personal property tax was taxed by the State of Pennsylvania, and collected by the City of Philadelphia, it would therefore be a basis upon which the borrowing capacity of the City could be calculated. It would add to the borrowing capacity of the city ten per cent. of the amount of personal property so taxed.

Mr. Brown: How would you get the revenue to pay the interest on the bonds? Suppose the city were to use the moneys at interest as a basis for bond issue, how would you raise the interest to be paid on the bond?

Mr. Norris: From the same sources as at present.

Mr. Brown: You would have to go back to real estate.

Mr. Norris: Not necessarily. If that personal property tax shows a constant annual increase, and the city needs three-fourths of it at present—

Mr. Brown: You wouldn't get enough income from moneys at interest to pay the interest on the bond. Suppose you would get from the occupation tax or any tax, say about a half million dollars; what would become of that half million dollars, and this quarter per cent. of the twenty-eight millions, which would have to be paid as interest on the bonded indebtedness?

Mr. Norris: Out of the general revenues of the city. Just one-half of the tax on real estate and one-half of the revenues from other sources.

Mr. Brown: Don't you deplete your other sources of revenue to a large extent?

Mr. Norris: Every time you issue bonds, you impose on the city an interest on the Sinking Fund, and the increased amount must be taken out of your revenues.

Mr. Brown: You are imposing a burden on real estate.

Mr. Norris: About one-half of the burden comes over to real estate.

Mr. McNichol: You are making large improvements. Your improvements on wharves and docks represent some fifteen or twenty million dollars. This project can not go on unless you have every dollar in the treasury, and it requires you to borrow that full twenty million dollars.

Mr. Norris: If I made a single contract for twenty million dollars.

Mr. McNichol: What is your idea, to go along in the general train and link together, in making one or two contracts, and so on, and complete the whole proposition?

Mr. Norris: The twenty million dollars that has been spoken of is a sum that could be advantageously expended on harbor improvements, and at least that amount would be needed to bring this harbor into first-class condition. That has never been floated, although it should be done.

Mr. McNichol: But you have a general plan as to what you may use?

Mr. Norris: I would have a general plan, and then take up the various units that were parts of that general plan; one or two or three at a time.

Mr. McNichol: Isn't it a fact that permeating through the whole municipal system, it requires money to be in the treasury before a contract can be made? All these general improvements are practically boiled down to one plan.

Mr. Norris: Yes.

Mr. McNichol: And if we give Philadelphia ten per cent. borrowing capacity, and bonds extending over a term of fifty years, then your whole problem would be solved?

Mr. Norris: Yes.

Mr. McNichol: What more do you want then? I think you are just shooting at a rainbow, because you will find out when you come up there to the Legislature you are going up against a pretty hard proposition, and you will find that the men from the other counties are not going to give Philadelphia what she wants. You are going up against quite considerable opposition.

Mr. Norris: We hope to lay before you, gentlemen, a well-considered argument on that question, and hope it will convince you and it will carry great weight with the Legislature.

Mr. McNichol: We hope you will come up there and meet some of those country members.

SIMON GRATZ, (President of the Board of Revision of Taxes, Philadelphia).

Mr. Gratz: Mr. Brown, will you be kind enough to intimate what you want me to speak about?

Mr. Brown: On the general subjects that are before the Commission, Mr. Gratz.

Mr. Gratz: If we cannot do a little better in the matter of real estate, than the State of Texas is doing under the Somers system, we would be in a very bad way. Seventy per cent. of the value of land, and twenty-five per cent. of the value of buildings. In Philadelphia, I am sure I am safe in saying that land is assessed at least ninety to ninety-five per cent. of its value, and buildings in about the same proportion. But while the advantages should be given the owner of the building, I can not quite understand. I have a lot of ground, and I am told that if I will put a five million dollar building on it, that I can only be taxed one-quarter of the value of the building. If this is the result of the Somer system, it is worse in practice in Houston than it proves to be here.

Mr. Brown: Don't they maintain, that when you put a building on, you are increasing the value of the land?

Mr. Gratz: You remove the building,—is the ground worth any more than it was before the building was put there? Take the value of the ground on which Mr. Wanamaker's building was put; was that lot of ground worth any more than it was before he erected his building there?

Mr. Brown: What about the classification of real estate in this State; is our classification absolutely fair in your opinion?

Mr. Brown: What about the classification of real estate was drafted at the time of the consolidation away back in 1854, is something that should be changed. If I own one hundred acres of land which I farm, and yuo own a hundred acres which you don't farm—

Mr. Brown: Which I don't own.

Mr. Gratz: Which you don't farm if you do own, but simply use as a place of residence, beautifying it; if you please, and have your broad street and walks, and grass plots, and all that. I pay one-half the rate, you pay two-thirds; there is not a particle of difference in the value of that land. I think it would be very wise for the Legislature to repeal that portion of the Act which provides for three classes of real estate.

Mr. Brown: And make them how many?

Mr. Gratz: All one. If I own a farm worth eighty dollars an acre, (and there are a good many of them in the eastern section of the State, that are not worth any more)—if I own a farm worth eighty dollars; there is no more reason why I should not pay regular tax on that, than if you own a twenty-thousand dollar house at Overbrook.

Mr. McNichol: Why do you make that statement, that the man living three or four miles from City Hall, without any fire appliances or any water appliances, should be taxed the same?

Mr. Gratz: The valuation is so much lower.

Mr. McNichol: How much lower, in proportion to the improvements?

Mr. Gratz: The valuation of course, depends on the value. Let me tell you of one very great difficulty that is created by this separate classification. A man, or several men, owning several acres of land, and they will want to improve it; they will want streets opened, and they will want water pipe laid and sewers built; they can not do anything at all; they can not get anything at all done by the city until this classification is made, and every year we are confronted with this condition of things. We have in the northeastern part of the State, two classes of people. One desirous of improving property, the other one of holding back. The first class say, "We can do nothing at all, unless the classification is made, because the city will not order any improvements,—no water pipe, no sewers, no streets open." The other side say, "We do not want improvements; we want to hold our property for better investment." Now it is these pull-backs that are holding out against the people who want to improve. You can not improve until you get rid of certain classifications.

Mr. Brown: What is your thought on the exemption of real estate of Public Service Corporations, Mr. Gratz?

Mr. Gratz: I do not see any reason at all, why the real estate of Public Service corporations in Pennsylvania, should be exempted. There is now exempted something near five million dollars assessed valuation of property and buildings of the electric light companies, trolley companies, and telephone companies. They can well afford to pay a tax on that real estate, and I think that the decision of the Supreme Court declaring that exemption should be re-codified and overcome by the Legislature was a good one. Just a number of years ago the Legislature made taxable for municipal purposes, these stations of railroad companies in cities which had been exempted under decision of the Supreme Court. I think you should pass an act making real estate which is now exempt, taxable.

Mr. Brown: Is there any distinction between the property of the Pennsylvania Railroad as to taxing that property and the other Public Service corporations which are not taxed?

Mr. Gratz: There should be no distinction.

Mr. Brown: Any difference between the railroads and the electric light companies, and telephone companies, and so forth?

Mr. Gratz: I see no reason at all. You know how they came to get that exemption. Purely a legal proposition—

Mr. Brown: Your Board recommended some time ago the putting of the actual consideration in the advertisements.

Mr. Gratz: I didn't know we recommended it, but we would be glad if it could be done.

Mr. Brown: How would that be helpful to the collection of taxes?

Mr. Gratz: Mr. Fels told me in a very broad, strong way about the untruthfulness of men. I wouldn't be willing to go as far as he did, but I find that it very often happens, when a man buys a property, he has no reason to complain of his assessment, and only hopes that on application it might be reduced, and he is more than willing to name the value and consideration, and if necessary, make affidavit to it. That is the purchaser, but the vendor of the property doesn't care two cents; he has his price, and he is willing to tell, but the purchaser is not. I don't know how that could be done, but it would be a good thing if the consideration was inserted in the advertisement.

Mr. Brown: Any other thought you have, Mr. Gratz? It has been suggested that manufacturers be taxed. How about the tax on manufactured articles; any thought on that subject?

Mr. Gratz: Well Mr. Brown, I have always thought that it was to the interest of the State of Pennsylvania, to encourage manufacturing industries here, and I would never of my own free will, agree to impose a tax either upon manufacturers, manufacturing plants, or upon goods in the process of manufacture. I think it would be a most unwise step. One of the very largest manufacturing concerns in this city is represented by a man of very high moral character and a very fair man. He said to me, "Mr. Gratz, we employ so many thousand men. If our taxes become too great, we could very easily pull up stakes and go to a place where we would not be taxed at all, because this very minute another State has a piece of ground with an exemption from taxes that they can give us for a long number of years."

Mr. McNichol: You don't believe that, Mr. Gratz?

Mr. Gratz: Yes; he is a very truthful man.

Mr. McNichol: I mean you don't believe that he would pull up stakes?

Mr. Gratz: No, sir.

Mr. McNichol: You don't believe any man who is making a success in his business, and then there is one-half of one per cent. tax put on him, that he would pull up stakes and look for another site?

Mr. Gratz: I do believe that if machinery in manufacturing plants were taxed, and manufacturers were taxed as they are in a number of other places, that we would drive quite a number of them elsewhere.

Mr. McNichol: Don't you believe that there should be some readjustment. Take these men that are making, say, seventy-five per cent. on their business, don't you think that they should bear their proportionate share of the burden?

Mr. Gratz: Yes.

Mr. McNichol: Wouldn't that relieve some of the conditions that we are trying to relieve?

Mr. Gratz: My opinion is tha. it would be unwise to tax machinery or goods in the process of manufacture.

A Member of the Commission: Don't you tax machinery here now?

Mr. Gratz: No, it has never been done here, and I suppose the old custom has been followed. There is no doubt of the fact that it would hurt manufacturing industries of the State. There is no question about that.

Mr. Brown: Does the Board of Revision make any exception in favor of mill properties? Are mill properties not exempted on real estate?

Mr. Gratz: No.

Mr. Brown: But you exempt the machinery?

Mr. Gratz: Yes.

Mr. Brown: Some one has inquired why the Masonic Temple should be exempted. Buildings like that.

Mr. Gratz: The Masonic Temple never should have been exempted; that is to say, after the new Constitution was adopted the Masonic Temple should have been taxed, but it was not. The old exemption was continued, and you know how hard it is to up-root a custom which has existed longer than you or I have lived,—a good deal.

Mr. Brown: What is the total exemption of property in Pennsylvania?

Mr. Gratz: I can not give you the exact figures.

Mr. Brown: A very large amount?

Mr. Gratz: Oh, enormous.

Mr. Brown: One quarter of a billion, nearly?

Mr. Gratz: Yes.

Mr. Brown: Do you think that the proper expedition is used in our law for collection of taxes of the State that are delinquent?

Mr. Gratz: I wouldn't like to express an opinion that would be a criticism on another department.

Mr. Brown: There are delinquent taxes in the State of Pennsylvania?

Mr. Gratz: I don't know. I didn't think you would ask that question; that is out of my line.

Mr. Bronw: You don't think there is sufficient vigor in the collection?

Mr. Gratz: I have no opinion to express on that subject, Mr. Brown.

Mr. Brown: What about poll tax; any suggestions on that?

Mr. Gratz: Well, you know the trouble that the imposition of a small tax leads to.

Mr. Brown: Do you think it is impractical of assessment and impractical of collection?

Mr. Gratz: I would no more impose a poll tax than one on watches: it is a question whether this is for a tax or for mere political purposes.

Mr. Brown: I notice in the Mayor's Message, it is suggested that the vaults under property should be taxed. Aren't they considered in the assessment of properties as part of their values?

Mr. Gratz: Yes.

Mr. Brown: Have you any other suggestions, Mr. Gratz?

Mr. Gratz: No, I haven't.

MR. JOSEPH FELS.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Commission: "This Commission, considering questions of reform in taxation and expenditure, has just listened to a dispute between well-meaning physicians desiring appropriations to hospitals, concerning whether tuberculosis is more infectious in this stage or in that. I care little at present as to how taxes are expended that matter is of comparative trifling importance under existing conditions, but I am concerned about sources of revenue. I spend money and most of my time to stimulate thought on the subject of taxation, a matter which as it is managed well or ill, may either make or mar a State.

Strange as it may seem to many, this subject of tuberculosis is indirectly but surely connected with that of taxation. Of what generally is tuberculosis a symptom, if not of slums and sweatshops, of unsanitary surroundings, of child labor, of poor physical condition, of insufficient clothing and poor food? And these spring from what, if not from poverty? And whence comes poverty in lands like England and America which, to use figurative language, are supposed to 'flow with milk and honey,' if not from lack of opportunity? This lack of opportunity not natural but artificial, made possible and profitable to the few at the cost of poverty, misery and ill health to uncounted thousands. All these evils and want are due to vicious taxation which penalizes industry by wrongly placed taxes, and rewards neglect by exemption from taxation, thus making profitable the business of the land-grabbing speculator, himself a social obstruction and parasite, idle, yet sucking the life blood of industry and thus locking the gates of the Father's Vineyard against the Father's children. Men, women and children, crowded back by speculators from the fields, swarm perforce into your cities—they find the speculator there before them—though even there is abundance of land for their modest homes, unused, but pre-empted. The victims drift into boxes called houses, into sweat shops and slums, into dens of crime and houses of prostitution; all these due to taxation misapplied. Man will improve if he have but opportunity;—without opportunity he will inevitably sink. Once a year we look for the ground-hog and his shadow, but there is a ground-hog (the land speculator) abroad every day and every year, and his shadow is over all the land. Keen-witted, he seeks good at society's expense; he, a social highwayman, whom, nevertheless, society rewards substantially and holds in respect, not for doing good, but for doing evil. Why wonder then that the body politic is sick and the body physical with it, and because of it?

Why build your hospitals to cure disease while your political institutions create more disease than you can handle? Remove the cause of tuberculosis and tuberculosis will largely disappear. What do physicians nowadays prescribe for tuberculosis? —What, but pure air and sunshine and invigorating surroundings, God's great out-of-doors? Let the victims of tuberculosis seek it if they can; the remedies are there in abundance unused, sun, air, green fields,—but pre-empted by speculators whom we have encouraged by silly tax laws. With them walk, step by step, disease and death and crime and political corruption. Tuberculosis is not a punishment; it is a consequence. Nature does not punish man, she simply lets things happen. God is not mocked; if in matters of taxation a community acts the fool, it must suffer the consequences of folly. Among these consequences is that dread and widespread disease over which these good men have been disputing.

What is the curative principle for social disease?—surely this which the prophet Malachi indicated: "What, O man, doth the Lord, thy God, require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy and to walk modestly before him?" God despises the charity of the unjust. "What mean ye that ye grind the faces of the poor?" God despises also the land-grabber, whom you respect. Centuries ago his prophet cried, "Woe unto them that add house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no room in the earth."

And what does justice require against the monopolist, an incubus and parasite? More centries ago, the Hebrew law-giver whom we honor with our lips but dishonor in our conduct, provided against this evil which today afflicts Pennsylvania. "The land shall not be sold forever. It was redivided every fiftieth year, but we can even improve upon his method as we should: we can redivide natural opportunity every year, not by setnig new boundaries, but by taking in taxation annually the growing site value for the public good. When that value shall be taken for public use, the little child born tomorrow in your slums will have equal right to Pennsylvania with a Wharton or Weightman of Baer—no more, but no less. And until you have secured that right to the child, you have robbed the child. And again, and herein, God is not mocked. He will not hold us guiltless; no wonder society is sick—tuberculosis physically, tuberculosis morally. People who can get a living only by trampling on other people cannot be a healthy people, cannot be a moral people.

How shall we begin? Again learn from the Hebrew prophet, "Cease to do evil; learn to do good." The law of nature is that men shall earn their bread by labor, and not by theft; yet society burdens labor and the fruits of labor, and eases monopoly and privilege. The community produces land value; let the community appropriate it; the man, the individual, produces labor value;—let him have it, respect his right to it, refrain from taxing it. Here is the law of taxation written at Sinai on tables of stone, addressed to all men and all nations; the State of Pennsylvania not excepted: "Thou shalt not steal." When we shall have asserted public rights to land values, and respected private rights to labor values, then we will find that Nature's store-house of opportunity has been unlocked by the key of Justice; every laborer who seeks may find, and to him who knocks it shall be open. The Man of Nazareth prophesied that the meek shall inherit the earth. Before him the prophet dreamed of a time to come when every man should sit under his own vine and fig-tree, and none should make him afraid.

Today, what we call civilization is degraded into barbarism. Capital and labor are perenially fighting each other, when they should be ejecting the earth lord, the trade lord, the railroad monopolist, our modern highwayman,—immoral all! All doing vicious work behind bulwarks of vicious taxation. What is the result? Soceity is tuberculous. The French Revolution was a hemorrhage.

But there is hope. In Philadelphia, seventy-four years ago, was reborn an idea; the Single Tax, now spreading apace everywhere but here. Northwest Canada has learned the lesson which Philadelphia neglects. Vancouver, Victoria, Edmonton, Calgary and sister municipalities have abolished taxes on improvements and, as a result, are pulsing with life, and drawing northward emigrants from our Western States. The province of British Columbia taxes wild land eight times as much as it does improved land. It repels the speculator, where Pennsylvania invites him. In England, Lloyd George is toiling to undo the wrong of the centuries. Germany is everywhere taxing the "unearned increment." Australia, New Zealand, Denmark, Argentina, China—all awake but Pennsylvania.

But something definite has happened in the United States and recently. Last year Houston, Texas, began to untax improvements, shifting the charge to land values. A little city, you say?—yes, but an object lesson already. What has resulted?

In the first six months of 1912 there were 219 more buildings erected than in Houston the first six months of 1911, and the value of the buildings erected in 1912 amounted to three times the value of the buildings erected in 1911, which goes to show that the partial exemption of improvements from taxation has had the effect of stimulating the building industry. It also has had the effect of increasing the number of land sales without depreciating the price of land. So that it appears that the assessment of land at 70 cents on the dollar of its full value and taxing it for city purposes at the rate of $15 per thousand (with an addition of the State tax of $8.60 per thousand, or a total of $23.60 per thousand valuation), will not lower the selling price of land, but will stimulate its sale at an advanced price. This makes a tax rate of 2.23 per cent. on a 70 per cent. valuation of land and a 25 per cent. valuation of improvements.

In 1911 the assessment of land values in Houston was increased 25 per cent. over the former assessment. At the beginning of 1912 land values were equalized, and all land was assessed at 70 per cent. of its fair selling value. Buildings and other improvements upon land and the machinery of manufacturers were assessed at 25 per cent. of their values. In fact, there was more done to relieve industry from taxation in Houston during 1912 than has been done in any other city in the United States up to date.

Recently, we have had a strenous election, but the most significant thing in that election has been noted by only a few, namely an election in the little city of Everett, State of Washington, which voted to adopt gradually the single tax within four years. Another little place? Indeed, yes. But I remember that Bethlehem was a little place, and Nazareth was a little place. Everett makes for jubliation; Everett will be the beginning of the end. The Carpenter of Nazareth encouraged us to believe that the Kingdom of Heaven is like leaven which a women took and hid in two measures of meal until the whole was leavened.

William Penn sweat blood over Pennsylvania in his desire that it might be a light and a standard to the nations. We have brought trouble on ourselves and on Pennsylvania by folly and ignorance. Let us set our house in order. Let us respect the rights of the humblest; that all who live in Pennsylvania, from least to greatest, shall have equal rights in the State, to air and sun and soil and civil liberty. This may be brought to pass through the natural order of which just taxation is the corner stone, until this shall be established, Tax Commissions will work in vain, for however well—intentioned they may be, they will be struggling against equity. And that is a losing fight. "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it."

To develop your city; stop taxing industry and commerce. Tax land values only.

To develop the ports of Pennsylvania; stop taxing wharves, warehouses and elevators. Tax frontage values used or unused.

To develop manufacturers; stop taxing buildings, machinery raw materials and products. Tax factory sites used or unused.

To encourage industry: stop taxing products of labor and industry. Tax special privilege, tax natural opportunities used or unused, tax land values which are produced and maintained by the community.

To abolish slums: stop taxing buildings, improvements. Tenement owners can then afford to erect better buildings. Tax building sites, used or unused. Then owners cannot afford not to erect better buildings.

To stop taxing industry and commerce, we must exempt buildings, machinery, merchandise, improvements, and personal property of all kinds.

The present system of taxation falls with peculiar hardship on the health and homes of the poor, punishes industry and enterprise by imposing heavy financial burden upon shops, factories, buildings, and improvements of all kinds; it encourages land owners to hold land out of use or to make poor use of it; it contributes largely to the overcrowding and congestion of the city; it leads to scarcity of employment and thus to poverty, disease and crime.

MR. BENJAMIN ALEXANDER:

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Commission:

On the subject of taxation of mortgages I would like to say a few words. I presume we all know, or rather some of the speakers have referred to the fact, that the information upon which the tax is based is taken from the returns which are made by people to whom the pink bill is sent in the months of September and October. What I would like to call the attention of the committee to is this: if that system is to be continued, if we are to continue in the State of Pennsylvania to levy the taxes upon mortgages under this system then the entire system should be changed, because it is so loose at present that the City of Philadelphia loses a very large amount of money each year simply because the gentleman or gentlemen who are charged with the getting up of the paper that is sent out by the different assessors don't seem to understand the best way or the most thorough way of finding out what a man has. You will bear in mind when you record a mortgage today,—when you take a mortgage to the office of the Recorder of Deeds, he will decline to accept it unless it contains a statement giving the precise address of the person named as mortgagee. This is certified, as I understand it, by the Recorder of Deeds to the Board of Revision and they receive these sheets and send them out to the different districts, and from the names and addresses they in turn send out at a certain time of the year a paper in which you are asked to make a return in a certain number of days. If you don't you receive a notice calling your attention to the fact that the assessors will estimate the amounts and add a penalty of 50 per cent; and in many cases people wait until they get the second notice and settle the amounts at which it has been estimated; and there are a very large number of people who pay no attention to the paper whatever, relying upon the fact that the estimated valuation and penalty will be less than they would ordinarily have to pay, and they simply take that chance. That is the present system of collecting taxes upon mortgages it is the easiest thing in the world to find out by arrangement with the Title Companies all the addresses you want and all the information you want to know about every mortgage unsatisfied in the city of Philadelphia today. For a comparatively small amount of money you could get an abstract of every unsatisfied mortgage today; you can get the address of the man who owns the mortgage. If the Auditor General of Pennsylvania would have an office in Philadelphia with a half a dozen clerks he would get from two to three times as much money as he is receiving today on taxation derived from mortgages. I believe in taxing the mortgage right from the day it is recorded until the 31st day of December of that year. If a man brings in a mortgage to be recorded November 1st, the Auditor General can have that man recorded and taxed from that day until the 31st of December, as it is now you don't pay any tax today on a mortgage that is recorded by the 31st of December, that is you don't pay any tax up to the 31st of December, and then you escape taxation for the entire year following. How could you expect anybody to have any confidence in such a system which enables a man to escape taxation from thirteen to fifteen months? I have discussed this subject with Mr. Gratz covering a period of several years but nothing has been done. You say how would it be to make every man pay a tax upon his mortgage—it would be a very good thing so nobody could escape. That is why I come here today. I make return of my mortgages and I sugested to the assessor here recently, "Don't hurry me to make my return this year because I am taking over mortgages;" but I don't intend to pay any tax on that year, I expect to take the mortgages next year. Is that the proper system of taxation? Has the subject received the consideration it should receive from those who are supposed to understand taxation? I urge if we are to continue the taxing of mortgages let us tax them the way you tax real estate. Have a regular office in the city of Philadelphia with a representative of the Auditor General in charge of clerks and let us get down to some system which will compel a man to pay his tax. When you have people understand they must respect the law and they must pay their taxes they will pay them. How can you expect people to respect a law which is not properly enforced? I hope you will consider that matter in the spirit in which I urge it. The lender don't pay any tax,—the owner of real estate don't pay any tax. Our real estate,—if you raise my tax I will raise the rent; if you tax my mortgage I will increase the rate of interest on the mortgage so I will get my interest.

Mr. Brown: How are you going to reach a man who deliberately goes to the Recorder of Deeds office and records a mortgage and gives his residence in New York?

Mr. Alexander: The representative of the Auditor General's Office attends to these things. You have a man in Philadelphia with a proper force of clerks and he will have no difficulty in getting 95 per cent of all the people who should pay taxes, our city has known for some time that the Board of Revision of Taxes is inadequate.

Mr. Brown: You have a remarkable condition in Pennsylvania which does not exist in any other State in the Union. There has never been a prosecution in Pennsylvania for false returns or failure of collection of taxes and there has been very few suits for taxes in Pennsylvania. The State gets all she needs for maintenance by the voluntary action of the tax payers.

Mr. Alexander: If we are to continue our present system, make every man pay. I think it is a very poor excuse to offer that the State of Pennsylvania has so many ways of getting income that it is not particular. How can you expect your people to respect the laws if they are going to be violated in this way. Don't allow anybody to escape. You don't allow anybody to escape the taxation on real estate in Pennsylvania do you? Suppose we appropriate all the money that we get from the taxation of mortgages to good roads, let us take the system in New York. When you record a mortgage in New York City you pay the tax when you record it, you pay it all at once. You don't pay an annual tax I think this is the point, whether to levy a tax of one-half of 1 per cent at the time the mortgage is recorded of whether to continue with the annual tax.

I want to say something along the lines of the exemption of manufacturers, I would like to know why a very successful manufacturer should refuse any special consideration at the hands of the State. Why should he receive consideration when a man who owns a summer house pays his taxes regularly. I think all the machinery of a manufacturing plant should be taxed just as well as real estate, how can you differentiate between the machinery and the land? The Baldwin Locomotive Works is of course a great benefactor to the City of Philadelphia, but have you ever stopped to consider what enormous amount they make in a year? Do you know how many millions that amounts to? Why do they stay in Philadelphia? Because they can manufacture here better than in any other place. They have succeeded in building up a business where it is possible to build up a business better than in any other community. That is the reason why Philadelphia is the textile center of the United States because it has greater advantages and they can manufacture to better advantage. Why should the people who profit by that be exempted from taxation? Why should I who own a property on Girard Avenue be in a separate class from a man who owns a hundred and fifty thousand dollars worth of machinery. Where is he entitled to an advantage to which I am not entitled? I would like to hear some successful manufacturer if he is not a selfish man point out to me wherein he is any greater benefactor than I am by paying for my property on Girard Avenue?

Mr. J. Lee Plummer: I am here together with Mr. Robert S. Banckert, President of the Board of County Commissioners of Blair County. We came down here to ask this committee to recommend the return to the county of the automobile tax and such other tax as the committee may in its wisdom suggest to the Legislature. We think that the automobile license should be returned to the county it is raised from these counties, the automobiles use our roads and these licenses could be spent to a great advantage in the interior counties, of which Blair is one. And in making your recommendations, we suggest that it includes these millions of dollars (I don't know how many) which are now tied up in the State Treasury unappropriated, so that something tangible will come to the County Treasury. I don't know that I would suggest that you particularly recommend that it be spent on roads. Any sum of money which is returned to the counties by the Commonwealth can be used by the County Commissioners to advantage, as they have the business of the county to look after. In Blair county (we are one of the smallest counties in area in Pennsylvania) we spent for roads last year almost $58,000. This year we will reach as much. We would like to see this automobile license returned to the county.

Mr. Brown: Would you have it computed according to the population or according to the number of automobiles in your county?

Mr. Plummer: The Highway Department knows every time it gets an application for a license, whether it is Blair County or whether it be Philadelphia County. I would also recommend that the personal property tax instead of being sent into the State Treasury by the County Commissioners (the County Commissioners collect it now you know) instead of requiring the commissioners to pay it into the State Treasury and wait until they get it back from the State that they be permitted to retain their three-fourths. That would save time to the Counties. Another thing I recommend, I think the tax on deeds, judgments and mortgages, (50 cents you know is paid on each judgment mortgage or deed) I think that might be returned to the county, this is a direct tax and is raised from the people in the different localities. Let it be returned to them. The collateral inheritance tax might be returned provided the State can afford to return it. I think the State can afford to return the tax on riches or the collateral inheritance tax. From newspaper information I see the income of the Commonwealth this year is something like on thundred and thirty million dollars. That is an awful sum of money to be spent by the Commonwealth. I don't know that it is advisable to accumulate a great surplus because it creates a feeling of extravagance. If the Commonwealth can afford these things let all these taxes which are more or less direct be returned to the county, the commissioners can use it to a very great advantage.

MAYOR WARD, of Chester, Pa.:

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Commission:

I shall please you by the statement that I am going to be very brief. The gentleman accompanying me today, Mayor Nevin of Easton and Mayor Stratton of Reading, with several councilmen of our different cities represent the third class cities of this Commonwealth. We are all here on the one errand of which I will state the facts and Mayor Stratton and Mayor Nevin will elaborate to a slight degree on the question. What we are seeking to ask is some return to the municipalities throughout the State of the moneys collected from corporations owning realty in our cities that are not taxed, the real estate of Public Service Corporations, the Trolley and Railroad, Telegraph and Electric Light Companies and Gas Companies pays no revenue whatever to our cities. It is the duty of the city to police and to light and to provide fire protection for these several properties, yet we get no return.

The burden every year becomes greater upon the smaller municipalities. We need more money and we ask you gentlemen to obtain in some way a return to our cities from the amounts exacted from the several corporations whose properties are in our municipality. We do not ask you to increase the taxation of the corporations, but would it not be fair to return to the several cities and boroughs a proportion at least of the tax on the gas receipts of the corporations and the tax owned by bonds, which would be the equivalent to the amount which the city would receive if they were enabled to dircetly tax the realty of the corporations in our border. In the City of Chester we have eighteen million dollars assessed valuation of the amount of realty exempted owned by public service corporations amounts to one million three hundred thousand dollars. If we could obtain a return from the State an amount equal to the amount which we could tax them it would be of considerable assistance in the maintenance of our municipal government as I believe the City of Chester grows greater each year.

MAYOR IRA W. STRATTON, of Reading, Pa.:

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Commission:

This subject of taxation has been a very vexed one from time immemorial. It is a question that our forefathers fought about when we received our independence. I only want to say just a few words in behalf of the city government about the return of taxes to municipalities. It is a recognized fact, that the population of cities is increasing in a larger proportion than the country districts. Therefore the problems of city government and city expenses have very materially increased.

The question as touched upon by Mr. Ward where he just made reference to public service corporations paying a State tax and nothing going to the support of the municipalities in which they are operated is one that has been up for a long time. In Reading we have an assessed valuation of about fifty-five to fifty-six millions of dollars, we have an exemption list of over five millions of dollars that includes churches, hospitals and other charitable institutions the public service corporations which derive their income by reason of their operations within the city receive the full protection of the government of the city. They get the police protection, light and fire protection and the city receives nothing in return. I don't know how it is in reference to the gas companies whether gas companies are taxed by the State,—I have been told—

Mr. Brown: Capital stock tax.

Mr. Stratton: No I think

Mr. Brown: As far as I know

Mr. Stratton: The superintendent of our gas plant said they paid no tax whatever, national, State or city but with reference to these public utility corporations I think it would be a good idea to return back to the county a proportion of the amount paid to the State allow the county to tax their real estate the same as any other corporation doing business. There is another point I would like to touch. With reference to the bond issue. We are compelled to pay a State tax on our bond issue of indebtedness outside of that remaining in the sinking fund. This is very unjust. This bonded indebtedness of any city or school district or with reference to anything of that character are usually negotiated for the benefit of the masses and therefore it seems to me to be driving the wedge in too tight if when making public improvements we are compelled to pay a State tax on every bond issued. There is another point I would like to have a little information on,—with reference to manufacturing plants. I understand that a man who owns his building and has machinery in that building he is liable for the whole tax,—in other words it is asessed for the value of that property but taxed on the valuation including the machinery. When a person owns a large factory building and some person from outside the State comes here and installs machinery in direct competition with the manufacturer who owns the property he is not assessed anything on the machinery but the other man who owns the property whose vital interest is in the community must pay the tax for the whole value as against the man who may come there in competition to him and not pay anything.

Mr. Brown: We don't tax machinery in Philadelphia.

Mr. Stratton: You don't tax it here? Other places if it is part of the real estate they tax it and if it is not real estate they don't tax it.

There is also another point I would also like to refer to. There is at present a law to the effect that the tax duplicate should be placed in the hands of the City Treasurer on or before January 1st if the Legislature enacted another law fixing this date much earlier it would be a great benefit; then cities would be in a position to enter into contracts for work done and be able to meet payments on these contracts at a much earlier date. At the present time under the present conditions cities may levy their taxes and make their preparations but the taxes are not paid until January the first and if contracts are made they may not be able to meet the first payment on the contracts because there will be no money in the treasury until after January the first this frequently holds work up until late in the fall or during the winter months.

MR. WILLIAM H. KINGSLEY, Second Vice-President The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Commission:

The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company is again availing itself of the opportunity to present to your body proper argument as to why it and other insurance companies conducted upon the mutual plan should be relieved from the heavy burden of taxation arising under present laws.

For some reason—perhaps the lack of protection which the Legislature should afford this line of business—mutual life insurance companies appear to be the object of taxation from every conceivable angle. Upon such companies is imposed a heavier burden of taxation than that collectible from any other line of business; and it is believed that we can prove this situation to be unjust. It will be my especial effort to present to you the facts as they apply to The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, using that company as an illustration of the condition that exists with respect to taxes in all mutual life insurance companies chartered by and doing business under the laws of this State.

The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company is an association of citizens bound together with but two objects in view;

First. The payment to the family or other beneficiary of a deceased member of an agreed upon sum of money to be paid at the time of a member's death; and Second. The accumulation of a selected amount at a given time in the future by the payment of premiums through a series of years.

It is not operated for profit. Its chief function is to create estates for people who would otherwise die and leave their families unprovided for.

It should fairly be recognized by the Legislature that a decided benefit arises to the State from the corporation of any group of men which avoids State care of dependents who are left after the wage-earner has died; and it is not thought that the Legislature fully appreciates the achievement of life insurance companies in this respect.

In commercial undertakings there appears to be a rate of taxation based upon the value of the business owned and upon its progressive development and income.

Mutual life insurance is not commercial in its spirit and is thoroughly co-operative; but yet it is taxed on a basis much more burdensome than a given line of business where profit is the end in view.

Upon the present system of taxing mutual life insurance companies every dollar of premiums that is paid by a member is immediately taxed as a receipt of the company. That same dollar when invested, as must be done under the laws which your body have passed, and which must earn a given rate of interest prescribed by statute, is again taxed at the rate of four mills per annum while held by the company. Later when the policy is paid and an estate created for a beneficiary the sum is again taxed; and the whole situation presents the aspect of the Legislature taxing an institution which is engaged in creating estates which naturally come under the tax laws when they are paid over to those who enjoy their income. It would seem that this process of ultimate benefit to the State should be encouraged and not taxed prior to the time when it really creates a taxable item from which the State may properly derive revenue.

If The Penn Mutual had been chartered and operated as a company for the profit of stockholders and had undertaken to build up a large surplus the only taxation that could have been imposed upon it would be the five mill tax upon the book value of its stock. As an illustration of the difference, it may be pointed out that a company capitalized at a million dollars with say five millions of surplus would on this basis carry a tax burden of but $30,000 per annum. A mutual life insurance company stock, no element of profit would under the present system of taxation pay about seven times as much tax as the stock company. This situation is inequitable and unjust and we must look to you gentlemen to so recognize it and apply a relieving remedy.

As an illustration of the fact that insurance companies are discriminated against in comparison to other lines of business, we may properly call your attention to the fact that a druggist doing a business of $64,000 per annum is required to pay a tax of $91. An insurance company on the same amount of business is taxed $1,280. A wholesale implement house doing a business of $464,000 annually is taxed $283. An insurance company on the same amount of business is taxed $9,280; and this comparison can be carried along indefinitely.

That the legislative mind is trending in the right direction is attested by the fact that fraternal organizations which are composed of people grouping themselves together for the purpose of paying death benefits are exempt from taxation. Such organizations are limited in their scope of operation and naturally do not extensively spread their benefits, but their function is precisely similar to that of a mutual life insurance company.

Building associations through which savings may be effected and in some instances an estate created may in their operation be compared to a life insurance company's endowment policy, which produces the same results; and building associations are wholly free from taxation.

It should also be pointed out that savings funds having no capital stock, in which depositors accumulate funds under processes similar to that under which money is built up with an insurance company under endowment policies, are not taxed.

It is not our argument that the institutions quoted should be taxed, but rather that consistency should prevail with recognition of the principle that these forms or thrift are in themselves self-imposed taxes and should be encouraged wherever found to exist.

The public recognizes the fact that the Legislature moved in the right direction when such organizations were freed from taxation; and it is earnestly pleaded that a great inconsistency prevails when similar treatment is not afforded other institutions the nature of whose business is the same. As an illustration of the extreme burden of taxation resting upon mutual life insurance companies it is of record that one such company for the year 1911 paid total taxes of $597,000, which were $154,000 more than the entire administration expense of that company. This situation arises to some extent from retaliatory measures passed by the Legislatures of other States growing out of laws which you have passed regulating taxes upon foreign companies doing business in this State. Our laws provide that a tax of 2 per cent. shall be collected upon the premiums paid to companies organized under the laws of other States by residents of this State; and those other States, in retaliation, have passed laws that tax the premiums of Pennsylvania companies at the same percentage that you have decreed on the premiums collected by their companies.

If you were to make the rate of taxation 1 per cent. upon premiums collected by Pennsylvania companies there would be an automatic reduction to 1 per cent. upon the taxes paid by such companies to foreign States. This plan would confine the benefit of this tax to the State of Pennsylvania and would make the Pennsylvania companies pay a larger tax on premiums to their own State and a smaller tax to outside States. In his opening address your counsel, Mr. Brown, referred to the desire of the commission to be fair in its adjustment and spoke of taxation methods in foreign countries. If I may have a word on this subject I should like to say that success has attended the effort of foreign countries to have the tax rest upon the proper object and it is to be noted that, particularly in Germany, compulsory life insurance laws exist and that such life insurance is not taxed, but on the contrary it is strongly encouraged in recognition of the fact that through this medium many families are taken care of which might otherwise become public charges to a greater or less extent.

Mr. Brown: In the report which this committee made to the Legislature at the last session we said:—"It was represented by certain of the insurance companies that a tax of 2 per cent. on the gross premiums would yield a revenue which would be approximately equal to that derived from present taxes for which it is substituted. The suggestion of this tax, however, unites in the minds of the committee with a demand for increased taxation upon insurance companies. These companies have control of very large funds and as such form a concrete body of wealth which is easily and efficiently taxed, and if in the judgment of the committee an insurance the portion of the community doing business with them, a class well able to bear it. In this respect they are analogous to banking institutions."

Mr. Kingsley: I greatly regret to take issue with the thought expressed in the committee's report; and the points that I have tried to make are not answered by the spirit of the committee's report. We are dealing with the proposition that under the present law three or four different institutions are carrying on the same line of business, but are differently taxed, and if in the judgment of the committee an insurance company is analogous to a bank it should not be taxed any more than is the case with a bank; but, as a matter of fact, in one instance you are dealing with an institution having capital stock, conducted for profit, and in the other with an association of men grouped together for some protection against loss in event of death; and yet the latter class is the object of tax punishment. It so happens that the Penn Mutual is the largest and with one exception the only mutual life insurance company of any size in the State of Pennsylvania; and because your tax theories have been applied to all insurance companies, whether operated for profit or not, you have not differentiated on this very important point, with result that your laws bear more heavily upon the mutual insurance company than upon the stock insurance company.

Mr. Brown: How are you taxed in Pennsylvania in comparison with other States?

Mr. Kingsley: Pennsylvania taxation is the maximum. Other States are giving considerable attention to the subject of taxation and instead of taxing upon the tabular premium, which is collected only the first year, credits are given for death claims, premium abatements, investments made within the State and other items that should be properly taken into account before the basis of taxation is reached. In Pennsylvania, where for illustration a given premium may be $100 a year, but which premium is reducible by abatements in future years, with result that the insured member pays less than $100 a year, beginning with the second, you collect a tax on the entire $100, just as though that were the sum collected. We never handle this difference in the premium; and under these circumstances you can realize that we feel that we are being taxed on shadow instead of substance. We realize that members of the Legislature are not familiar with the details and minutae incident to various lines of business which are taxed and understand that a recognition of this fact has resulted in the formation of this committee in order that proper study may be given to the subject and greater equity brought about. We are not pleading for tax exemption but want that degree of considerate treatment which we believe will be afforded us when the situation becomes understandable to you. The average policy in life insurance companies of the class to which I have referred does not exceed $1,300. This clearly refutes the contention that has been made that patronage of a life insurance company is a luxury for the rich man. The question of taxes is commanding the attention of the insuring public. Suggestions are frequently made to us for a movement to bring about a reduction of taxation. At the last Legislature a number of bills were introduced from various sources aiming to remedy some of the defects that exist in this situation; but the attention of the Legislature was at that time given up very largely to the recodification of the insurance laws of the State and time was not available to fully consider these measures. Those who have carefully studied this whole situation are of belief that if opportunity is afforded to present a bill to the Legislature the justice of the measure can be successfully demonstrated to those before whom it will have to come for consideration.

Mr. Brown: Will you and Mr. George Wharton Pepper undertake to prepare a bill and furnish anything further in addition to the brief already filed?

Mr. Kingsley: This will be done provided the recommendation of this commission to the Legislature is such that a bill of the nature desired can properly be tied to it; but nothing much is to be gained if the committee recommend one thing and the bill provide for another. We would greatly value the opportunity of aiding the committee in framing a bill and would appreciate their interest in bringing about its passage.

MAYOR D. W. NEVIN, of Easton, Pa:

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Commission:

When I was asked to be a candidate for Mayor I said "No I had troubles enough of my own," they said "Of course we know you are no orator but you have a lot of horse sense and for that reason will make a good Mayor." So if I exhibit any horse sense it will be because I am a real Mayor.

I have been asked to appear here to present to your body several Acts of Assembly which have been prepared by a member of the Northampton County Bar and which were presented to the convention of third class cities when it met in Easton in 1911. I am here with no hysterical theory of what would be the proper way to fill the Treasury with taxes. I believe the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is like a large tree that is supported by its branches and in order to give life to the branches it must allow some of the sap that is in the treasury to flow out through the trunk of the tree to the utmost branch. I think I will take issue with some of the gentlemen who have spoken here today as to the different methods or acquiring taxes for the treasury. I don't believe that real estate is so burdened with taxation, but I believe that it is unequally burdened with taxation and the result is the fact that we have in most municipalities of this Commonwealth men elected to the office of Asessor who are incompetent or through favoritism of some kind, political or otherwise, to make proper and equal real estate values and the result is the unequal real estate values which exist in most of the cities of this Commonwealth. We need tax laws in government: State, National or Municipal, but these taxes should be levied in such a way and set out in such a way that the State could be honestly conducted, that the municipality could be honestly carried on, and that without any burden on either the citizens of the State or the citizens of the municipality. If there was a fair valuation on property or real estate I don't believe municipalities would be before this committee asking any relief by legislation in that respect; but as it is now there is nothing that I know of that can compel the Assessor to do more than value the property as he sees fit. There is no real unit of value. Real estate is one of the greatest assets of the State. Why should not there be some bureau at the head of the State government that should in a measure control that or have a universal assessment rate throughout the State? We do it with other things,—with occupations. Why should not there be some way devised by which there should be an equal or just assessment of property as between neighbor and neighbor. I can take you to my own city to illustrate to you what I mean. There is a piece of property on a street there assessed at $3,500 which sold about six weeks ago for $16,000. This certainly is not a fair assessment of property,—which brings in the open market $16,000 and is only assessed at $3,500. Alongside of that property is a small property where a man lives with his little family, worth perhaps $1,500, and that little house is assessed at $1,000. Is that fair? The point to get at to raise money to carry on what we want is to strike at the root of this evil and get where it belongs,—to the Legislature.

Mr. McNichol: Your borrowing capacity is what?

Mr. Nevin: We have eighteen millions.

Mr. McNichol: What is your percentage,—what is the percentage of your borrowing power?

Mr. Nevin: Two per cent of the assessed value.

Mr. McNichol: That is by vote of council. What is it by the vote of the people?

Mr. Nevin: Up to seven per cent.

Mr. McNichol: Don't you have school taxes also?

Mr. Nevin: Yes.

Mr. McNichol: And road tax?

Mr. Nevin: Yes.

Mr. McNichol: And you have something else.

Mr. Nevin: State, county and school———

Mr. McNichol: They aggregate in the total about sixteen per cent.

Mr. Nevin: A dollar seventy-five per hundred.

Mr. McNichol: I am talking about your borrowing capacity for your different improvements.

Mr. Nevin: I am not here to talk about the question of borrowing.

Mr. McNichol: You take exception to the State retaining the tax, here in Philadlphia our borrowing capacity is only 7 per cent.

Mr. Nevin: I think you misunderstand what I want. What I am here for is to ask that the State shall return to the municipalities a part of the tax which they now levy and receive from public service corporations.

Mr. McNichol: You speak upon the question of the municipalities coming in and asking for relief. We are asking for relief in our city from the fact that we have but a seven per cent borrowing capacity for all purposes.

Mr. Nevin: You would not borrow anything if I had my way. I think we borrow too much now, we want to get some of the money back that we are paying into the State that we should not pay.

Mr. McNichol: Why not take a share of that that is returned by the State? In 1909 Northampton County received from the State three hundred and some thousand dollars.

Mr. Nevin: But the municipality did not get it.

Mr. McNichol: I say why not give into the municipality.

Mr. Nevin: I remember will thirty years ago we had a debt of seventy thousand dollars. Today it is four hundred and fifty-two thousand dollars. Why? Simply because we are unable to raise the taxes any higher than they are now, and all this time we have been paying money into the State Treasury and drawing nothing out. The only tax we receive from the State of Pennsylvania is sixteen thousand dollars in liquor licenses.

Mr. Brown: What is your Gas Company in Easton? How is it owned?

Mr. Nevin: It used to be owned by the U. G. I. Company in Philadelphia.

Mr. Brown: Do you know what dividends it returned in the past year?

Mr. Nevin: No sir.

Mr. Brown: It is prosperous isn't it?

Mr. Nevin: It is in litigation with the city as to whether or not they would be their own municipal plant.

Mr. Brown: It is real estate?

Mr. Nevin: Yes.

Mr. Brown: That is what you want taxed.

Mr. Nevin: No sir.

Mr. Brown: I thought you wanted the real estate of public utility corporations taxed.

Mr. Nevin: I will read the three Acts:

"An Act taxing the succession or transfer of estates after death, other than to collateral heirs, and providing for the collection and distribution of such tax."

Mr. Brown: That is the direct Inheritance Tax.

Mr. Nevin: Yes. (Reads)

"To relieve the burden of local taxation by returning to the respective cities, boroughs, and townships, three-fourths of the capital stock loan and gross receipt taxes collected from street railways, gas, water, electric light, heat and power companies, located in such municipalities."

Mr. Brown: Some of these companies don't pay capital stock tax.

Mr. Nevin: I know.

Mr. Brown: You have asked for the return of a tax when they don't pay any.

Mr. Nevin: I mean those who do pay it.

Mr. McNichol: On what basis would you make the return?

Mr. Nevin: That is provided for in this Act. The third Act reads:

"To repeal a portion of section 42 of an Act entitled 'An Act to reduce the State debt and to incorporate the Pennsylvania Canal and Railroad Companies,' approved the 29th day of April, A. D. 1844, and section four of an Act entitled 'An Act to impose additional taxes for State purposes, and to abolish the Revenue Board,' approved the 30th day of April, A. D. 1864, and providing that all bonds are evidence of indebtedness of any municipality it shall be exempt from taxation for State purposes."

I have taken the trouble and gone to the expense of two or three hundred dollars for printing these three Acts incorporated in this little pamphlet and have prepared enough copies to present it to each Senator and member of the House at the coming Session, that they may read these Acts. It may be in some way a relief to the municipalities in that they may recover and have returned to them from the State a certain portion of the revenue which now goes into the State Treasury. I don't believe we would need so many lunatic asylums and Tuberculosis asylums if we had more money coming to the municipalities with which we could keep them in sanitary conditions. But we cannot do it now. You take your Public Service Corporations today. We have an illustration of the best kind in my city now,—the Central Railroad of New Jersey. The Central Railroad of New Jersey owns a long strip of street called Dock Street and we cannot assess against the Central Railroad of New Jersey anything for the paving of that street and we have to go down to the treasury and take from the treasury money to pave that street along the railroad because there is no legislation to force them to do it. Why should the city be asked to do all these things and receive nothing in return?

Mr. McNichol: We are just doing the reverse. The railroad has to pay—

Mr. Nevin: You are under a special Act of Assembly. Here is a road built for over fifty years. What redress have we against a corporation of that kind?

Mr. Brown: Suppose they wanted another franchise?

Mr. Nevin: If they came along and asked for a franchise now we would incorporate in the franchise all the restrictions we could get, but you cannot do it now.

Mr. Brown: Have you considered the Inheritance Tax practical or impractical, unless you have a graded or progressive tax?

Mr. Nevin: I am simply delegated to present this in Philadelphia in behalf of the cities of the third class who requested that these be printed and presented to the Legislature and I am fulfilling my duty in that respect, without commenting at all on these Acts. But I will say in a general way to this committee which will have much to do with the incoming Legislature that there should be some provision made by which municipalities should not be mulcted of everything and nothing returned to them.

JAMES KREWSON:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee: I believe I am about the only official here from Montgomery county.

I have listened with considerable interest to your talks here today. I have been heartily in accord with a great many things that have been said, and some, I thought, were absolutely wrong. I think the main point at issue, today, is to know how to so revise your taxation system as to create larger sums.

Now in Montgomery county, like all other counties, we appoint at set periods delinquent tax collectors, who go about to gather up the fragments. At the end of the year they bring in what we call the exclusion sheets, because there are in every county a certain transient public. On the right hand side of the sheet is one item, the dog tax. You may think this is a small matter, but it is not. There are some townships that hardly pay any dog tax. At the end of the year the commissioners are obliged to return to each township, according to the amount of dog tax they pay, holding, however, a certain amount for emergencies. In my county,—in my township there was returned two years accumulation, $575. In some townships but $50, which goes to show that some of the townships don't pay a dog tax hardly. This is one of the little things, but it amounts to thousands. I have suggested, if possible, that there should be an act passed imposing a penalty on any man who owns a dog over sixty days and does not report to the proper officials. I would think that would fetch it; and don't you think it would be just and right?

Mr. Brown: Does anybody suggest a tax on bachelors?

Mr. Krewson: They should be taxed. One gentleman very wisely suggested here this morning that it was all nonsense that the county should return to the State treasury the county tax,—the total sum,—and receive in return seventy-five per cent. This year we had something like $204,000 and had returned to us something over $150,000. Why not pass an Act obliging us to return to the State the twenty-five per cent. only, and keep the rest which naturally belongs to us?

Another question which your circular seems to indicate,—as to what moneys we should pay into the State treasury and what items should be returned to the county. I would say, in the first place, that at least fifty per cent. of the automobile licenses should be returned. While I own and operate an automobile, I don't think the licenses are heavy enough; they should be at least doubled. There is one of our residents who, I believe, owns three cars. He said he never went out for a day's ride that he didn't use up a dollar's worth of road.

In regard to corporations and their franchises. We have right in Ogontz a power house that is said to cost a half million dollars. The township of Cheltenham derives no benefit itself from this. Is it not right that we should have returned to us twenty-five per cent.? I think so. These are matters for consideration.

Some gentleman has talked about taxing manufacturers? A good many of our counties will offer a bounty to any infant industry or any other that will settle in their counties for the sake of giving their young people employment. I think our infant industries should be fostered by every means, but when it comes to a corporation or industry that is paying ten or twenty per cent., if there is any way under the law to make them give an exact return, that case should be taxed heavily. That has always been my way of thinking. There is another thing,—our cemeteries avoid taxation by declaring that they belong to certain beneficial societies, and so on. Now I don't think the law is as specific as it should be in that respect. Where it is proven that they are established for profit as a stock company they should be taxed until the last grave is opened.

Mr. Brown: Why don't you get your assessors to return them?

Mr. Krewson: They do in a measure. Some of them came to me only yesterday for advice on certain cemeteries,—one right near me. They ask to be exempted and they show you a very elaborate plan. I said, "Gentlemen, under the conditions, it would be possible for me to go out into the market, buy a piece of ground, lay out a cemetery lot on paper with a very elaborate drawing of the entrance on it, go to my county seat and get exempted and then hold that for a great number of years for the purpose of investment"; and for that reason I would not exempt them, because I thought it was for profit.

Mr. Brown: Why not have them all that way? If the assessors do their duty and the county commissioners do their duty, the system is all right now, isn't it?

Mr. Krewson: I don't know—

Mr. Brown: Would you take it up to Harrisburg and let them appoint a State board and have them sent out into all the different districts?

Mr. Krewson: I have talked that over with some very wise men in the question, but they haven't given me any advice. It is too frequently the case that the assessor is looking to the future; he wants to be re-elected.

Mr. Brown: Why don't you county commissioners take a fellow like that and take him to task?

Mr. Krewson: Did you ever hear of one being punished?

Mr. Brown: You don't want this commission to recommend legislation when we already have legislation sufficient to make them do their duty?

Mr. Krewson: It would be a good thing to make an example in a case like this.

There was a gentleman here this morning who didn't believe in the tax on bonds and mortgages, but he did believe that saving funds should be taxed on their paltry three per cent. payments of interest to the poor man. Some one said, here today,—if you look up the records you will find they said that such deposits have nearly doubled in the last ten years. Is it right to tax such deposits? If it is, then you would say it was right to tax building and loan associations. I am a director in two such institutions.

Mr. Brown: You don't believe in taxing them, do you?

Mr. Krewson: No, sir; I don't believe in taxing the poor man's money.

Mr. Brown: You mean to say that it is only the poor man's money in the building and loan associations?

Mr. Krewson: In our country districts it is generally men whom we are trying to encourage to save their money. There was one gentleman here,—Mr. Gratz. I had a talk with Mr. Gratz. When you met here some years ago he thought in my testimony at that time that I was hitting at two very wealthy residents of Ogontz. The two gentlemen he alluded to, Mr. Wanamaker and Mr. Weidner, pay more taxes than some entire counties. We have properties in Cheltenham and Abington that you would have to pay from ten to twenty thousand dollars an acre for, and yet we have farms up in the upper end of the county that can be bought for ten dollars an acre; it seems almost improbable. In lower Montgomery, with such townships as Cheltenham and Abington, we think the assessor should have a salary; that they should have an annual salary because it is a large task. They never get through with their books in time to have them rewritten.

Mr. McNichol: What other work do they do?

Mr. Krewson: They do other work, but they really should be paid an annual salary. I think Lower Merion this year returned three millions more of bonds and mortgages assessable for State purposes and Cheltenham two and a half millions. One assessor failed to increase at all. He was reprimanded, but that's all it amounted to.

C. L. S. TINGLEY, Secretary and Treasurer, Scranton Street Railway Co.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Commission: The question of the taxation of the real estate of public utilities by the local authorities is the question which Mr. Brown has put up to me. I don't think that it is a proper subject for taxation, unless there is to be a radical modification of the tax laws. In the first place, the electric railways and electric lighting companies, both of which I represent (that is, I represent both classes of companies) are already taxed on their capital stock and bonded and other indebtedness, and the railways are paying their gross receipt tax. Now, we are taxed on our capital stock and bonds and this is to the full value of our property. Of course we are not taxed on the full value of the stock, but on the market value; and if there be any market value it is approved by the officers of the company, subject to revision by the Auditor General and the State Treasurer, and they take good care to see that it is not too low. It is pretty hard to convince them that the 6 per cent. basis is not a proper basis. In other words you have a little corporation whose stock is not on the market, and they will capitalize their earnings at 6 per cent. So we are paying a tax already on the full value of our property,—something which the ordinary tax payer does not do. He pays on the assessed value; we are paying on the full value. This is the first proposition, more particularly as to electric railways. It will be hard to find, I fancy, in this State, an electric railway confined to one municipality. The Scranton Railway operates through twenty-one; another I have in mind operates through one city, five boroughs and four townships; and we find that if we make any concessions to any one, all the others will want the same thing. I happen to be chairmain of the committee on taxation matters of the electric railways. Last year I made an investigation of the methods of taxation throughout the United States. We received returns from thirty-nine States. Twenty-one made their assessment and levy through the State Board; seven make their assessment and levy through the office of the State Board and the local assessor and eleven are taxed by the local assessor alone, but they are mostly the less populous States—mostly the Southern and less populous States where the properties are small and not of much moment. It is presumed we are bearing our full burden of taxation. Taxes readily divide themselves into two classes,—those which can be shifted and those which cannot. In the case of the business man, the manufacturer or the real estate owner, the tax can be shifted to the user of the commodity. If a man has a tax on his house he shifts it to his tenant, and so on; but the public service corporation cannot shift the burden, and the corporation must bear it until it gets to a certain point when, naturally, it will have to be shifted to the service. So a tax on the public service corporation becomes a tax on service, which, I submit, is not sound public policy. The street railway corporations in the State of Pennsylvania, according to the reports of the Secretary of Internal Affairs for 1911, paid practically four per cent. of their gross receipts in taxes; it was 3.99 and an indefinite fraction. Professor ————, of the Railroad Commission of ————, making a speech on this subject in New York a couple of years ago, made the statement that his thought had been for some years that a tax of two per cent. was as great as should be imposed on a public service corporation, for the reason as I have stated, that it was a tax on service.

Mr. Brown: Why wouldn't a tax on gross receipts be a better tax?

Mr. Tingley: We already pay it.

Mr. Brown: I mean why wouldn't a tax of one per cent. on gross receipts be better?

Mr. Tingley: That is a proposition I advocated thirteen years ago.

Mr. Brown: If you had that would you allow anything for operating expenses, or just make a flat rate tax on the gross receipts?

Mr. Tingley: That would depend of course on the rates. You get into a very academic proposition there. I have some data on this subject here which I may pass along. You get into a great many involved questions. The State of Ohio has taken a very arbitrary position. They take your gross earnings for the year, allow you sixty-seven and a-half per cent. for operating, seven and a half per cent. for taxes and they capitalize the remainder at ten per cent. and say that is the full value of your property.

MR. HENRY WASBERS, of York, Pa.

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee: I wish to address you briefly on the subject of laundry taxation. We feel as though we are unjustly taxed. We don't want any special privileges and haven't come here for that purpose; but I wish to draw your attention to a little article which I will read and I think it will be more effective than if I would speak here for an hour.

(Reads.)

Should a corporation engaged in laundry business be taxed in a different manner than the ordinary manufacturing corporation?

As the question appears to me, the reason that our law makers have exempted the capital stock of manufacturing corporations from taxation, is because a manufacturing corporation by reason of its employment of labor, its disbursement of wages, is a general benefit to the community and should be aided and assisted rather than oppressed by taxation.

Under our laws the only manufacturing corporations not exempt from taxation upon capital stock are brewing companies, distilling companies, and companies exercising the right of eminent domain. These last three classes all have privileges which other companies do not. The brewing and distilling companies can exercise a licensed privilege, and no companies have this right, except it is especially granted under the laws of the State.

Companies having the power of eminent domain are given this right because of their public character, and in return for this privilege have burdens cast upon them which other companies do not.

Thus we have it that every manufacturing corporation in Pennsylvania, except the privileged classes of corporations above mentioned, are exempted from capital stock taxation upon such part of their capital as is engaged exclusively in manufacturing.

What privilege has a laundry company which a corporation which makes shirts (instead of laundering them) has not?

It seems to me that the laundry company is exactly in the same position with regard to its duty to the State, its duty to the local community, and its rights and privileges in general as the ordinary non-privileged manufacturing company. If this is the case, why is it not treated by the State in the same manner as the ordinary manufacturing company is treated? The only answer that can be given to this seems to be that the law has not expressly included laundry companies in its exemption and the Courts have not construed the words "manufacturing companies" to include a laundry.

The laundry companies employ many hands. They pay out a large proportion of their receipts in wages. They are necessary to the comfort and cleanliness of the community. By means of machinery they change the form of their product from a soiled and unclean condition to a clean, wholesome and sanitary condition. why should not they receive the same consideration as a concern which cleans, scours, washes and dyes yarns? In Quaker City Dye Works, 5 Pa. County Court Reports, 94, it is held by Judge McPherson that a corporation doing the above is a manufacturing corporation.

Laundry companies are entitled to the same consideration as the other companies which tend to make a community prosperous.

The laundry business becomes more necessary to the modern household as the servant girl problem becomes more and more complex. Don't put a burden on the washing of your linen which you would not put upon the making of your shirts. Don't lay assessments against the cleanser of your collar which you would not charge against the maker of your neck tie.

If necessary to specifically name laundry companies in order to induce our Supreme Court to understand that you mean to include them, then let the law include them by name.

Mr. Brown: What is the difference between a company that washes shirts and a company that cleans a dirty house?

Mr. Wasbers: I never heard that comparison made.

Mr. Brown: I mean as far as manufacturing is concerned.

Mr. Wasbers: I would have to answer that question by asking you what would be the difference between a laundry company and a dye works. The Supreme Court went the limit in that case, and decided that it completely changed the character of the article.

Mr. Brown: You take my shirt, or some other fellow's shirt, and you clean it; that doesn't change the character of the thing itself; you simply take off it something that is on it.

Mr. Wasbers: And bring it back into shape. It has lost its shape in cleaning. We manufacture it into shape by skilled labor.

Mr. Brown: How is the laundry business, profitable?

Mr. Wasbers: Not extremely so, if you cannot pay taxes out of expenses.

Mr. Brown: Do you think all manufacturing companies should be exempted?

Mr. Wasbers: No, I wouldn't stretch it that far. We want to be placed in the same category of all other manufacturers.

Mr. Brown: You don't object to pay the taxes?

Mr. Wasbers: No, not necessarily.

Why the Laundry Corporations in the State of Pennsylvania are entitled to the same classification or exemption as the Manufacturers.

ADDRESS OF B. F. NEAL, Philadelphia,

To the Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to consider and report upon a revision of the Corporation and Revenue Laws of the Commonwealth.

MR. B. F. NEAL:

Gentlemen of the Commission: This is an appeal to your honorable committee asking your recommendation as to placing the laundry industry in the same classification as manufacturing corporations in the State.

The laundry business was ignored by the United States Census Bureau until the census of 1909 when it found a "little" industry ranking among the largest in the United States, operating over 5000 power plants, with an estimated capital of $68,935,000, the aggregate yearly receipts of which was $104,680,086. It found the operation of these plants cost for wage earners and office help $53,007,747, showing over 50 per cent. of its income expended for labor.

It used in material $17,696,000 and miscellaneous expenses $14,483,397. The rentals for properties occupied and not owned was $2,277,000, not until then did the United States Census Bureau consider that we should be classified in the Manufacturing Reports.

With even figures of this magnitude it is estimated that with allowance for proper depreciation of plants and legal interest on investment the laundry business today would not show a net earning of over 6 per cent.

The principal reason for the lack of a better showing is no detriment to the industry. Any earning to its credit shown is due only to hard years of effort and the ability of our craft to cope with trade conditions. The industry is about twenty-five years of age and the cost of laundering to the consumer has practically not advanced during that period, while every expense appertaining to the business has advanced from 25 to 100 per cent. Improved methods, machinery and men have alone kept the laundry business afloat.

The necessity for capital and men, and a proper organization of our business compelled us to incorporate our plants and interests, when the great State of Pennsylvania, which has always encouraged home industries, would not let us come into the fold of the manufacturer, claiming we were not entitled to such classification. Our appeal today is not for charity or special privilege, but we claim for the following reasons an injustice is done our industry when we are denied the advantages and privileges the manufacturing industries of the State enjoy.

We are subject to all the factory laws, restrictions, penalties and expenses of manufacturing corporations.

We are handicapped in our choice of business sites, owing to the necessity of being located in the heart of our business district. It not being practical to ship our output, we cannot locate in suburban or country districts with the advantages of cheap country rentals, water and taxes. For this reason our local taxes and expenses are very high, usually at full value for all our properties.

We are compelled with other corporations to pay a United States Revenue Tax of 1 per cent. on all earnings over $5,000 yearly.

Our Water Rentals have advanced (in Philadelphia) from 100 to 600 per cent. during the past few years, this rental alone in the larger plants being over a thousand dollars yearly, and as the house holder also pays for water for laundering purposes this makes an added revenue to the municipality.

With the elimination of a Corporation tax the laundry industry would more readily incorporate their plants, thus adding to the Bonus Tax of the State.

The laundry corporation is solely a local business employing only local labor. In the State of Pennsylvania, in 1909 we employed some 11,000 persons opening a field for unskilled labor and providing a livelihood for whole families. In wages we paid in this State, during this year, over $4,000,000, practically every dollar of which was spent in the locality in which it was earned.

Our industry both for wage earners and local taxation has been most profitable to all sections of Pennsylvania. The census shows an investment in this Commonwealth of over $9,000,000 for realty and personal property. This is over 8 per cent of the investment in the industry in the United States.

We claim consideration for our industry due to the improvement of working conditions and installation of sanitary measures. The hours of labor have been reduced to a minimum, and wages advanced far in excess of a proper proportion of the business earnings.

Child labor has practically been abolished, in the United States on December 15, 1909, the census shows our employes numbered 112,064 of which but 965 male or female were under 16 years of age.

The many burdens of expense with which our industry has been hampered has had the tendency during the past few years to entirely eliminate the smaller plants and the decreased earnings have not encouraged the larger industries to enlarge their scope in a wide field. Is it advantageous to the Commonwealth to unduly tax an industry catering to the health and cleanliness of the community, while spending vast sums of the taxpayers' money in pure food and sanitary organizations to educate the people to be cleanly? We feel in this direction alone we are doing a good work and should be encouraged instead of handicapped.

The burdens of expense we have cited necessitates in the near future an advance in cost for our services, which a public already suffering from an increase in living expense can ill afford, and which we are loath to impose, but which is compulsory on our part, unless such measures are afforded as will enable us to meet our competitors for labor in the manufacturing and factory field on even ground.

We thank your honorable committee for the privilege of having our cause heard and for your kind attention. We trust and ask your most careful consideration. We consider our cause just and assure you our appreciation of any action your honorable body may take concerning our application.

Brief of HARRY J. SHOEMAKER, Esq., Secretary of Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association

To the Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, to consider and report upon a Revision of the Corporation and Revenue Laws of the Commonwealth.

In the matter of "Taxing the Capital Stock of Manufacturing Corporations," etc.

Argument made, Philadelphia, Pa., November 12, 1912.

The Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association is an unincorporated association of manufacturers and others doing business in Pennsylvania. It was organized in January, 1910, and now numbers upwards of eleven hundred concerns —employing many thousands of people and paying millions annually to the wage earners of our State.

The membership of the Association extends to all the important business centers of the State, to nearly every one of our counties and to two hundred and fifty-one towns or post offices.

Its affairs are managed by an executive committee of seven of its members, who are annually elected.

BRIEF OF ARGUMENT

To the Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to consider and report upon a Revision of the Corporation and Revenue Laws of the Commonwealth.

The Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association respectfully represents:

That Pennsylvania is so situated and so vast, important and diversified are its natural resources, and so complete and convenient are its transportation facilities, that it must of necessity be, under liberal laws, a most important manufacturing State. Such is the condition today.

THE PRESENT SITUATION IN PENNSYLVANIA.

During the past twenty-five years it has been one of the fixed policies of the State that the capital stock of manufacturing corporations should not be taxed. As a result of this policy the manufacturing industries of the State have increased by leaps and bounds, so that at the present time they include not only those industries which are dependent on our natural resources, but also a great many others which could just as well be located elsewhere, so far as any natural advantage is concerned.

It is a well-known fact that wherever manufacturing has been established, the value of real estate has advanced and increased wealth is permanently assured to the community. So well is this fact known that manufacturers are often given inducements of a substantial nature to locate in a town.

We believe that, as it is desirable to continue to increase the wealth of our State by encouraging the spending of money here for permanent private taxable improvements by corporations and by individuals, it is equally desirable to avoid burdening the manufacturing corporation with additional taxation, or to do anything that would tend to discourage that class of people from expanding their taxable property or to deter other like concerns from locating within our Commonwealth.

It has been the opinion of those who have studied the question, that the Pennsylvania system of exempting manufacturing corporations has been a great aid in building up the State.

From a Census Report on Wealth, Debt, and Taxation, we find:

"In 1900 the State contained more manufacturing machinery, tools, and implements than any other State in the Union—$6,361,469 more than New York. In 1904 this lead over New York had increased to $29,170,925."

Because of a policy of plant exemption by the City of Baltimore, the Baltimore Appeal Tax Court reported in 1907:

"An encouraging growth in the manufacturing industries —the total value of exempted machinery has nearly doubled since 1900."

In December, 1908, a Committee investigating the subject of taxation of domestic manufacturing industries in Massachusetts, compared Pennsylvania with Massachusetts, greatly to the advantage of the latter:

"In 1905 the annual manufactured products exceeded those of Pennsylvania by $2,699,084. In 1905 Pennsylvania had passed Massachusetts and the value of her annual manufactured products exceeded those of Massachusetts by $831,-459,281."

In January, 1907, the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Taxation and Finance of the City of New York, acknowledged that Pennsylvania "is increasing its capital and products faster than New York," ascribing as a reason that Pennsylvania "has never taxed the goods or other personal property of manufacturers."

THE SITUATION IN ADJOINING STATES.

An examination of the tax laws of the States surrounding Pennsylvania, discloses the fact that nearly all of them offer inducements to manufacturing corporations and exempt them from any substantial taxation upon their capital stock.

Thus in New Jersey, manufacturing corporations, at least fifty per cent. of whose capital stock issued and outstanding is invested in manufacturing carried on within the State, are exempted from payment of the annual franchise tax. A similar exemption is made in favor of manufacturing corporations having less than fifty per cent. of their stock so invested to the extent of the assessed value of their real and personal estate used in manufacturing in New Jersey.

In New York laundrying corporations and manufacturing corporations to the extent of their capital actually employed in the State in manufacturing and in the sale of the product of such manufacturing, are exempt from the payment of the annual tax on capital stock of corporations, provided forty per cent. of the capital stock of such crporations is invested in property in the State of New York and used in manufacturing.

In Ohio there is a tax of one-tenth of one per cent. of the capital stock issued and outstanding.

In West Virginia there is no exemption from the annual license tax, but the amount thereof in the case of resident, domestic corporations, is almost nominal.

In Delaware, manufacturing corporations are exempted from any tax upon their capital stock, though there seems to be a provision for an annual license tax based upon the value of their property in the State.

In Maryland there is no tax upon the capital stock of manufacturing corporations. In that State the only tax is upon the shares of stock, collected through the corporation, and express provision is made by the law that in certain counties where the law has allowed the county authorities to exempt manufacturing corporations from taxation, such property may be deducted in placing a valuation on the shares of stock for the purpose of taxation. In 1912 an Act was passed by the Maryland Legislature, authorizing the county authorities of Washington county, wherein Hagerstown is located, to exempt manufacturers located in Hagerstown since 1907, from county taxation, for the period of ten years from that date. It is understood that most of the manufacturing districts of Maryland are under the protection of such laws.

It appears, therefore, that in most of the great manufacturing States surrounding Pennsylvania, the policy has been adopted of exempting manufacturing corporations from a tax upon their capital stock, and even where there is a natural advantage to a manufacturer to be located in Pennsylvania, it will take but a small rate of tax here to induce him to consider seriously the problem of removing to, or locating in, a State where the policy of encouraging manufacturing is adhered to.

THE EFFECT OF THE PROPOSED TAX.

A tax, even though at a low rate as proposed, would place the manufacturing corporations of Pennsylvania at a disadvantage as compared with the States where no such tax is imposed. Is it fair to a corporation which, in reliance on the apparently well settled policy of the State, as to manufacturing corporations, has permanently located here, and built up a community, to now place this additional burden on it, unless there is some extraordinary reason?

The method by which taxes are raised has more effect upon the general welfare than has the amount collected, because even a small tax upon an industry exposed to competition will sometimes bear so heavily upon it as to destroy it, or drive it out of the taxing district to another district, which though it may raise a larger amount of taxes, does so in a manner which does not hamper production or trade.

The growth of manufactures has increased the density of the population of Pennsylvania and thus has not only created the need for more revenue with which to pay for additional public services, but has also increased the value of real estate generally. If manufacturing industries are driven out of the State, then the incomes which are to be derived from the real estate must shrink. It would, therefore, seem that real estate owners who claim that they bear an unfair proportion of the burdens of taxation, would, by the imposition of a tax upon manufacturers, so transfer the burden of taxation that it would operate as an inducement to remove or locate manufacturing plants in other States, which would certainly be killing the goose that lays the golden egg.

In this connection we wish to refer to the objections made by the State Grange and other rural real estate owners.

Suppose it were fashionable for farms to be owned by corporations instead of by individuals, as is now the custom, and further suppose that a tax upon the capital stock of such farming corporations were proposed. Would the State Grange be found as earnestly opposing such a tax as it is now favoring a tax upon manufacturers? And would they not use as an argument that a large part of such capital stock would be represented by real estate on which a real estate tax was paid? And yet now they do not call your attention to the fact that a large part of the capital stock of our manufacturing corporations is represented by highly improved real estate, already assessed and taxed at a high rate because of its increased value, from manufacturing operations.

As was stated before this Commission by Mr. Albright, of the Tax Reform Association:

"The income producing utility of land is largely affected by the presence of manufacturing concerns that build up the community. Therefore, our farmer friends would be benefited, at least indirectly, if the tax burden is so arranged that it will induce, rather than repel, manufacturing concerns. That anyone would seek to effect a condition calculated to induce manufacturers to seek other States for their plants, seems to me to be unwise, and especially injurious to farmers who want a handy market for their products."

There are many other features to be taken into consideration. For instance, the certainty of a Workmen's Compensation Act will make it necessary for the average manufacturer and the smaller concerns to carry liability insurance, and taking the results under the New Jersey Act as a criterion, such insurance will be about four times the present rate. An additional burden upon the consumer.

Another established fact is the increased cost of living. As the cost of living increases, the manufacturer is obliged to increase the wages paid his employes. If the burdens upon him are still further increased, is it not likely that he will remove his plant to the sparsely settled regions of the South, where land is still low and labor cheap and the cost of living much lower in comparison?

IS IT WISE PUBLIC POLICY TO MAKE THIS CHANGE?

If it is true, as we assert, that manufacturing enterprises do more than other industries to permanently increase the amount of taxable property of our State and increase the prosperity and wealth thereof, then we submit that any additional burden placed upon them would be a short-sighted public policy. Very many of the manufacturing concerns of our State are corporations, made so for the purpose of conveniently perpetuating the business and to avoid confusion, delay, and inconvenience, both to employer and employe, on occasion, when by reason of death or otherwise, a change in the management takes place; to put a tax upon those who, for these reasons, incorporate their business, would be to put a burden upon people who were looking after the comfort and constant employment of faithful employes; a policy, which appears to us would be without merit, and would, in our judgment be an unfair tax, and such would be properly termed "class legislation," in that it would place the manufacturing corporations at a disadvantage, as compared with individual and unincorporated firms in the same line of business.

The capital stock of manufacturing corporations does not use the State or the State's property—does not wear out our highways, asks for no special police protection at the expense of the State, does not use the Commonwealth's rivers or other navigable water, causing waste thereof, does nothing to require the State to be at special expense or care. All it asks is to be let alone, and the owners thereof, who pay their individual taxes as others do, only desire to go on benefiting the people, the State and themselves. To tax such capital stock, therefore, appears to us to be without reciprocal benefit.

In support of the above-mentioned facts, and the effect of the imposition of such a tax, we also submit herewith letters and telegrams from various manufacturing corporations in response to a request to appear personally before this Commission.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS AND TELEGRAMS.

The following are extracts from sixteen different letters and telegrams from foreign and domestic corporations, doing business in various parts of our State, all bearing date November 9th or November 11, 1912:

"We have a plant in Missouri and we can manufacture cheaper there on account of the wage situation being easier. If we have increased taxation it will result in our company reducing the amount they allot for us to do and increase the amount that they allot for their Missouri plant."

"We wish you to count us on the side to oppose any such step, as we cannot see the fairness in a move of this kind."

"It will be impossible for any of us to attend the meeting before the Revenue Commission next Tuesday, but would suggest that you defend the cause of the manufacturer to the utmost."

"You enter a protest for ———— Company's interests. We would be very glad if you would be able to do so. So kindly enter this protest in our name."

"We located our largest plant in ————, Pennsylvania, because we were assured we would be freed from taxation on our capital stock, our plants in ———— and ———— are also exempt from this tax and it would be to our interest to increase those plants rather than in ———— if Pennsylvania taxes our stock."

"Pennsylvania induced us to manufacture in the State, as it has many others, on account of its position in regard to taxation, and a change in policies in this respect would be unjust and unfair and would seriously hurt the growth of its industries."

"As a foreign corporation we have paid State of Pennsylvania taxes of one-third of one per cent. on capital employed there, in addition to annual taxes on bonds held there,—one object in going to Pennsylvania was supposedly low taxation."

"We wish to protest against proposed action to tax capital stock of manufacturers in Pennsylvania. Our principal reason for locating in Pennsylvania was exemption of taxes on capital stock of Manufacturing Corporations and low taxes in general."

"If any additional taxes are levied, it will be seriously considered, in locating the mills we now have under advisement."

"When we built our factory in ———— we were promised to be exempt from various taxations for a number of years, which was one of the reasons why we located in Pennsylvania."

"Located ———— plant on account of exemption of personal tax, tax on capital stock of corporations, labor conditions and value of real estate."

"The fact that we are possibly the largest manufacturing State in the Union should all the more protect us from such measures, for the reason that so many of our cities in the various States are not only giving sites for manufacturing enterprises, but are making all possible effort to bring the manufacturers within their territory. Therefore, it is manifest that the imposition of a tax of such character would undoubtedly cause manufacturers, particularly those bordering on contiguous States to make the change to more desirable locations. Such action as tax on capital stock of manufacturing corporations in the State of Pennsylvania might be a revenue reducer instead of increasing same for the reason that many manufacturers would undoubtedly move to contiguous States where the tax on manufacturing capital was not imposed, and would naturally take with them all their workers, which in itself would point toward revenue reduction."

"If such a tax is imposed, it will simply drive away new manufacturing companies from the State and possibly some of the old ones, as other States will welcome them with open arms, as a large and prosperous manufacturing company is the greatest asset any locality can have, as usually all the dividends and labor pay are spent in that locality and most manufacturing companies receive their money from outside of the State and dump almost all of it in the State in which it is located, hence, the great advantage to any State or community."

"One of the chief reasons for our location in Pennsylvania is on account of the low taxation, and if this changes, it would work a great hardship on us, and in our opinion, such a law should not be enforced."

"We consider it unfair to ourselves in view of the fact that local taxes are quite high and tax is paid at the present time on an amount equivalent to our realty holdings and product in the process of manufacture. Taxation on capital stock would be in effect a tax on the amount of money invested in accounts receivable. We are endeavoring to persuade industries to come here to our city from other States, but cannot do so at excessive taxation."

"Four of our plants were located in Pennsylvania because of the advantage of our treatment to manufacturers in regard to taxation, and we would consider it a breach of faith should any legislation levy a tax on manufacturing concerns. Many thousands of employes enjoy the benefit of existing policy which has made Pennsylvania the second silk manufacturing State in the Union and a continuance will soon make it the first."

In conclusion, we would again repeat what has been termed the Golden Rule of Taxation:

"Never Tax Anything

That would be of value to your State,
That could and would run away, or
That could and would come to you."

November 12, 1912.

MR. JULES JUNKER.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: The annual tax on mortgages is an antiquated, unnecessary tax because a recording tax on mortgages (such as they have in the State of New York) would be more advantageous to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and also enable the owner of real estate to borrow money on a mortgage exempt from taxation in Pennsylvania.

A recording tax is collectible to the very last dollar, immediately and directly. To use a familiar comparison it is a tax to be paid "as you enter" the papers in the office of the recorder of deeds. It would be considered bad railway management, now-a-days, to oblige the conductor of a car to go among the crowd of passengers to collect the fares. So too is it bad management to send assessors out among the citizens to hunt up the taxable and then after a long delay (as long as one year) to collect the tax.

A recording tax would yield to the State of Pennsylvania an amount of revenue larger than the amount an annual tax yields. In order to show this, we may use the figures in the City of Philadelphia, as an illustration, and assume that in all the other counties it would be about the same thing.

The "Entire Sum" returned, July 31, 1912, by the Board of Revision of Taxes to the Board of Revenue Commissioners is $582,223,557.36, on which is collected the annual tax of 4 mills. Of this, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania retains one-fourth, amounting to $582,223.55.

This revenue is from all personal taxes, mortgages, bonds, stocks, judgments, promissory notes, money at interest; ascertained from the sworn declarations of all the taxables presented to the assessors in the fall of the year 1911.

The aggregate face value of all the mortgages recorded in the year 1911 is $115,851,380.00, according to the information obtained from the Recorder of Deeds.

A recording tax of 5 mills (such as is imposed in New York) would yield $579,256.90. This latter sum would be from mortgages alone whereas the former sum is derived from all personal taxes. The revenue derived from a recording tax would steadily increase year by year because of greater activity in transfers from one owner to another and larger valuations of new structures in the field of real estate all requiring, invariably, mortgage loans.

A recording tax would be collected through the office of the Recorder of Deeds, relieving the Board of Revision of Taxes of the task of seeking the owners of mortgages through whose hands the tax filters from the borrower who really pays the tax; therefore the Board of Revision could devote all its force to a better collection of all other personal taxes.

Who can fail to see that even the City of Philadelphia as well as the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania would obtain far greater revenue as a result of imposing a recording tax in place of the annual tax.

A recording tax, to sum up, is a good all around tax for it would work well in every direction.

The annual tax on mortgages is an unwise tax because it turns away capital from investment in real estate.

By various enactments the law intends to place the burden of paying this tax on the lender and prevent evasion.

All these enactments beget irritation and cause lenders of money to shun mortgages; and capital is deterred from real estate itself.

The law should make lending and borrowing money easy instead of raising a barrier, such as the annual tax, between two parties who have so great need of concord and co-operation.

Recent new forms of real estate mortgages, called guaranteed mortgages, mortgage certificates, mortgage bonds are destined to solve a great problem in the field of real estate for they make it easy to invest a small sum of money (even so small as $100.00) in mortgages without delay to examine titles or make appraisements. The guarantor assumes all responsibility and all labor.

The annual tax takes away the most valuable feature of such loans namely, "Tax Exemption."

The annual tax on mortgages is evaded in spite of every provision of the law and of all the activity of the assessors.

The extent of the evasion, we can learn by comparing the entire sum of all personal taxes on which a tax of 4 mills is collected, that is to say $582,223,557.35, returned for July 31, 1912, comparing this with the probable total of all mortgages in force estimated from our knowledge of the total assessed valuation of all the real estate in Philadelphia, which is 1 billion 550 millions (in round numbers) and from our knowledge of the aggregate face value of all the mortgages recorded in the City of Philadelphia during the year 1912, viz., $115,581,380.

Here it becomes patent how difficult it is to secure true declarations from the taxable when he is found and how often the assessors fail to find the taxable at all.

Not being separated on the assessment books, the collection of the tax on mortgages obscures the collection of the other personal taxes and vice versa.

The annual tax on mortgages is an unjust tax because the borrower who owns real estate subject to a mortgage is compelled to pay the city and school tax on the assessed value of his property and in addition pays also the State tax of 4 mills on the mortgage (even though, as it too often happens, the money so paid by him to the lender never reaches the Treasury).

It is not the intention of the laws that the borrower should pay the tax, on the contrary, all aim to place the burden of paying the tax on the lender. The power of the lender, however is such that he shifts the whole burden on the borrower.

WILLIAM B. BUCK.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: Coming back to this subject of the spending of the State money, rather than taxation, I want to put in a plea here for the charitable budget of the State. It would be a good thing to have a State budget for all of the expenses of the State, but here is a class of expenses which falls naturally into an exclusive group. Some of us who have been very much interested in this question of the appropriations would like to see it put into concrete form, so that the State would understand just what it is spending each year for charity. We believe that probably six millions of dollars of the appropriations of the last Legislature went into a channel in which they should not have gone. We would not say they should not have been appropriated, because we would like to see these moneys used elsewhere in the charitable budget, but we believe when the charitable budget is examined and compared with the needs of the cities, it will be seen that a lack of system has produced some serious inequalities; that can be readily straightened out when we get down to it.

A number of us who have been studying this question have thought that there has been an absence of proper classification and standardization in the matter of granting State aid; that we classify our institutions as to whether they are hospitals, or homes for children, or hospitals for insane, or State institutions for epileptics; but we forget a very much more important question, namely, as to whether these agencies are performing a public function or what, and to what extent they are performing a public function. We believe the State has no right, and it is certainly not sound public policy if it has a right, to appropriate money to institutions which are not performing a service which would otherwise fall upon the State to perform.

Mr. McNichol: You don't mean institutions such as you name are not performing charitable functions?

Mr. Buck: They naturally fall to private endeavor.

Mr. McNichol: In what institutions do they fall to private endeavor? Do they take a private patient to the detriment of a public patient?

Mr. Buck: I don't—

Mr. McNichol: When you come before us complaining about these conditions, why don't you tell us where these things are, so we can have them before us when we take our report to the Legislature?

Mr. Buck: In that case, I would have to ask leave to print. We think the State is responsible for this lack of standardization. For instance, the care of the feeble minded; we have not provided for them, so we are producing large numbers of feeble minded in the State.

Mr. Brown: We have an institution at Spring City. We provided for a psychopathic hospital. This should be given time to mature. It was offered at the last session of the Legislature.

Mr. Buck: Yes, and we appropriated $200,000 for that institution as against what we should have appropriated,—at least a million dollars.

Mr. Brown: This is one step the State has taken—

Mr. Buck: Yes; I should have perfaced my remarks by saying that I did not wish to criticise any of the good that has been done.

Mr. Brown: We want your criticism. We want you to come here and tell us what you know and give us the benefit of your suggestions.

Mr. Buck: My suggestion is that a classification be made of purely State institutions that the State has organized and have been conducted at the State's initiative; that these be considered as a certain class, and until the needs of these institutions are provided for, until the needs of the State for the care of tuberculosis and for the care of the feeble minded and the overcrowded condition of the insane are provided for, that we make no appropriations to other agencies. In this class we put the semi-state institutions which are performing a function which covers more than a single locality and which would otherwise be performed by the State. For example, the House of Refuge. That covers at least one-half of the State and if this did not exist the State would be compelled to duplicate that institution. These are in a different category from a local orphan asylum and a local hospital that does not perform a state-wide function.

Mr. Brown: Don't you think it would be very charitable to take care of a sick man and help him to earn a livelihood?

Mr. Buck: This is simply as long as the institution's scope is local and it hasn't a claim upon the State. In that category we call this a private local,—a private institution of local scope which covers, as I say, one locality, and these, we feel, should be supported by the locality. Institutions that take patients from public departments upon a written order of the Director of Health and Charities are entitled to compensation to that extent; but otherwise, where they take patients on their initiative, and get money from their relatives and friends and get large endowments, we feel these must become a charge upon private charity and the locality must support them.

Mr. Brown: Do you think we should increase the revenue of the State?

Mr. Buck: Take the appropriations of the last Legislature,—approximately $16,000,000. If that were apportioned on that budget and apportioned just what was given to the State institutions for the last session and taking from these purely local and private agencies the money given to them, it would reduce the budget some six millions of dollars. My suggestion is that you do reduce it.

Mr. Brown: How do you figure that?

Mr. Buck: Institutions, Class 1, $8,521,000; this is purely State institutions. Then to those performing a public function—

Mr. Brown: What would be in that class?

Mr. Buck: The House of Refuge. Then there is the institution for feeble minded. Institutions under private management, third class. They received last year approximately six millions,—the local hospitals and homes for children.

Mr. Brown: Homes for children amount to a very small percentage of that?

Mr. Buck: The inequality in granting appropriations is shown in this illustration, that one of the thirty-five local hospitals here received more money than was appropriated to the Eastern Penitentiary, which is a very large institution.

Mr. Brown: That was all right, it may be self-supporting. They got all they asked for. Aren't local hospitals distributed throughout the State so they can be quickly reached in order to get quick relief and aren't they doing a State-wide work? I don't see why you don't call their work a State-wide work as well as the other?

Mr. Buck: For the most part they don't get patients from outside of the State.

Mr. Brown: Some hospitals get patients from the western end of the State. Physicians bring them here to be treated; so they practically do cover the whole State.

Mr. Buck: Well to a degree. The unscientific part of it is that the State pays this money irrespective as to whether the patient is receved as an indigent patient. In some cases hospitals have received enough money from the State to pay all their expenses irrespective of whether they were pay or free patients.

Mr. Brown: This is simply a mistake; they have imposed on the appropriation committee and misrepresented them. They always consider whether they are free beds or pay beds. Is your thought to put all the deaf and dumb in one institution in the State?

Mr. Buck: It is simply for the State to assume the responsibility for the insane.

Mr. Brown: Taking the deaf and dumb; where would you put them?

Mr. Buck: My feeling is the State must decide whether it will recognize the existing institutions for the deaf and dumb as State institutions and appropriate money to them the same as other institutions, or whether it will create other institutions.

Mr. Brown: Take the deaf and dumb, you wouldn't put them all in one end of the State, would you?

Mr. Buck: No, I simply advocate the State supporting adequately its own institutions before it gives local hospitals which have gone into localities and are paid in some cases. It is shown that in certain localities they have three hospitals where one would do. The State has encouraged them and given them money.

Mr. Woodward: I have had some experience with that work for some years, and last year we adopted a plan whereby we appropriated to those various institutions upon the per captia basis to support the indigent patient.

Mr. Buck: That is reasonable.

Mr. Woodward: Except in some instances where the institution was overcrowded we gave them money for building; but we always took care of the State institution first, appropriating money asked for by the State Board of Charities for these institutions and then afterward taking care of private charity.

Mr. Buck: The things we feel are needed are at least one, and perhaps two or three institutions for the feeble-minded.

Mr. Brown: Where are these?

Mr. Buck: They aren't located. We want additional ones for the feeble-minded and stop this overcrowding of the insane.

Mr. Brown: How about Farview?

Mr. Buck: There is no place in the State where a feeble-minded woman of child-bearing age can be taken and cared for separate from other feeble-minded people. They are the people who reproduce your feeble-minded people. There are very important reasons why they shoud be in separate institutions.

Mr. Brown: Pennsylvania has the best institutions of that kind.

Mr. Buck: What there are of them. New York has six where we have two. We are away behind.

Mr. Brown: You take New York,—New York doesn't appropriate money to hospitals. Pennsylvania scatters her money all over the State so as to make it accessible,—so as to make these places accessible to the people who need care. Your idea is that the State ought to establish institutions first?

Mr. Buck: It ought not appropriate money to institutions doing a local work that has been established on somebody else's initiative other than the State's until the feeble-minded women have been cared for so they won't reproduce their kind.

Mr. McNichol: It is a very delicate question as to what the period is when a feeble-minded woman can give birth to a child. I think you gentlemen had better file your brief on this.

KENNETH B. CRAWFORD, representing, The Employers' Indemnity Company, of Philadelphia.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Commission: Regarding the change in the laws of this State, relating to insurance companies, our suggestion simply is that Foreign Insurance Companies authorized to do business in this State should be required to comply with the laws of this State which restrict the field of operation of a Domestic Insurance Company. We consider that it is an unjust discrimination against Domestic Insurance Companies to require them to restrict their operation within certain limits and to permit Foreign Insurance Companies to come into this State and operate outside of those limits. Under our experience as a corporation of this State, insuring against Employers' Liability and doing a general casualty insurance business, and in reading over the insurance statutes of this State, we have found three instances in which the laws restrict the operation of Domestic Insurance Companies and not that of Foreign Insurance Companies.

First. As you are probably aware, a Domestic Insurance Company cannot carry on a business in all classes of insurance. Thus, a company doing fire and marine insurance cannot do life or health or casualty insurance; and a company doing life insurance cannot do fire insurance or casualty insurance; and conversely a company doing casualty insurance cannot do life or fire insurance. However, a foreign insurance company may come into this State and do insurance in all these classes.

Second. The General Insurance Act of June 1, 1911, provides for certain kinds of securities in which Domestic Insurance Companies may invest their capital. This Act deals with the various kinds of insurance companies, but we do not understand, and it is apparent, that these provisions do not apply to Foreign Insurance Companies. The only provision is that the Insurance Commissioner, before he issues a certificate of authority to a Foreign Insurance Company, shall see that its capital is equal to the amount required by the Act and is safely invested. Undoubtedly this provision should apply to foreign insurance corporations as well as domestic insurance corporations, particularly as such provisions are extremely liberal and evidently were incorporated in our laws to protect the public from taking insurance in companies of uncertain financial stability.

Third. The Act of June 10, 1901, provides that it is unlawful for any Mutual Insurance Company to issue a policy upon which it may be liable in excess of $10,000. The Insurance Department of this State is in doubt whether or not this Act applies to Foreign Insurance Corporations as well as to Domestic Insurance Corporations. It will appear to you evident, as it has to us, that this provision should apply to a Foreign Insurance Corporoation, it being extremely unfair to a Domestic Insurance Corporation to forbid it to issue policies beyond a certain limit and to allow a Foreign Insurance Corporation to do so.

Whatever the reasons are for adopting these provisions in respect to Domestic Insurance Companies, we cannot understand why the same reasons should not apply in respect to Foreign Insurance Companies. It seems evident that these provisions were adopted in order to insure the financial stability of Insurance Companies, and thereby safeguard the various businesses and individuals in this State who must take out insurance in them. Now, if our legislators are of the opinion that an insurance company is not sufficiently sound financially if it engages in certain classes of isurance at the same time or if it invests its capital in other than certain securities, or if a mutual company issues a policy under which it is liable in excess of a certain amount, then it follows, of course, that for a Foreign Insurance Company to be sound financially in the opinion of the legislators they should comply with the same provisions and if they do not then the businesses of this State are not properly safeguarded.

The simple proposition which is thus set forth seems to be so obivious as to need no extensive argument in its favor, and we have been unable to discover any arguments against such a proposition.

Our recommendation to you is that an Act be passed which shall provide, in substance, that no insurance company of any other State or foreign government shall be admitted and authorized to do business in this State or to engage in classes of insurance other than those permitted to Insurance Companies organized under the laws of this State and unless it complies with all the laws of this State relating to insurance companies organized under the laws of this State.

EARL KOCH, of Reading, Penna.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee: I appear in behalf of the school district of the City of Reading. The subject I desire to speak upon is the taxation upon the bonds of municipal corporations.

The basis of taxation upon the bonds of municipal corporations are the Acts of 1844 and the Act of 1864. The intention of the Legislature was to make the holders of all these bonds pay this State tax of four mills. Now what has been the result? Today, instead of the holders paying the tax of four mills on municipal bonds, the municipalities themselves are paying it. They are issuing bonds free of State taxes in the State of Pennsylvania and obligating themselves to pay the State tax thereon. The Mayor of Easton presented an Act which I think will cover the subject entirely, except in the third section, which reads,—"For the year nineteen hundred and thirteen and thereafter, the indebtedness of every county, city, borough or incorporated district * * * *" Now, if that was changed according to section eight of the Constitution and would specify every municipal corporation (as specified in the Constitution) county, city borough, township, school district or other municipality or incorporated district, I think it would fit the subject entirely. All our bonds, all our municipal bonds are issued under the Act of 1874 and its supplements; and that Act distinctly says "county, city, borough, township, school district or other municipality or incorporated district." So therefore, gentlemen, the whole sum and substance of the State tax on municipal bonds falls to the community itself. In other words, the State isn't taxing the holder of the bonds, but is taxing the municipality or the district that issues the bond. To bear me out on that subject, I will ask the Committee to make this notation,—an opinion of Deputy Attorney General Fleitz, recorded in 35 Pa. County Court Reports, 606; some cases in Dauphin County, 266, in the year 1908, in which the Auditor General of the State of Pennsylvania asked him an opinion as to whether or not school bonds were taxable under the Acts of 1844 and 1864. This is what he said: "That the present method of assessing school district bonds for State taxation should be no longer followed, but the Auditor General should issue directions to the treasurers of the various school districts to make retrun of the bonds issued by them direct to the Auditor General, together with such other information as that official may require, and that such bonds shall no longer be returned by the individual owners to the local assessor for taxation." Now, this is the opinion of the Attorney General, and the Auditor General has followed out that opinion, and the result is that the municipalities are paying this tax on their bonds, which comes direct from the municipality and not from the holders of the bonds.

Mr. Brown: This Commission reported an Act of Assembly, which was passed May 11, 1911, which remedied this condition. We referred to that condition, criticised it and reported an Act providing, "That on the receipt of said returns the Auditor General shall proceed to settle the accounts of each county, city, incorporated district, school district and borough within the Commonwealth, fix the State tax due, and unpaid, and transmit notice of the amount, by mail, to officers making said returns; and that if the amount, so found due shall not be paid within sixty days, the Attorney General shall sue and collect the same, with interest, from the date of such settlement; and hereafter it shall be the duty of the treasurer of every county, city, borough, school district and incorporated district, in this Commonwealth, to deduct the said State tax, on payment of any interest, or dividend, on debts due by the county, city, borough, school district or incorporated district, and pay the same over to the State Treasurer within thirty days after the said interest, or dividend; has fallen due."

Mr. Koch: We have got to pay it; the municipality pays it.

Mr. Brown: You deduct it before you pay the interest. The Act was passed to correct that condition. Just look over this a while.

H. P. S. NICHOLS, Esq., Penna. R. R. Co.:

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen:— I am here at the invitation of Mr. Brown and shall address my remarks merly on the question as to the right and advisability of taxing lacally the road beds and the other essential instrumentalities of railroads. I assume I need say nothing about their real estate in the various counties because that is already taxed locally. So that we need discuss nothing except the question of the road beds, freight houses, and stations.

So far as the road beds and the stations and the freight houses are concerned I think we need not argue that they are essential instrumentalities of the franchise that was granted when we were incorporated. So far as anything else is concerned we need raise no question. The road bed and the other facilities that are enabling the company to conduct its business are included first in its capital stock tax which we pay. We then pay a tax on our gross revenue and we also pay a tax which is in the nature of a tax imposed on the company because on all bonds and securities issued by railroad companies there is a convenant on their part to pay a tax assessed on the holder of the bond. So there we are, paying first a tax on these instrumentalities in our capital stock tax; we also pay a gross revenue tax which no one else that is in business has to pay.

Mr. Brown: What is that?

Mr. Nichols: Eight mills, payable in January and July of each year. A five mills tax we pay on our capital stock and the four mills tax is what is paid on the loan. It is not to be forgotten although it is not a State tax that the corporation is paying a ten mills or one per cent. tax on its income. It seems to me if we are speaking of uniformity of taxation the question is, aren't we paying our taxes already, and paying them to the State and the various localities so far as these taxes are concerned are getting back from the State a certain portion of these taxes for their own local benefit and use, so this is our objection to this tax, as we are already paying a tax,—not only one tax but two taxes, and if you consider the government tax, we are paying three,—and then we are paying on our indebtedness which is another tax and it seems we should not be called upon to pay local taxes if we are paying to the State and possibly paying twice. It is not a matter, I suppose, that has any special bearing upon this, but you gentlemen will find if you will look over the returns of the various railroads, and I am speaking now of the Pennsylvania Railroad and its affiliated systems,—are paying over eight hundred thousand dollars of taxes on our real estate that is taxed locally and the various counties in Pennsylvania through which our road is run are collecting that amount of taxes locally. What answer can you make to the counties other than Pittsburgh and Philadelyphia when they complain that the Pennsylvania Railroad pays taxes on their real estate here and there and don't pay any taxes in these other counties?

Mr. Nichols: I think that is not an occasion for a complaint on the part of the counties. I think it is occasion for the railroad to complain, who after paying possibly three times the tax in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia is also paying for these various things which are really essential instrumentalities of our franchise. These stations aren't of any advantage to the railroad company, as compared to that of those who use them. I would say the complaint would rather come from the railroad than from the various counties.

Mr. Brown: Why shouldn't Pennsylvania tax its railroads practically the same as New York? They tax them locally on their real estate in the counties and also tax them for State purposes.

Mr. Nichols: They pay a franchise tax.

Mr. Brown: I have received several communications, this one I have now reflects the State Grange and they give an illustration in the case of the New York and Pennsylvania Railway Company. This railroad has 27 miles of road in New York State from Canisteo, New York. to Genesee, Pennsylvania, and 29 miles in Potter County. Their taxes in New York for 1909 are on the 27 miles two thousand seven hundred and sixty seven dollars and thirty cents, while the taxes in Pennsylvania for 1909 on 29 miles was $407.14 under practically the same conditions. In other words they paid seven times as much in New York as Pennsylvania now they say is there any good reason why railroad property should not be assessed and pay State tax and local taxes in Pennsylvania as well as in New York State.

Mr. Nichols: There might have been a franchise tax in New York,—that is because of a special franchise tax. They say again assessment of New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company in the town of Hornby, New York, is for three and seven-tenths miles of roadbed valued at seventy-nine thousand five hundred and fifty dollars upon which is collected taxes for State, county, town and school purposes $1,657.66 or $450 per mile. In Pennsylvania this road would under a equalization of taxes, as contemplated by this bill pay on its 164 miles of roadbed $74,600, while now under the present inequitable and unfair distribution of the burden of taxation it pays but $12,758.44 or a total loss to Pennsylvania as against New York of $61,841.56. Why is this? and who is to blame?

Mr. Nichols: I don't see anybody is to blame in Pennsylvania unless they are assessed that kind of a tax the same as New York does and receive the same sort of complaints from the railroad. The question is as to the advisability of imposing a tax like that one when we are already paying a tax locally on this real estate. That is the question. We are already paying two taxes on that property. I don't see that Pennsylvania has any occasion to complain of what the railroads pay.

Mr. Brown: They tax stations and roadbeds, in other words they say that if that property was not used by the railroad it would be used for something else taxable and they think it should be taxed.

Mr. Nichols: I rather think Pennsylvania will not take such a position as that in reference to a strip of ground of that kind. But as far as the tax is concerned on the real estate locally, in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, in Pittsburgh everything is taxed there; and as for the other counties they are already paying a tax on the very property which these people think they should tax. It is taxed in another way. We come back then to the proposition which has been argued fully here, —whether the county is entitled to get some of this tax,— but if they are to get some of the tax it is not a proper thing to do to make us pay twice in order that they may get some of the money.

Mr. Brown: I assume if the counties are to receive what would be practically double taxes on this property your road would prefer to have it collected by the State rather than have the several assessors collect it.

Mr. Nichols: We haven't made any complaint about the present system.

Mr. Brown: In other words the railroad company is entirely satisfied with things as they are now.

Mr. Nichols: We have no complaint.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 19, 1912.

Meeting of the Committee held in the Chamber of Commerce, Keenan Building, Tuesday, Nov. 19, 1912.

Present: James P. McNichol, Chairman; Wm. H. Keyser, Wm. C. Sproul, Vice Chairman; James F. Woodward, Secretary and Treasurer; Milton W. Shreve, George E. Alter, Francis Shunk Brown, Esq., Counsel; Harold M. Irons, Esq., Assoc. Counsel; Josiah Smith, Asst. Secty.

Mr. McNichol: The Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Representatives will now be in session for the purpose of hearing the views of the different associations and corporations as to their ideas upon the proposed revision of the corporation laws and proposed suggestions as to taxation which would be in line of improvement and benefit to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Mr. Brown, the attorney, will outline the course of procedure of the committee and the committee will be governed by his desires in the matter.

MR. BROWN:

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Committee:

It might not be amiss, before we commerce this public hearing, to say a word as to the past service of this committee and its present purpose. All the gentlemen present who were here at the meeting in 1911 are familiar with the purpose then indicated; it is the same thing as at that time.

The legislature of 1909 passed a resolution authorizing the appointment of a committee consisting of three Senators and three members of the House of Representatives, for the purpose of considering a revision of the corporation and revenue laws of the Commonwealth. In pursuance of its duties, this committee held public meetings in the cities of Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Erie, Williamsport and Scranton, all of which meetings were largely attended. In addition to that, letters were sent to the number of fifty to seventy-five thousand to all the interests of the Commonwealth,—judges, lawyers, corporations, banks, trust companies, and all other interests that could possibly be affected by any revision or changes in these laws. The purpose of this committee was outlined in these communications and the various interests were requested to cooperate with it. After this a report was made to the legislature in which were many recommendations. Several of these (the most important ones) were adopted into the laws. It was seen that the work that was started could not be finished and it was deemed advisable to continue the committee which was done by resolution of May 23, 1911. This resolution was adopted and I will take the time to read it so that you may know just what its extent is.

(Reads resolution):

"Resolved, that the concurrent resolution approved May 13, 1909, entitled, 'A concurrent resolution providing for the appointment of a joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives to consider and report upon a revision of the laws of this Commonwealth relating to corporations and to revenue; for the employment of counsel and other necessary officers and employees and giving it authority to compel the attendance of persons and the production of books and papers,' be, and the same is hereby extended as follows: That the present President pro tempore of the Senate shall appoint three Senators, and the present speaker of the House of Representatives shall appoint three of its members, which shall constitute a joint committee, whose duty it shall be to consider the laws of this Commonwealth, relating to corporations and to revenue and the practical working thereof, and to report to the General Assembly in 1913 whatever changes may be deemed necessary therein, together with the draft of an act or acts of Assembly to accomplish said changes, and together with such recommendations as may be deemed necessary relative to the administration of existing laws or as to the apportionment of said suggested act or acts. Said Committee shall have power to elect its own chairman, to sit after the adjournment of the legislature, to employ legal counsel and such other officers and employees as may be needed to enable it to properly perform its duties as aforesaid; but its expenditures shall be limited to the amount provided therefor in the general appropriation bill to be passed at this session of the legislature and shall be paid out of the State Treasury upon vouchers signed by the chairman of said committee. Said Committee shall also have power to issue subpoenas, signed by its chairman, requiring the attendance of persons and the production of books and papers, as in its judgment will assist in the performance of its duties as aforesaid."

As to this last paragraph as to subpoenas, I may, in this connection, state that up to this present moment, the committee has not found it necessary to issue a subpoena for books and papers, and everyone came before us voluntarily. This resolution was incorporated in a letter, which reads:

"The committee is collecting data upon the formation, regulation and taxation of corporations and the appropriation of State revenues for all purposes, in this State, in all of the United States, by the Federal government, and by other nations. These subjects are being specially discussed and legislated upon at the present time throughout the world.

"The committee desires the co-operation of all interested in these subjects and requests your opinion as to any defects in the present laws of the Commonwealth, relating to the formation, regulation and taxation of corporations, associations, partnerships or individuals, the exemption of them or any of them from taxation, the appropriation of the Revenue of the State, and any changes therein which you may think necessary.

"You will notice that the Resolution requires a report to be made to the Legislature in 1913 and we therefore request an early reply, as it is important that all suggestions be received for consideration prior to the public meetings which the committee may hold. We should be glad to have from you the names and addresses of any persons whom you may know who are specially qualified to give to the committee information or assistance in the consideration of these most important subjects."

(Signed) Yours very truly,
JAMES F. WOODWARD,
Secretary.

Please reply to FRANCIS SHUNK BROWN, Counsel.

That which I have just read is a letter which was sent throughout this Commonwealth, in the last six months, to the number of fifty thousand, covering every possible interest which might be affected by any subject within the jurisdiction of this committee. We have received thereto hundreds of replies covering every possible subject as to the revision of the revenue and corporation laws. I mention these matters in order to outline to you what the committee has done.

Mr. McNichol: For the information of those gentlemen who have any other business to attend to, the committee will sit until two o'clock, take a recess until three o'clock, and sit after that until five-thirty.

A. LEO WEIL, representing manufacturers:

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Committee:

I hope you wont be frightened by these books and papers which I have before me here. I don't intend to read them; but they contain certain figures and data to which I desire to refer.

The point which I desire to touch upon, in connection with the Manufacturers' Association of Pittsburgh, of which I have the hoonr to be the representative at this time, is the question,—"should there be a tax imposed upon manufacturing corporations?"

The Manufacturers' Association of Pittsburgh has a membership of forty-odd manufacturing establishments employing in this community over ten thousand men and representing many millions of capital. It is an organization that has been for many years doing work in this community particularly in connection with the settlement and arbitration of disputes between manufacturers and members of the association and their employees. They have taken an active interest in all matters affecting the manufacturers, and in that capacity I am here as their representative today.

The proposition, as we understand it, (it has been suggested from various sources), is to recede from the policy heretofore adopted by the State of Pennsylvania, and to tax manufacturing corporations instead of exempting them from taxation. If the policy of the State is to be reversed, if it is a proposition to change that policy, naturally the question arises, "why?" Has the policy been tried and found wanting? or has that policy proved of inestimable value to this Commonwealth? Is there a need for money by the Commonwealth which must of necessity compel it to change this policy heretofore existing and in order to obtain that which it absolutely needs levy this tax on manufacturing corporations, even if the policy heretofore adopted has been found to have been a good one and one beneficial to the State?

I assume that this committee representing the legislature of the State of Pennsylvania realizes that the fact that a policy or law is old and tried and found to be true, is no reason alone why it should be changed, though there may be other legislatures and other sections in which that reason alone would prevail as calling loudly for a change. If this policy is to be changed, are our steel and iron industries in a position now different from that existing heretofore which warrants or demands this change? Are they better situated? Are they so situated, in other words, that heretofore, during the best times, it was a good policy to exempt them from taxation, and are they now so situated that that policy should be changed? What is the situation? I shall limit my remarks more particularily to that class of industry which affects this section of the State,—the iron and steel industry.

In the first place, just at the present moment, they are beset by a governmental investigation with reference to the combination, consolidation and organization under which the iron and steel industry at the present time is being conducted; and what the effect of this investigation may be, what effect the decision, when reached, will have upon the industry is a matter of conjecture. It is wholly left to prophecy. No man today can tell. We do know, however, that these investigations are in progress and that some result, good or bad, as the case may be,—or perhaps none,—will follow from such investigations, and the result of these investigations may not be known for at least some months, if not years, yet to come.

In the second place, we have been authoritatively advised that there is to be a revision of the tariff at the coming session of Congress, which has been called to convene for that purpose. We all know without argument that that affects, or will affect, the iron and steel industry in this State, and the thought is, "What revision will be made?" What changes will be made? Will these changes be deterimental? Will they be destructive or not? The answer must come from the future. The answer must come from the years. We have not yet arrived; and that must be reckoned with by these industries, these manufacturing institutions; and they cannot know whether or not the era of prosperity under which they have thriven, the era of prosperity under which they have risen to the vast proportions that they now have shall be continued or not.

In addition to these matters arising largely from the Federal government, we have this situation with reference to the iron and steel industries. Looking back over the history of our State and recalling what were the things that gave rise to the creation in Pennsylvania of this great industrial enterprise,—the natural advantages, we find here in Pennsylvania. for example, we used to take the coal almost from the side of the mill and put it in the furnaces, and we had the limestone immediately at hand, and the iron, and all these natural advantages contributed to the building up of the great iron and steel industry of this State and made it the great industrial State that it is today. Have we these advantages now? Compare these conditions existing at the time when our industrial supremacy arose and was created, with the conditions existing today. How is it today? We find different cities upon the lakes, such as Chicago, Cleveland, Buffalo and Erie today competing for these iron and steel industries. We find great iron and steel plants being constructed and operated in these lake cities. I find that the ore which we use which goes down the lakes can be delivered there much cheaper than here. We find they can obtain coal, many of them in juxta position to their plants. We find that many of these natural advantages under which our great industrial supremacy was created have been removed and that we are, today, in competition with and competing for existence with these other cities, all of them particularly well located with reference to the centers of population and sources of demand and the supply and transportation of the finished product. I say to you, gentlemen, when you consider these things, you will understand that the great manufacturing plants and manufacturing industries in this State, with reference to its ability to withstand competition,—that the State of Pennsylvania, in reference to its situation to command its share, as great a share as heretofore, in the manufacturing industries of the United States, is not so well situated as it was when our great industrial supremacy was created. It behooves us to consider whether or not, at this time, when, as I stated before, this federal investigation is going on, when we are about to have a revision of the tariff, when we are competing with other cities and other sections and other States for our industrial supremacy, it is wise for us to place an additional burden upon the manufacturing plants of this State. This is a fair argument and a reasonable argument to be addressed to those representing the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Mr. McNichol: These localities to which you referred,—do you know what the tone of the tax laws in these localities is?

Mr. Weil: No, in the time that was allotted to me to prepare this argument for this committee I didn't have time to examine into that question, though I started an examination and I will have great pleasure in the submission of a brief and data upon that particular subject. As far as my investigation went there are some of the cities that have such a tax and some not,—some of those I have given. I will not undertake to repeat.

Mr. McNichol: Particularly dwell upon those States adjacent to the Lakes.

Mr. Weil: Yes; Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, New York and West Virginia. I will compile these figures.

Mr. McNichol: Your reference to the stringent competition brought out this thought. Isn't it a fact that all walks of life have a more stringent competition than twenty years ago?

Mr. Weil: Well, isn't it a fact, also, that they are all made to pay their proportionate share of the taxes of the State?

Mr. Weil: Yes, but I maintain that the manufacturing corporation deserves special consideration. The best evidence that manufacturing is of benefit to a community is shown by the fact that communities very frequently give bonuses of land and money to induce manufacturers to come and locate.

Mr. McNichol: Are there any more prosperous people in the State than the manufacturing industry?

Mr. Weil: None, and I think it is largely due to the fostering care which the State has given to the manufacturer. And why shouldn't it? There is nothing in a State which so builds up a State as the manufacturing industry. You may select anything you choose, I care not what it is, and it does not contribute in the same proportion to the welfare of the community and the welfare of the whole State and the prosperity of the State as does the manufacturing plant. That is illustrated, if you please, by communities giving the manufacturing plants tracts of land and also giving them a bonus in order to induce them to locate in these respective localities, because they know the advantage that accrue from the location of such a plant in their section. It benefits every branch and department of that section, and, therefore, of the whole State; it benefits the banking and financial interests of the community; it benefits the merchant; it benefits the owner of real estate by reason of the price and value of real estate and its rental value; it benefits the farmer who sells his produce and his products of the community by reason of the increase in population by the bringing in of these industries; it benefits the laboring man, of course, by giving him further and additional employment and the competition for his services; it benefits the professional man in the community, whatever his profession may be. It benefits every department of that community. And when it confers such benefits as that, if the State has selected it especially for its discrimination (I don't want to mice words) in the imposition of taxes (and it is a discrimination, pure and simple; let us understand it exactly as it is) any tax upon any corporation is a tax discrimination, and not an equality of taxation by those having the power to tax. So, I don't mince words about it. When you say the relief of a manufacturing company from taxation is a discrimination in its favor, we say it is, and the imposition of a tax upon any corporation in the State is a discrimination against that corporation and not an equality of taxation of the State.

I think I am justified in saying that the position of our Commonwealth today among the States of the Union is largely due to its industrial development through these manufacturing plants. While we have our natural resources, while we have coal, while we have all these other notural products, nevertheless our development was brought about by the industrial plants in this State. Our place today, our supermacy today, among the States of these United States, industrially, is due, of course, to these manufacturing plants, and due to their development, and therefore I think they have a right to say to the Commonwealth, "We are entitled to your consideration." We are entitled, not only to your consideration, but to your gratitude, and we are entitled to be considered as a class separate and apart from other classes of corporations when it comes to the imposition of taxes.

Now, we come to our next proposition. The answer is frequently made, when an unjust claim is made, "I need the money." Does the State need the money? That is out of date and has no appliaction at all here, I believe. Take the Treasurer's report of last year. While there may be some bonded indebtedness, there is more than enough money in the sinking fund to meet all obligations. So we don't owe a dollar but what we have a balance in the sinking fund over and above our bonded indebtedness. The revenues of last year were $32,000,000. Of this amount over $18,000,000 was contributed by the corporations over sixty per cent. of the entire amount, under its present revenue laws, without any hardship I assume, and suggest, on the part of any corporation. That was more money than I need; it was more money than I could use properly. What was the result? Alll organizations made an assault upon the treasury in the demand for appropriations; they demanded over $19,000,000; nearly $20,0000,000, to be appropriated to private corporations. The appropriations made for 1911 and 1912 amounted to over $10,000,000,—$10,888,000,—to charitable institutions. Of this amount $3,425.000 (a little less than that amount) went to the State institutions and for which appropriations, of course, should be made. The semi-State institutions received about thirteen hundred and some odd thousands, or about $1,400,000. To private charitable organizations there was appropriated about six millions of dollars, one-fifth, pretty nearly, of the entire revenue of the State.

Mr. Sproul: What year was that for, Mr. Weil?

Mr. Weil: For 1911 and 1912. In addition to this,—I am only mentioning these facts,—you gentlemen, by reason of your position in the Legislature, know the assault that was made by these institutions upon the Legislature and upon the treasury; and didn't the committee having charge of the appropriations want to get these amounts? It is simply the knowledge of the fact that this money is for distribution that encourages these extravagant demands and extravagance in the administration of many of these institutions. In testimony taken before you last year the members of the Board of Charities testified that many of these hospitals, for example, had empty beds,—unoccupied; and all of us know, while they have these tremendous appropriations from the State, how little a man who is absolutely witnout means is enabled to avail himself of the benefits of these institutions,—many of them.

Mr. Brown: That is the exception, isn't it?

Mr. Weil: I don't know; I think it is the rule. I think there is not any one part of the administration of this State, or the affairs of this State, that is in worse shape or in worse condition than its charities, because the State has no control over it; the State has no power in controlling it. I don't care what your proposition may be. I don't care how able the men in charge of the State's end of this business may be (and this is not intended, understand me, as a reflection upon any of them) they haven't any power, they have no control. There is no way to remedy these things, except that it be recommended at the expiration of the two years when they come before the legislature again, that their appropriations be cut down. You gentlemen readily understand there is no power of control or regulation. The result is that the manner in which it is administered depends solely and entirely upon the board that happens to be in control at the time, devoting more or less of their time. While they may be very well meaning gentlemen, while those in control of the organization may be of the very highest type and character, with a voluntary orgaization of that kind devoting their time and attention in the manner in which they do, you cannot expect to get efficiency. You cannot get it in any activity. You get the results that we are getting now. But I submit that the State has a right to maintain these establishments provided, only, it controls and directs these establishments. If the duty of the State is to provide hospitals (the State is no beggar) why does it call upon anyone else to do this work. If the State is under obligation to provide these homes, why doesn't it do its duty and provide them, instead of calling upon private interests to do the work for it? If it has these millions to appropriate and has the right to appropriate them, why don't it establish these institutions and run them as it ought to do and as it has the right to do, and has the power to do? And then it can be held responsible for any extravagance if it exists and it can be held responsible for the proper conduct of these institutions. I predict that the day will come, and that soon, that the State will not give of the fund intrusted to it by the taxpayers of the State except in the maintenance of those institutions established and conducted by itself and for which it is responsible. If I want to give to charity, I have the right to give it to whomsoever I want, but you haven't any right to take money out of my pocket that you may bestow charity upon some private institution. You have a right, and it is your duty, in fact, as the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, to maintain these hospitals that are needed for the indigent sick and crippled who are unable to provide for themselves. You have a right to provide a home; you have a right, in my judgment, to provide for all that portion of a community unable to provide for itself, and it is your duty to do it as a State and not call upon private organizations and private benefactors and liberal minded people of the community to help do the work of the State.

A suggestion might also be made with reference to our need of money, as to why the State should distribute last year over $5,689,000 to the public schools, by counties and districts; this doesn't include the normal schools; only that portion that has anything to do with the department of education; and this is a return of money by the State to the counties by districts of this amount of money. The City of Pittsburgh and the City of Philadelphia,—all out counties, cities and boroughs are assessed locally for schools; the schools are maintained and operated out of the funds collected. Why did the State, then, collect this money, more than it needs for State purposes, and turn it back into the districts? As I said, last year, $5,689,000. Why should it do that? There may be, perhaps, a very few sections (and I doubt if there are any in the State) in which, by reason of the scattered population, by reason of the fact of the fewness of the population, are absolutely unable to provide for the instruction of the children of the district, so that they require some assistance from the State; but that is almost an incalculable quantity. I doubt it there are a half dozen such sections in the whole State of Pennsylvania, though there may be. Why should this money be distributed thus? Why should the State take the money in the first instance and then return it to these sections? I can state there is no reason therefor. Why shouldn't we have in that particular, as we should have in many other particulars, a complete measure of home rule, under which the school district shall collect its funds and run its public schools accordingly? I apprehend the reason therefor is that the State has more money than it knows what to do with.

Mr. Sproul: I think the reason was to make the system in the sections uniform and to give the State some control over that. Some districts had very short terms and spent very little money. The State felt that they all should be for a certain number of months in the year.

Mr. Weil: Wouldn't the laws of the Commonwealth take care of that, even though the State didn't contribute any cash to the treasury of that particular district? There should be this uniformity. If anything, I am in favor of increasing the power of regulation in that particular so as to give this uniformity.

Mr. Brown: Do you suppose all the manufacturers stand their share of that school tax?

Mr. Weil: The manufacturer stands his share of everything in the local community. The manufacturing plant in each community stands its share of all these running expenses and stands its share of the school tax. Of course there may be local laws in which there is a difference in this respect, but we don't ask for that. The manufacturers have no right to ask for that; but I know in many sections they stand their share of all local taxes for local purposes, for the local government, including the protection of the schools.

Br. Brown: Public service corporations pay all their taxes to the State; this is a very large proportion of the total amount collected. The local communities wouldn't get any of it but for this return you speak of for the schools and charities.

Mr. Weil: The public service corporation, by reason of its paying a capital stock tax to the State and a gross receipt tax,—all corporations, public service or otherwise,—they pay a capital stock tax and a gross receipt tax to the State and it is held that this is a tax on their property, and therefore they are exempted from all other taxation by the State; but that does not exempt them from a local tax which is not a State tax. It only exempts them from State taxes. Wherever there is purely a local tax, they would have to pay it.

Mr. Brown: There is no local tax on railroads, gas companies, telephone companies, etc.

Mr. Weil: I don't think there is, but there is no reason why it cannot be imposed. The restriction is now that it would be double taxation to be taxed locally and also for the State to tax this property, and there is no other restriction upon the power and ability of the State to impose a tax.

Now, as I sated before, all taxes upon corporations are discriminatory taxes. You might say that tax is upon the corporations as a class and all classes of corporations of that type are taxed. That is true. But in equity, we know that you cannot separate a corporation, for local purposes, from the men who own the stock of that corporation; and, therefore, when you tax the corporation, you are taxing these men who own the stock of that corporation for that purpose, and they are paying taxes more than other men owning other property. I don't object to it. I don't want to be understood as claiming that that is any reason why a tax cannot be imposed. I think it is right it should be. But let us get around to the argument advanced for it, that because these manufacturing corporations are corporations, therefore, when taxing other corporations we should tax these, because otherwise it would be a discriminatory tax, and my answer is that all taxes upon corporations are a discmimination and are discriminatory taxes. There are reasons why one corporation may be taxed, or one class of corporations may be taxed, just as the legislature has, in its wisdom, thought proper to do. You tax building and loan associations and the gross receipts of certain classes of corporations and you classify for the purpose of taxation in this way. So you have a perfect right to be charged with discrimination, or those who ask it, being charged with asking for discrimination to exclude altogether one class of corporations from taxation while taxing others. And that insn't a sound or just argument against the right to exclude manufacturing corporations from the imposition of this tax that has been proposed.

Now, I am taking up too much of this committee's time and will close with this suggestion: The organization of a corporation for manufacturing is a mere matter of convenience, not a matter of necessity. The organization of a corporation for most every other purpose under the laws of this Commonwealth and the Federal laws is a matter of necessity for the existance of that business; take your railroads, pipe line companies, and all kinds of organizations exercising the power of eminent domain,—they must be incorporated. The manufacturing companies,—our largest manufacturing corporations today,—are a mere development from an individual who built up the business or partnership, or the family that built up the business and has continued the business until, by reason of its magnitude, they have found it wise to incorporate. It is a mere manufacturing plant operated by individuals that could be operated without incorporation, and the corporation, therefore, involves nothing peculiar to that corporation from that of any other individual or aggregation of individuals conducting a manufacturing business. These corporations, therefore, stand in a class by themselves. There is no other principle or no other aspect by which you can consider them. They stand, as I have already explained and will not repeat, with reference to the manner in which they grew up and reasons for their incorporation and reasons why they should not become the subject of higher or greater burdens. They stand alone, all by themselves, in the great benefit and advantages which these organizations give to all in the locality in which they exist, and, therefore, both directly and indirectly, to the entire State. They have grown up here amongst us under this system of protection by the Federal government, and under this system of protection by the State government; and are you, or the State of Pennsylvania, going to add your voice to that of the remainder of this country at the present time, in denying that this policy of protection has been unwise and should be abandoned? If we do, what have we to say to those who believe that our whole policy of protection to industry has been unwise? Have we the right to ask a congress of the people of the United States to continue a policy which we, by our own act, have declared to be unwise? I submit that point for your careful consideration, as one which will be used against the State of Pennsylvania and the people of Pennsylvania when it comes to consider the question of whether or not the principles of protection are wise for the industries of these United States.

Mr. McNichol: I am very much in doubt as to whether it is wise, judging from the result of last November's election.

Mr. Weil: If the result of last November election is going to change our opinion and judgment I don't know where we would end.

Mr. McNichol: There is no danger of it changing us. It is simply a question of us taking notice of several things that occurred under other administrations to which the attention of this committee has been called.

Mr. Weil: I want to thank the committee for the attention given me during the length of time I have occupied; but the people I represent regard this question as one of the utmost importance, especially the question that it is not the psychological moment for any onslaught by the State when they are subject to these other conditions, and their sentiment is, I feel, that trouble is at hand. Consider all the other conditions existing and then add to them those which we may expect from the Federal government. Take the passage of one measure,—at least the agitation we have to pass (and I think we all agree this act will be passed) the Employers' Liability Act,—the minimum rates scale, the employers' insurance measures and all of these measures that are being agitated and will all affect the manufacturer and other industrial enterprises.

Mr. Brown: The insurance proposition and the liability proposition will not affect the manufacturer, because he will take his cost sheets and just add that much more to them to provide for these conditions.

Mr. Weil: Let us hope you are a prophet. And if this comes to pass that we will have the kind of a bill that will enable us to do it. That will probably be the result.

Mr. Brown: I cannot see where the manufacturer will have any apprehension from that point.

Mr. Weil: It will take them a length of time to adjust himself to the conditions.

Mr. Brown: He will very easily adjust himself to the conditions as to how to put it on his cost sheets.

Mr. Weil: I hope he will. There is so much of it, it is coming so quickly that they cannot readjust themselves immediately but we hope if given time they will be able to do so, and it will be a great deal better for all concerned; but don't let us add anything to their troubles until that time. I don't think it is the psychological moment.

Mr. Brown: For all these conditions to be piled into one?

Mr. Weil: And adding still another. That is my view of it. In other words, I think we all know that these manufacturing plants and industrial corporations are "the goose that has been laying the golden egg" for the State. Now, I don't believe the legislature of Pennsylvania ought to do anything that will hinder it, but we should let it lay its egg in peace, at least for a little longer, until we find out whether or not we can keep the goose where it is and can keep it laying.

Mr. Brown: Any questions I may ask you, Mr. Weil, do not indicate the opinion of myself or the committee. They are simply asked for the purpose of developing thought on the subject matter. Assuming, Mr. Weil, that there is need of more revenue in Pennsylvania, upon what interests would you levy taxes?

Mr. Weil: If I assume that there is need of more revenue in Pennsylvania, and I really wanted that revenue, I would simply enforce the laws as they exist and collect the tax that should be collected under the present law, and that is the tax upon personal property, of which, I venture to state, not one-half is collected in the State of Pennsylvania. Take the investigation in Lancaster County last year. There was a bank that failed, you recall the case, and the testimony was that the bank has certificates of deposit amounting to four hundred and some odd thousand dollars which were presented for payment, and yet there was only $22,000 turned in for taxation.

Mr. Smith of the Taxation Board here testified, you will recall, last year before your committee that not more than two-thirds, if two-thirds, of the personal property tax was collected that should be collected in the county of Allegheny.

Mr. Brown: In other words, all other taxes should be collected and only as a last resort, if at all, should the manufacturer be appealed to?

Mr. Weil: Yes, that is exactly my theory. If it becomes absolutely necessary to have money for the use of the State, then anything and everything in the State can, of course, be made to contribute; but when the manufacturers are of such inestimable value, they should be left to the last.

Mr. Brown: Isn't it a good rule that the burden of taxation should be largely borne by those who have the ability to do it? Don't the man who is the most able bear the heaviest burden?

Mr. Weil: Yes.

Mr. Brown: Would you apply that rule except to manufacturing corporations?

Mr. Weil: I would not apply it where the application of the rule would result in a greater loss than the benefits to be received from that cash.

Mr. Brown: Suppose we laid a tax of one mill, would you consider such a tax a prohibitive burden upon the manufacturing corporations,—a harmful burden?

Mr. Weil: It is not always the amount you collect. Manufacturers have been brought into this State and we have built up our manufacturing in the theory that we are absolved from taxation. Now, change that theory, change that by however small a levy you make in the beginning,—however small the tax is in the beginning,—and you will have an effect pretty nearly as bad as though you levied, in the beginning, a very much larger tax.

Mr. Brown: You think it would have a tendency to drive them out of the Commonwealth?

Mr. Weil: I don't believe it would drive them out,—those who are anchored here; but it would prevent any from coming in when they could just as well find another location where they would not have that burden.

Mr. Brown: Isn't it a fact Pennsylvania offers special facilities and is the cheapest place for the working man?

Mr. Weil: I have heard that said, but I have never seen it proven.

Mr. Brown: That is what they say about Philadelphia,—that it is the best place to live and attracts a very nice class of workingmen there.

You object to the appropriations of money to those institutions not under State control?

Mr. Weil: Yes.

Mr. Brown: Assuming it is the duty of the State to take care of,—say the blind,—would you build one institution for them?

Mr. Weil: If it only required one institution, I only would build one.

Mr. Brown: Do you think it would be fair to bring people from all over the State to this one institution away from their homes and people?

Mr. Weil: Yes, if they are people to be cared for by the State.

Mr. Brown: The same with the deaf mutes?

Mr. Weil: Yes, if they are people to be taken care of by the State,—by a State institution. This is one of the questions which should have very careful study.

Mr. Brown: The appropriations of the State have been an incentive to private contribution, which would not have been contributed had it not been for the State money.

Mr. Weil: I find, from examining the figures, that where they are getting a very large amount from the State that private contributions are not correspondingly large; on the contrary, the larger amount you get from the State, you will find, by examining the records of these institutions, the smaller the amount contributed by the individual.

Mr. Brown: Let me call your attention to the Western Pennsylvania Institution for the Blind. Average daily number supported, 131; number discharged or died during the year, ——; number remaining May 31, 1912, 131; normal capacity, 130. Now there is an instiution right here in your midst that is apparently filled to its capacity the year 'round. That institution has received from the State $45,500 for two years, or something over $22,000 a year. Its patients are supported at the rate of $7.29 a week.

Take the Allegheny General Hospital, the total number of beds was 375; number of patients treated during the year, 4,767; number of patients treated free during the year, 2,789; number treated partly free, 1,001; number of days hospital treatment, 108,571; total number of free hospital days, 63,969; cost per diem, $2.16; total number of beds occupied during the year, 297; number of beds occupied May 31, 1912, 293; and this hospital received $85,500 for two years, or a little over $42.500 a year. Do you think this money is spent philanthropically?

Mr. Weil: From the general results, we all know in this community that the Allegheny General Hospital is one of the best institutions we have.

Mr. Sproul: You will find that the things you speak of are the exception.

Mr. Brown: In passing throughout the State there was not a single complaint made against the management of any of the hospitals of the misappliance of any of the State's money. One doctor said the State should have control of all the institutions. When he was asked to place before us an instance of the misappliance of the State's money, he was unable to do so. I think it is fair to assert that the State's money is being fairly well used by these institutions.

Mr. Weil: From such examination as I have been able to make of records, and from such information as I have from certain institutions of which I have personal knowledge, what you say is true, as to some; perhaps as to many; but criticism is always toward the many.

Mr. Brown. Don't the manufacturers contribute very largely to the patients in these institutions?

Mr. Weil: Yes, the manufacturers contribute to the support of these institutions, and they ought to.

Mr. Brown: A great many accident cases are treated in these hospitals?

Mr. Weil: The State doesn't pay for them.

Mr. Brown: But doesn't it provide a place for the cases to be treated.

Mr. Weil: They provide a hospital for those who cannot afford to pay. The manufacturer, when he sends one of his men to the hospital, is willing to pay for it and does pay; but if they are being supported by the State and if the State has need of these hospitals for the benefit of the community, why should the individual pay?

Mr. Brown: In mining sections of this State, the conditions became so deplorable that it was found necessary to erect hospitals, that the patients could be treated, without waiting until the State would appropriate the money to build the hospitals. If the mine owners provided a place for the men who were injured in the mines, I would like to know in just what part of the State the manufacturers care for them?

Mr. Weil: I think right around Allegheny county you will find the majority of manufacturers, when men are injured in their plants, send them to the hospitals and pay for them.

Mr. Brown: Would it be too much to ask to provide us with a schedule of what the manufacturers around this vicinity do pay?

Mr. Weil: No, I will get that with pleasure. As to the mine owners to which you refer, you raise a different proposition from that which I discussed.

Mr. Brown: I was just taking the employer of labor in general.

Mr. Weil: You take in mining sections where the mines are being operated by corporations, we have an entirely different situation. They are not in a populous section. These mines usually are, and naturally must be, operated in the county, and in a place away from these free dispensaries and hospitals which obtain in centers of population. And where a place of this kind is necessary, the company itself must build it. Now you have a different proposition. Of course it would be right in these instances for the State to construct hospitals. That comes exactly within the line of my suggestion that this is a place where the character of those who are to be treated and their ability to pay is such that provision should be made by the State for the treatment and care of all such.

Mr. Brown: Your conditions out here are so different, I would like to have that information.

Mr. Weil: Judging from my own personal experience as counsel for a good many of these manufacturing corporations and a good many industrial plants, and having knowledge of a great many of which I do not have the pleasure of being connected with in any way, especially as counsel, I know it is a general practice or general rule, so general as to be alomst universal, that when a person is injured in any of these manufacturing plants, they are sent to the hospital and are treated; and I believe it is almost a universal rule, as far as my observation goes. I will be glad to collect all the data you have asked for and send it to you with the brief.

Mr. Sproul: There is one question I would like to ask. This next legislature will have to take up for consideration the question of the Federal Income Tax,—the amendment to the Federal Constitution which enables the government to levy an income tax. Is it your idea that Pennsylvania should approve that proposition? Have you given the matter any thought?

Mr. Weil: The Federal Income Tax?

Mr. Sproul: Yes.

Mr. Weil: I believe in the income tax.

Mr. Sproul: By the Federal government? Or should the State of Pennsylvania have this income? Should Pennsylvania, with its large income, submit to the income tax for the benefit of some of the other States that are not so fortunate?

Mr. Weil: I don't believe in the State surrendering to the Federal government any of its powers of taxation for any purpose. I believe in the State retaining its power of levying taxes.

Mr. Sproul: In view of the disposition of the country to look forward to various so-called progressive measures that are going to impose added burdens upon the States, don't you think Pennsylvania should preserve her powers of taxation?

Mr. Weil: I do. I think the Federal government has at the present time all the power that it needs for collecting of revenue for all purposes of the Federal government; and I think the State should retain and hold on to the powers it now possesses with reference to taxation. I would give up none of it unless I had to. And further than that, I think we are going a little too rapidly along the lines of imperialism, and it is about time to pull up our suspenders and find out where we are at.

MR. W. C. REITZ, Treas., Pittsburgh Steel Company.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee:

It has been the intention of the Pittsburgh Steel Company to file a brief, but unfortunately the party in charge of it went out of the city and the brief is not ready. Therefore, we would like to submit this brief to the Committee as soon as possible, if that is in order.

Mr. Brown: We shall be very glad to have it, Mr. Reitz.

ROBERT GARLAND, President, Garland Nut and Rivet Company:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee:

I would like to qualify a remark made here with reference to the exemption of machinery. I would like to say that while the City of Pittsburgh exempts this from local taxation, such is not the case throughout the boroughs around here and you must remember that the greatest part of our manufacturing is in the districts outside of the city proper. They don't exempt machinery in the boroughs, and that is where the large manufacturers hold forth. I desire to impress that upon your mind. It is only in the City proper that they exempt the machinery.

Mr. Brown: Your thought is that it should be exempted in the boroughs, too?

Mr. Garland: I thought you might misconstrue the idea. We pay in the city no local taxation, but in the boroughs, where the manufacturers are very large, we do pay.

I will ask permission of the Chairman to read a protest. (Reads):

We hereby enter protest against placing tax upon Pennsylvania Manufacturing Corporations for the reason that such tax would be an obstacle to the growth of our State, inasmuch as it would prevent the location of new industries, this being especially the case by reason of the fact that a number of the adjoining States, viz., New York, New Jersey and Delaware, are not so taxed.

Taxation, even if the tax is not burdensome, yet is a tax nevertheless, and might mean further taxation, so that this feature would be a deterring factor to investors looking toward the investing of capital in the State of Pennsylvania in manufacturing enterprises. The fact alone that Pennsylvania taxes its manufacturers, would be sufficient, in many cases, to drive away such intending parties who otherwise would look into the matter, with desire to locate. We have had some experience in this direction. New England manufacturers in iron and steel lines must move westward to get nearer the center of geographical location, and to be near the steel. We now refer to Hardware Manufacturing Companies and such like; in other words, what might be called finished lines, where iron and steel are a factor, and I might say that our State, and particularly the western section, is sadly in need of such manufacturers as those mentioned, and we can undoubtedly secure a large number of these with the added inducement of exemption from taxation.

The city of Pittsburgh, through its Industrial Development Commission, has been working along these lines, and one of the most important questions that is asked by the New England manufacturer is as to taxation. There are many manufacturers in other States looking for such a change of location who do not naturally look with favor upon a State which taxes its corporations, but, on the other hand, where manufacturing corporations are exempt from taxation, they immediately look into the matter, and are much more easily impressed.

The fact is that the State of Pennsylvania holds out one of the very strongest advertising features when it can say to manufacturers in other States looking for a central location, or to new capital looking for investment, "Here is a State that does not tax its manufacturing corporations."

The manufacturing corporations of Pennsylvania have made the State great, and we should be allowed to make it still greater, so that there will be no question as to its industrial supremacy for many future years.

It seems to us, therefore, that the legislature at Harrisburg should strongly object to any steps which would in the slightest degree curtail the increased growth of manufacturing industries in our State. Every new industry means more buildings, with the general improvements consequent thereto; more employment of labor and more internal wealth for our State, and every new addition to of extension of our manufacturing interests is a great help to our wholesale or jobbing and our retail mechantile interests.

JOHN J. JACKSON, Representing Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

I wish to submit a brief on behalf of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, Westinghouse Air Brake Company, Westinghouse Machine Company, Union Switch and Signal Company, Pittsburgh Meter Company and the R. D. Nuttall Company, all manufacturing industries of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

These industries employ approximately an average of 35,000 people daily; they have built cities and villages around their respective plants; their employees with their families easily represent a population of 150,000.

The stockholders in these concerns number approximately 15,000, widely scattered throughout the country.

These companies and their employees are therefore vitally interested in the work of your committee, and respectfully ask that the views represented here be given careful consideration.

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, ranging thirty-second in size, but second in population, is essentially a manufacturing State. Her population in 1910 was 7,665,111 of which 1,002,171, or about 15 per cent. were engaged in or connected with manufacturing concerns. These concerns in that year paid out to employees $566,524,000.

It is with no little pride that we call attention to the fact that in the vicinity of Pittsburgh are located some of the largest industrial enterprises in Pennsylvania, if not in the world.

We desire to say at the outset that we are not insensible to the growing needs of our great Commonwealth, and are not presenting out views as a protest against our just share of taxation, but believe that our actual experience and judgment in matters of taxation will be helpful to your Committee.

No one can doubt but that the great wealth and prestige of our Commonwealth has been brought about by the encouragement given manufacturing concerns. Manufacturers, more than any other class, are creators of wealth. Even the farmer takes the soil as he finds it, tills it carefully, and it produces naturally for him. But the manufacturer has delved into the deepest recesses of the earth and taken the coal and ore and oil and gas, and out of these elements has wrought iron and steel and other products and added more than any other class to the wealth of the State. Not only that, but every manufacturing industry has created wealth by enhancing the value of all real estate in its immediate vicinity.

TAXES GENERALLY.

In every State there are two kinds of taxes to be considered: one for local needs—as the city and county taxes; the other for State purposes, and we understand the latter is the subject of your investigation.

The main reliance of most States for taxation purposes is a tax upon the value of property, both real and personal. In other words, most States have a tax for State purposes based upon the value of the same property that the city and county use for their taxation purposes, and while the personal property of individuals has sometimes been difficult of ascertainment, this method of taxation has generally been adhered to, and in most cases been fairly successful.

PENNSLVANIA SYSTEM.

But this Commonwealth derives its revenue not from a tax upon the value of real and personal property, but from other specific taxes distinct from local taxes, as for instance, —tax on capital stock, corporate loans, gross receipts or transportation, transmission and electric light companies, bank stock, etc. In other words, the subject of State and local taxes are entirely distinct. Pennsylvania was the first State to levy taxes directly upon corporations, and now a large per centage of the State revenue is derived from this source. For instance, in 1910 the total revenue of the State amounted to $28,895,446.42, of which $17,210,422.85 was paid by corporations. We are not saying that this method of taxation is not a good one for the State, but will endeavor to show that there is a point beyond which the State cannot go in taxing corporations without working injury to both corporations and the State.

We desire to cover briefly two points in the matter of taxation:

1. That the capital stock of subsidiary companies doing business in other States, whose business is strictly in aid of the manufacturing operations of the Pennsylvania corporation should be exempt.

2. That the law exempting manufacturing corporations is just and should be maintained as at present.

1.

TAXATION OF CAPITAL STOCK OF SUBSIDIARY COMPANIES.

It frequently happens that manufacturing corporations have subsidiary companies in other States that are a part and parcel of the manufacturing company's business, but which are separate corporations and held by the parent company in this State through ownership of the capital stock of such subsidiary company. This State, of course, cannot tax the property of the subsidiary corporation already taxed in another State, but it does tax the capital stock of such subsidiary corporation held by the parent corporation in Pennsylvania, and thereby enforces double taxation.

Take a concrete example: The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company owns a mica mine and plant in another State, the mica therefrom being used solely for the manufacturing of electrical apparatus, this mica mining enterprise being an actual part of the company's manufacturing business. So long as the Westinghouse Company owns this property outright as a part of its assets the State of Pennsylvania cannot tax this mining property located in another State, and the Westinghouse Company pays the taxes in the outside State, both State and local, upon its real estate and personal property comprising such mine.

For business reasons, the Westinghouse Company organizes this mining property into a corporation, and instead of holding the property outright, as before stated, now holds it through ownership of the capital stock of the mica mining company. The Westinghouse Company must pay the same tax both State and local, in the outside State, but the State of Pennsylvania now steps in and taxes the capital stock of the mica mining corporation owned by the Westinghouse Company. By what magic, without change of conditions, is this double taxation justified? This property is not subject to State tax in Pennsylvania when owned outright by the Westinghouse Comapny and located in the outside State, then why should it be taxed in Pennsylvania when owned through the ownership of the capital stock of such mining corporation? It is plain to see that the law in this case compels the payment of double taxes,—one being paid upon the property itself in the State where the mining corporation is organized, and the other upon the capital stock of the mining corporation in the State of Pennsylvania.

Many manufacturing concerns, and the large steel companies are not able to secure all the raw material needed for their use in manufacturing within this State and are forced to the necessity of organizing separate subsidiary corporations in outside States to hold the ownership of raw materials, or to carry on manufacturing operations in localities perhaps more favorable for labor, and yet through the law, as it now stands, are obliged to pay thousand of dollars in double taxation.

We believe the law should be amended so that the exemption would include so much of the capital stock of corporations organized for manufacturing purposes which is invested, and actually and exclusively employed in carrying on manufacturing without the State when strictly in aid of the Pennsylvania company's manufacturing operations and upon which the manufacturing company pays taxes in such outside State.

II

EXEMPTION OF MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS.

There seems to be a general impression that because manufacturing companies are spoken of as being exempt in Pennsylvania that they are really paying no tax.

TOTAL TAX PAID BY CORPORATIONS.

We have already shown that the corporations paid in 1910—$17,210,422.85 of a total of $28,895,446.42. In this same year the amount collected on real estate of corporations other than railroads was $9,450,618.51. The amount collected on real estate outside of railroads was $2,052,709.58. It will be seen from this that the corporations paid in 1910, $17,210,422.85, State tax, and $11,503,328.09 local tax on real estate, or a total of $28,713,750,94. This is within $181,695.48 of the total tax for State purposes. It will be thus seen that if you exempted the corporations from any local real estate tax, and they paid the amount of this real estate tax into the State Treasury, together with their present State tax, they would practically pay the entire revenue of the State.

TAX PAID BY MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS.

Manufacturing corporations paid into the State Treasury in the year 1910 a tax of $1,200,230.36, and leaving out of consideration the amount received from financial corporations and associations and foreign insurance companies, this tax paid by manufacturing corporations represents approximately ten per cent. of the total tax paid by corporations of a similar class. This amount, you must remember, is paid with the exemption on. In other words, to put it another way, the manufacturing corporation with the exemption o are paying the next to the highest tax of any class of corporations in the State, being only exceeded by the railway of the State which pay the largest tax.

LOCAL TAXES PAID BY MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS.

Not only are manufacturing corporations paying the next to the largest State tax, but manufacturing corporations pay the same tax on real estate as the farmer or others, and included in real estate under the law in most sections is the valuation of machinery used in manufacture. We will not, however, include the valuation of machinery as a part of real estate in the figures here given. We have already shown the amount of the tax ($11,503,328.09) paid by all corporations upon real estate. Let us now see what taxes manufacturing corporations are paying upon real estate. We are obliged to take the census figures for the year 1900, as the figures for 1910 are not yet available:

In 1900 the total value of farm property in Pennsylvania was $898,272,750.00.

In 1900 the total value of the real estate owned by manufacturing corporations (exclusive of machinery taxed as real estate) was $375,804,375.00.

You will see by this valuation that under the so-called exemption the manufacturing corporations of this State are paying nearly one-half as much tax upon real estate as the farmers themselves, in addition to the next largest State tax.

If manufacturing corporations now pay a local tax on a total of $375,804,375 of real estate, and you should take away the exemption on capital stock of manufacturing corporations, then surely it would be double taxation to be taxed on the capital stock representing this amount of real estate owned by manufacturing corporations on which they already pay the local real estate tax.

We have given these statistics, which can be verified from the Auditor General's report of this Commonwealth, and the United States census reports, as showing the taxes which manufacturing corporations are actually paying under the present law, and as being the best reason for leaving the exemption law as it is now. There are, however other reasons for the MAINTENANCE OF THE PRESENT LAW.

For twenty-five years this law exempting manufacturing corporations has been upon the statute books, and has been the controlling factor in the industrial supremacy which the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania now enjoys. Before an industry can be built up it is necessary to enlist the aid of capital, and capital has heretofore flowed into this State for manufacturing and commercial enterprises because it has felt safe under the protection of this law. Should a law be enacted taking away this exemption, capital will become timid, and when capital loses confidence you strike at the very root of industrial enterprise. Recently, we are informed, legislators of other States have been writing to some of the large corporations in Pennsylvania asking for a copy of this law that has made our State so successful. Yet, in the face of this, we are discussing a change.

Has Pennsylvania now any natural advantages over other States? We answer, no. This may not be true of other industries, or of former times, but the industries we represent do not need to be located in Pennsylvania. We do not use gas, coal or oil in the products which we manufacture. Surely this State has no advantage in water transportation, and little competition in railway facilities. Then, why are we here? We are here because this Commonwealth by this law has encouraged her people to engage in manufacturing, and just so surely as this law is changed, and other States upon the border of our Commonwealth enact more favorable laws, so surely will the manufacturing corporations seek those States for the carrying on of their enterprises. We do not say that the industries we represent would leave this Commonwealth, because their interests are here, and are identified with the growth of this Commonwealth, but we do say that the effect of any change in this law will prevent other manufacturers from coming here, and will cause a large number of others to leave the borders of our State.

The argument is made that a small tax, like, for instance, one mill, would make little difference, but we call attention to the fact that in these days of fierce competition a small tax would put many manufacturers at the mercy of their more favored competitors in States where such a tax does not exist. And then, too, as before indicated, while the tax at first might be small, it is in reality the entering wedge for further legislation and strikes at the very foundation of all industry in that it discourages capital, without which manufacturing concerns are powerless.

One of our companies is now about to organize a subsidiary manufacturing company in this State. Its officers are being importuned by other States to locate within their borders, many of them offering free manufacturing sites, free fuel for a period, and exemption even from local taxation; and if this law is changed it becomes a serious question whether a new corporation would be justified in locating in this State.

Is it good for a State to have manufacturing concerns prosper? The answer is in the wealth actually created in the cities and villages built up around these industries; in the homes owned by the working men; in the employment furnished for thousands, and the means of subsistence for the masses. After all, what constitutes a State? Nothing, in the last analysis, but the people themselves; and when you find the masses of the people happy and prosperous, the State likewise flourishes.

If you pass a law taking away this exemption, those States bordering upon the Great Lakes and the seaboard States are going to take precedence over Pennsylvania in the matter of manufacturers; and even now in many of these districts it is far easier to obtain skilled labor than in Pennsylvania.

Another thing you must bear in mind: That the stock in manufacturing corporations is largely owned by individuals in Pennsylvania, and if you do anything to cripple industries in which they are stockholders, in just so far you cripple the individuals owning these industries. We can see no logical reason for changing this law exempting capital stock. Supposing that one of these manufacturing industries is owned by an individual in his own right; certainly he pays no capital stock tax, and he pays only those taxes—county, city or borough—which any other individual engaged in business is paying. Why, then, simply because that same business is owned by a corporation, which is merely a number of individuals for the combined use of their separate capital, should a corporation be called upon to pay an additional tax?

Another thing, the Commonwealth is making no crying demand for more revenue. Her debt is paid or provided for. This fact certainly argues for no change in the law that more than anything else has made her an exception among the States.

We maintain that when the State enacted this law exempting manufacturing corporations from a tax on capital stock it made, in effect, a contract with those manufacturing corporations who either started up here or came within the borders of this Commonwealth. That contract, in effect, assured them that by dint of their efforts and capital if they built up industries here they would not be taxed by the State. Through early struggles and unprofitable years, these great industries were established, bringing finally prosperity not only to their stockholders, but to the banks, monied institutions and stores of their district, and to thousands of employees—when the State breaks its contract and says "we will take away this element that has made you successful." Such a course may be legal, but it is not morally right.

In our humble judgment the removal of this exemption can only result in two things: either manufacturing corporations will be obliged to find some way of legally avoiding such a law (which is always to be discouraged) or else grass will grow in the streets of some of these manufacturing centers.

J. W. KINNEAR, Esq., Representing the Firth-Stirling Steel Company.

Mr. Chairman and Committee of the Legislature:

I just wish to state that in 1907 there was an act introduced in the Senate and House of Representatives, proposing a tax on manufacturing corporations, and at this time this Chamber of Commerce went on record as protesting against such action, and in 1911 we confirmed this opposition. I wish to file with your Secretary a copy of the report, after reading it. I think that all applies to the situation. (Reads)

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON LEGISLATION.

Recommending disapproval of Rodgers Bill introduced in the Senate and Endsley Bill introduced in House of Representatives, providing for taxing manufacturing companies.

ADOPTED APRIL 11th, 1907.

To the Chamber of Commerce: (Pittsburgh)

Regarding the two bills for taxation of manufacturing companies now before the legislature, your committee on legislation submits the following report:

Two bills, one providing for the taxation of all manufacturing companies within the Commonwealth, one mill on each dollar of the actual value of the capital stock, and the other providing for a graded taxation of one mill on a capital of $25,000 or less; two mills on a capital of more than $25,000 and not exceeding $100,000; three mills on a capital of $100,000 and not exceeding $500,000; four mills on a capital of $500,00 and not exceeding $1,000,000; and five mills on a capital of $1,000,000, are now pending in the Legislature.

The passage of either one of these bills would mean a departure from the policy heretofore maintained in this State. That policy has been the fostering and encouraging of manufacturing corporations which saw fit to locate within our State, providing employment for our citizens, converting our raw materials into finished product, and thus increasing the commerce of Pennsylvania until today it ranks among the foremost manufacturing States of the Union.

Under this policy many manufacturing plants have located within our boundaries, which have added largely to our wealth and prosperity.

The Pittsburgh district has been benefitted by the location of many manufacturing institutions in Western Pennsylvania, and this district will feel the effects of the passage of either one of these bills more perhaps than any other district of the State.

One of the bills, referring to previous legislation, contains the following statement:

"Whereas the purpose of the above mentioned acts, viz., to encourage manufacturing in this State and to give employment to our citizens, appears to have been accomplished to the extent contemplated by the Legislature."

This is given as a reason why manufacturing corporations should now be taxed. To your Committee this is a reason why manufacturing corporations should not be taxed. Many of them have located within our State under that policy, which provided for the protection of manufacturing industries, and to your Committee it seems unjust and unfair to subject them now to any taxation aside from the regular tax which they are required to pay under the law upon their real estate and personal property.

The balance in the State Treasury March 30th, 1906, was $11,439,943,00. The Sinking Fund report for December 1, 1905, shows that the net State debt was only $122,958.09. From these figures, it does not appear that any necessity exists for increasing the revenues of the State, which would warrant the tax provided for in the foregoing bills.

Large accumulations of wealth in the Treasury of the State are not only unnecessary, but impolitic, as they are a constant temptation to extravagance, if not worse offenses, on the part of public officials.

It is not only the amount of taxation, but the principle that is objectionable. The bill providing for a tax of one mill is less objectionable, so far as the amount is concerned, than the bill providing for the graded taxation; but either bill marks the departure from the old policy under which we have so greatly prospered, and will become the opening wedge for taxation of our manufacturing industries in the future, which will undoubtedly prove deterimental to our State, and especially to the Pittsburgh district.

Your Committee would, therefore, recommend that a communication be sent to our representatives at Harrisburg, asking them to use their influence in defeating the measures above referred to, and that we co-operate in any way we can with those who are endeavoring to secure the defeat of the bills above mentioned.

H. K. SIEBENECK,
JOHN M. GOEHRING,
S. W. CUNNINGHAM,
GALEN C. HARTMAN,
JAMES W. KINNEAR, Chairman.
Committee on Legislation.

This report prepared by J. W. Kinnear, Esq.

I wish to read also a brief of protest, which will take me about two minutes. Some of these reasons are undoubtedly the reasons you have heard over and over, but may be cited from a different point of view. (Reads.)

"The Firth-Sterling Steel Company, a corporation of the State of Pennsylvania, having its domicile in McKeesport, and employing about five hundred men, desires to enter its protest against taxing the capital stock of manufacturing corporations of the State of Pennsylvania, for the following reasons:

First. The manufacturing interests of Pennsylvania have become great largely because the stock of manufacturing corporations has been exempt from taxation.

Second. Many manufacturing companies have located in this State because of this exemption from taxation, and it would be mainfestly unfair, after their large expenditures in locating here to tax them.

Third. Owing to the large deposits of iron ore on the upper Great Lakes, Western Pennsylvania is now having all it can do to maintain its position, to say nothing of the supremacy in iron and steel manufacturing, and the adding of a State tax at this time would undoubtedly result in Pennsylvania losing its position in this great line of manufacturing.

Fourth. The great commercial and banking business of Western Pennsylvania is the result of its manufacturing interests; in other words, the manufacturing interests of Pennsylvania, in furnishing work and keeping in circulation great sums of money, have made the commercial and banking business of the State prosperous, and any legislation detrimental to the manufacturing interests of our State will be detrimental to the commercial and banking interests as well.

Fifth. Many cities in other States are offering free manufacturing sites and even bonuses to manufacturing companies which will locate near their cities. These offers have already caused many manufacturing plants to leave our State. Should the stock of manufacturing companies be taxed in Pennsylvania, many others will sooner or later remove to other States, and the business of the whole section will be affected by such removals.

Sixth. The stock of manufacturing companies should not be taxed simply because banking and commercial companies are taxed for the reason that the banking and commercial companies are largely dependent for their prosperity upon the manufacturing interests. This is especially true in the Pittsburgh district where we have perhaps a larger banking capital than any city in the United States, excepting New York.

Seventh. We believe that in the end, the State will receive larger revenues by pursuing its present policy of exempting the stock of manufacturing corporations from taxation than by imposing and maintaining such taxation.

PENNSYLVANIA GLASS ASSOCIATION, represented by Mr. Knox.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee:

I am here as President of the Pennsylvania Glass Association, an unincorporated association in Pennsylvania which represents practically fifty per cent of the glass manufacturers of the Pennsylvania district, representing a considerable sum of money and the employment of very many hands. We were represented before your committee some little time ago, and a brief was submitted by Mr. Harry J. Shoemaker, of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association; and I may state, as President of the Pennsylvania Glass Association, we are in favor of everything in that brief. As to the matter of taxing manufacturing corporations, I can only emphasize what has been said. If an entering wedge goes into the proposition, it will throw us back quite considerable, and after that we may not be able to get back the prestige of Pennsylvania that has been built up. Pennsylvania went on record some twenty or twenty-five years ago in making a definite and positive statement that is would take care of such manufacturing corporations which would be a benefit to them and to the community at large; and there is no question in my mind that when this matter comes before your board that you will realize that the manufacturing corporations are the ones that made Pennsylvania the great industrial State she is, and I would like to file a vigorous protest in behalf of the Glass Associtaions against any tax on the capital stock of corporations.

MR. W. S. KIEHL, Asst. to President, Jones and Laughlin Steel Company.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee: I am a director of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Company and other various subsidiaries belonging to it. I would like to answer Mr. Brown, as to his inquiry as to whether the one most able to pay the tax pays it,—and they do—

Mr. Brown: The State of Pennsylvania levies a tax of four mills on moneys at interest. You take the case of a scrub woman that has $1,000 at interest; do you think she is as able to pay that four mills tax as the Jones and Laughlin Steel Company is to pay a slight tax on the capital stock of their company?

Mr. Kiehl: No, I hope not; I wouldn't claim that. I would reply what Mr. Garland said as to the taxation of machinery. He told you it didn't apply to the boroughs, but it applied to the city proper;—the exemption is in the city. That doesn't mean much; because the assessors of the City of Pittsburgh, in order to encourage manufacturers, made a very liberal allowance on the machinery and so, when the tax on machinery was taken off it didn't take off very much. A manufacturing plant would cost say $5,000,000. They would probably assess them at a half million, so when it was taken off, not very much was taken off.

I want to make a few remarks and submit a brief, after reading it. Following the establishment of a plant in Gary, Indiana, and following the agitation regarding manufacturing plants in Pennsylvania, from time to time, I would receive letters asking we locate in Minnesota, Michigan, New Jersey,—even Ohio has pointed out its advantages,—if we thought of going out of Pennsylvania. I received a letter from the Secretary of the ———— Manufacturers' Association. He starts out by saying, "There has been an agitation for some time in ————' for a revision of the tax laws so for as they affect manufacturing corporations. During discussion our attention was called to the Pennsylvania system of taxation, and we are disposed to think that the Pennsylvania system is growing in favor here." I am not suggesting that we leave Pennsylvania; while we are importuned to do so, we have no idea of doing it; but we would like to be treated as well as other States propose to treat us. Take the case of two towns similarly located with similar facilities, one of them giving out that there will be free manufacturing sites and that there will be no taxes for a number of years, and the other taking the position that they will not hold out any inducements. There's no question which town will flourish. You go to New York on the day train,—you see both sides of the railroad tracks lined with manufacturing plants, due to the liberal laws regarding manufacturers in the State of New Jersey. New York isn't so liberal and they go over to New Jersey. I don't think you need any further argument as to that.

I don't quite agree with the suggestion as to the cost of the employers' insurance for injured employes being put on the cost of some products of the manufacturer. It seems to be in the air that there will be an employers' insurance measure for injured employes; and this money, if it comes to pass (I don't say we are in favor of this) could be better used for paying injured employes than being paid to the State as a tax. We don't have accident insurance. We don't want anyone to come between ourselves and our employes. We try to teach them that they can get better treatment by coming to us than they can through any other agency; we want to preserve that. I would like to say that we feel a perhaps pardonable pride in that we employ in the State of Pennsylvania 15,000 employes, and that perhaps 75,000 to 100,000 are dependent upon our pay roll. I don't say we don't shy at being taxed. We pay for every working day in the year over 1,100 dollars a day, tax to the State of Pennsylvania as capital stock tax and to the various municipalities for local taxes; almost 1,000 dollars for every working day in the year goes directly to the State of Pennsylvania—

Mr. Brown: What is the capital stock tax?

Mr. Kiehl: The capital stock tax would be about one-quarter of the total amount. We pay a large amount on the capital that is not invested in manufacturing. Where we own stock in a corporation that controls our ore deposits in the Northwest, the State of Pennsylvania taxes us on this amount invested. This is taxed in the State of Minnesota.

Mr. Brown: But not in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Kiehl: It is taxed in Pennsylvania and in the State of Minnesota; it is doubly taxed.

Mr. Brown: That is an investment?

Mr. Kiehl: No, it is not; it is simply the holding of ore in another State by a subsidiary corporation.

Mr. Brown: You are taxed upon securities you hold in another corporation?

Mr. Kiehl: Yes, but it is our own; it is necessary for properly carrying on our business. Why should we pay a capital stock tax on that corporation to the State of Pennsylvania because it is an investment? (Reads.)

"In response to your invitation, the Jones and Laughlin Steel Company, one of the manufacturing corporations of Pennsylvania, appears before you and submits the following general statement, which is limited to manufacturing corporations:

While we cannot hope to give you any new or valuable information regarding the general subject of taxation, we are able to tell you how the burden bears by reason of taxes we are obliged to pay from year to year.

In addition to taxes imposed by the State, we are assessed with city, county, borough and township taxes, levied on our real estate and improvements, and, also, with a United States government tax of one (1) per centum on net earnings.

This company and its different subsidiary companies, organized for the purpose of carrying on its business properly, pay annually to the State a large amount of State taxes; this is not all of its payments, as it pays about three times as much for local purposes to the counties, cities, boroughs and townships in this State in which its mills and industries are located, and, also, in addition, pays large amounts of taxes to and in other States.

For about twenty-seven years the Legislature of Pennsylvania has in its wisdom encouraged its own manufacturers to establish and enlarge themselves and has induced manufacturing capital from other States to settle here by exempting from taxation such part of their capital as is used strictly in manufacturing. That this has been a wise and beneficent policy, the pre-eminence of Pennsylvania as a manufacturing State and its great increase in wealth and population fully demonstrate.

The State is a gainer by reason of the fact that the encouragement heretofore given manufacturing corporations has enabled them to establish themselves and this encouragement should be extended so that the manufacturers will feel free to grow and expand. It is equally true that a burdensome State tax would greatly hinder their expansion and growth.

The direct benefit of the State from exemption of capital employed in manufacturing arises by reason of the fact that prosperous manufacturing conditions not only give rise to the demand for additional corporations or firms to carry on the business of the individuals associated with manufacturing concerns which will pay taxes to the State, but, also, increase the prosperity and standing of other business institutions within the limits of the State.

The examination of the accounts and analysis of the sources of the revenue will show, we believe, that the State received seventy-five (75) per centum of its total revenue from corporations and that of the total received less than twenty (20) per centum is required to keep in motion the machinery of the Commonwealth; the remainder as existing at present should be more than ample for the requirements of appropriations, provided, they are administered in a business-like manner. However, the burden of taxation to manufacturing corporations is shown by the fact that certain municipalities are willing to exempt corporations who will locate within their boundaries from the payment of taxes for a number of years. Local taxes are a great burden to manufacturing corporations, especially those that are located within city limits; the tendency to constantly increase taxes on land and improvements will be in time to force the removal of plants.

The present system of taxation provides and should be limited to sufficient revenue for the needs of the Commonwealth of the standing of ours economically and efficiently administered, and, in our judgment, that part thereof, relating to manufacturing corporations should not be changed.

Notwithstanding the fact that this is a Commission to consider and report upon a revision of the revenue laws of Pennsylvania, it seems to us the greater question is not whether more taxes should be provided or whether there should be a distribution of the payment of the present or a greater amount of taxes between manufacturing and non-manufacturing corporations, but, rather, the question is how to subserve the best interest of the State in general and this, we claim, will be fully met by the constant encouragement of manufacturing institutions within its borders."

JONES AND LAUGHLIN STEEL CO.

Now, gentlemen, as to why you didn't place a tax on manufacuring corporations, your sufficient reason will be that you didn't because you thought it was for the best interest of the State not to do so.

MR. T. J. GILLESPIE, Secty. and Treas., Lockhart Iron and Steel Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee: I would like, as preliminary to what I want to say and what I want to read, to say that as a manufacturer here today, I don't think Mr. Weil represented the views of by any means all of us as to the policy of the State towards the charitable institutions and towards its schools. In order that there may be no misunderstanding, I want to say personally I think that the policy of the State toward its charitable institutions and towards its public schools has been admirable. I do not mean to say it cannot be improved. I think it can. There are methods that may improve it. It is shown that we manufacturers of this district have contributed very largely and are contributing very largely to the support of these institutions which are also receiving State aid; and the policy of asking the local people to contribute largely to the support of the institutions that receive State aid, I think, is an admirable one, and should be continued. But I am submitting this for myself. Therefore, I want to say further that the manufacturers of this district,—and I have no doubt, of all districts in the State of Pennsylvania,—have contributed largely, either by their individuals or from their corporate funds towards the building and support of these institutions.

Our own corporation has contributed to the support of the local institution which could not be in existence if it were not for the aid rendered by the State, and it would not be in existence if it had not been for the contributions made by the local interests; and so that you may understand that Mr. Weil's statement is not the statement of all the manufacturers represented here today, I want to put myself on record.

Representing the Lockhart Iron and Steel Company, we desire to enter our emphatic protest against any change in the policy exempting manufacturing corporations from State taxation, for the following reasons:

First. Under the present policy covering the last twenty-five years, the growth of the manufacturing industries of the State has been exceedingly rapid. This growth has been encouraged by the State policy of exemption from State taxation, and any change in this policy would be unfair to those who have been induced to invest their capital with the expectation that it would be permanent.

Second. No industries contribute so largely to the growth of our State in population, increased value of property subject to local taxation, the development of the diversified interests which go to make up a manufacturing community and the extension of public service corporations, which are largely subject to State tax, and it is, therefore, unwise by a change of the present policy, to discourage the increase of such manufacturing corporations.

Third. These corporations receive no special value from the State other than the right to organize, and this is sufficiently taxed now in the provisions for bonus on capital stock.

Fourth. There is now no State tax on real estate in Pennsylvania. Therefore, the claim that is made that "real estate bears an undue burden of taxation," is unwarranted as respects manufacturing corporations. They pay their full share of local taxation on real estate, the same as all other property owners.

Fifth. The national government now taxes the profits of corporations, and the proposed workmen's compensation Act will impose additional obligations upon manufacturers, the extent of which is at present problematical. Any additional burden placed upon them is, therefore, unwise and unwarranted. We believe the present policy has proven itself to be eminently fair and wise, and we, therefore, respectfully urge upon you that you recommend its continuance so far as applies to the exemption of manufacturing corporations from State tax.

You will note, I don't say it will drive out manufacturing corporations. A corporation that has invested its money in this State, that has its buildings and real estate, cannot go out; it would require a great amount of unjust taxation to drive corporations that are already in existence out of the State, but you will stop the encouragement given to manufacturing corporations to come into the State, especially where they can get special inducements in the way of bonuses and exemption from taxation.

Reference has been made to the exemption in the City of Pittsburgh and in some other cities of machinery; and instead of this being an argument in favor of the additional tax, I submit it is an argument against it. If the City of Pittsburgh and the City of Philadelphia, and other cities in the State find it so advisable to encourage manufacturing corporations as to exempt them from taxation on machinery, why isn't it a good policy for the State to continue this exemption from the State taxation? The argument is in favor of the position we take.

Now, in regard to this workmen's compensation law. So far as I know, there is a general concensus of opinion in favor of such compensation laws. The manufacturers are willing; they recognize the fact, as they have done in the past, that they must bear a large part of this additional burden; but this is an additional burden that is going to be placed on the manufacturers, that we all expect is certain to come, and the amount of the burden is somewhat problematical. The large manufacturing interests can easily take care of themselves, because their burden will be scattered over fifteen thousand men; but the small manufacturer, —I refer more particularly to a manuacturer that is employing 10, or 15, or 25 to 100 men; these men are going to find the burden too great. This burden is going to put a large increase upon the expenses of the manufacturers of this State, and any additional burden is unwise and unwarranted.

Mr. Johnson, Union Switch and Signal Co., called and did not respond.

MR. HAYES, of the Iron City Tube Works.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee: As it has been truly stated, there are very many small manufacturing corporations in our great Commonwealth which will suffer very greatly from any change in our system of taxation; and doubtless many of these, through competition of corporations in their lines in other States where they are still highly favored as to their costs, will finally be driven out of business. I know two or three companies, within the last six months,—manufacturers in small lines of product, probably employing a hundred to two hundred men, declining to locate in this State, simply because of the advantages in taxation in other States. The manufacturers of Pittsburgh have this question greatly at heart,—that the great means of building up our Commonwealth is to encourage manufacturers to come into this locality; and a change in the taxation system of the State will certainly be a serious damper. I don't know of anything that would discourage manufacturers more than a change in that system of taxation; and I heartily enter my protest against any change.

FRANK J. LANAHAN, Fort Pitt Malleable Iron Works.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Commission: You have heard from all the rather large companies, and now they are getting down to the little fellows. I only represent a couple of small companies, but I wish to speak from personal experience in connection with the companies I am identified with. I may say that during the past year unfortunately the times were such that our companies did not pay any dividend and did not earn any dividend. During that time wages were not reduced a penny. In some instances, due to competition from other States where skilled mechanics were required, it was necessary for us to increase the wages of some of our men in order to keep them. Our plants are located in McKee's Rocks, and not alone do we pay a county tax and a borough tax, but a tax on machinery; in addition to that we pay a large proportion of school taxes. Being a small corporation, we feel that it would be a further burden upon us to place this suggested tax. This tax on a large company would not probably amount to so much, but to a small company it is a considerable burden. In the companies I speak of, there is more or less call for investors, and this question of taxation seems to be an important one to these people in making investments; and you cannot have a company unless you have the people to place their money in the corporation. Our business comes in competition with such States as West Virginia, Delaware, New Jersey and New York. There is no special reason why we should be located in Pennsylvania, but we have remained in Pennsylvania and have paid the required taxes, but we feel that any additional tax will be a considerable burden upon us. With conditions such as they are, I feel that this Committee will, in its wisdom, decide to continue the policy we have at the present time, and not place any further burden upon manufacturing corporations.

F. C. HODKINSON, Secty., Safety-Armorite Conduit Company, Pittsburgh.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee: I wish to enter a protest in behalf of our Company and to file it with your Committee.

Representing a Pennsylvania corporation, the Safety-Armorite Conduit Company, of Pittsburgh, I enter a protest against taxing Pennsylvania manufacturing corporations, this protest being entered primarily because such taxation will unquestionably prevent location within the boundaries of the State of those corporations which do not require the natural resources of Pennsylvania. And in those cases where the natural resources of this portion of the United States are required, what more likely than that the corporation should pass by the State that taxes its manufacturers and locate in that State, say West Virginia for example, where the same natural resources are had as in Pennsylvania, and where, in addition, is the material advantage of comparative or entire freedom from State taxation.

It is a socialistic principle that improvement to realty and investment in machinery and equipment be relieved from the burden of taxation at the expense of the property unimproved or the capital uninvested, and while the socialistic doctrines have no place in our government, yet in this particular doctrine is something sound, and something, which, if applied to corporations, creatures of government, will tend to up-build the commercial strength of the State, increase the number of citizens of the State by reason of bringing labor to it, and in consequence, up-build the per capita investment of the State's citizens by reason of the laboring man's home ownership.

The collection of moneys for State expenses is, of course, necessary, but far better get such moneys from sources that cannot affect the general basic prosperity of our great manufacturing State than by taxing corporations, and thus drive from our State's borders manufacturers who see greater benefits under other State laws, and keep from locating in our midst a host of manufacturers who shortly will be moving westward from the New England States.

A substantial tax is now paid by corporations under the Government Corporation Tax Law, and it is positively inequitable to burden the corporate manufacturer with a second similar tax payable to the State. Corporate existence is had by virtue of law, and, consequently, the law assumes the right to tax; but even the law must observe the responsibility for equitable treatment to those living under it. Because a corporation is a corporation, the Government imposes a tax; because a corporation is a corporation, the State is considering the matter of imposing a further burden by levying a like tax.

Corporations are desirable things, both to the individual and to the State, but the placing of burdensome taxation will push some corporations toward dissolution so business can be done under some other form not so burdensome. Such tax is not right, is not just; it is not a square deal to the manufacturer who has made our State great. I, therefore, protest against the imposition of any tax whatever on manufacturing corporations; and sincerely trust that your Committee will not advocate change in existing laws in respect to revenue from manufacturing corporations.

COUNSELLOR HOOVILLER:

You must have capital before you can possibly have any interest, and if you are doing anything to scare capital away, you are doing the State an injury.

COUNSELLOR OVERLY:

I think that is an important point. The reason I think it is an important point is about two o'clock this morning, I thought I discovered a substitute for rubber. That is absolutely true. I have been working on it for nine years. I concluded that I would have to have capital to develop it, but I don't see how I could make up a good circular telling of my discovery and inviting investors, when the prospects are that the State of Pennsylvania is going to increase taxation.

Pittsburgh, Pa., November 19, 1912.

AFTERNOON SESSION, 3.30.

Full Commission present.

Mr. Brown: We shall be pleased to hear from Mr. William Frew Long, President of the Pennsylvania State Laundrymen's Association.

MR. WILLIAM FREW LONG.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: As president of the Pennsylvania State Launderers' Association, an organization incorporated under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, I wish to draw your attention to what corporations engaged in the laundry business have long considered to be a grave injustice.

You already have in your files a letter from me on this subject, and you have kindly listened during the past few days to other arguments in behalf of our claims, nevertheless, with your permission, I wish to go into the matter at some length, in order, if possible, to remove all doubt, if any exists, concerning our right to be classed as manufacturers.

The injustice that we suffer, under the corporation tax laws as they now stand, is immediately apparent when you consider that our industry, in spite of the fact that we, in our work, are in a position similar to that of other manufacturing concerns, in spite of the fact that we employ all our labor in the localities in which our various shops are situated, in spite of the fact,—and I ask you to mark this well, for I doubt if there is any other industry that devotes such a large proportion of its earnings to the payment of labor;—in spite of the fact, I say, that 50 to 60 per cent. of our earnings go to our employes, in spite of the fact, in other words, that the same identical reasons exist for our exemption as exist for the exemption of other manufacturing companies, we are compelled to pay a corporation tax while other manufacturers go scot free. Moreover, we are amenable to the "Factory Act," and our plants subject to the factory inspection, while at the same time we are denied factory exemption from taxation.

I might say, at this point, that the justness of the claims of our industry, in this respect, has been recognized, for instance, by the State of New York, whose legislature in 1897 passed an act, a copy of which is attached hereto, specifically exempting laundry corporations from the payment of the tax complained of.

I wish also to draw your attention to the fact that the United States Census Bureau, without any solicitation on our part and without our knowledge, classified us as manufacturers. Hence we find ourselves called manufacturers for purposes of enumeration and something else for purposes of taxation. Either the government or the State must be wrong, and we hope, gentlemen, to convince you that the classification in which we have been placed by the government is the only natural, fair and proper one, the only classification, in fact, in which we can logically be placed.

But, gentlemen, we are not asking you to do something simply because another State and the government has done it, we appeal only and entirely to your good judgment and your spirit of fairness.

In addition to the above practical and, we believe conclusive, reasons why we should be designated as manufacturers, let me draw your attention to the more technical and legal aspect of the matter.

First, then, are we manufacturers?

Turning to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, we find numerous decisions in which the term "manufacture" is defined and most of them would not serve our purpose better if they had been written for our special benefit.

In Norris vs. Com., 27 Pa. 496, the Supreme Court said:

"But what is manufacturing? It is making. To make in the mechanical sense does not signify to create out of nothing; for that surpasses all human power. It does not often mean the production of a new article out of materials entirely raw. It generally consists in giving new shapes, new qualities or new combinations to matter which has already gone through some other artificial process."

Could anything more aptly describe the work done by a laundry? If we do not take a soiled, rumpled up shirt or collar and give it "new shape and new qualities," what do we do? If we had started out to tell you what a launderer seeks to accomplish, we could not have found more appropriate terms in which to express ourselves than those used by the Supreme Court in defining "manufacturers" in this case.

In another case, Com. vs. Campbell, 33 Pa. 383, the Court besides quoting the above definition, added:

"The tanner is none the less a manufacturer of leather because he does not breed and raise the bullock from which the raw hides were taken."

The tanner does not even give the hide a new shape, he simply treats it and changes its condition, yet the Court calls him a manufacturer. The analogy between the work of the tanner and the work of the launderer is readily apparent. The tanner takes the filthy hide as it comes to him and makes of it a thing that can be worn, after it is shaped. The launderer takes the dirty shirt, if you will excuse the term, and changes its condition so that it can be worn; aye, more than that, he also shapes it. So if a tanner is a manufacturer, how much more so is a launderer.

In Com. vs. Light and Power Co., 145 Pa. St. 109, the Court recites, in its opinion, the definition of "Manufacture" as given in "Brands' Encyclopedia," as follows:

"The term employed to designate the changes or modifications made by art or industry in the form or substance of material articles, in the view of rendering them capable of satisfying some want or desire of man; and the manufacturing industry consists in the application of art, science or labor to bring about certain changes or modifications of already existing materials."

There certainly can be no doubt but that a launderer takes the soiled linen of the household, already existing materials, and by the use of machinery and other appliances, renders it, to quote from the decision, "capable of satisfying some want or desire of man."

The courts recognize the fact that the time has past when the word "manufacture" can apply only to things made with hammer and tongs, and so our Supreme Court says in Com. vs. Keystone Bridge Co., 156 Pa. 503:

"The meaning of the word 'manufacture' has expanded with the advance of the arts and sciences."

And the Maryland Supreme Court in Corlin vs. Wester Ass. Co., 57 Md. 526, says:

"The primary meaning of the word 'manufacture' is making with the hand, this definition is too narrow for its present use. Its meaning has expanded as workmanship and art have advanced so that now nearly all artificial products of human industry nearly all such materials as have acquired, changed condition or new specific combinations, whether from the direct action of the human hand, from chemical processes devised and directed by human skill, or by the employment of machinery, which after all is but a higher form of the simple implements with which the human hand fashioned its creations in ruder ages, are now commonly designated as 'manufacture.'"

In Com. vs. Quaker City Dye Works Co., 5 Pa. C. C., page 94, the Court, when it described how the goods handled by this company are passed through various processes which cleanse and dry them, compact and arrange their fibres and give them varying appearances and consistency, dressing their surfaces and fully preparing them for use, came very near describing the operation of a laundry, and as a matter of fact, as the record of the case recites, three-fourths of this company's work is that of laundering, only one-fourth of the company's business being that of dyeing.

In another case, People vs. Robert, 20 N. Y. App. Div. 514, it was held that a man who bundled pieces of wood together and sold some for kindling purposes was a manufacturer. Why? The wood was not changed in its character. It was the same wood after the man bundled it as it was before, but the Court held that it was new in form, and simply because of this the man in question was a manufacturer. The piece of goods the launderer handles is the same piece of goods after he has laundered it as it was before, but he has given it a new form, and is surely just as much entitled to be called a manufacturer as the man in the above mentioned case.

In Com. vs. Clark and Snorer, 1 Dauphin Co. Rep. 95; 18 June T. 1893, it was held that stripping tobacco leaves from the stem and turning the remainder of the leaf out as "cut and dry," or a chewing tobacco, was manufacturing. Why? Because the tobacco was given a new form. The dried leaf straight from the field can not be used by the man who wants a chew or a smoke, unless it is properly cleaned and treated by men engaged in that business, any more than a soiled shirt or collar can be used by the man who wants a change of linen, until it is given a new shape and new qualities by the launderer. It seems to me that the analogy is perfectly plain here, and if there should be a shade of doubt, should we not be given the benefit of it. If an industry which prepares for the public something, for instance chewing tobacco, which, even its users declare, is conducive to public filthiness, is to go untaxed, is it right, is it proper, is it just, that an industry which prepares for the public something that is conducive to public cleanliness, should be taxed? I can not believe that you gentlemen, when you consider this matter, will fail to recommend an amendment to a law which will thus encourage an industry engaged in a business that is often said to be prejudicial to public health and morals, and at the same time discourage an industry which is so conducive to public cleanliness, public health, and, if we believe the old adage, public morals, that, that I believe I am safe in saying, it is quasi-public in its very nature. We believe, gentlemen, that the laundry industry should receive at least equally as good treatment as the tobacco industry.

In Com. vs. Ritter Conserve Co., 387 Aug. T. 1886, 1 Dauphin Co. Rep. 95, it was held that the process of preserving fruit, by simply boiling same, adding sugar and placing same in sealed jars, is manufacturing. It is the same fruit, all the time, but by reason of the treatment to which it is subjected it is made fit for future use. So, in our case, among other things, we take a shirt, boil it, add starch to it, press it, and place it in a sanitary carton. It is the same shirt all the time, but by reason of the treatment to which it has been subjected, it like the fruit, is made fit for future use.

In Com. vs. William Cramp and Sons' Ship and Engine Building Co., 1 Dauphin Co. Rep. 95, 263 Sept. T., 1893, the Court held that simply shaping, trimming, dressing, cleaning and rubbing blocks of marble was manufacturing. It is the same marble, just as in our case, it is the same shirt, that is being cleaned and shaped, in order to (giving the Supreme Court's definition of "manufacture") give it new shape and qualities, so that it will be capable of filling some want or desire of man.

So, gentlemen, we contend that our business is manufacturing in the full, broad, and complete definition of that word as the courts have applied it from time to time in classifying various concerns as manufacturers.

A great many of the articles laundered by laundries are laundered for the market and have never been worn, and surely it will be admitted that the laundering of these goods which we receive from the manufacturer to be cleaned, bleached, colored, starched, smoothed, and given a new appearance, a new form, a new shape, a new condition, and a new color and quality, according to the requirements of the article, is a complete or successive manufacture. This process is a part of the original manufacture. When the collar, cuff, or shirt is cut from the web and sewn together, they are not yet a manufactured article; they are not ready for the trade or use, in fact could not be marketed or used. They have no commercial appearance, form, shape, condition or color. The manufacture is not complete until they receive the requisite quality, appearance, shape, form, condition and color. Removing the odor of the newly woven fabric changes its condition; giving it the requisite color, either by dyeing, bleeching or coloring, changes the substance of the material; rendering it capable of recieving and retaining form and shape by starching and giving it form and shape by ironing, certainly are sufficient to bring the work into the manufacturers' class. These give "new forms," "new shapes," "new qualities," "new conditions"; are the result of art and industry, and "render the articles capable of satisfying some want of man." We do not have to sew the shirt together in order to be called manufacturers, the Court in the case of Norris vs. Com., 27 Pa. 496, said:

"A worker in metals is a maker of the wares he fashions, though he did not dig the ore from the earth, nor carry it through every stage of refinement."

Remember, gentlemen, in the consideration of our request, that the removing of dirt from linen is but a small and preparatory part of our work, just as washing the earth from fruit is but a small part of the work of preserving same, or as washing the clay or earth from a piece of marble preparatory to polishing it, is but a small part of the work in that case. The process of bleaching, dyeing, coloring, starching and ironing, are not processes for the purpose of the liberation of soiled particles. The purposes of these processes are to change the fabric or garment, by changing the condition, giving the requisite color, either by dyeing, bleaching or coloring, and for giving the requisite form, shape, appearance and condition as above stated. Washing the goods is the smallest part of our work and the labor used therein constitutes but a small fraction of our pay roll. Washing is but a stage in the preparation of the article for the main and principal part of the work. The object of the washing, as is at once comprehended, is to cleanse the garment, so as to put it in a sanitary condition, so that it can be bleached regularly; otherwise the bleaching would not give a perfect and uniform color, so that the dyeing will be evenly distributed, affecting every particle of the garment alike, or so the coloring will be uniform in every part of the fabric. The application of these artilces requires the greatest skill. A single error in judgment as to the quality of the goods, or in the application of the process at times, would cost the laundry company hundreds of dollars, as can be readily seen.

Again, the starching of the goods is a much greater and more delicate part of the company's work than the washing as is also the drying and ironing departments. The garments are shaped in the ironing departments, where the greatest skill is required in order that the garment when finished will have the proper form and shape. These departments of the work of a laundry are the ones which give the goods or fabrics their changed condition, give them new features, new colors and new forms, and are the departments of the work which classify us as manufacturers. If we did nothing but wash the goods sent to us, it would be, we grant you, manifestly absurd for us to ask to be classed as manufacturers.

The fact that the shirt, collar or cuff, or other articles of cotton or woolen goods that has once been laundered may be again returned to be relaundered in no way changes the work or destroys its character as being that of a manufacturer. The relaundering is but a successive manufacture. The fact that this work may be, and is from time to time repeated, does not change the business of the laundry more than would the receiving by a manufacturer of steam engines of a steam engine which he had originally manufactured, and which had been in use for a certain period of time, which use had worn or damaged the engine to such an extent that it required to be in some part or parts renewed, reformed or restraightened and which work required or could be best done by a manufacturer. The doing of this work by the manufacturer when it consisted in the performance of the same work, or work and material, required in the original construction of the engine, would not destroy or change the work of the manufacturer. Our claim here is that where the same work, or the same work and material is again furnished and performed on an engine in order to renew it and make it capable of continuing the work for which it was designed and constructed, that this is the work of manufacturing the same as the original.

The part of the work performed by one laundry company upon goods returned to it, which have been before laundered by this one or some other company, is the same work that was originally performed on the goods as a part of their original manufacture, and like the work done on the used engine, is done so that it may be capable of continuing the work for which they were designed and constructed. The only difference between this and the instance cited of an engine, is that everyone uses the articles operated upon by a laundry, while but a few of the great number of our people use a steam engine.

It is true that the owner might either by his own labor, or the labor of a person other than the manufacturer, renew an engine, but this does not destroy the work of the manufacturer when he does it, if it was the same kind of work or material originally performed and used in the construction of the engine: likewise because the owner of material or garments may by himself or by others, by a process inferior to that of a steam laundry again render capable of use, the garment or fabric, does not change the work of the laundry. Again, the relaundried part of the work of a laundry could not be done, if it did not use therein a new soap solution, coloring solution, scouring solution and starch which it prepares and produces; many laundries in fact manufacturing their own soap, using tallow, caustic soda, etc., in the process. All these materials are new, never having been used before. All the skilled labor as applied in this relaundrying is new. It gives the same, new appearance, new form, new shape, new quality and new color.

The fact that one, or more uses of the material, fabric or garment, does not destroy them, as in the case of kindling wood, canned or preserved fruit, chewing or smoking tobacco, and most other manufactured articles, but leaves them in such condition that they are capable of being subjected to successive manufacture, in no way destroys the successive manufacture, when the same work is done in the successive manufacture as was done in the original. It is a matter of common knowledge that the material in printed newspapers is from time to time returned and passed through the various processes which remove the ink solution from the paper, after which the product is again made into paper for reprinting. It would be useless to claim that this reprinting is not a manufacture as well, and in as clear and defined a sense as was the first. Again, it is also well known, that various articles of iron, are again returned to the manufacturer and are remodeled and remoulded into new articles of the same kind as the original, having nothing added to it except the necessary ingredients and labor required for the successive or remanufacture, and this remanufacture, is as fully a manufacture in every sense as was the original, and we submit that the relaundried article is an article having a new form and shape with new substance, a new quality, a new combination, and a new appearance; it, when relaundried, has little or no resemblance to the fabric, material or garment before relaundried; in its relaundried condition with all these new qualities, it is capable of a use by the customer which before being relaundried, it did not possess; this relaundrying gives it a new name and fits it for a new use by the customer, and is, we contend, manufacture.

Again the business of a laundry comes clearly within the reason and motive of the exemption, which was to encourage enterprises that furnish employment to home labor in changing or modifying by art in industry the form or substance of material articles in view of rendering them capable of meeting the wants, desires and needs of our people. Surely the employment by our industry of over 11,000 persons, most of them skilled laborers, to whom it pays annually in wages over $4,000,000.00 shows that our industry is within the reason and motive above mentioned.

We further submit that our judiciary in defining and construing this exemption, as is shown by the foregoing cases, applies the term manufacturing in the expanded meaning of the term as it has been and should be applied.

The work of a laundry in all its branches, we submit is the work of manufacturing within the meaning of this term, as used in this exemption. Its work is application of art and skilled labor to bring about the required changes and modifications of already existing materials, in order that they will meet the demand of trade, commerce, and the wants and needs of man.

And, gentlemen, with your permission I would like for just a moment to draw your attention to a very serious situation which confronts our industry, which situation we believe you should take into consideration.

Perusal of the reports of the Census Bureau on our industry discloses the fact that in the laundry business, less profit is made than in almost any other industry, and this, principally because of the fact that such a large proportion of our cost of production is wages paid to labor. This is true to such an extent that I can frankly say to you that it would be more profitable for men engaged in the laundry business to invest their money in government bonds. By this I mean that our margin of profit is so small that we get absolutely nothing for the risks of doing business, something every industry is entitled to.

On top of this present bad condition, we find ourselves confronted with the possibility of the passage of a Workmen's Compensation Act, a bill further reducing the hours of labor for women, etc., all of which is going to make a bad situation worse. I do not wish to be understood as even intimating that we wish to oppose any laws that may be introduced for the purpose of uplifting the condition of the working people. We believe in workmen's compensation, and inspection of our modern plants with their rest-rooms, and other welfare departments, will demonstrate that we are ahead of any proposed legislation in caring for the females in our employ. As for the hours of labor for women, we have for a long time, of our own volition, fixed the hours of labor for our employes at a point much below that allowed by the law. In other words, there is nothing along this line in which it cannot be said that we are progressives.

But all these things mean an added expense to an already too heavy cost of production. The advocates of these measures are very frank to admit that their enforcement means a considerable addition to the expense of doing business, but they say, "Pass the extra cost on to the consumer. These measures are for the benefit of society generally, and the cost should be borne by society generally," but how are we, in our busines, to pass this extra cost on to the consumer. We cannot advance the price of laundry work, because of a competitor which you gentlemen have probably never thought of.—a competitor who knows nothing of a overhead expense, nothing of insurance on buildings and machinery, nothing of Employes' Liability Insurance, and who seldom will even admit that the cost of material, such as gas, soap, starch, blueing, etc., are worth talking about,—I refer to the housewife and her wash-tub. So that I believe you can readily see that there is a very well defined limit, past which we dare not go in the matter of charges for what we produce. It is all very well to say, "Pass the extra cost on to the consumer." We cannot pass on to the consumer the extra cost of doing work, because if we do this we do not get the work. The housewife says, "If you increase your price, I will do the work myself." It is purely a matter of dollars and cents with her, and our argument that the extra cost is for the benefit of, and will go to, our employes, will avail us absolutely nothing, and so the advice of the advocates of these measures "to pass it on to the consumer" will avail us nothing.

Consider these facts carefully, gentlemen, and we believe you will finally accept our view, that because of same, in addition to the other facts hereinbefore set forth, such as our service to the cause of public health, sanitation, etc., the State should give us, through the Legislature, the benefit of being classed as manufacturers, a classification which we hope we have convinced you is right and proper under the definition of the word "manufacturer," as defined by the lexicographers and authorities which I have quoted.

In conclusion I want to say that we are going to ask to have our industry specifically mentioned by name (as is done in the New York Act) whenever the term "manufacturing corporation" is mentioned in whatever legislation you may recommend. We ask this because we recognize the fact that we are perhaps somewhat handicapped by the name which our industry bears. The word "laundry" is still, to some extent, especially among the older members of the community, inseparably connected with a woman bending over a wash tub, a conception of our industry which is as far from the truth as day is from night, so we ask you in your consideration of our claim for the recognition as manufacturers to which we hope we have convinced you we are entitled, to let the dead past bury its dead, and to realize that in the lifetime of you gentlemen a comparatively great industry has grown up in this State, until today I can stand before you representing a business, which according to the United States Census Bureau has an investment in this Commonwealth of over $9,000,000.00, employs over 11,000 persons, and pays out annually in wages over $4,168,000.00.

The duties of the old-fashioned "wash-day" are fast being assumed by the modern steam laundry, just as many other of the old-fashioned household duties are being transferred from the shoulders of the housewife to great establishments outside of the home. And the day is not far distant, if we are not forced by legislation to make our charges prohibitive in amount, when the back-breaking, women-killing laundry in the cellar will be as scarce as the bake-oven in the back yard, and when the wash tub and the washing board will be classed with the spinning wheels as relics of a bygone age. A consummation that the women, at least, will agree, is devoutly to be wished.

In this connection it might be well to remind you, too, that inasmuch as the work of the laundries is really the performance of a part of the labor of the households of the community in which they are located, a tax on that labor is one that tends to increase the already too high cost of living, for even today a large part of the work done by a laundry cannot be performed in the individual homes of the people, except at the cost of the health of the housewives, thus making the steam laundry, to that extent, an absolute necessity in the community.

We ask, therefore, in view of all these facts, and in order that we may justly enjoy the exemption from taxation accorded other manufacturers or share with them whatever tax you may deem it wise to impose on manufacturing concerns, that laundry corporations be specifically classed with the other manufacturing corporations mentioned in whatever act, acts, or amendments which your Committee, in its wisdom, may see fit to recommend at the next session of the Legislature of Pennsylvania.

DR. JOHN THOM HOLDSWORTH, University of Pittsburgh.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee: I have asked permission to be wedged in out of order here this afternoon, because if I do not say what little I have to say now, right away quick, I may not be able to say anything at all. I was attacked last night by grippe, and it has gotten into my throat and nasal passages, and I know tomorrow I shall be in bed, unless I can get a Christian Scientist to work on me.

I have been asked to come before your Committee in the interest of a better adjustment, not so much of local taxation as State taxation. I am going to submit a digest which I prepared hurriedly, in lieu of what I would like to say, if I dared take your time and my time for the illustration of the several problems in that connection.

First of all, there is no need, in my judgment, for any new sources of revenue in the State of Pennsylvania, but what we need in Pennsylvania is an efficient, up-to-date, economical administration of the machinery for collecting the revenue already provided. I have in that connection, pointed out a half dozen different places where, in my humble judgment, enormous saving can be effected. Will you allow me to say, at the outset, that the Department of the Auditor General, from its own reports, has demonstrated to the people of Pennsylvania that the tasks imposed upon it are altogether too large, altogether too varied for it to do any single one of them efficiently and economically. The report of Mr. Young, three years ago, and the report of Mr. Sisson, two years ago, in themselves are sufficient evidence of the inadequacy of the machinery provided under present conditions. (Reads paper.)

THE REVENUE SYSTEM OF THE STATE.

Dr. John Thom Holdsworth.

General tendency in State taxation is toward greater simplicity rather than complexity, especially as regards the sources of taxation.

Pennsylvania has long been cited as one of the States that have led in the movement to separate the sources of State and local revenues. Our cities especially derive their revenue mainly from the tax on real estate, while the income of the State comes mostly from corporation taxes. In 1910, the total revenue of the State was $28,946,424, of which $17,210,422 was derived from corporations,—nearly 60 per cent.

From time to time fears have been expressed that with the inventiable increase in the disbursements of the State, the present system of taxation would prove inadequate to furnish the revenues needed, and that new sources of taxation must be sought. Though fiscal systems in common with all other social agencies must be sufficiently elastic to meet changing conditions, the tax system of a State which works as smoothly and satisfactorily as does that of this State should not be lightly or wantonly disturbed. Any drastic revision of the revenue laws would tend to upset well-established and well-understood court decisions, and to create confusion and dissatisfaction among the tax-payers. Such revision or radical change should not be considered until it is demonstrated that the existing system, under efficient and economical administration, is inadequate.

What is wanted in this State is not so much new sources of revenue as more efficient and economical administration of the existing system. In this connection reference may be made to some special features connected with the assessment, collection and appropriation of State revenues.

1. NEED FOR A STATE TAX COMMISSION.

In view of the fact that over 60 per cent of the State's revenues are derived from corporations, a total of over $17,000,000 annually; that these revenues come from over 20,000 corporations; that all of the facts upon which the corporation taxes are based come to the Auditor-General's Department through reports made by the corporations themselves, the department not having authority to examine the tangible property of those corporations; that the department alone assesses all these taxes and has a large discretionary power in relation to these assessments, resulting in much inequality in the assessment of corporations; and that the department of the Auditor General has a great many other duties, some of which must necessarily be slighted if full efficiency be developed in the matter of corporation tax assessments; the question of devising new, adequate and efficient State taxation machinery should receive.

The Auditor General is ex-officio a member of the Board of Public Accounts and Sinking Fund Commissioners, the Board of Revenue Commissioners, the Military Board, and other boards discharging important State functions. In his annual report dated December 28, 1909, Auditor General Young said: "Taken in the aggregate, the duties of the various boards on which the Auditor General sits are quite as arduous and responsible as those of the office for which he is elected. The Growth of the State Government and the multiplying of its activities has made the function of many of these boards impossible of performance in some matters except in a purely perfunctory way."

In his last annual report, dated June 28, 1911, Auditor General Sisson writing of the inadequacy of clerical assistance in his department says: "The Act of 1874, above referred to, provides for one corporation clerk, whereas the Commonwealth collects over $17,000,000 annually from over 20,000 corporations, and the amount each shall pay is determined by the corporation clerk and his assistants from reports of its affairs made to this department by the corporation, and in the absence of reports the department estimates and settles a tax against a corporation, which on account of insufficient information is often inadequate. The judgment, integrity and discretion necessary to be exercised in the settlement of the prodigious amount of taxes the corporations are required to pay to the Commonwealth, and deciding how much shall be paid by each one, is such that high-grade men are required for the service, and a much better provision should be made in regard to their number and compensation than now exists. The one corporation clerk of the Department now receives a salary of $3,000 per annum, and the assistant corporation clerk gets $1,800 per annum,—nobody else connected with this work is getting over $1,500 per annum, excepting the chief clerk, who sometimes assists, and he receives $3,000 per annum. They come in contact with attorneys in making these settlements who receive salaries or make in the practice of their profession before the Department and the courts all of the way from $10,000 to $100,000 and upwards per annum. The bill in question provided for three corporation clerks at $5,000 per year each, and one chief corporations clerk at $5,500 per annum. One case, properly adjusted often brings to the Commonwealth an increase in taxes sufficient in one year to pay these salaries for several years. It is not only a question of the amount of taxes received, but it is a question of having this important work done correctly and the proper amount of taxes assessed against each of this class of over 20,000 tax payers—it is important alike to the tax payer and to the Commonwealth. There is no official position in the State requiring a higher degree of integrity and ability than this—and the great Commonwealth of Pennsylvania should not seek cheap men for this practically unwatchable service. That bill also provided for two special agents at a salary of $2,000 per annum each, whose duties were to be to examine and report to the Auditor-General as to the condition, property and liability to the Commonwealth of corporations, companies, associations, joint stock associations, limited partnerships and persons for the payment of State taxes, etc. This is a very important service and this Department should have the power to make such inquiry and investigation, and to appoint agents for that purpose—it is important.

The lack of efficiency in assessments and collections is not confiend to corporation taxes. In the report quoted from above Auditor General Young said: "I feel constrained to call attention again to the imperfect administration of the laws intended to reach and tax personal property in the form of trust funds held by banks, trust companies and saving institutions, that is escaping taxation altogether, and to the further fact, patent to all citizens who have given a moment's reflection to the subject, that great sums of personal property, other than those suggested, are escaping taxation, contrary to law. I think it is safe to assert that the aggregate amount of personal property escaping taxation contrary to law is greater than the total sum now being taxed."

The leaks and losses, the waste and inefficiency, the inequalities and inequities in taxation continue down through the counties and cities of the State. Nearly three-fourths of the total revenue of Allegheny County comes from the City of Pittsburgh, most of it from the tax on real estate, assessed by a separate set of officials usually less experienced than the city assessors. In the interest of efficiency and economy the separate assessment of city real estate for county purposes should be eliminated. Considerable savings could be effected by the consolidation and centralization of the various local tax-levying and tax-collecting agencies.

Many of the evils of our present tax situation spring from the lack of standards in the local assessment of property subject to taxation. This is due partly to the inherent difficulties in valueing or even uncovering certain classes of property that are taxable under the present laws, but it is also due in no small measure to the fact that this important work, calling for skill and training, and often for technical knowledge, is entrusted to untrained assessors. The experience of other States demonstrates that to secure efficiency and economy in all matters relating to taxation a permanent commission of experts,—a State Tax Commission—is essential.

One of the functions which would naturally be attached to the State Tax Commission here proposed would be that of keeping abreast of the best thought and the best practice in taxation matters, of studying the taxation experience of other States and other countries, of analyzing the operation and effect of our own State system, of submitting reports embodying their findings and of making recommendations based upon such findings. Some of the most valuable investigations and discussions of American tax problems are to be found in the reports of permanent State tax commissions. (A copy of the law creating the Wisconsin Tax Commission is appended hereto.)

DUTIES OF THE WISCONSIN TAX COMMISSION.

(Excerpts from the law creating the commission.)

(1). To have and exercise general supervision over the administration of the assessment and tax laws of the State, over assessors, board of review and supervisors of assessment, and over county boards in the performance of their duties as county boards of assessment, to the end that all assessments of property be made relatively just and equal at true value in substantial compliance with law.

(2). To confer with, advise and direct assessors, boards of review, county boards of assessment and supervisors of assessment as to their duties under the statutes of the State.

(3). To direct proceedings, actions and prosecutions to be instituted to enforce the laws relating to the penalties, liabilities and punishment of public officers persons, and officers or agents of corporations for failure to neglect to comply with the provisions of the statutes governing the return, assessment and taxation of property; and to cause complaints to be made against assessors, members of boards of review, supervisors of assessment, and members of county boards, or other assessing or taxing officers, to the proper circuit judge for their removal from office for official miconduct or neglect of duty.

(4). To require district attroneys to assist in the commencement and prosecution of actions and proceedings for penalties, forfeitures, removals and punishment for violations of the laws of the State in respect to the assessment and taxation of property, in their respective counties.

(5). To require town, city, village, county and other public officers to rejort information as to the assessment of property, collection of taxes, receipts from licenses and other sources, the expenditure of public funds for all purposes, and such other information as may be needful in the work of the commission, in such form and upon such blanks as the commission may prescribe.

(6). To require individuals, partnerships, companies, associations and corporations to furnish information concerning their capital, funded or other debt, current assets or liabilities, value of property, earnings, operating and other expenses, taxes and all other facts which may be needful to enable the commission to ascertain the value and the relative burdens borne by all kinds of property in the State.

(7). To summon witnesses to appear and give testimony, and to produce records, books, papers and documents relating to any matter which the commission shall have authority to investigate or determine.

(8). To cause the deposition of witnesses residing within or without the State or absent therefrom, to be taken, upon notice to the interested party, if any, in like manner that deposition of witnesses are taken in civil actions pending in the circuit court, in any matter which the commission shall have authority to investigate or determine.

(9). To visit the counties in the State, unless prevented by other necessary official duties, for the investigation of the work and the methods adopted by local assessors, boards of review, supervisors of assessment and county boards, in the assessment, equalization and taxation of real and personal property.

(10). To carefully examine into all cases where evasion or violation of the laws for assessment and taxation of property is alleged, complained of or discovered, and to ascertain wherein existing laws are defective or are improperly or negligently administered.

(11). To investigate the tax systems of other States and countries and to formulate and recommend such legislation as may be deemed expedient to prevent evasion of assessment and tax laws and to secure just and equal taxation and improvement in the system of taxation in the State.

(12). To inquire into the system of accounting of public funds in use in towns, cities, villages and counties, and to devise and subscribe a uniform system of accounting of the receipts and disbursements of public funds in the municipalities of the State.

(13). To consult and confer with the Governor of the State upon the subject of taxation, the administration of the laws in relation thereto and the progress of the work of the commission, and to furnish the Governor from time to time such assistance and information as he may require.

(14). To transmit to the Governor and to each member of the Legislature, thirty days before the meeting of the Legislature, the report of the commission showing all the taxable property in the State and the value of the same in tabulated form with recommendations for improvement in the system of taxation in the State, together with such measures as may be formulated for the consideration of the Legislature.

(15). To exercise and perform such further powers and duties as may be granted to or imposed upon the commission by law.

INTRODUCTORY.

ACT CREATING THE TAX COMMISSION.

No. 754, A. Published June 15, 1905.

CHAPTER 380.

An Act to create a permanent tax commission and transferring to such commission the powers and duties of the present commissioner and assistant commissioners of taxation as a State board of assessment or otherwise, and making an appropriation therefor.

The people of the State of Wisconsin, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. There is hereby created a State board to be designated and known as the tax commission, which board shall succeed and take the place of the present commissioner and assistant commissioners of taxation and the present State boards of assessment composed of said commissioner and assistant commissioner as hereinafter provided.

Section 2. Said tax commission shall be composed of three commissioners, who shall be appointed by the Governor by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The three persons first to compose said board shall be appointed within ten days after the passage and publication of this act and before the adjournment of the present Legislature if practicable. Of such three persons one shall be appointed and designated to serve for a term ending on the first Monday in May, 1909, one for a term ending on the first Monday in May 1911, and one for a term ending on the first Monday in May 1913, each of said terms to begin upon the qualification of the person appointed therefor. Upon the expiration of the terms of the three commissioners first to be appointed as aforesaid, each succeeding commissioner shall be appointed and shall hold his office for the term of eight years, except in the case of a vacancy as hereinafter provided, and each commissioner shall hold his office until his successor shall have been appointed and qualified.

Section 3. After the appointment of said first three commissioners and except when apointed to fill a vacancy, each commissioner shall be appointed on or before the last Monday in February during the biennnial session of the Legislature next preceding the commencement of the term for which he shall be appointed. In case of a vacancy, it shall be filled by the appointment by the Governor for the unexpired portion of the term in which such vacancy shall occur, subject to confirmation by the Senate. If such appointment be made when the Legislature is not in regular session, the appointee shall hold his office until the first Monday of February in the next biennial session of the Legislature, when, if such appointment is not confirmed by the Senate, the office shall become vacant, and, on or before the last Monday in the same month, the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint a suitable person to fill such vacancy for the remainder of such term.

Section 4. The persons to be appointed as members of such commission shall be such as are known to possess knowledge of the subject of taxation and skill in matters pertaining thereto. So far as practicable they shall be so selected that the board will not be composed wholly of persons who are members of or affiliated with some political party or organization. No person appointed as such commissioner shall hold any other office under the laws of this State nor any office under the government of the United States or of any other State. Each such commissioner shall devote his entire time to the duties of the office and shall not hold any position of trust or profit, engage in any occupation or business interferring with or inconsistent with his duties, or serve on or under any committee of any political party.

Section 5. Each commissioner, within thirty days after notice of his appointment and before entering upon the discharge of the duties of his office, shall take, subscribe and file with the Secretary of State the oath of office prescribed by the Constitution of this State. Each of said commissioners shall receive an annual salary of five thousand dollars, payable in the same manner that salaries of other State officers are paid.

Section 6. The commissioners first appointed under this Act, after duly qualified, shall without delay meet at the capitol in Madison, and shall thereupon organize and elect one of its number as chairman. A majority of said commissioners shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of the business and the performance of the duties of the commission. The said commission shall be in continuous session and open for the transaction of business every day except Sundays and legal holidays; and the sessions of such commission shall stand and be deemed to be adjourned from day to day without formal entry thereof upon its records. The commission may hold sessions or conduct investigations at any place other than the capitol when deemed necessary to facilitate the performance of its duties.

Section 7. Said commission may appoint a secretary at a salary of not more than two thousand dollars per annum, one clerk at a salary of not more than fifteen hundred dollars, one clerk at a salary of not more than twelve hundred dollars and one at a salary of not more than one thousand dollars, one of which clerks shall be a stenographer. The commission may employ such other persons as experts and assistants as may be necessary to perform the duties that may be required of the commission and fix their compensation. The secretary shall keep full and correct minutes of all hearings, transactions, and proceedings of said commission and shall perform such other duties as may be required by the commission. The commission shall have power to make all needful rules, not inconsistent with law, for the orderly and methodical performance of its duties as a board of assessment or otherwise, and for conducting hearings and other proceedings before it.

Section 8. The commission shall keep its office at the capitol and shall be provided with suitable rooms, necessary office furniture, supplies, stationery, books, periodicals and maps; and all necessary expenses shall be audited and paid as other State expenses are audited and paid. The commissioners, secretary and clerks, and such experts and assistants as may be employed by the commission shall be entitled to receive from the State their actual necessary expenses while traveling on the business of the commission; such expenditures to be sworn to by the party who incurred the expense and approved by the chairman of the commission or a majority of the members of such commission.

Section 9. It shall be the duty of the commission, and it shall have power and authority:

(1). To have and exercise general supervision over the administration of the assessment and tax laws of the State, over assessors, boards of review and supervisors of assessment, and over county boards in the performance of their duties as county boards of assessment, to the end that all assessments of property be made relatively just and equal at true value in substantial compliance with law.

(2). To confer with, advise and direct assessors, boards of review, county boards of assessment and supervisors of assessment as to their duties under the statutes of the State.

(3). To direct proceedings, actions and prosecutions to be instituted to enforce the laws relating to the penalties, liabilities, and punishment of public officers, persons, and officers or agents of corporations for failure or neglect to comply with the provisions of the statutes governing the return, assessment and taxation of property: and to cause complaints to be made against assessors, members of boards of review, supervisors of assessment, and member of county boards, or other assessing or taxing officers, to the proper circuit judge for their removal from office for official misconduct or neglect of duty.

(4). To require district attorneys to assist in the commencement and prosecution of actions and proceedings for penalties, forfeitures, removals and punishment for violations of the laws of the State in respect to the assessment and taxation of property, in their respective counties.

(5). To require town, city, village, county and other public officers to report information as to the assessment of property, collection of taxes, receipts from licenses and other sources, the expenditure of public funds for all purposes, and such other information as may be needful in the work of the commission, in such form and upon such blanks as the commission may prescribe.

(6). To require individuals, partnerships, companies, associations and corporations to furnish information concerning their capital, funded or other debt, current assets and liabilities, value of property, earnings, operating and other expenses, taxes and all other facts which may be needful to enable the commission to ascertain the value and relative burdens borne by all kinds of property in the State.

(7). To summon witnesses to appear and give testimony and to produce records, books, papers and documents relating to any matter which the commission shall have authority to investigate or determine.

(8). To cause the deposition of witnesses residing within or without the State or absent therefrom, to be taken, upon notice to the interested party, if any, in like manner that depositions of witnesses are taken in civil actions pending in the circuit court, in any manner which the commission shall have authority to investigate or determine.

(9). To visit the counties in the State, unless prevented by other necessary official duties, for the investigation of the work and the methods adopted by local assessors, boards of review, supervisors of assesment and county boards, in the assessment, equalization and taxation of real and personal property.

(10). To carefully examine into all cases where evasion or violation of the laws for assessment and taxation of property is alleged, complained of or discovered, and to ascertain wherein existing laws are defective or are improperly or negligently administered.

(11). To investigate the tax systems of other states and countries and to formulate and recommend such legislation as may be deemed expedient to prevent evasion of assessment and tax laws and to secure just and equal taxation and improvement in the system of taxation in the State.

(12). To inquire in to the system of accounting of public funds in use in town, cities, villages and counties, and to devise and prescribe a uniform system of accounting of the receipts and disbursements of public funds in the municipalities of the State.

(13). To consult and confer with the Governor of the State upon the subject of taxation, the administration of the laws in relation thereto and the progress of the work of the commission, and to furnish the Governor from time to time such assistance and information as he may require.

(14). To transmit to the Governor and to each member of the Legislature, thirty days before the meeting of the Legislature, the report of the commission showing all the taxable property in the State and the value of the same in tabulated form with recommendations for improvement in the system of taxation in the State, together with such measures as may be formulated for the consideration of the Legislature.

(15). To exercise and perform such further powers and duties as may be granted to or imposed upon the commission by law.

Section 10. Oaths to witnesses in any matter under the investigation or consideration of the commission or by any member thereof. In case any witness shall fail to obey any summon to appear before said commission or shall refuse to testify or answer any material question or to produce records, books, papers or documents when required so to do, such failure or refusal shall be reported to the Attorney General, who shall thereupon institute proceedings in the proper circuit court to compel obedience to any summons or order of the commission or to punish witnesses for any such neglect or refusal. Any person who shall testify falsely in any material matter under the consideration of the commission shall be guilty of and punished for perjury. In the discretion of the commission, officers who serve summons or subpoenas, and witnesses attending, shall receive like compensation as officers and witnesses in the circuit court.

Section 11. The said commission, upon the qualification of its members and the organization thereof as hereinbefore provided, shall become successors in office to the present commissioner and assistant commissioner of taxation, and thereupon all the power and authority vested in or conferred upon said last named officers or any of them, and all duties imposed upon them or any of them, by any act or statute then in force or by any act thereafter taking effect, passed at this legislative session, shall devolve upon and thenceforth be exercised and performed by said commission, and the office of commissioner of txation and of the first and second assistant commissioners of taxation shall cease and terminate.

Section 12. The power and authority and the duties which shall devolve upon and be exercised and performed by said Commission as provided in the preceding section, shall extend to and include all those conferred or imposed upon said commissioner and assistant commissioners of taxation as a state board of assessment or taxing board for any purpose by any act or statute which shall be in force at the time of the organization of said commission and termination of said offices of commissioner and assistant commissioners of taxation, or by any act thereafter taking effect passed at this legislative session, and shall include the power and authority of said commissioner and assistant commissioners as a state board for the assessment and taxation of the property of railroad companies under the provisions of chapter 315 of the laws of 1903 and acts amendatory thereof. All proceedings, hearings, or other matters then pending before said commissioner and assistant commissioners, as a State board of assessment or otherwise, and all investigations or other official work undertaken by them or any of them and then remaining uncompleted, shall be continued, carried on and completed by and before said commission. All records, books, papers, documents and memoranda and all office equipment, materials and supplies in the official custody or possession of said commissioner and assistant commissioners of taxation or of any of them, as a State board of assessment or otherwise, upon the termination of their offices as above provided shall be transferred to said commission as their successors in office for all purposes, and said commission shall thereupon and thenceforth have official possession and custody of the same.

Section 13. There is hereby annually appropriated out of the general fund in the State treasury a sum sufficient to carry out the provisions of this act.

Section 14. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and publication.

Approved June 15, 1905.

LAWS IMPOSING OTHER DUTIES ON THE TAX COMMISSION.

Further duties are imposed and additional authority is conferred upon the tax commission in respect to the special subjects embraced in the following legislative acts:

Chapters 111, 112, 113 and 114, laws of 1899, chapter 35, laws of 1903, and chapter 477, laws of 1905, relating to the assessment and taxation of express, sleeping car, freight line and equipment companies by the tax commission.

Chapter 237, laws of 1901, making the commission a State board of assessment to assess the general property of the State for the levying of state taxes.

Chapter 445, laws of 1901, chapter 316, laws of 1903, and chapter 523, laws of 1905, providing for the appointment of county supervisors of assessment and placing such officers under the direction and supervision of the tax commission.

Chapter 315, laws of 1903, and chapter 216, laws of 1905, relating to the assessment and taxation of railroads by the commission.

Chapter 259, laws of 1905, authorizing the commission to order a reassessment in assessment districts.

Chapter 474, laws of 1905, authorizing the tax commission to review the assessments made by county boards.

Chapter 493, laws of 1905, for the assessment and taxation of street railway companies by the tax commission.

Chapter 494, laws of 1905, for the assessment and taxation of the property of telegraph companies by the commission.

Chapter 340, laws of 1897, authorized the appointment of the first tax commission, o hold office until December 31, 1898. The commission appointed under this act prepared and submitted the report of 1898 to the Legislature of 1899.

Chapter 206 of the laws of 1899 created the offices of commissioner of taxation and first and second commissioners of taxation to hold office for the period of ten years.

This commission issued the first biennial report to the Legislature of 1901 and the second biennial report to the Legislature of 1903. No report was made in 1905.

The last named commission was succeeded by the permanent tax commission appointed pursuant to the provisions of chapter 380, laws of 1905, supra. The members of the former commission were appointed by the governor and confirmed by the senate as members of the permanent tax commission.

CHAPTER I.

ADMINISTRATIVE DUTIES OF THE TAX COMMISSION.

Under the many acts mentioned on preceding pages the administrative duties of the commission have been so enlarged as to seriously interfere with that study and investigations of the general subject of taxation which was the main purpose in the original creation of a tax commission. These duties have imposed on the commission much labor in unbroken fields. It has taken much time to lay out the work and organize new methods of investigation. This has resulted in expenditures during the first years of the work which it is reasonable to expect will be reduced in the future without loss to good service and equitable assessments.

Railroad assessments are discussed in another chapter.

Sleeping cars, express companies and other companies engaged in transportation were, by acts of 1903, made assessable and taxable by the tax commission.

Street railways (urban and interurban) and telegraph companies are likewise brought under the jurisdiction of the commission, but the first assessment of street railways according to the terms of the law is not due till 1908; that of telegraph companies in 1907.

APPEALS FROM COUNTY BOARDS.

Chapter 474, laws of 1905, authorizes the tax commission to review upon appeal from the determination of any county board the assessment of the relative value of the taxable property in the several assessment districts of the county.

During the year 1906 hearings were had under this act on appeal from the action of the county boards of Iowa, La Crosse and Milwaukee counties, but in none of them did the commission, after a full consideration of all the facts, become satisfied that "substantial injustice" had been done to the assessment district complaining, and dismissed the appeal.

In Prince county two appeals were taken. A stipulation entered into by the different parties in interest was in that county made the basis of an order by the commission readjusting the valuations placed upon the different districts by the county board.

The fact that such power of review is vested in the commission makes the matter of appeal less cumbersome than the former proceeding in circuit court. It is also reasonable to presume that with the information in regard to values in possession of the commission, or readily obtainable by it, it is better able to conduct an investigation than appointees of the court not accustomed to work of this character.

REASSESSMENTS.

Chapter 259, laws of 1905, authorizes the commission, upon complaint and hearing, to order a reassessment of all the taxable property in an assessment district when it is satisfied that the assessment made is not in substantial compliance with law and that the interests of the public will be promoted by such reassessment.

Reassessments were, in 1906, ordered and made in the town of Washington, Shawano county; village of Schleisingerville, Washington county; town of Cleveland, Marathon county; village of Viola, in Richland and Vernon counties; City of Richland Center, Richland county, and village of Weyerhaeuser, Rusk county.

These reassessments have resulted in the following changes from the aggregate valuations of the assessors:

	Real Estate	Personal Property.	Total.
Cleveland—
Original assessment	$364,785	$94,861	$459,646
Reassessment	728,530	190,525.50	919,055.50
Richland Center—
Original assessment	1,187,950	287,905	1,475,855
Reassessment	1,433,565	445,183	1,878,748
Schleisingerville—
Original assessment	202,270	70,475	272,745
Reassessment	296,735	107,853	404,588
Viola—
Original assessment	123,052	63,436	185,488
Reassessment	132,383	86,325	218,707
Washington—
Original assessment	416,857	69,354	486,211
Reassessment	813,615	106,098	919,713
Weyerhauser—
Original assessment	34,670	12,576	47,246
Reassessment	41,264	25,128	66,392

The question of undervaluation should not be considered the only important one in studying these figures.

In almost every case where reassessment was ordered the action of the assessor had been in direct violation or disregard of plain and unequivocal law without any excuse, except that the sentiment of the community would not support him in following the law.

The power vested in the commission to order reassessments has been exercised conservatively, and only when it clearly appeared that great injustice had been done some taxpayers by the omission of the property of others or by very unequal valuations. Wherever the controversies could be reasonably attributed to honest differences of judgment reassessments were refused.

The cost of these reassessments is charged back to the community whose assessor and board of review have shown themselves derelict in official duty. It is to be hoped that this penalty for disregarding the law may have a wholesome effect on assessing officers generally, and on assessment districts in the choice of such officers.

2. A STATE BUDGET.

In the appropriating, expending and accounting functions of the State there is equal need for the application of standards of efficiency and economy. In the matter of financial control the budget is now recognized as having a place of first importance. Most up-to-date and progressive cities now seek to present an annual budget presenting in a clear, concise way the financial status of the municipality, a detailed accounting of its expenditures for the past year and an analytical summary of financial needs for the ensuing year. As a result of the findings and recommendations of the Efficiency Commission. President Taft has recommended, and probably will present to the next session of Congress, a scientific Federal budget. In few, if indeed any, of the States is there presented to the Legislature anything approaching a scientific summary and analysis of those fundamental factors and elements which are essential to a proper understanding of the fiscal affairs of the State on the part of the Governors, the legislators and the taxpaying public. New York State has made a beginning in this all-important matter. The great Commonwealth of Pennsylvania should not lag behind.

A clean-cut, scientific State budget would not permit the perpetuation just to take one single instance of budgetary control—of the policy of appropriating vast sums of public money to scores of private charitable and eleemosynary institutions which for years have lived from the public purse.

3. UNIFORM ACCOUNTING AND SUPERVISION.

In this connection, attention is called to the need for a more efficient system of public accounting, auditing and reporting of all State offices, including every State educational, benevolent, penal and reformatory institution, public institution, and the offices of each taxing district or public institution in the State.

Ohio was one of the first States to pass a uniform accounting law for counties and municipalities and at once some seventy cities in that State adopted a uniform system of accounting and published an annual descriptive schedule of their financial operations.

In 1906, Massachusetts passed a uniform accounting law for municipalities and established a State department for the compilation, analysis and publication of municipal statistics. Other States have fallen into line. Pennsylvania sorely needs such a system.

The rapid spread of the idea of uniform accounting is due to the insistence of many public officials, business associations, and public-spirited citizens who wanted to see public affairs placed on the same high standard and economic basis as those of a successful business enterprise; the introduction of more efficient methods of purchasing supplies, supported by evidence of delivery; the possibility of analytical and comparable statements at given periods; an examination of public records, obtaining for the official a report of approval of his acts when duly discharged; and to assist in eradicating public graft existing in some localities by the falsification of records and alteration of figures as disclosed through examinations made by private auditors.

Indiana is generally conceded to have the best uniform accounting law in the country. (A copy of the Indiana accounting law is herewith submitted.)

MUNICIPAL TAXATION.

State revenues and taxation do not present as great difficulties and problems as in the case of rapidly developing municipalities, where the gap between revenue and necessary expenditure to meet growing needs steadily widens.

The application of the same principles of efficient assessment collection and expenditure, which I have urged in State administration will do much toward bridging this gap. New sources of revenue are not needed, probably, in either State or municipality. What is needed is a more efficient and economical administration of the existing fiscal system. There are two or three matters, however, involving the sources of local municipal revenue that should be considered.

1. MERCANTILE LICENSE TAX.

The legislative committee appointed in 1909 to consider a revision of the corporation and revenue laws of the Commonwealth reported that the largest number of protests against existing taxes were directed against the mercantile license tax. This tax has existed in Pennsylvania in various forms since 1821. It is not particularly oppressive being only one mill on retail dealers, one-half mill on wholesale dealers, and one-quarter mill on dealers at exchange.

The Committee seeks to justify this tax on the ground that "business of all kinds has become so accustomed to the tax as to have adjusted itself thereto, and it seems only fair that the private business man should bear part of the burdens of the Government by which he benefits, when corporations are called upon to bear so much heavier burdens in the way of capital stock tax, and public service corporations bear in addition a gross receipts tax of eight mills upon the business which they conduct, which is also a tax upon privilege and is laid in the same way. It is proposed hereafter to impose a tax on manufacturing corporations also, as some of the merchants have suggested, so that this privilege will not escape. Money which is active in business and is thus being repeatedly turned over is specially fitted for taxation, and in all States is a special object of such taxation. If the money of the merchant is not taxed, a large amount will escape its share of the public burden. This is opposed to the principles of equalizing taxes on property of the same class so far as it is practical to subject it to successful taxation."

The cost of collecting this tax in 1908 was 10.5 per cent. One of the items in this cost is the advertising of the mercantile tax lists. The Committee thinks that if the published lists should include "not merely the names and classification but also the amount of business on which the tax is laid (which could be done at slight expense) the lists would be of great value in securing equalization." The Committee concludes that the mercantile license tax should be continued as now laid.

This conclusion may fairly be challenged as opposed both to sound principles of taxation and to expediency. It is now generally recognized that while certain business may properly be licensed for purposes of police regulation, ordinary business licenses should not be imposed for revenue. These licenses cannot be made to produce enough revenue to justify the annoyance and expense of collection. They are unequal in their incidence and harmful in their economic effects. If high business taxes be imposed, manufacturers and wholesalers will find it difficult to meet the terms of competitors in more favorable localities. Retail merchants can more readily shift the tax to the consumer, but this increases the cost of living, makes the city less desirable as a place of residence, and accordingly depreciates real estate.

If business taxes are imposed at all the proceeds should be retained by the city which protects the property and renders the business profitable.

LOCAL TAXATION OF PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATIONS.

The proper method of taxing public service corporations is beset with many difficulties and there is as yet no concensus of opinion even as to the best theoretical method. Much weight has to be given both to the state of public opinion in a given locality, and to the general tax system prevailing in the particular State concerned.

In his outline of A Model System of State and Local Taxation submitted to the first national conference on taxation held at Columbus, Ohio, in 1907, Mr. Lawson Purdy, president of the Department of Taxes and Assessments of New York, laid down the following principles in the taxation of public service corporations:

"The real estate of public service corporations not used in the operation of the service should be taxable locally for local purposes. Any tax in addition to the local tax should be assessed by a State authority by mathematical rules so that the necessity for judgment on the part of assessors shall be eliminated.

"Public service corporations should be so dealt with as to secure the best service at the lowest cost to users, and the plan of taxation should be so devised that it may be easy to reduce taxes as the charges for service are reduced. When the accounts of public service corporations are kept as public accounts, and their net earnings are limited by the reduction of charges to a reasonable return upon the actual capital invested, any tax will be a tax upon the users of the service. So long as the earnings are greatly in excess of the cost of rendering the service, the power of taxation may properly be used to recover for the public part of the monopoly value due to the liberality of the franchise."

It has generally been held that the chief advantage of the Pennsylvania system of taxing public utilities is the method of treating the operating property of a corporation as a unit. Connecticut, also has followed this plan for several years, and two years ago it was adopted in California. Before California made the change from the local taxation of public service corporation property, a survey was made to determine what burden each class of corporations bore under the ad valorem system. Then a gross earnings tax was imposed sufficient to produce approximately the same revenue, and the proceeds were taken by the State. The California rate on railroads, street railways, and gas and electric companies is 4 per cent. of gross earnings. In Pennsylvania these corporations pay eight-tenths of 1 per cent. on gross earnings and the 5 mill tax on capital stock.

Under existing laws in Pennsylvania, the real estate of public service corporations, which is necessary to their operation, is not subject to taxation for local purposes in the absence of legislative authority imposing such taxes. Under the special Act of 1859 the City of Pittsburgh taxes the real estate, except right-of-way, of railroads and street railways in the old city, but all other public utilities are exempt from local taxation. In the case of the Federal Street and Pleasant Valley Railroad Company vs. City of Pittsburgh (226 Pa. 419), the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania ruled that no railroad or street railway not included within the boundaries of the city at the time of the consolidation is subject to taxation by the city authorities. The general rule exempting the real estate of railroad companies has been held to apply to street railways, gas, light and power companies, telephone companies, and other public service corporations. As a consequence, Pittsburgh derives no revenue from such property as the car barns of street railway companies, power houses of electric light companies, gas plants of gas companies, reservoirs of water companies, etc., and, of course, rights of way, poles, wires, pipes, conduits, tracks, etc., are exempt.

A careful estimate shows that public service corporations having a total capital of approximately $70,000,000, of which $50,000,000 may conservatively be estimated as representing that portion of their business within the city, are exempt from local taxation on over $21,000,000 of real estate. It has been proposed to ask for special legislation to permit the city to tax this exempt property for local purposes.

The exemption from local taxation of that part of the real estate of railroads indispensable or reasonably necessary to its business and constituting a part of its corporate machinery was based upon the assumption that such property entered into the value of its franchise as a whole and was taxable as such to the State. It must be recognized, however, that while the real estate owned by public service corporations is, or at least should be, included in the valuation of their capital stock, yet the rate is much lower than that borne by other real estate. It is often difficult to determine to what extent the capital stock valuation of such corporations includes all the value upon which they should pay taxes. To the extent that bonded or other indebtedness is deducted, they escape taxation on a kind of value which if owned by others would pay taxes. In other words, the tax on real estate does not take any account of a divided ownership between the holder of an equity and the owner of a mortgage on the property, but the tax is collected upon the value as a whole.

The "Special Franchise" law of New York was enacted for the purpose of securing the full valuation of the privileges enjoyed by the public service corporations in the highways without any deduction for debt. These privileges are taxed in New York in the same way as ordinary real estate without deduction, while if they were assessed as personal property, the bonded debt would be deducted, and there would be very little taxable value left. On the other hand, the valuation of these special franchises has brought about many complications and much litigation. New York is at the opposite extreme from California and Connecticut in that it imposes many different kinds of taxes, assessed by varying sets of officials without any particular coherence or rule. The resulting chaos is unfair to those corporations, unduly expensive in assessment, and collection, and, also, prevents proper comparison of the tax burden on these corporations as compared with that on other forms of property.

The New Jersey plan of taxing steam railroads presents what seems to be a fair compromise between the State taxation and local exemption of California and the local assessment plan of some other States. In New Jersey, stations, freight yards and buildings, and similar railroad property outside of the main right of way is called "second class," and, while valued by a State board, is placed upon local rolls and pays the local tax rate. The "main stem," together with the value of the franchise, is assessed as a whole and the tax paid into the State treasury.

The policy of exempting from local taxation the actual right of way of a railroad is quite generally held by students of taxation to be sound. The right of way of a steam railroad has a value much in excess of the value of ordinary abutting property, owing to its use as a connecting strip. It is part of an integral system traversing many tax jurisdictions, (perhaps), and the valuation of a small section of it is not only beyond the capacity of the local assessor, but it is unscientific and bound to result in inequality and injustice in the conflict between various localities. Other States, where local taxation of railroads obtains, have State boards of equalizations, which Pennsylvania does not have, for adjusting the valuation among the several communities concerned. The inevitable inequality which attends this system causes much friction and litigation.

As a general principle, then, it seems wise for the State to take "a large part of the taxes on such public service corporations as railroads which own their own right of way and to leave to localities in which the public service is performed the taxes on these corporations which use the streets and public places. Street-using corporations owe the value of their property to the extent and character of the population and government of the communities in which the service is rendered. The cost of their protection is mainly a local charge. The distribution of the taxes paid by such corporations is a comparatively simple matter, because they frequently own property in no more than one taxing district."

Applying this principle to the local situation, it would seem unwise to urge local taxation of the rights of way of steam railroads, but legislation should be sought empowering the city to tax the real estate of such public service corporations as gas, light, power and street railway corporations, including not only buildings, plants and power houses, but also street railway tracks, and the poles, wires, pipes and conduits of electric and gas companies.

Some of the questions raised in the foregoing discussion of local taxation and finance are intimately bound up with the proposition to establish in this State a Public Utilities Commission. The fact that over two-thirds of the total revenues of the State of Pennsylvania are derived from corporations, which are subject to loose fiscal and administrative regulation, emphasizes the importance of such a commission. Many other States have taken steps toward the substitution of efficient administrative supervision for control by legal definition. Administration is being recognized as more important than legislation. More and more such administrative bodies as public service and tax commissions composed of experts must be relied upon in the solution of the complex problems of efficient service and equitable distribution of taxation.

One of the most serious obstacles to reform in matters pertaining to municipal taxation and administration is the constitutional limitations placed upon local autonomy. To overcome the constitutional prohibition against special legislation, which undoubtedly was a source of abuse in an earlier day, provision was made for the division of cities in this State into three classes. Under this classification Pittsburgh ranks with Scranton as a second class city and the municipal functions of one must be made to conform to those of the other, though the economic, social and fiscal conditions and problems of the two cities are widely different.

The physical, social and economic conditions of large cities differ not only from those of rural towns but also among themselves. The recent rapid growth of cities, the great diversity in their population, and the increase in the number and variety of functions which municipalities have had to assume, has made the system of general legislation or of classification fully as ineffective as the earlier system of special charters.

Only by the adoption of the principle of municipal home rule, under which cities shall have the right to frame their own charters and to legislate of themselves in local matters, can effective reforms and steady progress under constantly changing conditions be assured. Municipal home rule does not involve, as has sometimes been argued, the creation of numerous centers of population independent of State control. Every advocate of home rule for cities recognizes that the very nature of our government necessitates certain well-defined limitations upon the power of municipal corporations. Municipal home rule means rather that the people of a local community, those who are likely to be best informed as to local problems and needs, shall have the power to frame charters and ordinances for the conduct of those matters which are exclusively local in character.

European cities have forged far ahead of us in this important matter. There the local authorities who propose the exercise of some new function or the adoption of some new policy for the advancement of their city do not inquire whether the power has been granted, but rather has it been denied. There the presumption is always in favor of the right to exercise new functions; with us the presumption is against such a right.

Nine of our American States have adopted the principle of giving to cities the right to frame their own charters and to legislate for themselves in matters which are strictly local, and in no instance has there been any disposition to return to the old system of State dependence and control. One State, California, has recently extended the home rule principle to the counties of the State.

Pennsylvania has long held advanced ground in the separation of the sources of State and local taxation. The next forward step lies in the direction of a large measure of municipal home rule in strictly local matters. Only by securing the right to control its own local policies will Pittsburgh be able so to direct its fiscal affairs as to promote the projects necessary to true and lasting municipal progress.

Mr. Brown: The situation you mention regarding the Auditor General's Department was before this Committee and was given careful consideration. We drew Acts of Assembly covering it,—the very subject you are treating of. This Committee drafted Acts of Assembly giving the Auditor General additional clerks and providing for a change in the methods of valuation. There was hardly a corporation in Pennsylvania that didn't protest against any change in the method of assessment and taxation; they overwhelmed the legislature and it was impossible for the bills to pass.

Dr. Holdsworth: May I submit that the method of taking care of these much needed reforms was, in my judgment, wrong? This State doesn't want any more investigations of that kind. What it wants is an efficient Tax Commission whose business it is to be on the job all the time to advise the government, the legislature, the finance committees, and all others concerned in all matters in connection with taxation and assessment in this State, in other States and in other countries. Pennsylvania is big enough and not too big to pay for the highest grade of service that it is possible for any State to get in this respect.

Mr. Brown: Are you in favor of the collection of the taxes by a central authority in Harrisburg?

Dr. Holdsworth: No, sir.

Mr. Brown: Don't you think it would simplify it to have a central authority to have full control of collecting all the taxes?

Dr. Holdsworth: Yes, if it would actually collect these taxes.

Mr. Brown: We have heard objection from all parts of the State against the local assessors,—against their methods of assessment; that they are depending upon the people for their re-election, and their methods are, they say, largely governed by that fact. I take it that the best thing to do is to have the taxes collected by some central authority.

Dr. Holdsworth: The essential thing is to take the local assessor out of politics.

Mr. Alter: What is your thought on the Federal Income Tax?

Dr. Holdsworth: I don't think it matters what Pennsylvania does with that Income Tax; it is going to pass anyhow. I am sure I cannot do justice to that subject by just expressing an opinion. The income tax is not a tax that can be satisfactorily administered by the State. Our experience has demonstrated that the income tax is not successful as a State measure. It is eminently successful in Europe. Wisconsin has recently passed an Income Tax and it is now in existence two years and is working pretty smoothly. I happen to know one of the members of the Tax Commission, with whom I am in constant correspondence; and his judgment is that the income tax is going to work in Wisconsin. I don't believe that the Federal income tax is eventually going to become a constant source of revenue in the States. I do believe that the inheritance tax is going to become more and more a dependable tax for the extension of State revenues. In this State we have a collateral inheritance tax, and we will have a direct inheritance tax. This is a tax that the State can in a most effective way administer. While I am entirely convinced that the Federal income tax is going to become effective, I am not convinced that the Federal Government will ever attempt to use it.

Mr. Brown: Are you in favor of a graded and progressive tax?

Dr. Holdsworth: Yes.

F. R. SCHOONAKER, City Solicitor, Bradford, Pa.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee:

I come before you here today from a little city in the northwestern part of Pennsylvania, to place before you the matter, for your consideration, of giving increased revenue to our locality for local purposes. As it is today, we are required to carry larger burdens than we carried years ago, and we haven't the revenue with which to do it. We are under orders from the Health Department to construct expensive sewage disposal plants. In many cases the limit of our borrowing capacity has been reached. The orders from the Health Department are imperative, and we haven't the money to build these plants. The people of today are crying for more electric lights, they are crying for more highways, and they are crying for public playgrounds, and our revenues are so limited, that only in a small degree are we able to meet these public demands today. As suggested by the speaker who just finished, a considerable portion of local property is exempted from local taxation. The public Utility Corporations pay no local taxes in the locality in which their business is conducted, and, of course, we get no benefit from the taxation on railroad property,—and so we are coming before you, while you are considering this question of taxation, to get some relief from this situation.

In speaking before you today, I speak to you not alone as City Solicitor of Bradford. I have attended the convention of the League of Cities of the Third Class, and am a member of the Law Committee of that League; and by unanimous vote, that convention went on record that the needs of our cities of the third class were such that the Legislature should, in fairness, provide us with additional sources of revenue with which to carry on the functions that you have placed at our doors. Now, how best you can do this is a difficult proposition. We advocated, and at one time there was passed by the House, a bill which enabled us to tax the real estate of local utility corporations, and the real estate of railroad corporations, except the right of way. That measure failed of passage through the Senate. For some years past we have been knocking at the doors of the legislature for some remedy, and it now seems that in the wisdom of the Legislature, they have taken this matter up in the way of reasonably and fairly determining what should be done. They have appointed this Commission and you are going about and taking the concensus of opinion, and let us hope you will settle upon a system that will work to the desired end.

I am of the opinion that possibly the return to the local government of a portion of the State tax collected would be as easy a way to accomplish the desired result as anything. I cannot say what there is collected in the assessment and valuation of the real estate of railroad corporations, but if the State were to return a portion of that tax collected from the railroads and a portion of the tax collected from public utility corporations, equivalent to what we might ordinarily expect from the taxation of these corporations for local purposes, it would be a step in the right direction. This might also be accomplished by the imposition of a direct inheritance tax, which is not now in effect in Pennsylvania.

In laying before you gentlemen our extreme necessities in this regard, I trust you will work out something that will relieve us along these lines.

Mr. Brown: What is your assessed value in Bradford?

Mr. Schoonmaker: Five millions.

Mr. Brown: And your tax rate?

Mr. Schoonmaker: Fourteen mills.

JAS. A. GARDNER, of New Castle, Penna.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Commission:

I will be as brief as I can. I was much pleased with the address delivered by Dr. Holdsworth, which was somewhat along the lines of what I had to say.

It is well known that there is about forty per cent of the population of the United States now in cities, and the proper government of cities is one of the problems of the times,—the increased responsibility for providing increased taxation. I don't need to elaborate on that to you gentlemen; you know how it is,—that every city in the Commonwealth has its debt: Philadelphia has its millions and Pittsburgh is pretty near thereto,—I don't know how they are doing just now. Our debt runs pretty nearly five hundred thousand. Why? Simply because of the increased amount of building and construction and laying of sewers, and numerous things we have had to do on account of the increased population. Now, we have to pay for them. What have we to pay for them out of? We haven't any assets out of which to pay,—simply nothing but real estate.

I am here in the interest of the State to speak on the lines you have heard here today,—that there be something done towards levying a tax upon public service corporations. I understand the public service corporations pay five mills on their capital stock and they say that includes their real estate. They pay their four mills on bonds, and so do we,—the eight mills on their gross receipts. Five mills on the real estate. What do we pay? About twenty mills. They have fifteen mills the better of all the rest of us. They have a car barn, electric light works, water works, and now their telephone and telegraph buildings they are withdrawing these from us. It amounts possibly to about six to ten thousand dollars. I think the whole value would amount to five hundred thousand dollars. I remember we went over this a few years ago and in Harrisburg it was nearly two million and in McKeesport two millions. When you take that from the people then the people have to make it up from the land. I don't say you should put the local tax upon them in addition to what they pay; but they should pay local taxation, because I say they have fifteen mills the better of all the rest of us.

Mr. Brown: You forget the gross receipts?

Mr. Gardner: I understand,—that will make up a unit of it. They should pay something to the State,—with the right of eminent domain that is all they pay; they aren't a bit better than we are. We borrow money to make public improvements, and we make them for the State in a certain sense, because the streets are public highways; they belong to the State. We have incurred a great big debt. We took in just recently a bond debt of $83,000 simply to put in sewers to carry the water off the streets. We have to pay four mills on that. Why do we do it? I say they aren't any better than we are; they pay four mills, and we pay the same. It is unjust. They don't pay anything more than we do except the eight mills on their gross earnings, but that is for the revenue of the State, because they have the right of eminent domain and the public gives it to them.

There are two ways of working it out. One way is to return to the city a portion of the tax. That would be hard to work out. The most logical way should be to assess them locally. If they could get credit on their State tax for the amount of tax they paid locally, you could work it out easily.

Mr. Brown: How would you get the revenue?

Mr. Gardner: That would be a question. If they would pay a local tax on their real estate,—I mean the amount they pay to the State, which would be about the basis of what their real estate would amount to,—that could be taken off and then they would be just like we are.

Mr. Brown: Then the State would have to stop giving the local districts any small portion of the tax.

Mr. Gardner: No; they don't get that all from public utilities; that comes from all sources. It may lessen it some. I am simply asking now, why should you take from these cities the amount of real estate tax which these corporations which are now exempted from taxation would pay? Figure it over. It would be wrong to place this additional burden upon them and have them still pay the five mills tax on the amount of their capital stock that would be represented in their real estate. Eliminate that much out of it, and then let us tax them. This all goes to the State, and yet we have to make up our streets and keep them up.

As a matter of fairness, I ask you to take up this subject and see if there is some way in which you can be fair to us and fair to the railroads and to the public service corporations.

MR. J. T. AILMAN, (Secretary, Pennsylvania State Grange):

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Committee, I have the honor to speak for some 70,000 organized farmers and in a wider sense for the more than 200,000 farmers of the State. I am sory that I am not supported by a room full of my fellow farmers as was my friend who spoke for the manufacturers this morning. This is not because our people are not interested in the subject, but because they are at home working so hard to make money enough to pay the taxes that they have neither time nor money to come here.

The principle that personal and corporate property should produce the State revenues and that real estate alone should bear the burden of local taxes is nowhere else so rigidly adhered to as it is in this State. The consequence is that our farms and homes are more heavily burdened than any others in the Union. Nor is this without disastrous effects on our business. The manufacturers warn you that if you tax them you will drive them from the State. Just where they will locate I do not know for wherever else they go they will make the acquaintance of the tax collector. We do not want to lose them and should be sorry to see them go but, if from their hordes of wealth, they are unwilling to pay their share for being protected, we will bid them a sad farewell. Because we are paying our taxes and theirs too our farmers are being driven from the State. In the last decade nineteen rural counties lost in population. Others were saved from net loss only because they had large towns within them. More than one hnudred thousand people left the farms of the State with no one to take their places.

Farm values have increased here nothing like they have in all States west of the Alleghenies. There they have more than doubled in value in the last twenty years. Here they have little more than held their own. Yet here we raise more to the acre than they can do and have better markets at our door.

Yet you men of the town complain of the high cost of living and blame the farmer for getting the lion's share. The fact is that the farmer is more the victim than the beneficiary of present conditions. Not only does the tax gatherer rob him but the staples of the farm are not now and have not been for years been bringing high prices while farm machinery and almost all other farm supplies have advanced at least fifty per cent, and farm labor has doubled in cost.

In discussing taxes the city man and the city papers usually speak of the State revenues as if they were the only burden.

The fact is that it takes fully three times as much money to support the local governments as it does the State and the additional fact cannot be too strongly emphasized that personal and corporate property from which the State derives its revenue is worth fully twice as much as real estate, the only source of local revenues. Thus the farm and the home pay fully six times as much tax on the dollar as does the corporation. No wonder that farms are not a particularly attractive investment here.

Our friend this morning asked "why tax manufacturers or otherwise increase the State revenues?" The State is now getting more money than it needs, hence the rush for jobs and the raid of all kinds of charities on the State Treasury. He even seemed to think that the money given to the public schools was an unjust burden on the corporations. We are rather startled at such a position, and while emphatically denying its correctness we demand that one man's dollar shall bear the same share of the burdens of government as the dollar of another, no matter where invested. We farmers are driven to take this stand that either the corporations must pay more money into the State Treasury to be appropriated to the local communities, or they must submit to local taxes. Some six thousand farmers are coming into the Granges of the State each year and it will not be long until we will be in a position to demand justice.

Instead of debating the question whether the present school appropriation is right, we now demand that the State pay the entire cost of the public schools, or at least, the minimum salaries of the teachers for the minimum term and relieve local taxation to that extent. Not only this but we demand more money for public roads.

As a member of the last legislature I had the honor to introduce a bill providing that the minimum salaries of teachers should be paid by the State for the minimum term. The appropriations committee refused to report the bill because the revenues would not warrant it. Gentlemen of the Committee, do you have the courage to recommend to the legislature to increase the taxes on the corporations to produce the money, and if you do, do you have any idea that the legislature would have the courage to pass it?

My friend, Senator Sproul, has immortalized himself by securing the passage of a bill providing for a splendid system of State roads but instead of favoring the putting of a tax of a single mill on the corporations which would provide all of the money needed to build the roads in a reasonable time it is proposed to amend the constitution so that the money can be borrowed and the evil day of payment postponed. Would it not be good business to pay as you go, when you can do so without seriously burdening any one? My thought is that your committee should recommend one additional mill on personal and corporate property for schools, and another for roads. Even then this class of property would be paying less than one-third of what real estate now pays. Do you have the courage to do it? No one will deny that it is just.

We farmers ask for no exemptions or special privileges. We demand only what the constitution promises, equality.

Mr. Brown: How is the farmer provided by what the people call high cost of living?

Mr. Ailman: He isn't provided at all.

Mr. Brown: How are prices now?

Mr. Ailman: The prices on staples are just about the same as they were fifteen years ago. I will admit corn has been a little bit higher until this year, but they have a bumper crop all over the country. If you think fifty cents for corn is a very big price, try to raise it.

Mr. Brown: How are the wages?

Mr. Ailman: Farm Wages are double.

Mr. Brown: Now the result isn't as satisfactory as it was two years ago.

Mr. Ailman: No, sir, I say double, but this was in our neighborhood.

Mr. Brown: You have no market for truck.

Mr. Ailman: No, sir, no market for truck, and so forth.

A. M. SCOTT, Pittsburgh Wholesale Merchants' Asso.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Commission:

I will only have a few words to say. I represent several wholesale interests, which have prepared a brief for the consideration of this Committee, namely, Wholesale Grocers, Wholesale Dry Goods Men, Wholesale Produce, Shoes, Drugs, etc. I am not going to make a speech, but I will ask permission to read their brief and leave it with you.

"At the 1911 session of our State Legislature, your honorable Committee recommended that the Mercantile License tax be continued as now laid.

"We, the undersigned wholesale merchants of Pittsburgh, doing business as individuals and firms, as well as those which are incorporated, respectfully protest against its continuance and petition your Committee to reconsider your position with regard to same.

"It is a tax levied directly on enterprise, incentive and effect, and is based on the false assumption that sales are synonymous with profits. Quite as often the sales thus taxed represent an actual loss during the period.

"The effect of this tax is to place our merchants residing, doing business, and paying taxes within this Commonwealth at a disadvantage in other markets with competitors situated outside our borders, thus operating against the commercial prosperity of the State. By way of illustration on this point, we would sugest that there is no such tax in the State of Ohio, and Pittsburgh merchants are thereby placed at a disadvantage when competing with the City of Cleveland in common territory.

"Moreover, the tax of five mills on the stock value of Mercantile Corporations, makes merchants who do business under corporate form, subject to double taxation, and as the corporation form has become common among merchants, many of them are thereby subject to the double tax, and, when we add the federal tax, it makes a triple tax or assessment.

"We regard it is a special tax levied on a class of people already bearing their full share of taxation. Merchants both wholesale and retail occupy comparatively high priced locations on which they pay large city and county taxes, whereas, other classes as a rule, are able to avail themselves of cheaper properties on which the taxes are merely nominal.

"This tax is levied against the merchants who are citizens and tax payers of our own State, whereas, dealers and manufacturers from other States doing business in the Commonwealth are exempt, or at most pay but a small broker's license.

"We believe that if you will consider the unfair features of this present Mercantile Tax as herein outlined, you will recommend the discontinuance of same."

J. S. ROCKWELL, Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh Railroad Co.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Commission:

I didn't come here today to make any extended argument. In fact, our main object is to seek information. We would like to know just what you want to know. As far as the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh Railroad Co., is concerned, we would be glad to produce any facts and figures which your committee may need in your study of the questions before you. We are only interested in the subject of local taxation of our railroad from the various local tax districts. We think, with all due respect to the gentlemen who have spoken today, that we are paying our share of the taxes in the two States where our road runs, and we would be glad to show you, by facts and figures, in regard to that, that we are paying our share of the taxes.

In regard to this matter of local taxation, it seems to me that any attempt along that line is a step backward in the science of taxation.

In New York State, where I live, we have the two systems combined there. In every tax district, city, township or village through which we run, the local assessors make an assessment upon all our real estate in the tax district. In addition to that we pay taxes to the State on our capital stock and gross earnings, the same as we do here, though at a much less rate. I had a tax bill for the year ending June 30, 1912, to see how that worked out in the two States, and there is only a few dollars difference. When you take the taxes we pay to the State of New York and to the municipalities and local authorities and add them all together, and do the same with Pennsylvania, you get practically the same result. I have a good right to conjecture that there is some force in the argument that the local people, the townships and cities, should have some greater benefit from the taxes of these corporations, but I don't think it is a scientific way to go back and allow the local assessor to assess the real estate occupied by a railroad operating through their tax district. I don't think it is a scientific or reasonable way. If there is to be any plan by which the local municipality, townships, etc., are to have any greater help from the corporations,—railroad corporations,—I think it should be by some division of the taxes that are paid to the State, between the State and the local people. We have that in New York. Take our tax on mortgages, as applied to corporations. When we take a mortgage or increase our bond issue in the State of New York, we have to pay a certain tax to the State. That tax is divided and paid to the tax districts through which we run. We have, in the State of New York, as you know, a State Board of Tax Commissioners, and they fix the value of the property of public service corporations, as far as railroads are concerned, and the only valuation that is fixed by the State Board is the value of the special franchise. This is the case with all public utility corporations. The State Board, as far as street railways are concerned, fixes the value of the special franchise of the corporation for running its road in the streets. These valuations are certified to the local city or village, and they are taxed on that valuation the same as any other valuation.

The difficulty in my mind, where the local assessor would apply the valuation, would be to determine the value of real estate occupied by a railroad. It is a practical impossibility for the average man to say what a railroad running through a town is worth. It is a practical impossibility for any man, no matter how scientific he is, to say what the value of the real estate is, because the value of that real estate of a railroad running through a township of a county depends entirely upon the earning value of the railroad. It is a practical impossibility for any body to say what the real estate occupied by a railroad is worth.

I think any attempt to have the local assessor fix the value upon the real estate of railroads is a step backward.

If the Committee will indicate any information they would like to have, we would be very glad to furnish it. We will remain here until tomorrow, at least our attorney will. I understand other railroad companies will be represented here tomorrow. If you can think of anything you would like to have us furnish, we will be glad to do so.

Adjourned until November 20, 1912, 10 A. M.

Pittsburgh, Pa., November 20, 1912.

Public meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce, Chairman James P. McNichol, presiding, all other members of the Commission, and counsel, present. Meeting called to order by the Chairman at 11 A. M.

MR. HARRY COHEN, of the Pittsburgh Board of Trade:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee:

I just desire to read the following resolution:

"At the regular monthly meeting of the Pittsburgh Board of Trade, held November 18th, 1912, the action taken by this organization on March 10th, 1910, was reaffirmed, copy of said action ordered sent to your honorable body, the same being as follows:

"Whereas, the direct State Tax now levied on the business of wholesale and retail merchants commonly known as "the Mercantile License tax" has been found to be unjust and inequitable, and the cost of advertising and maintenance of the office necessary to enforce the collection thereof is excessive and burdensome to the people, therefore be it

"Resolved, that we recommend the repeal of all acts of Assembly relating to the Mercantile License Tax in so far as the same applies to wholesale and retail vendors of and dealers in ordinary goods, wares, and merchandise."

Respectfully submitted,

PITTSBURGH BOARD OF TRADE,

J. R. PARK, Secretary.

J. R. PARK, Secretary, Pittsburgh Board of Trade:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

This matter has been before your Committee. We simply wish to present the action of the Pittsburgh Board of Trade as being in favor of the abolishment of this Mercantile License Tax.

JOHN M. ROBERTS, President, Penna. Retail Jewelers' Association.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Commission:

We have had this matter up for a number of years, all over the country with Retail Dealers' Associations. We are very much opposed to this tax because we consider it unjust. I don't believe that question has been taken up. This tax is levied on the parties who are the least able to pay it. The profit of the average retail merchant is less than they are in other lines, particularly so in the small towns,—not so much in Pittsburgh,—the merchandise business is all drawn to the larger cities through the department stores or the Mail order houses. For this reason the small merchant of all kinds cannot afford to pay this tax, be it ever so small. We will file a brief upon this subject later.

Mr. Brown: You consider this tax interfers with business?

Mr. Roberts: Yes, and levied upon parties who are the least able to pay it. The parties who make the least profit are the retail merchants, particularly in the case of the small merchants. Another point we shall take up at some length is a tax on department stores. We feel that the department stores should be taken under a separate class, as they are trying to do in Germany. For instance, we don't feel the effect in one large establishment, but in the small stores; all business has been turned to the larger stores to such an extent that the small merchants are virtually kicked out of existence.

Mr. Brown: What has been the diminution in the last five years in the small houses?

Mr. Roberts: They are gradually decreasing all the time, in proportion to the population.

Mr. Brown: Do you consider that due to the mercantile tax?

Mr, Roberts: No, not the mercantile tax entirely, but through department stores and mail order houses.

Mr. Brown: Isn't that because these mail order houses and department stores furnish better facilities?

Mr. Roberts: No, it is not. That depends on what you mean by facilities.

Mr. Brown: I mean they send out goods for inspection and give their customers the right to return the goods without being under obligation to purchase, and so on.

Mr. Roberts: It isn't that so much, as that all these commodities can be bought under one roof.

Mr. Brown: How do you come to the conclusion that the mercantile tax causes it?

Mr. Roberts: I am speaking of this as a question of taxation. That the mercantile tax affects all the small dealers all over the country. I can possibly demonstrate it better when I say that it affects the small merchants in these small twons, and some of them can hardly pay their ordinary dues in the association, amounting to from three to five dollars a year; and frequently some of the other dealers have gone down into their pockets and paid the dues for the smaller merchant. I think this question of taxing the department stores should be taken up at this time, because if there is nothing done, in twenty years time you will not have any small stores.

MR. SAVAGE, MR. SCOTT, MR. HOWE.

Penna. Retail Hardware Asso., Called. Did not respond.

MR. SCARBOROUGH, of the Ookland Board of Trade:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

I could also represent the Pennsylvania Retail Hardware Dealers' Association. These gentlemen whom you have called have not been able to get here today.

I was president of the Pennsylvania Retail Hardware Dealers' Association last year, and I know they have always gone upon record as being opposed to this mercantile tax. They are composed of over nine hundred merchants throughout the cities of Pennsylvania in which hardware is sold.

I might say that the Pennsylvania Retail Hardware Dealers' Association is opposed to the mercantile tax, and that the Oakland Board of Trade, as a body, are opposed to the mercantile tax. We will file a brief later on as to that.

Mr. Brown: Do you think the imposition of this tax has any effect on your business?

Mr. Scarborough: As a general thing it has, if you take the small merchant; every little thing which adds to the cost of doing business, helps to add to the high cost of living. It helps to add uniformly to everything that the consumer buys from him; you have to add that to the cost.

Mr. Brown: Have you determined how far the small dealer contributes to the State?

Mr. Scorborough: We have gone this far, in proportion to the amount of capital he has invested, he contributes a larger amount than the larger dealer; the small man pays the most, comparatively. It is really a tax on the man that is unable to pay it. It is much harder for the small dealer to pay five dollars than for the large dealer to pay a hundred dollars. That is where the burden comes. We have been opposed to this mercantile tax ever since we have had our organization.

DR. MOYER, Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh, Penna.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

I have no objection and have no kick coming, so far as the State care of the hospitals is concerned. That is not my object in appearing here today.

I understood that a statement was made that the hospitals had a large number of beds unoccupied. Of course, I cannot speak for all the hospitals in the county,—only for the hospital with which I am connected. I have a few figures here. The total number of patients treated in the two years, 1910 and 1911, was 11,000; number of free patients was 3,511; number of part pay patients amounted to 4,000; number of full pay patients, 2,900; in the two years we also took care of the dispensary patients. The State makes no appropriation for dispensary patients. The total number of days treatment in the hospital, multiplying the number of patients by the number of days, is 238,000; the number of free patients, multiplied by the number of days, is 106,106; the percentage of free treatment is 98 per cent. for the two years; divide by two and you have the average for one year; based on 200 per cent., that is for two years, about 44 per cent. of the number of free patients for one year. The average cost per day per patient in the hospital, is $1.63. The amount of the appropriation for the two years was $98,000; divide by the number of patients and number of days and you have an average of 93 cents per day. The cost of maintaining a patient is, $1.63; so it appears that the State has not lost anything on that part of the deal. The point I wish to make is that the State is paying 93 cents per day per patient, while it costs the hospital $1.63.

Another item, the total capacity of the hospital is 360 beds; the average occupancy of the beds in the hospital in 327, for these two years. This was recently furnished for another purpose, but it is so nearly along these same lines, that it will give you all the figures. The number of free patients in the hospitals in Allegheny County is 40 per cent. In our hospital it is 44 per cent; part pay somewhere between 28 and 30 per cent, and full pay probably about 32 per cent. The general average, taking it all over the county, is 44 per cent. What the appropriation was in the entire county, I don't know.

Mr. Brown: You have in your hospital 360 beds, and your number occupied for the two years is 326 beds?

Dr. Moyer: Yes.

Mr. Brown: Criticism has been made that there were many, too many, unoccupied beds in the hospitals in Pennsylvania. What is the need of the 34 extra beds in your hospital?

Dr. Moyer: Just because they aren't at all times unoccupied.

Mr. Brown: They weren't occupied last year and the year before.

Dr. Moyer: But there will be another time when the hospital is filled up to the full capacity.

Mr. Brown: Sometimes you are filled up and need more room?

Dr. Moyer: Yes.

Mr. Brown: I notice the cost per diem in your hospital is $1.64, and in the Allegheny General Hospital it is $2.16. Where can be the difference in this cost per diem?

Dr. Moyer: Simply a little difference in the management. The average cost per day per patient in the hospitals in Allegheny County is $2.01; some run under that and some over it.

ALLEN BURNS, representing the Allied Boards of Trade:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

It has been said that the law of supply and demand regulated the values of real estate the same as everything else. It may apply in other cities, but it certainly does not in Pittsburgh. At least, the prices at which land is being held in Pittsburgh, and the manner in which a great portion of it is being used, does not conform to the law of supply and demand. While it is true that the topography of the city, and the menace of the absentee landlord, aid in a great measure the causation of high land values, yet the ill use of the greater part of our land by the numerous owners, tends to help the natural defects. That we have less accessible land, in proportion to our area, than any city in the United States is unquestionable, and it would only be reasonable to follow that such land as is available would be converted to the best possible use. That it is not the case can readily be seen on investigation.

The leading authorities on city land values in this country and Europe say that the proportion in value of land and buildings should be equal in a business district; in other words, the typical successful property, land and building, appears to earn double interest on cost of building one-half of which, capitalized as economic rent, gives value to the land equal to the cost of the building. Such a condition will not be found in 20 per cent. of our business properties today. The first and second wards comprise the entire high grade retail, wholesale and financial section of Pittsburgh, including a valuable section devoted to manufacturing. The proportion of land to building in this section cannot be found anywhere.

Manhattan Island, considered the highest priced section of land to be found anywhere, does not equal the condition found here in the relative proportion of land to building. The ratio in the two wards mentioned in 80 per cent. land, 20 per cent. improvement. The most valuable section of Manhattan Island lies between 40th street and the Battery, and the East river and the Hudson river, comprising all the high grade financial, retail and wholesale section of New York. The ratio of land to improvement is 61 per cent land, 39 per cent improvement. Notwithstanding this district contains two blocks, the value of which is almost inconceivable, the highest valued block is that bound by Broadway on the west, Nassau street on the east, Pine and Wall streets on the North and South, containing 1.3 acres, valued at $12,905,000, almost $10,000,000 per acre. The other block is in the high grade retail district bounded by Broadway and Fifth Avenue, 33d and 34th streets, containing 3 1-2 acres, valued at $20,758,000, almost $6,000,000 per acre. While the values are unparalleled, yet it can readily be seen that even with the enormous values existing in Manhattan, there is a better use made of the land in Pittsburgh.

Another general comparison that can be made is that of average acre prices of Manhattan to those of the first and second wards of Pittsburgh:

Manhattan assessed value, $206,500 per acre; buildings, $105,000; Pittsburgh, first and second wards, $285,000 per acre, buildings, $68,000.

The specacle of dilapidated two and three-story buildings on land every inch of which has its appreciable value, is all too common in that portion of Pittsburgh dedicated to trade and commerce. In all such instances, the natural relations are reversed. The company is not served, but serves, the owner merely waits and profits by waiting. The owners, assuming the "dog in the manger" attitude, will not improve and will sell only at prohibitive prices to the possible purchasers who would improve. This practice, should, as far as possible, be discouraged by law. The owners should be compelled to maintain some minimum value between their land and the buildings erected upon it, in the interest not only of justice, but of social progress. While the subject is one that is difficult to adjust, conditions are becoming so acute that some form of relief is required.

There is not a tenant in the city doing business in out-of-date buildings that would not welcome modern, up-to-date structures. Rents for business houses are much higher in Pittsburgh than elsewhere, and the cause is readily seen where the landlords endeavor to squeeze out returns on fictitious land values and buildings that have outlived their usefulness.

It is not necessary for land within the business zone to be crowded with skyscrapers, in fact, many of them are harmful. A limit should be placed on high buildings such as in Cleveland, Chicago and Boston have done. Berlin, Germany, limits buildings to five stories; Chicago's limit is twenty stories. A safe limit and a reasonable one for Pittsburgh would be fifteen stories. With a major portion of the land in the business section occupied with modern, five to eight-story buildings, and the inflated land values punctured, the result would be beneficial for the landlord, tenant, and community at large. Land suitable for manufacturing purposes is rated higher proportionately for its use than the land used for trade and commerce, and has reached such a condition in our city that some drastic measures must be taken to right the matter. The most suitable land for such purposes is that lying along our rivers, which also means our railroads. While the entire district is overrated, none stands out so glaring, so unreasonable, and so prohibitive in price as the district between 12th street and 33rd street and Liberty avenue and the Allegheny river, the most suitable district for all purposes in the metal lines, yet the exorbitant prices demanded for it strangles the unfortunates now located there and drives the newcomer to distant places where sane views are held of land values. Within the district bounded the assessed land value is slightly over twenty million dollars; of this 30 per cent is owned by families whose attitude on leases and exorbitant sale prices have done more to drive out small industries than all other causes combined. Land having the same advantage, in any city east of the Mississippi river can be purchased for not more than 50 per cent of the prices being asked here. A district such as this is ideal for bee-hive building, generally known as power building, where light manufacturing can be conducted in fire-proof structures of six to eight stories, where floor space could be had from 20 cents to 30 cents per square foot. The prices at present, in the few that are here, range from 60 cents to $1.00. It is not a question of crowded conditions that is causing the high prices for the land it poorly utilized as a tour of the city will show acres of land lying idle while not one-tenth is put to the most economic use. Ramshackle buildings and dilapidated dwellings, unfit for habitation, are numerous, while one-story manufacturing plants are trying to meet the expenses of four-story lots, and added to this is the high charges for railroads. When the railroads make a purchase of land for siding purposes, to meet the requirements of manufacturing, they pay an exorbitant price, which in turn is capitalized, and this again must be met by a higher traffic rate to insure returns on the money invested.

While the land in the business zone is poorly utilized and conditions undersirable, land suitable for factory sites is in still more deplorable conditions. It is not bringing returns as it should, and the short sighted policy of the owners is responsible. Real estate brokers say that land for factory sites is held at from two dollars to five dollars per square foot, location and railroad facilities determining the price. Can a manufacturing concern be expected to pay those prices when just as suitable land, with probably better shipping rates, can be had in other cities from twenty-five cents to one dollar per square foot? Whatever value lies in this property is owed to the community. A great portion of it is owned by those who have displayed no intellectual or moral quality in acquiring it and no form of service was rendered. The only talent displayed was in handing it from one generation to another.

Meanwhile, the growth of population, the ever swelling tides of travel and trade, the expenditure of public money on payments, sidewalks, lights, fire and police protection, filtered water, in a word, all the manifold activities of the community at large increased and enhanced the value of these estates. Of the huge unearned increment of value the owners returned each year a small pittance in the way of taxes. The inadequacy of this return does not require any special argument. Since ordinary processes of taxation fail in such cases, the question arises whether some method should not be devised for returning to the public which creates it a larger fraction of increase of value. Under the present system individuals are virtually permitted to tax the people and, too often, such individuals continue on reaping the benefits created by the community without any fulfillment and, perhaps, without any recognition of their social obligation.

Whatever may be said of the undersirable conditions in the business and manufacturing districts, the fault is partially attributable to the community that failed to enact preventative legislation. On the other hand, the cause of prohibitive prices for residence land is chargeably solely to the people of Pittsburgh.

If conditions were not so pitiful it would be supremely ridiculous that Pittsburgh, a city having within its confines some of the ablest business men, the brightest professional men, and the most learned scholars and students of governmental affairs, should tolerate the abominable laws that were in force for years, classifying real estate, laws that have placed Pittsburgh today as a city having the highest priced residence land of any city in the United States, Manhattan Island excepted. There can surely be nothing to boast of in saying that the wage-earners, who are the bone and sinew of any community, and more especially of "the workshop of the world" should have to pay twice the price for a small lot that he would pay in any other manufacturing city.

For years Pittsburgh has been penalizing people for erecting homes and doubly rewarding those who were holding land out of use, the community creating values higher and higher as the city enlarged and its needs for land became greater, while the owner of idle land was permitted to raise a few cabbage and pasture his cow and pay one-half the tax rate, the mill man paid for his four-room habitation, called a "residence," the agriculturalist, meanwhile getting rich at the community's expense. The situation was becoming intolerable when the civic bodies finally awoke and had the classification act annulled. That the annulling of the classification act will have some beneficial effect there is no doubt, but the damage done can only be partially repaired until further legislation be enacted, making it no longer possible to have individual aggrandizements reaped from activities of the community.

Residence values in any community are social only, the locations selected by the wealthy being those which pleases them. The price is seldom the determining factor, they paying exclusive prices for exclusiveness, the main consideration being to live among their friends and social equals. In this respect, Pittsburgh differs little from other cities, particularly in land values, the price being set to hold off undersirables. As the scale of wealth descends the corresponding values of other cities goes up until the level of the poorest working man is reached where is found a price that is almost double to that found elsewhere. Land prices of forty dollars per foot front here are no exception on improved streets, yet the average price for the wage-earner's cottage is twenty-five dollars per foot front in almost every inland city. The skilled mechanics pay thirty to thirty-five dollars per foot on streets with all city improvements, elsewhere, while like conditions cannot be had under sixty dollars per foot front in Pittsburgh. If there were no vacant land within the city limits, the opinion may be held that the supply did not equal the demand, but such is not the case. There are hundreds of acres of vacant land unplotted, held in acreage by those who wish to reap a harvest from that which they do not sow.

This acreage is not confined to one ward or section of the city, but will be found in the east end wards, Squirrel Hill, having millions of dollars' worth of unoccupied land and the South Hills and North Side, having an abundance to provide comfortable home sites for thousands. Idle land is useless and the more that is held out of use the higher will the charge be for that which is in use both for prospective home builder and the tenant in the overcrowded district in which he is compelled to have his home.

Allen Robinson, President of the Allied Real Estate Interests of New York, on this subject, said:

"I hold no brief for the man who owns land he will not improve, worse than the miser who hords gold and thus keeps it from circulation, more culpable than the capitalist who spends his wealth for his own pleasure, is the land owner who, for distant profit, withholds from use land that the exigencies of the community require. The corroding cares, ill health, stunted growth, and inequality of opportunity which haunt the habitations of the poor in our cities may well be laid at his door, and I shall make no effort to relieve him of responsibilities which his ownership has entailed upon him, and which he has been unwilling to assume. Ownership of land carries with it corresponding burdens. The welfare of the race may be jeopardized through the selfish policy of land owners. The voters of the future are the children of today." Take from them what they need now for normal growth and development and when they reach man's estate they will take from you or your children all that land which you are now holding from them."

There are quantities of unimproved land the price of which can be maintained on a reasonable level, a question that our Planning Commission could take care of. They ought not to wait until the land speculator fastens his talons upon it. There is sufficient land available that could be made desirable home districts for the wage-earner. The problem has been
